User of Stream.]—The privilege of washing away sand, stone and rubble, dislodged in the necessary working of a tin mine, and of having the same sent down a natural stream running through the plaintiff's land, may be the subject of a grant, and may be pleaded as a prescriptive right, under the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71, to an action charging the defendant with throwing such stone, sand, and rubble into the stream, and thereby filling up its bed within the plaintiff's land, and causing the water to flow over it. Such privilege may also be well pleaded as a local custom. Carlyon v. Lovering, 1 H. & N. 784 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 251 ; 5 W. R. 347.

An ancient mine, worked from a remote period by tin-bounders, under the custom of Cornwall, had from time immemorial been supplied with water by a stream originally artificial ; and when the bounders ceased to work and mine, possession thereof was taken by the owners of the minerals.

Upon a bill filed to restrain the diversion of the stream by the owner of the land in which it rose:—Held, that the right thus acquired by prescription to the use of the water in question was the right of the owner of the minerals. Ivimey v. Stocker, L. R. 1 Ch. 396; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 419; 14 L. T. 427; 14 W. R. 743.

Parol Evidence as to Meaning of Written Document.]—Where an expression used in a written instrument has a technical meaning, parol evidence is admissible to shew that it has been used in that sense, and not in its ordinary meaning in common parlance, although that may be perfectly clear and unambiguous in itself; therefore, where the lessee of a coal mine covenanted to get the whole of the mines "not deeper than or below the level of the bottom of the mine at a particular point":—Held, that parol evidence of the understanding amongst miners was admissible to shew that the word "level" had a particular technical meaning, different from its ordinary signification of "horizontal line." Clayton v. Greyson, 4 N. & M. 602; 5 A. & E. 302; 6 N. & M. 694; 1 H. & W. 159. See Brain v. Harris, 10 Ex. 908; 24 L. J., Ex. 177—Ex. Ch.

Right to Search for—Gardens excepted—What constitutes Garden.]—Where, to an action for entering a close of the plaintiff, called a garden, the defendant pleaded an immemorial custom to search for minerals in the district within which the locus in quo was situate ("the sites of houses, &c., gardens, orchards and highways, excepted"), and it was proved that the locus in quo was planted with shrubs within the last six years, and with potatoes just before the trespass was committed:—Held, that it was a garden within the meaning of the exception. Gilbert v. Tomison, 4 D. & R. 222; 27 R. R. 510.

Colliers leaving Work without Notice—Right to Payment.]—A custom exists that, where butty colliers leave off working a coal mine, without giving notice, they are not entitled to be paid for gate roading, air heading, or coals undergone; but if they leave after having given notice, they are entitled to be paid for these things by the owner of the mine; and if the mine is not worked, they are not bound to wait till the working is recommenced, and to be then paid by the succeeding butty collier. Bannister v. Bannister, 9 Car. & P. 743.

To divert Stream—Devonshire.]—The stanners of Devonshire are not entitled by custom to divert water from streams into their mines, and for that purpose to dig trenches over other people's lands. Bastard v. Smith, 2 M. & Rob. 129.

Rights of Tinners—Cornwall.]—A custom that any tinner within Cornwall may acquire a right to the tin within certain limits, taking proceedings in the stannary court, of which the landowner has notice, and completing his title in that court, and in case of minerals being found, rendering a portion of the produce to the lord or owner of the soil; and that the right so acquired may be preserved by an annual renewal of the bounds; and that it is not necessary for its preservation that the minerals (if any) within the limits should be sought after, and the land worked for mineral purposes by the boundowner, or on his behalf, is bad for unreasonableness. Rogers v. Brenton, 10 Q. B. 26; 17 L. J., Q. B. 34; 12 Jur. 263.

Custom of Tenants to dig Clay and Sand—Act of Settlement—Isle of Man.]—The Act of Settlement of the Isle of Man, 1703, confirmed to the tenants their customary estates of inheritance "saving always all mines and minerals of what kind and nature soever, quarries and delfs of flag, slate or stone":—Held, that a custom by the tenants to dig for clay and sand did not contravene the saving clause, and that such tenants were entitled to dig for clay and sand. Att.-Gen. (Isle of Man) v. Mylchreest, 48 L. J., P. C. 36; 4 App. Cas. 294; 40 L. T. 764.

Custom of Country — Whether Reservation includes Flints.]—A farm was let under a written agreement, reserving to the landlord "all mines and minerals, sand, quarries of stone, brick earth and gravel pits." A local custom (which, it was suggested, had grown up within the last thirty or forty years) allowed tenants of such farms, let with a similar reservation, to take away the flints that were turned up in the ordinary course of good husbandry, and to sell them for their own benefit. If the flints were not turned up and removed such farms could not be properly cultivated:—Held, that the custom was reasonable and valid; and when read into the written agreement was not inconsistent with the reservation, even assuming (but without deciding) that the reservation of "mines and minerals" included such flints. Tucker v. Linger, 52 L. J., Ch. 941; 8 App. Cas. 508; 49 L. T. 373; 32 W. R. 40; 48 J. P. 4—H. L. (E.)

Unopened Mine under Another's Land.]—The right to an unopened mine of coal, under the close of another person, is a right to land, and cannot be claimed by prescription. Wilkinson v. Proud, 11 M. & W. 33; 12 L. J., Ex. 227; 7 Jur. 284.

VI. GRANT, SALE AND PURCHASE OF.

Licence to Search for—Right of Re-Entry in Grantor.]—The owner of the fee granted to A., his partners and fellow-adventurers, free liberty to dig for tin, and all other metals, throughout certain lands therein described, and to raise, make merchantable and dispose of the same to their own use; and to make adits, &c. necessary for the exercise of that liberty, together with the use of all waters and watercourses, excepting to the grantor liberty for driving any new adit within the lands thereby granted, and to convey any watercourse over the premises granted; habendum for twenty-one years; covenant by the grantee to pay one-eighth share of all ore to the grantor, and all rates, taxes, &c. and to work effectually the mines during the term; and then, in failure of the performance of any of the covenants, a right of re-entry was reserved to the grantor:—Held, that this deed did not amount to a lease, but contained a mere licence to dig and search for minerals, and that the grantee could not maintain an ejectment for mines lying within the limits of the set, but not connected with the workings of the grantee. Doe d. Hanley v. Woods, 2 B. & Ald. 724; 21 R. R. 469.

The grantee commenced working the mines, but after some time discontinued, not being prevented by the want of water, or any other inevitable accident. The grantor, after some lapse of time, verbally authorised other persons to dig for ore throughout part of the land described in the deed, and met those persons on part of the land, and pointed out the boundaries within which they were to exercise the liberty; and himself subsequently entered into a mining adventure with other persons, which was carried on within the limits described in the indenture; and afterwards, in consideration of the surrender of the first grant, and of certain payments, demised the premises to a lessee for twenty-one years; and upon the execution of this lease, the original deed was delivered up, but there was no surrender in writing:—Held, that these acts amounted to a re-entry by the grantor, inasmuch as, unless referred to the exercise of that right, they would be acts of trespass by him. Ib.

—— Licensee can assign Interest.]—A licence to search for and raise metals, and also to carry them away, and to convert them to the licensee's own use, passes an interest which is capable of being assigned. Muskett v. Hill, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 694; 7 Scott, 855; 9 L. J., C. P. 201.

A licence to mine was granted, with a proviso that if the grantee, after notice to work according to his covenant, failed to keep six miners at work, and the grantor fixed notice on the premises that he intended to avoid the licence, it should be lawful for the grantor to re-enter within a month after fixing the notice, and then the licence should be void:—Held, that notice to the grantee that unless he kept six miners at work the grantor would re-enter at the expiration of a month, did not avoid the licence, or render the grantor's re-entry lawful. Ib.

An action on the case is maintainable against the grantors of a lease of mines for unlawfully expelling the assignee and his workmen, and forcibly preventing them from having access to, or working, the mines. Ib.

—— How affecting adjoining Lands.]—A. and B. were severally seised of parcels of woody ground, and B., having other lands adjoining to his woody ground, intended to make a colliery under his ground; A. granted to B., his heirs and assigns, liberty for him, his heirs and assigns, to carry up a sough or a drain through A.'s woody ground into B.'s woody ground, and also liberty for B., his heirs and assigns, to make two little sough pits, in A.'s woody ground, for the more easy and safe carrying up the tail of the sough, one of which was to be covered in as soon as conveniently might be after making the sough, and the other to be kept open for examining the sough so long as was necessary for that purpose, and no longer; and B. covenanted that he, his heirs and assigns, would not damage the trees growing on A.'s woody ground, nor get any of the coals under it, except what should arise in the drift of the intended sough; and that A., his heirs and assigns, from time to time, and at all times after, might go down into any pit or pits of B., his heirs or assigns, to discover whether any coals of A., his heirs or assigns, should be gotten; and that B., his heirs and assigns, should repair any injury to A.'s fence:—Held, that by the grant to B., his heirs and assigns, of the liberty of making the sough in A.'s land, the liberty of making sough pits at any time afterwards, while the object of the grant remained, being necessary for the purpose of repairing the sough, passed as incident thereto; and that the use of such sough for the carrying up of which into B.'s woody ground liberty was granted, was not confined to the getting of coals under B.'s woody ground, but extended also to the adjoining lands of B.; and that the liberty of making new sough pits for necessary repairs of the sough, after the two original sough pits had been covered in by mutual consent, was not controlled by the special liberty given for making such original sough pits, the uses of which were limited by the grant; it appearing upon the face of it that the grant of the sough was intended to have a continuing operation while any coals in B.'s woody ground and adjoining lands remained to be gotten. Hodgson v. Field, 7 East, 613; 3 Smith, 538; 8 R. R. 701.

—— Breach of Covenant — Grant Void or Voidable.]—A. granted to B. a licence to enter upon his lands to search and dig for ores for a term of twenty-one years, with a proviso that if B. ceased to work the mines for six months, or broke any other of the covenants contained in the licence, then the "supposed indenture, and the liberties, licences, powers and authorities thereby granted shall cease, determine and be utterly void and of no effect":—Held, that the word "void" was to be construed to mean voidable, and that some act of A. to shew his election to enforce the forfeiture was necessary to put an end to the licence. Roberts v. Davy, 1 N. & M. 443; 4 B. & Ad. 665; 2 L. J., K. B. 141.

Licence not Exclusive—Possession of Seam—Knowledge of Licensor.]—By a deed of the 29th of September, 1854, R. demised to C. a fire-brick manufactory, and he granted to C. power to dig fire-clay from under lands therein described, the term of the demise and licence being twenty-one years from the 6th of April, 1854. By a deed of the 31st of August, 1862, R. demised to B. all the coal mines and seams of coal, "and also all the mines, seams, veins or beds of ironstone and fire-clay found in connection with such coal seams as are workable as coal seams," under the same lands as those to which C.'s licence applied for forty-two years from the 22nd of November, 1858. In 1866 C. commenced opening an old pit, called the Montague Pit, with the intention of reaching a seam known as the Stone Coal Seam, in order to work the fire-clay in connection with that seam. Previously to this, in 1864, B. had sunk a pit through the Stone Coal Seam, to get at a lower coal seam, and he had taken samples of the fire-clay in the Stone Coal Seam, some of which samples he had sent to C. to be tested, and he had afterwards sold some of the fire-clay to C. for the purpose of being manufactured. After C. had expended a considerable amount of money on his works at the Montague Pit, but before he had reached the Stone Coal Seam, B. gave notice to him that he had already proved the Stone Coal Seam, and was about to work it, and that it would be an invasion of his rights if C. was to work that seam. Ultimately C. filed in equity a bill to restrain B. from working the fire-clay or the coal in the Stone Coal Seam under any part of the lands to which C.'s licence applied during the continuance of C.'s term:—Held, that as C.'s licence was not an exclusive licence, the licensor had still a right to deal with the property comprised in that licence in any manner not inconsistent therewith. Carr v. Benson, 3 L. R. Ch. 524; 18 L. T. 696; 16 W. R. 744.

Held, also, that B. had first taken possession of the Stone Coal Seam, and that C. had no right to an injunction to restrain B. from working that seam. Ib.

Held, also, that no knowledge could be imputed to the licensor of the extent of C.'s business, or of the probability that he would require for the purposes of that business during his term of twenty-one years the whole of the fire-clay lying under the lands comprised in his licence. Ib.

Licence whether Revocable—Liability of Licensor for Acts of Licensee.]—The plaintiff owned the surface of lands on which he had erected houses. The mines and minerals under them, and a right of access to the same, were, by virtue of an exception and a reservation in the deed of grant under which he was entitled, vested in the defendant, who in 1873, by an instrument signed by him, gave N. a licence to raise coal from these mines in the following terms: "I agree to allow you to sink a pit for coal in B., at 1*s.* 6*d.* per ton, and not to allow anyone else to sink on any coal you prove in the pit; also an air-pit, and 100 yards in each square of the pit." On procuring this licence, N. sunk pits, and mined in such a manner that no sufficient support was left for the land above, and the plaintiff's houses fell. The plaintiff thereupon sued the defendant for wrongfully digging away and removing the soil adjacent to the lands and the mines and minerals under the same without leaving proper support, and for breaking and entering his land. The defendant pleaded that he did not do the acts complained of, and that he did leave proper support. The jury, in answer to questions left to them, found that the defendant did not personally direct or interfere in the mining so as to cause or authorise the injurious operation, but that, knowing injurious consequences to the houses would follow, he allowed the work to go on—that is, he did nothing to stop it:—Held, that the licence was irrevocable; that the defendant had no power by any proceeding to restrain N. from working under it to the plaintiff's injury; and that, therefore, he was not liable to him for the injurious acts of N. Atkinson v. King, 2 L. R., Ir. 320.

—— Absence of Expenditure by Licensee.]—R., the tenant for life of certain estates under a power contained in will, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff by which the plaintiff agreed to take from R. the bog ore on the estate, with full power to enter upon the estate and raise and remove the ore for the period of three years from the 1st January, 1882, at a certain yearly royalty, provided that if, after the said period of three years, he should desire to continue to raise the ore, he should be entitled to do so on paying to the person entitled to the said estates a royalty equal to one-fifth of the net profits which he might derive from the sale of the said ore. In July, 1891, R. informed the plaintiff that she intended to work the bog ore herself, and at the end of the year commenced raising ore. The ore in question lay on or near the surface of the ground, and the plaintiff had not expended any money in the erection of works or otherwise. In an action for an injunction to restrain R. (1) from raising and digging up the ore, and from carrying away ore already raised, and (2) to restrain her from impeding the plaintiff in raising and removing the said ore:—Held, that after the said period of three years the licence was revocable, and that the plaintiff was not entitled to the injunction. Stanley v. Riky, 31 L. R., Ir. 196—C. A.

Parcels.]—A deed granted certain property by the description of "all that copyhold tenement called Greys, consisting of a house with divers parcels of land containing 103 acres (that is to say)"—then followed parcels concluding with "a parcel of land running with Garka Moor, containing twenty-seven acres, which tenement called Greys is now held for the life of H. by copy of court roll":—Held, that a piece of uninclosed land, containing twenty-seven acres and forming part of the waste of the manor, and proved never to have been a part of the copyhold tenement, did not pass, although there was nothing else to answer the twenty-seven acres mentioned in the deed, and the 103 acres could not be made up without it. Hext v. Gill, 41 L. J., Ch. 761; L. R. 7 Ch. 699; 27 L. T. 291; 20 W. R. 957.

D. mortgaged in fee lands having beds of coal under them, the conveyance expressly mentioning the mines, to T., for securing a sum of money and interest; then devised all the mines under the lands to her seven children, as tenants in common in fee, and all other her real estate to A., B. and C., their heirs and assigns, upon trust to sell; then demised to A. and B. two seams of coal under the lands for fifty years, at 105*l.* rent; and afterwards died; and after her death the rent was paid to the seven children. Previously to her death T. died, after having devised all freehold estates held by him in mortgage to H. and J., their heirs and assigns. Afterwards, by lease and release, between A., B. and C. of the first part, H. and J. of the second part, mortgagee of other premises of the third part, and K. of the fourth part, reciting that A., B. and C. had put up for sale the lands comprised in the mortgage, and K. had been declared purchaser of the lands (except the beds of coal underneath), it was witnessed that H. and J., at the request of A., B. and C., did bargain, sell and release unto K. the closes of land, together with all and singular quarries (omitting the word "mines"), except and always reserved unto A. and B. during the term of thirty years all the mines and beds of coal under the lands, &c. to hold the said closes of land (except as before excepted) unto K., his heirs and assigns, for ever:—Held, that the mines or seams of coal did not pass to K. Holliday v. Denison, 3 H. & N. 670; 28 L. J., Ex. 25; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1002; 6 W. R. 719—Ex. Ch.

Exception and Reservation of Minerals.]—A. being mortgagee in fee of lands, and B. the mortgagor entitled to the equity of redemption, by lease and release, A. conveyed and B. released the land to C. in fee, who by the same instrument covenanted with and granted to B. that it should be lawful for B., his heirs and assigns, at all times to enter upon the lands to search and dig for coal, and to take and carry away the same to his and their own use. This is only a licence, and conveyed no interest in the soil, so as to exclude C., and those claiming under him, from getting coal there, nor could it operate as an exception or a reservation out of the grant in respect to B., who had not the legal title in him at the time. Chetham v. Williamson, 4 East, 469; 1 Smith, 278.

A. being seised of a manor, and of the demesne lands thereof, and of all the coal mines therein, in fee, granted part of the lands to B. in fee, excepting and reserving to himself, his heirs and assigns, all tithes of corn arising therefrom, and also excepting and always reserving out of the grant, to himself and his heirs, all the coals in the lands so granted, together with free liberty for himself, his heirs and his and their assigns and servants, from time to time, and at all times thereafter, during the time that he and his heirs should continue owners of the demesne lands, to sink and dig pits, or otherwise to sough and get coals in the lands, and to sell and carry away the same with carts and carriages, or otherwise to dispose of the same coals, at his and their will and pleasure, he and his heirs, from time to time, giving and paying to the grantee, his heirs and assigns, such satisfaction for damage as the grantee and his heirs should sustain by reason of getting and carrying away the coals in the lands, as two gentlemen, neigbours, indifferently chosen by the grantor and grantee, their heirs and assigns, should from time to time award. An heir of the grantor by descent having alienedthe manor and demesne lands, and the coals therein, in fee to C., the latter entered the lands granted to B., and dug pits and carried away coals therefrom, and an action having been brought against him and his servant:—Held, first, that under the general exception and reservation contained in the grant to B., the title to the coals remained in A. and his heirs, and would pass to his or their assigns, under the word "heirs"; and, secondly, that the special liberty as to the manner of taking the coals was not restrictive, but in furtherance of the previous exception of the coals out of the grant, and would enure for the benefit of C. as owner, by purchase of the manor and demesne lands. Cardigan (Earl) v. Armitage, 3 D. & R. 414; 2 B. & C. 197; 26 R. R. 313.

A close, held by copyhold tenure, contained an unopened coal mine. B. was tenant from year to year of the close to the copyholder in fee; B. in fact occupied the surface; and it did not appear that in the demise to B. there had been any exception or reservation of the mine. While B. was such tenant, in 1821, the copyholder in fee granted the mine, for valuable consideration, to B. and P. In 1832 B.'s tenancy from year to year ceased:—Held, that before and at the time of the grant of 1821, B. was in possession of the mine by virtue of his tenancy from year to year, though without the right to work the mine; that he, therefore, by the grant, became possessed of the mine for the term without actual entry, and that his possession enured to the benefit both of himself and P.; and therefore B. and P. were both possessed of the mine from the time of the grant, and had not a bare interesse termini. Keyse v. Powell, 2 El. & Bl. 132; 22 L. J., Q. B. 305; 17 Jur. 1052.

Where an owner of the fee-simple of a close with minerals under it conveys the surface, reserving the minerals with the right of entry to get them, and he afterwards grants the minerals with such right, mere nonuser for more than forty years, no other person having worked or having been in possession of the minerals, is not sufficient under 3 & 4 Will. c. 27, ss. 2, 3, to bar the grantee's right of entry to get the minerals. Smith v. Lloyd, 9 Ex. 562; 2 C. L. R. 1007; 23 L. J., Ex. 194; 2 W. R. 271.

When in a feu charter the superior reserves the coal and limestone with the right to work them, giving satisfaction for damage, the right reserved is a right of property, or an absolute ownership, and not a mere servitude or easement: the surface and the minerals becoming separate tenements severed in title, and in such a case the superior, as absolute proprietor of the reserved coal and limestone, may make a tunnel through them for the conveyance of other minerals belonging to him in the lands adjacent. Hamilton (Duke) v. Graham, L. R. 2 H. L. (Sc.) 166.

Sale of Shares.]—The purchaser of shares in a mining company is not entitled to a regular abstract of title to the mines themselves, as if he were purchasing a share in the land in which they are worked; but he is entitled to such evidence of the constitution of the company and of the nature of the title under which the mines are worked as will shew that the subject-matter of the purchase is what it professes to be, and that the proposed form of transfer to him will give him a valid title to the shares. Curling v. Flight, 2 Ph. 613; 17 L. J., Ch. 359; 12 Jur. 423.

Before taking shares in a mine, a purchaser availed himself of the means, by inspection and otherwise, of obtaining information respecting it, and afterwards embarked in the speculation. On a bill filed to set aside the contract, on the ground of false representations of the character and value of the mine:—Held, that as he acted upon his own opinion, and not upon the representations of the directors of the mining company, he was not entitled to any relief. Jennings v. Broughton, 17 Beav. 234; 22 L. J., Ch. 585; 17 Jur. 905; 1 W. R. 441.

The sale, in one transaction, of several kinds of mining shares will not be set aside in equity for misrepresentation if the person seeking relief is unable to restore all the shares he has taken. Maturin v. Tredennick, 10 L. T. 331; 12 W. R. 740.

Sale of Mines—Misrepresentation.]—Upon the sale of certain collieries, the vendors stated the annual profits to be 66,000*l.*, and estimated the total value at 423,000*l.* The purchasers contracted to buy the collieries for 365,000*l.* It being proved that the amount of annual profits was overstated by 9,500*l.*:—Held, that in order to arrive at the amount to be deducted from the purchase-money, the purchase-money of 365,000*l.* must be taken as the capitalised value of the annual profits stated, and that the sum to be deducted must bear the same ratio to the 9,500*l.* as the 365,000*l.* bore to the 66,000*l.* Powell v. Elliott, L. R. 10 Ch. 424; 33 L. T. 110; 23 W. R. 777.

When the purchasers of a colliery, which it was necessary should be to a certain extent worked, had entered into possession, and afterwards filed a bill to rescind the contract on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation, the court, on the application of the purchasers, who alleged that the colliery was worked at a loss, appointed a receiver and manager to work the colliery until the hearing, the means of working to be supplied by the purchasers. Gibbs v. David, 44 L. J., Ch. 770; L. R. 20 Eq. 373; 33 L. T. 298; 23 W. R. 786.

—— Liberty to Inspect implied.]—Under a contract for the sale of the minerals under a given surface, the price payable by instalment, and times of payment to be accelerated according to the quantities raised :—Held, to amount to an implied contract for the vendor to have liberty to enter and inspect with the view of ascertaining the quantities raised ; and a specific decree for executing the contract with such covenant in the conveyance. Blakesley v. Whieldon, 1 Hare, 176 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 164 ; 6 Jur. 54.

—— Improper Working.]—When a vendor of a coal mine, against whom a suit for specific performance was brought, had, during his delay of completion, worked the mine for his own benefit :—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to compensation on an estimate of the market value of the coal in situ, i.e. the value at the place where it was to be sold, less the cost of severing and taking it from the mine to that place. Brown v. Dibbs, 37 L. T. 171 ; 25 W. R. 776. See also Cases, ante, col. 1230.

—— Memorandum—Statute of Frauds.]—A., to whom the owner of a quarry had agreed to grant a lease, agreed on behalf of himself and all persons interested to sell the quarry to B., and "that the lease agreed to be granted by the lessor should be granted as B. might direct." B. having refused to complete the purchase, A. brought an action for specific performance, and in his statement of claim stated his agreement with the owner of the quarry, as well as the memorandum of agreement with B., and alleged that B. was aware of the nature of A.'s interest in the quarry, and had accepted the title. B. demurred, on the ground that the memorandum was not sufficient within the Statute of Frauds ; —Held, that it was sufficient. Morgan v. Worthington, 38 L. T. 443.

Royalty—"Shipped for Sale."]—D., in 1824, agreed with S. for the purchase of an estate, and that the purchase-deed should contain a covenant by D. that he, his heirs and assigns, would pay to S., his executors, administrators and assigns, the sum of 6*s.* for each chaldron of coals gotten out of the estate and shipped for sale. The purchase-deed was subsequently executed by S., but not by D. D., however, entered upon the land, and he and his devisees and their assigns enjoyed the property. Coal was also got and shipped for sale :—Held, that the execution by D. of a counterpart of the deed containing the covenant must be presumed, and that the words "shipped for sale" in the deed meant coal actually shipped for sale. Witham v. Vane, 32 W. R. 617—H. L. (E.) Reversing 44 L. T. 718 —C. A.

Sales by Mortgagees.]—Mortgagees are within the Confirmation of Sales Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 108), and may have liberty to sell under their power of sale, with a reservation of the mines and minerals in the land sold, and incidental powers of working them. Beaumont's Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 400 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 86 ; 19 W. R. 767.

Mortgagees in possession with a power of sale, after filing a bill for foreclosure, and setting down the cause for hearing on motion for a decree, presented a petition, not intitled in the cause, but in the matter of the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, for liberty to sell the surface, excepting the mines and minerals, of the hereditaments comprised in the mortgage deeds :—Held, that they were entitled to the order asked. Wilkinson's Mortgaged Estate, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 392 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 634.

—— Land and Minerals separately—Parties to be Served.]—A petition under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, s. 2, by trustees of settled land with power of sale, exercisable with the consent of the tenant for life, for leave to sell the land and minerals separately, need not be served on the beneficiaries entitled in remainder. Pryse, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 760 ; L. R. 10 Eq. 531 ; 18 W. R. 1064.

It is not necessary for mortgagees, in order to exercise the power of selling with a reservation of the mines, to serve the petition on any subsequent incumbrancers. Beaumont's Trusts, In re, supra.

The cestuis que trustent ought to be made parties to an application under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, s. 2, for sale of the surface apart from the minerals. Palmer's Will, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 511 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 408.

A petition was presented, under the Confirmation of Sales Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 108), by trustees with a power of sale, and the first tenant for life, and the tenant for life in remainder, for leave to sell the land and minerals separately : —Held, that the next remainderman need not be served with the petition. Powell, In re, 23 W. R. 151.

Powers of Court in Respect of Powers of Sale.] —The court has power under the Confirmation of Sales Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 108) to give a general direction that persons having powers of sale and exchange in a settlement or will which do not expressly authorise the reservation of mines and minerals on a sale of the settled property, or the sale of minerals apart from the land, may exercise the powers as if they did authorise such reservation or separation. Wynn's Devised Estate, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 95 ; L. R. 16 Eq. 237 ; 21 W. R. 695.

Sale of Lunatic's Property—Reserving the Minerals.]—The court has power under the Lunacy Regulation Act, 1853, s. 124, to make an exchange of the land of the lunatic without the minerals under it. Dicconson, In re, 15 Ch. D. 316 ; 29 W. R. 222—C. A.

Sales under Powers.]—See POWERS.

Sales under Settled Land Act.]—See SETTLED LAND.

VII. MINING COMPANIES.

A. COST-BOOK MINES.

1. NATURE AND CHARACTERISTICS OF.

Mere Partnership.]—A cost-book mining company, not being incorporated, is a mere partnership. Kittow v. Liskeard Union, 44 L. J., M. C. 23 ; L. R. 10 Q. B. 7 ; 31 L. T. 601 ; 23 W. R. 72.

A shareholder in a cost-book mining company filed a bill against the managing committee and against a creditor of the company, to restrain an action brought against him by the creditor at the instigation of the committee. The bill also asked for an account as to the amount of the plaintiff's liability to the company. The court granted an injunction to restrain the action, but dismissed the bill as against the committee, on the ground that as the company was a simple partnership, formed under no act of parliament, it was necessary, in order to have an account, that all the members should be made parties to the bill. Sibley v. Minton, 27 L. J., Ch. 53; 5 W. R. 675.

Agreement for Partnership—Interest in Land.]—An agreement between A., a lessee of a mine, and B., to become partners in the mine, paying the reserved rent, subletting the mine at a royalty, and dividing the profits, is within the Statute of Frauds, 29 Car. 2, c. 3, and not sufficiently proved by a receipt signed by A. and given to B., for a sum as B.'s share of the head-rent of the mine, the sum being exactly half of that rent. Caddick v. Skidmore, 2 De G. & J. 52; 27 L. J., Ch. 153; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1185; 6 W. R. 119.

Judicial Cognizance.]—The court does not, without evidence, take judicial cognizance of the meaning of the term "cost-book principle." Bodmin United Mines Co., In re, 23 Beav. 370; 26 L. J., Ch. 570; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 350; 5 W. R. 300.

Rules.]—Rules peculiar to the cost-book system must be proved. Great Cambrian Mining Co., In re, Hawkins' Case, 2 Kay & J. 253; 25 L. J., Ch. 221; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 885; 4 W. R. 224.

A company formed upon the cost-book system is only bound by the rules and regulations entered in the cost-book, and is not bound by a preliminary contract entered into before the formation of the company and not embodied in the rules of the cost-book. Thomas v. Hobler, 4 De G. F. & J. 199; 8 Jur (N.S.) 125; 5 L. T. 564.

R., on the faith of a prospectus stating that a company was shortly to be formed to be conducted on the cost-book system, applied for, received and paid deposit on shares in the company. He subsequently received scrip certificates in respect of such shares, whereon it was stated that the shares were to be held "subject to the rules and regulations of the company." At the date of the receipt by R. of the scrip certificates sent to him there were no rules or regulations of the company in existence, but soon after such receipt rules and regulations were entered on the cost-book of the company. R. neither signed the cost-book, nor attended meetings of the company, nor received any notices of such meetings, and he alleged that the rules and regulations above mentioned were at variance with the prospectus, and not in accordance with the cost-book system. The company was not abortive or fraudulent, but was unsuccessful, and was in course of being wound up. On the question whether R. ought to be placed on the list of contributories:—Held, that he ought, no substantial variation between the prospectus and the rules having been proved, but leave reserved to enter into evidence in chambers to prove that the rules were at variance with the cost-book system. Richardson's Case, Great Cambrian Mining Co., In re, 4 W. R. 670.

Meeting—Single Member.]—A single shareholder cannot constitute a meeting of a company under the Stannaries Act, 1869, s. 4. Sharpe v. Dawes, 46 L. J., Q. B. 104; 2 Q. B. D. 26; 36 L. T. 188; 25 W. R. 66—C. A.

Unpaid Calls—Power of Shareholders.]—It is not competent to the adventurers or shareholders in a cost-book mine to stipulate by their rules that unpaid calls shall be recovered as a debt due from the defaulting shareholder to the purser. Hybart v. Parker, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 209; 27 L. J., C. P. 120; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 265; 6 W. R. 364.

—— Judgment Creditor—Secretary—Bankruptcy Petition.]—Sect. 13 of the Stannaries Act, 1869, which empowers cost-book mining companies to sue shareholders for the amount of unpaid calls in the name of their purser or secretary, does not empower the company to present a bankruptcy petition in the name of the purser or secretary in respect of a judgment recovered in such an action. Ashmead, Ex parte, Nance, In re, 62 L. J., Q. B. 500; [1893] 1 Q. B. 590; 4 R. 311; 68 L. T. 733; 41 W. R. 370—C. A.

—— Proceedings by Creditor.]—A creditor of a cost-book mining company will not be allowed to bring an action against a shareholder of the company for the purpose of enforcing a call, and therefore, if the action is not really an action by the creditor, but a collusive action by the company, it will be stayed. Escott v. Gray, 47 L. J., C. P. 606; 39 L. T. 121.

Actions by and against.]—A cost-book mining company, though unincorporated, may, since the judicature acts, sue and be sued by its partnership name. Ib.

Liability of Members for Debts.]—The defendant and others met for the purpose of forming a company for working a mine on the cost-book principle, the concern to consist of 60,000 shares, of which 15,000 were to be appropriated to the owner of the mine, 33,750 to A., B. and C., and the remainder allotted to other parties in proportion to capital subscribed by them; 1,125 being allotted to the defendant, for which he paid 100*l.*; and it was at that meeting resolved that the requisite capital to work the mine for the first six months should be found by A., B. and C. The same resolution also stated that the mine had been purchased of the owner for 1,000*l.* in cash, and 15,000*l.* to be paid in cash or shares at the end of six months, should it be deemed desirable by the adventurers to continue operations; such payment of 15,000*l.* or surrender of the mine to the owner, being optional by the adventurers:—Held, that by this arrangement each adventurer being a partner in the concern from the commencement, was liable as such for goods supplied for the working of the mine. Peel v. Thomas, 15 C. B. 714; 3 C. L. R. 397; 24 L. J., C. P. 86.

A transferee of shares in a cost-book mine, the rules of which require transfers to be registered in order to convey an interest in the mine, is not liable for debts of the concern contracted before his transfer is registered. Thomas v. Clark, 18 C. B. 662; 25 L. J., C. P. 309.

A. agreed to accept a transfer of shares (in trust) from B., with an understanding that the transfer was to take effect only in the event of B. going abroad. B. never went abroad, but without (as the jury found) A.'s authority, registered the transfer:—Held, that this unauthorised registration did not render A. liable as a partner for the debts of the company. Ib.

In an action against a shareholder, also the secretary of a mine conducted on the cost-book principle, under which the mine agents made monthly or quarterly estimates of the money required to carry on the business, and raised the amount by calls on the shareholders, it being also the practice, when sufficient funds were not forthcoming, to obtain goods on credit, and the defendant having, as secretary, entered the order for the goods, the question was left to the jury whether the captain had authority to pledge the credit of the shareholders for goods which were necessary. Newton v. Daly, 1 F. & F. 26.

In an action against a shareholder for coals sold and delivered to a cost-book mining company there was general evidence that coals had been delivered:—Held, that the monthly cost-sheets sent in by the creditor to the purser of the mine, and by him laid before the managing committee and passed by them, were evidence as against the shareholders of the quality and value of the coals so delivered. Geake v. Jackson, 36 L. J., C. P. 108; 15 L. T. 509; 15 W. R. 338.

—— Shares sold before Registration—21 & 22 Vict. c. 60, s. 6.]—A shareholder in an unregistered mining company, and carried on upon the cost-book principle, who had disposed of his shares previously to the company being registered in 1861, under the acts 1856, 1857, is not protected by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 60, s. 6, from being sued for the price of goods furnished to the company before registration, and during the time that he was such shareholder. Harvey v. Clough, 8 L. T. 324.

Retiring Members—Rights and Obligations.]—In a company formed on the cost-book system the practice had been for a shareholder to be at liberty to retire on the terms that if the company was solvent he received from the company a sum of money equal to his ratable proportion of the excess of the assets above the liabilities, but if the company was insolvent he paid to the company his ratable proportion of the excess of the liabilities above the assets. In every case in which a shareholder had retired when the liabilities were in excess of the assets, the purser in calculating the value of the assets had entered all the arrears of calls as good debts, and the shareholder retired on paying only his proportionate part of the excess of the liabilities over the assets according to the number of shares, without regard to the solvency or insolvency of the other shareholders. C. gave notice to retire in November, 1879, but no account was made out shewing what he had to pay. In March, 1880, an order was made to wind up the company. The liquidator, in 1882, made out an account shewing what C. was to pay, and in estimating the assets omitted all arrears of calls owing by insolvent shareholders, and then calculated C.'s contribution by dividing the excess of liabilities over assets ratably among C. and the other solvent shareholders:—Held, that this decision was correct in principle, and that the fact that on all previous occasions the assets had been reckoned without any allowance for the insolvency of persons owing arrears of calls, and the contribution of the retiring shareholder ascertained without reference to the insolvency of any of the continuing shareholders, was not sufficient evidence of an agreement among the shareholders that the contribution of a retiring shareholder should be calculated on that footing. The course of practice followed by an officer of a company is not so strong evidence of an agreement sanctioning that practice as a course of practice in an ordinary partnership of few members. Frank Mills Mining Co., In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 457; 23 Ch. D. 52; 49 L. T. 193; 31 W. R. 440—C. A.

But held, that C. was entitled to have the assets of the company valued on the footing of its being a going concern, which it was when he gave notice of retirement, and that the solvency of the persons who owed calls, and of the continuing shareholders, must be taken as matters stood at the date of the notice of retirement, and not at the time when the account was made out. Ib.

A shareholder in a mining company on the cost-book principle gave notice, according to the rules of the company, of his ceasing to be a member; afterwards the company was registered as a limited company, and was subsequently wound up:—Held, that the shareholder was not liable to be placed on the list of contributories of the company ordered to be wound up. Welsh Potosi Mining Co., In re, Lofthouse's Case, 2 De G. & J. 69; 27 L. J., Bk. 1; 6 W. R. 140.

A shareholder in a company carried on upon the cost-book principle relinquished his shares upon paying his pro ratâ portion of the liabilities of the company. All the formalities required for the relinquishment of such shares were regularly complied with, and entered in the books of the company, and the correspondence was conducted with the purser, who fixed the amount to be paid by the shareholder, without the sanction of the managing committee:—Held, that the purser, being the authorised officer of the company to conduct such transactions, the shareholder was exempted from the liability in respect of any excess of power on the part of the purser, and upon the winding-up of the company such shareholder should not be placed upon the list of contributories. Wrysgan Slate Co., In re, Birch, Ex parte, 28 L. J., Ch. 894; 7 W. R. 335.

A. was holder of shares in a mining company established on the cost-book principle. In accordance with one of the rules of the company, he gave notice, in April, 1857, to relinquish his shares, but he had not then paid all his arrears, and the purser declined to make the relinquishment. In May the arrears were paid, and on the 4th of June his solicitor applied to the purser to know why the name was retained on the list. On the 26th of June the company was registered as a limited company, under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, and A.'s name was then returned as a shareholder. The company being, in July, ordered to be wound up, A.'s name was placed on the list of contributories. On appeal it was considered that the proper course was for A. to apply to have his name removed from the list of shareholders, the petition of appeal being agreed to be treated as such application:—Held, that B.'s name ought never to have beeen on the register of shareholders, and ought to be removed from it under the power given by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, s. 25, of amending the register, and that it ought also to be removed from the list of contributories. Welsh Potosi Mining Co., In re, Birch's Case, 2 De G. & J. 10; 27 L. J., Bk. 4; 6 W. R. 141.

By one of the rules of a mining company, carried on under the cost-book principle, it was provided that any shareholder might determine his responsibility or liability upon giving notice in writing to the purser of his desire of retiring, and upon depositing with the purser the transfer of the shares held by him, and signing a relinquishment of all claims or demands on the company in respect of such shares; the prospectus of the company also stated that under the cost-book principle, shareholders had the right of determining their responsibility, by giving notice of their intention to relinquish their shares, and on forfeiture of all previous payments. A. B., a shareholder in the company, gave notice in writing to the purser of his desire to retire, and thereby relinquished all right and title to his shares:—Held, on winding up the company, that under the terms of the rule as explained by the prospectus, A. B. had by his notice absolved himself from all liability to the past and future debts of the company. Pennant Lead Mining Co., In re, Fenn's Case, 4 De G. M. & G. 285; 22 L. J., Ch. 692; 2 W. R. 282.

2. SHARES IN.

Contract for Sale — Interest in Land.]—A contract for the sale of shares in a mining company managed on the cost-book principle is not a contract for the sale of land or an interest in land under s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Nor is it a contract for the sale of goods, wares or merchandise within s. 17. Watson v. Spratley, 2 C. L. R. 1434; 10 Ex. 222; 24 L. J., Ex. 53; 2 W. R. 627.

Shares in a mine worked on the cost-book principle do not necessarily constitute an interest in land within s. 4 of the Statute of Frauds, in the absence of evidence that the shareholders take a direct interest in the freehold. Powell v. Jessop, 18 C. B. 336; 25 L. J., C. P. 199; 4 W. R. 465.

Not within Statute of Mortmain.]—Shares in a mine carried on on the cost-book principle are not within the Statute of Mortmain (9 Geo. 2, c. 36), when it appears that the mines and other real estates were not vested in the purser or any person on a direct trust for the shareholders as tenants in common, in proportion to the number of their shares, but upon trust to work the same for the benefit of all the shareholders. Hayter v. Tucker, 4 Kay & J. 243; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 257; 6 W. R. 243.

Surrender of Shares.]—A meeting of shareholders of a mining company carried on on the cost-book principle, acting within the scope of their authority, passed a resolution authorising the committee of management to make an arrangement with the shareholders in arrear for calls, that on any shareholder in arrear surrendering to the committee his shares, he might be entitled to redeem within the month so many of the surrendered shares which, at 19*s.* per share (the amount of calls in arrear), would equal the amount paid by him, provided a call of 2*s.* per share were paid upon the shares when redeemed. In January three shareholders executed a surrender of their shares to the committee, and claimed to be entitled to the reduced number of shares upon payment of the call of 2*s.* per share. Nothing further was done either on the part of these shareholders or the company, but in May the secretary wrote to them, stating that the number of their shares had been reduced, and requiring them to pay the call of 2*s.*, and other calls since made. In answer to this letter one of the three shareholders wrote, stating that it would not be convenient for him to pay the calls upon the whole number of shares, and asking that the number might be reduced. The company was afterwards wound up. Upon its being sought to charge them as contributories:—Held, from the practice of the company in other cases, that the shares were legally surrendered; that the letter by the one shareholder was written under an erroneous idea of his position with regard to the shares; that all right under the resolution was gone; that he was not at the time in the position of a shareholder, and that none of them were entitled to redeem, and ought not therefore to be placed on the list of contributories. Bodmin United Mines Co., In re, 23 Beav. 370; 26 L. J., Ch. 570; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 350; 5 W. R. 300.

Past Member.]—A shareholder in a cost-book mining company who has ceased to be a shareholder more than two years before the order for winding up cannot be put on the list of contributories as a past member, although he had not so ceased for two years before the mine ceased to be worked. Chynoweth's Case, Wheal Unity Wood Mining Co., In re, 15 Ch. D. 13; 42 L. T. 636; 28 W. R. 897.

A. B. signs the cost-book for certain shares, and transfers them to C. D., who accepts the transfer, and signs the book in respect of the shares. C. D. having been made a contributory in respect of these shares:—Held, that A. B. could not also be fixed with liability as a contributory in respect of these shares. Bowen's Case, Cambrian Mining Co., In re, 4 W. R. 800.

Forfeiture of Shares on Nonpayment of Calls.]—A power in co-adventurers to forfeit the shares of one of their number for nonpayment of calls is not necessarily incident to a mining adventure conducted on the cost-book principle. Clarke v. Hart, 6 H. L. Cas. 633; 27 L. J., Ch. 615; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 447.

Where such a power exists by agreement between the parties, it is to be treated as strictissimi juris, like a power of forfeiture with respect to an estate, and the forms to be observed in declaring the forfeiture must be strictly followed. Ib.

Where an agreement to work mines on the cost-book principle has been entered into by several persons, the written statement of one of them (made subsequently to the date of the agreement) that his shares are liable to forfeiture on nonpayment of calls, will not affect his rights under the agreement. Ib.

A., B. and C. joined in a mining adventure on the cost-book principle as recognised in Devonshire and Cornwall. A. fell into arrear with his calls. Notice was given him of a meeting to declare his shares forfeited. The meeting was held, but instead of his shares being declared forfeited, a resolution was passed granting him an extension of time; no payment was made, and no further notice was given, but a fortnight after the extended time had expired the shares were declared forfeited:—Held, that such declaration of forfeiture was invalid. Ib.

At a meeting of the partners in a cost-book mine, held in 1874, it was stated that the mine was 2,003*l.* in debt, and a call of 25*l.* was made upon each of the six shares in the mine. Two of the partners did not pay this call, and were in arrear for other calls. At subsequent meetings, in June, 1874, the shares of these partners were declared to be forfeited. These two partners took no steps as to the mine until July, 1879, when they made a claim, and in September, 1880, they brought an action, alleging that the shares had not been regularly forfeited, and claiming to be still partners. It appeared that the mine was in debt in 1878 :—Held, that even assuming the shares not to have been regularly forfeited, the plaintiffs, under the circumstances, could not, after lying by for more than six years, successfully assert their claim to be partners. Clarke v. Hart (6 H. L. Cas. 633) distinguished. Rule v. Jewell, 18 Ch. D. 660 ; 29 W. R. 755.

Certificate — Notice of Rules.]—A mining company by its prospectus and certificates professed to be a company in 30,000 shares, of 1*l.* each, to be conducted upon the cost-book principle. The directors passed rules, by one of which the company was to be considered as constituted, and the directors to be at liberty to commence business, so soon as one-third of the shares should have been subscribed, and by another that no person should be recognised as an adventurer in or entitled to any benefit from the company until he should have signed the rules, and be duly registered in the cost-book as an adventurer. H. having seen the prospectus, but not the rules, applied verbally, and paid for and received certificates of shares in the company. The certificates stated that the shares were to be held subject to the rules of the company. The company failed. H., a year after he received the certificates, brought an action to recover his money, as upon a failure of consideration, and the action was compromised :—Held, first, that the certificates were notice of the rules, and although H., assuming him not to have had previous notice, would have been allowed, perhaps, a reasonable locus pœnitentiæ to return the certificates, still, having retained them, and not having brought his action for a year, he must be taken to have acquiesced in and be bound by the rules. Great Cambrian Mining Co., In re, Hawkins' Case, 2 Kay & J. 253 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 221 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 85 ; 4 W. R. 224.

Held, secondly, that although H. had not signed the rules, still, having applied and paid for, and accepted the certificates of shares, he had authorised the company to register his name in the cost-book, without his signing the rules, that the contract was complete, and that he was a contributory. Ib.

Although in general no contract exists between a company and a person who holds scrip certificates by assignment from a shareholder who has signed the cost-book bonâ fide in respect of those shares, so as to fix such scrip holder with the liabilities of a shareholder, there may be such a course of dealing as to establish a privity between the company and the holder of scrip certificates, and a liability against him, although he has not signed the cost-book in respect of the shares represented by such scrip certificates. Bowen's Case, Cambrian Mining Co., In re, 4 W. R. 800.

Liability of Transferee.]—A transferee of shares in a company conducted on the cost-book principle takes his shares with their past as well as future liabilities, the deed of settlement of the company containing a provision for the transfer of shares. Such liability is independent of any special contract between the transferor and the transferee. Taylor v. Ifill, 8 L. T. 148.

The rule is not affected by the circumstance that the transferor is one of the creditors of the company ; and the shares in the hands of the transferee, and the transferee personally, become liable, on a deficiency of the assets of the company, to contribute towards the payment of the debt of the transferor. Ib.

In 1851 a company had called up and expended all the capital contemplated by the deed, viz. 10*l.* per share. The company had been established in 1849, professedly on the cost-book principle, with monthly meetings, three directors, one to retire annually, and no new member to be admitted until approved by a board of directors. After 1851 no new directors were appointed. In March, 1852, the company being indebted to S., one of the shareholders, in 1,000*l.*, a meeting was called and held some time in the spring or summer of that year, at which all the adventurers attended. It was then resolved that the whole authority of the board of directors should be handed over to the secretary, to be exercised under the supervision of S. alone, who was to furnish all moneys necessary to work the mine, to try and redeem what had been already lost. Previously to this meeting, viz. in 1851, P., one of the shareholders, being indebted to De C., placed in deposit with him ten shares as a security. After the meeting, P., without informing De C. of the change of circumstances in the company, offered to relinquish the ten shares to De C. in part payment. In December, 1852, De C., having put inquiries to the secretary, which were satisfactorily answered, agreed in writing to take these shares on the same terms as P. held them. In April, 1853, De C. endeavoured to sell the shares to other parties, and with that view applied to be admitted on the register as a transferee. This was at first refused, but ultimately assented to, but no such registration ever took place. The next meeting did not take place till 1854, when it appeared that the loss for which the company was liable to S. amounted to nearly 5,000*l.* In 1856 S. alone presented his petition to have the company wound up, on which an order was made accordingly :—Held, that De C. was not liable to be placed on the list of contributories. De Castro's Case, Court Grange Silver Lead Co., In re, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1203.

The test applied was not whether De C. could have insisted, as against P., on having the shares, but whether P. could have insisted on a specific performance of the agreement of December, 1852 ; and :—Held, that P. could not have done so. Ib.

Under the above circumstances :—Held, that the company in 1852, at the time of the contract, was no longer carrying on business under its deed ; that P. knew that fact, and that De C. did not know it ; and therefore that the contract could not be sustained. Ib.

C. took 300 shares in a cost-book mining company, and in order to increase the apparent number of shareholders, and thereby cause the mining scheme to be more favourably regarded in the share market, caused 100 of them to be transferred into the name of A., and 100 to be transferred into the name of B., who, notwithstanding the transfers, neither attended meetings nor paid calls, nor took any part in the affairs of the company :—Held, that having regard to the absence of any bonâ fide trusteeship on the part of A. and B., and to the extended definition of the word "contributory" in the Companies Act, 1862, s. 200, C. was properly inserted on the list of contributories in respect of the whole 300 shares. Cox, Ex parte, Wheal Emily Mining Co., In re, 4 De G. J. & S. 53 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 145 ; 9 Jur. 1184.

The secretary of an unregistered company carried on upon the cost-book system purchased shares in the company, and had them transferred to a nominee, who was a man of small means, his object being to prevent its being generally known that he was trafficking in shares in the company. The transfer was registered, and about three years afterwards the company was wound up :—Held, that the transaction was a bonâ fide purchase of shares in the name of the trustee, and that the secretary could not be put on the list of contributories in respect of them. King's Case, Great Wheal Busy Mining Co., In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 361 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 196 ; 24 L. T. 599 ; 19 W. R. 549.

C. transferred 510 shares in a cost-book mining company to A. for 5*l*. The transfer was registered. The company having suspicions as to A.'s means asked for information about him, but got none. It made calls upon him, and on nonpayment recovered judgment for the amount, but obtained nothing. About two years afterwards the company was ordered to be wound up. The liquidator sought to put C. upon the list of contributories, on the ground that the transfer was fraudulent, within s. 35 of the Stannaries Act, 1869 :—Held, that the court could only act in the winding-up, as the company could have acted if there had been no winding-up, and that as the company would have been estopped by having recognised the transfer with knowledge, the court could not set it aside. Chynoweth's Case, Wheal Unity Wood Mining Co., In re, 15 Ch. D. 13 ; 42 L. T. 636 ; 28 W. R. 897.

—— Transferee not Registered.]—An owner of 500 shares in a cost-book mine, according to the rules of which the person registered as owner in the cost-book was subject to the payment of calls in respect of the shares so long as he continued registered as the owner, sold his shares to the defendant, and delivered to him a document addressed to the secretary of the mine, by which the owner requested the secretary to enter a transfer of the shares from his name to that of the transferee, subject to the rules, but leaving a blank for the name of the transferee, to be filled up by the holder of the document, which also contained at the foot an agreement on the part of the transferee to accept the shares subject to the rules, with a blank also left for the name of the party so agreeing. The defendant did not cause the shares to be registered in his name, and the plaintiff, in consequence of his name being continued in the cost-book as the owner, was compelled to pay some subsequent calls :—Held, that there was no legal obligation on the defendant to cause the shares to be registered in his name as the owner, but that there was an implied obligation on him to indemnify the plaintiff against calls made during the time when he was virtually and potentially the owner of the shares. Walker v. Bartlett, 18 C. B. 845 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 263 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 643 ; 4 W. R. 681 —Ex. Ch.

Liability of a Person on Register who has sold Shares.]—In a company on the cost-book principle the regulations were, that any person who was the holder of share certificates could cause himself to be registered as a shareholder, and could not receive any dividends unless he was the registered holder, and on registration the former holder was freed from all liability :—Held, that a registered shareholder, who had disposed of his shares and handed over the certificates, but no other person had registered himself in respect of those shares, remained liable to be a contributory. Wrysgan Slate Co., In re, Humby's Case, 28 L. J., Ch. 875 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 215 ; 7 W. R. 335.

The rules of a mining company carried on upon the cost-book principle provided that no shareholder should dispose of his shares without giving notice in writing to the purser of the intended transfer, and that every transfer should be according to a particular form provided for that purpose. The form was printed, and contained a notice that no transfer was valid or complete unless entered in the cost-book, and acknowledged by the purser. A shareholder agreed to transfer his shares, and the proposed transferee stipulated that the transferor should pay the calls then due. They went together to the office of the company, and deposited with the purser a transfer of the shares executed by them both in the required form, and the transferor paid the calls, but no notice in writing was given of the transfer, nor was there any formal acknowledgment on the part of the purser :—Held, that the transferee was properly placed upon the list of contributories. Pennant Lead Mining Co., In re, Mayhew's Case, 5 De G. M. & G. 837 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 353 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 566 ; 3 W. R. 95.

Stamping Transfers—23 Vict. c. 15, Sch.]—Before this enactment, transfers of shares of mines conducted on the cost-book principle were exempt from stamp duty. Toll v. Lee, 4 Ex. 230 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 364 ; 13 Jur. 614.

Charging Shares with Judgment Debts.]—Quære, whether a mining company on the cost-book principle is a public company within 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 14, so as to make shares therein liable to be charged with a judgment debt. Nicholls v. Rosewarne, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 480 ; 28 L. J., C. P. 273 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1266 ; 7 W. R. 612.

3. Jurisdiction of Stannary Court.

In what Cases.]—The stannary court was a court of law, but not of equity. Trelawny v. Williams, 2 Vern. 483.

The equitable jurisdiction of the vice-warden of the stannaries of Cornwall depended upon the principles of equity as administered in the court of chancery. Therefore, where ejectment lay for a mine, a petition to the vice-warden for delivery of possession to the plaintiff without alleging any impediment to the recovery of the premises in a court of law was bad on demurrer. Nor would a petition lie simply for an account of mesne profits of a mine, where it was not shewn that any difficulty existed in taking the account, or that the account might not be taken as conveniently at law as in equity. Vice v. Thomas, 4 Y. & Coll. 538.

In Winding-up.]—See infra.

Abolition.]—By 59 & 60 Vict. c. 45, which came into operation on 1*st January*, 1897, the court of the vice-warden of the stannaries was abolished, and the jurisdiction and powers of the court were transferred to and vested in such county courts as the Lord Chancellor might by order direct.

4. WINDING-UP.

By what Court.]—Sect. 32 of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 32, extending the jurisdiction of the stannaries court over the county of Devon, did not oust the jurisdiction of the court of chancery over mines in that county; and therefore it was no objection to a petition for winding-up a mining company in that county that the petitioners are not owners of one-tenth in value of the shares, as required by the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 108, s. 1, in the case of mining companies formed on the cost-book principle within the jurisdiction of the court of stannaries. South Lady Bertha Copper Mining Co., In re, 2 John. & H. 376; 32 L. J., Ch. 92; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 170; 7 L. T. 20; 10 W. R. 687.

Leave to present such a petition was properly granted, under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 78, s. 12, on the ground that the stannaries court had no jurisdiction to restrain proceedings at law against individual shareholders. Ib.

Where a shareholder in a mining company on the cost-book system in the stannaries was being sued in London, the vice-warden had no power to stay the action:—Held (the company having ceased to carry on business), that this was a proper case for a winding-up order in chancery, and not in the stannaries court. Wheal Anne Mining Co., In re, 30 Beav. 601; 6 L. T. 38; 10 W. R. 330.

A company registered in the stannaries court for the working of mines in Cornwall must be wound up in the court of the vice-warden of the stannaries, although the company never commenced working any mines, and had not any creditors within the jurisdiction of the court. East Botallack Mining Co., In re, 34 Beav. 82; 34 L. J., Ch. 81; 11 L. T. 408; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1193; 13 W. R. 197.

Mining companies formed before the passing of the act 11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, are not within its provisions, the intention of s. 2 being only to bring the associations therein mentioned within the description and operation of s. 1. Wyld, Ex parte, Wheal Lovell Mining Co., In re, 1 Macn. & G. 1; 1 H. & Tw. 125; 18 L. J., Ch. 139; 13 Jur. 133.

A company had carried on business upon the cost-book principle until a certain day, when it was registered as a company with limited liability. An order was afterwards obtained before the court of bankruptcy, under the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 47, for winding up the company. Many actions were brought against the directors and shareholders on account of debts accrued before the registration:—Held, that the court of chancery had jurisdiction to make an order for winding up the company as it existed before the registration. Welsh Potosi Mining Co., In re, 27 L. J., Ch. 311; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 577.

A company established for the purpose of acquiring and working mines in Cornwall, and carrying on the business of a smelting and refining company, and as auxiliary thereto, the purchase and erection of buildings, jetties, piers, railways, &c., and the freighting of vessels, is subject to the jurisdiction of the court of the stannaries. Atter, Ex parte, Penhale Lead Mining Co., In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 515; L. R. 2 Ch. 398; 16 L. T. 336; 15 W. R. 664.

When a company has been established for working mines within the district of the stannaries, the fact that some of the objects of the company are to be carried out beyond the district does not exempt the company from the jurisdiction of the stannaries court. Ib.

On whose Application.]—A., a shareholder in a cost-book mine, receives notice in 1851 of an intended sale of a portion of the mine with a view to its being worked by a new company, and is subsequently informed that the arrangement had been adopted, that a transfer of the old share and issue of shares in the new company had been agreed upon, and a call directed in order to clear off the liability remaining upon the old mine as shown by the balance-sheet. A. does not transfer his shares or take up those issued by the new company, and declines to pay the call. On his being sued by a creditor of the company for a sum equal in amount to this unpaid call:—Held, that although A. could not disturb the arrangement of 1851 as to the transfer and sale, he was entitled to have the old company wound up for the purpose of settling the outstanding liabilities, in respect of which the allegations in the petition had not been satisfactorily explained. Birch, Torr and Vitifer Mining Co., In re, 1 Kay & J. 204; 3 W. R. 148.

Creditor Appearing.]—On a petition to wind up a company within the stannaries, a creditor is not entitled to appear and oppose. Tretoil and Messer Mining Co., In re, 2 John. & H. 421; 6 L. T. 154; 10 W. R. 338.

Staying Actions.]—In an action against a shareholder in a company working a mine on the cost-book system for goods supplied to the company, it appeared that after he had parted with his shares in it, the remaining members of the company caused it to be registered under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 60, and an order was made by the court of the vice-warden of the stannaries to wind up the company and stay all actions by creditors against it; and a list of contributories was drawn up, in which the name of the defendant was included. On an application to stay the action:—Held, that the plaintiff had a right to proceed, and that the court of the vice-warden had no power to make that order, as the defendant was not a member of the registered company, and the debt sued for was not a debt of that company. Lanyon v. Smith, 3 B. & S. 938; 32 L. J., Q. B. 212; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1228; 8 L. T. 312; 11 W. R. 665.

Inspection of Books.]—The practice of the stannaries court is the same as that of the high court of justice, that the mere fact of a petition is not enough to justify an order for inspection of books. But if grounds are shewn, the petition may properly be ordered to stand over to allow the petitioner to enforce his right as a shareholder to inspection. The right of inspection under the 22nd section of the Stannaries Act, 1855, is personal to the shareholder, and does not extend to his solicitors or agents. West Devon Great Consols Mine, In re, 27 Ch. D. 106; 51 L. T. 841; 32 W. R. 890—C. A.

Rectifying Register.]—Under the Companies Act of 1862, s. 35, the vice-warden of the stannaries has not exclusive, but concurrent, jurisdiction to entertain an application to rectify the register of members. Penhale Lead Mining Co., In re, Atter, Ex parte, 36 L. J., Ch. 515; L. R. 2 Ch. 393; 16 L. T. 336; 15 W. R. 664.

Misfeasance.]—M. and T. were the principal shareholders in the Ambrose Lake Mine, which was a cost-book company divided into 6,000 shares. In 1871 it was determined to convert it into a limited company, and for this purpose the lease of the mine was assigned to E., a clerk of T., and an agreement was executed that E. should convey it to T. and another as trustees for a new company to be thereafter formed in consideration of the sum of 24,000*l.* to be paid to E. as follows:—6,000 fully paid-up shares of 2*l.* each and 12,000 shares with 20*s.* each considered as paid thereon in the capital of the company to be formed. This new company was incorporated under the above title on the 19th of January, 1872, and the agreement which was printed in the memorandum and articles of association was duly registered. M. and T. were two of the directors named in the articles. One of the objects for which the company was established was as stated in the memorandum—the purchase of the lease of the Ambrose Lake Mine—and the nominal capital of the company was stated to be 36,000*l.* divided into 18,000 shares of 2*l.* each. By the articles of association it was provided, inter alia, that the first 6,000 shares were to be deemed fully paid up, and the remaining 12,000 to have 20*s.* per share paid thereon on allotment. At the first meeting of the directors, all of whom had interests in the cost-book mine, a resolution was passed adopting the agreement to purchase the mine and the articles of association. The shares which formed the purchase money were, in pursuance of an arrangement, divided by E. between M. and T. and the other shareholders of the cost-book mine, according to their former holdings in the mine. Shares were allotted to M. and T. of the nominal value of 11,450*l.* and 11,410*l.* respectively. There was no allotment of shares to the outside public, the new company consisting entirely of the former holders in the cost-book mine or their nominees. No prospectus was issued. The company was ordered to be wound up compulsorily in January, 1878, and the liquidator applied in the winding-up, that M. and T. might be ordered, under s. 165 of the Companies Act, 1862, to pay the sums of 11,450*l.* and 11,410*l.* respectively, by way of compensation for misfeasance as directors:—Held, that though the conversion of the cost-book mine into a limited company might be a fraud on the public, it was not a wrong as between the company and the vendors. It was no fraud on the existing shareholders, because they were all cognisant of it, nor on future shareholders, because by the constitution of the company there could be no future allottees of shares. The vendors and the purchasers forming the whole company, the company could not complain, the remedy, if any, being the remedy of a purchaser from the original allottees who might have been deceived by the representation of his vendor as to the value of the shares. Taylor, Ex parte, Ambrose Lake Tin Mining Co., In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 457; 14 Ch. D. 390; 42 L. T. 604; 28 W. R. 783.

Registration of Contract.]—The owners of a mine worked on the cost-book principle formed a limited company by registration under the Companies Acts, 1862 and 1867, and signed the memorandum of association for the full number of 10*l.* shares into which the capital was to be divided in proportion to their respective interests in the mine, and a clause in the articles of association (which were duly signed) stated, that it was agreed that 7*l.* should be credited on each of their 10*l.* shares, and that all their interests should vest in the company:—Held, that this was a valid contract sufficiently registered under the Companies Act, 1867, s. 25. Appletreewick Lead Mining Co., In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 793; L. R. 18 Eq. 95; 30 L. T. 287; 22 W. R. 678.

Proof by Member against.]—A shareholder in a Cornish mine worked on the cost-book system relinquished his shares in July, 1868, and paid his share of the expenses up to his retirement. In August, 1869, an order for winding up the company was made, and the retired shareholder claimed to prove as a creditor for the value of his share of the stock and plant. The assets were insufficient to pay the creditors of the mine. It having been found by a jury that, according to the custom of Cornwall, an adventurer in a cost-book mine, upon relinquishing his shares and discharging his proportion of the liabilities of the company at that date, was entitled to be paid his share of the then value of the stock and plant, and that such share was due to him immediately, and payable within two years, the proof was admitted. Prosper United Mining Co., In re, Palmer, Ex parte, L. R. 7 Ch. 206; 26 L. T. 374; 20 W. R. 323.

Costs.]—On appeal from the stannaries court, the registrar of which is the official liquidator of companies wound up in that jurisdiction, as well as the officer charged with the taxation of the costs or proceedings in that court, it was ordered that the costs of the appeal, as well as the costs of the prior proceedings in relation to the order appealed from, should be taxed by the taxing master of the court of chancery. Spargo's Case, Harmony and Montague Mining Co., In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 488; L. R. 8 Ch. 407; 28 L. T. 153; 21 W. R. 306.

Contributories.]—See supra, SHARES, col. 1271, et seq.

VIII. REGULATION AND INSPECTION OF MINES.

1. COAL MINES.

Employment of Females.]—To make a contractor for working a mine liable to a conviction for allowing females to have charge of the machinery or tackle by means of which persons are brought up or passed down a vertical shaft of a mine, contrary to 5 & 6 Vict. c. 99, ss. 8 & 13, knowledge of or acquiescence in their being so employed must be brought home to him. Reg. v. Handley, 9 L. T. 827.

Evidence of females being found in charge of such machinery and tackle on one occasion only is not sufficient. Ib.

The court has power to entertain a special case sent by the quarter sessions for their opinion, they having confirmed a conviction appealed against, under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 99, s. 21, subject to the opinion of the court. Ib.

Notice of Accident.]—By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 108, s. 9, if loss of life to any person employed in a coal mine occurs by reason of any accident within such coal mine, or if any serious personal injury arises from explosion therein, the owner shall, "within twenty-four hours next after such loss of life," send notice of such accident to the inspector of the district:—Held, that where serious personal injury arose, not attended with loss of life, the owner could not be convicted for not sending notice to the inspector. Underhill v. Longridge, 29 L. J., M. C. 65; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 221.

Ventilation.]—By the Mines Inspection Act, 1860, s. 10, r. 1, an adequate amount of ventilation shall be constantly produced in all coal mines or collieries and ironstone mines to dilute and render harmless noxious gases to such an extent that the working-places of the pits, levels and workings of every such colliery and mine, and the travelling roads to and from such working-places, shall, under ordinary circumstances, be in a fit state for working and passing therein:—Held, that r. 1 was not confined to the ventilation of the working-places and travelling roads, but required that so much of the mine must be kept ventilated as to render the working-places and travelling-roads safe. Brough v. Homfray, 9 B. & S. 492; 37 L. J., M. C. 177; L. R. 3 Q. B. 771; 16 W. R. 1123.

Timbering—Props and Sprags where "required."]—Rule 22 of s. 49 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, provides for the use of sprags or holding props in mines to support the top coal whilst the bottom coal is being worked. Upon their true construction, the words of that rule, "where they are required," mean where they are "necessary," and not where the workmen think them necessary. Whether they be necessary or not is a question of fact to be decided by the justices in each case. Gibbon v. Phillips, 64 L. J., M. C. 42.

Examination of Machinery, &c., and Shafts.]—Rule 5 of s. 49 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, requires the report of the result of the daily examination of the external parts of the machinery, guides, conductors, &c., to be recorded, as well as the report of the weekly examination of the shafts. Scott v. Bould, 64 L. J., M. C. 16; [1895] 1 Q. B. 9; 15 R. 134; 71 L. T. 577; 18 Cox, C. C. 52; 59 J. P. 390.

Breach of Rules by Workman.]—By the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, s. 52, power is given to frame special rules for the conduct and guidance of the persons acting in the management of a coal mine or employed in or about the same. By a special rule in force in a mine no person employed in or about the works was to ascend the pit contrary to the direction of the hooker-on. In this mine the workmen had power to dismiss themselves at a moment's notice. The workmen employed in the mine being dissatisfied with their working-place discharged themselves. They asked the hooker-on to allow them to ascend the pit, but he refused to do so until the ordinary time came for workmen to quit the mine; the workmen, however, ascended contrary to his direction:—Held, that they had been guilty of a breach of the special rule above mentioned. Higham v. Wright, 46 L. J., M. C. 223; 2 C. P. D. 397; 37 L. T. 187.

By the Mines Inspection Act, 1860, it is by s. 11 enacted that special rules shall be established in every mine within the act, and by s. 22 a penalty is imposed upon workpeople employed in such mines who neglect or wilfully violate any of such special rules. By r. 11 of the special rules in force in the present case, every charter-master, underlooker, manager or other person, upon employing any workman, was to deliver to him a copy of such rules; and by r. 34 it was provided that "Every workman is engaged subject to these rules, and shall observe the same and abide by the consequences of neglecting them, and shall receive a copy thereof from the manager, chartermaster or other person who shall engage him." Upon an information under s. 22 against the appellant for disobeying the orders of the respondent, who was the chartermaster under whose control the appellant was, contrary to the rules, there was no evidence that a copy of the said rules had been given to the appellant:—Held, that the delivery of a copy of such rules was a condition precedent to the respondent's right to enforce them. Higginson v. Hapley, 19 L. T. 690.

Notice by Inspector of Danger—Objection of Owner—Powers of Arbitrator.]—In an arbitration under s. 46 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, the duty of the arbitrator is limited to determining whether the matter complained of by the inspector is dangerous and ought to be remedied, and he has no power to determine what is the proper remedy, or to direct that any particular remedy be adopted. Home Secretary and Fletcher, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 177; 18 Q. B. D. 339; 35 W. R. 282; 51 J. P. 707—C. A.

—— Remedy not possible.]—A colliery being in danger of being flooded by the accumulation of water in an adjacent disused pit belonging to a different owner, the inspector of mines served a notice under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, s. 46, on the owner of the colliery, calling on him to remedy the matter. He attempted to do so, but found that it was impossible without going on to his neighbour's property, and consequently failed to comply with the notice, and did not remove his men from his own workings. On these facts he was convicted of an offence under s. 46:—Held, that he was wrongly convicted, for that section only applied to cases where the remedy was within the owner's power, which it was not in the present case, and that he was not bound to withdraw his men in consequence of the notice, the withdrawal of men being provided for by s. 51, sub-s. 6. Spon Lane Colliery Co. v. Baker, 48 L. J., M. C. 25; 3 Q. B. D. 673; 39 L. T. 13; 27 W. R. 46.

Boiler Explosion—Power of Board of Trade to direct Inquiry.]—The Boiler Explosions Act, 1882, by s. 4, provides that "this act shall not apply to any boiler used exclusively for domestic purposes, or to any boiler used in the service of her majesty, or to any boiler on board a steamship having a certificate from the board of trade, or to any boiler explosion into which an inquiry may be held under the provisions of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, and the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, or either of them"; and by s. 2 of the Boiler Explosions Act, 1890, "so much of s. 4 of the Boiler Explosions Act, 1882, as relates to any boiler other than a boiler used in the service of her majesty, or used exclusively for domestic purposes, is hereby repealed":—Held, that the board of trade has power under these acts to direct an inquiry under the Boiler Explosions Act, 1882, into a boiler explosion, notwithstanding that the secretary of state also has power to direct an inquiry as to the explosion under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, or the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872. Reg. v. Boiler Explosions Commissioners, 60 L. J., Q. B. 544; [1891] 1 Q. B. 703; 64 L. T. 674; 39 W. R. 440—C. A. Affirming 55 J. P. 616.

Penalties—Limitation of Time for Recovering.]—Mandamus tested the 14th May, 1857, to justices, to hear and determine the merits of an information, which they had dismissed without hearing and determining the merits, on the 20th of January. Return, that the justices, in obedience to the writ on the 22nd of December, 1857, heard and determined the information, which was for penalties incurred by a contravention of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 108, and dismissed it, on the ground that the offence having been committed on the 17th of December, 1856, more than three months had elapsed, and the defendant was therefore protected, and could not be convicted. Sect. 14 enacts, that all penalties imposed by the act may be recovered within three months of the commission of the offence:—Held, that whether the justices were right or wrong in their construction of the act, the return shewed that they had obeyed the writ, and was therefore good. Reg. v. Mainwaring, El. Bl. & El. 474; 27 L. J., M. C. 278; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 928; 6 W. R. 594.

Semble, per Lord Campbell, C.J., and Crompton, J., that the justices' construction of the act was right; Coleridge, J., and Erle, J., inclining to a contrary opinion. Ib.

Compliance with General Rules when "Reasonably Practicable."]—The Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, by s. 51 enacts that certain general rules shall be observed so far as is reasonably practicable, and among them that gunpowder or other explosive or inflammable substance shall not be used in the mine underground, during three months after any inflammable gas has been found in any such mine, if the inflammable gas issued so freely that it shewed a blue cap on the flame of the safety-lamp, except when the persons ordinarily employed in the mine are out of the mine "or out of the part of the mine where it is used":—Held, that the expression "reasonably practicable" did not relate to the carrying on of the mine as a profitable concern, but to physical or engineering difficulties in the way of carrying out the rules, and that the expression "part of the mine," did not mean the neighbourhood where the gunpowder would be used, but such a part of the mine as could be treated under the statute as a separate mine. Walls or Wales v. Thomas, 55 L. J., M. C. 57; 16 Q. B. D. 340; 55 L. T. 400; 16 Cox, C. C. 128; 50 J. P. 516.

Liability of Joint Owners.]—A party was summoned before justices, upon an information under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 108, s. 11, charging that he, "being one of the owners and managers" of a colliery, had worked the colliery without providing the boiler with a proper steam gauge. In defence he contended that, as there were other owners, they ought to be charged with him; but he did not deny that he was resident owner, and took an active part in the management. The justices, upon this objection alone, dismissed the complaint, considering the information to be bad on the face of it, because it shewed that there were other owners. A mandamus was granted, commanding them to hear and determine the information; for that, first, the objection was invalid; and, secondly the justices had not exercised jurisdiction, but had declined it, the objection being preliminary, though taken in defence, and not at the outset. Reg. v. Brown, 7 El. & Bl. 757; 26 L. J., M. C. 183; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 745; 5 W. R. 625.

Immunity of Mine-owners for Negligence of Servants.]—By the Mines Regulation Act, 1860, s. 10, it was provided that certain general rules should be observed in every coal mine by the owner and agent thereof; and among those rules was one providing that, whenever safety lamps were required to be used, they should be first examined and safely locked by a person or persons duly authorised for that purpose. By s. 22, a penalty is imposed on the owner or agent if, through the default of such owner or agent, any of the general rules, the provisions of which ought to be observed by them, were neglected or wilfully violated. The owner of a mine appointed a competent person to examine and lock the safety lamps required for use in the mine, but such person delivered out certain safety lamps to miners for use in the mine unlocked:—Held, that, in the absence of any personal default on the part of the owner, he was not liable to a penalty in respect of the act of the person so employed by him. Dickinson v. Fletcher, 43 L. J., M. C. 25; L. R. 9 C. P. 1; 29 L. T. 540.

The owners of a colliery who have appointed a certificated manager under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, s. 26, are not liable for an injury to a workman in the colliery caused by the negligence of the manager, as there is nothing in the statute to make him other than a fellow-workman of the person injured. Howells v. Landore Steel Co., 44 L. J., Q. B. 25; L. R. 10 Q. B. 62; 32 L. T. 19; 23 W. R. 335. Also reported, 31 L. T. 433.

Owner's Liability for not Publishing Rules.]—By s. 51 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, certain general rules are provided, to be observed in every mine to which the act applies, and it is enacted that, "in the event of any contravention or non-compliance with any of the general rules by any person whomsoever being proved, the owner, agent and manager shall each be guilty of an offence against the act, unless he proves that he had taken all reasonable means, by publishing and to the best of his power enforcing the said rules and regulations for the working of the mine, to prevent such contravention or non-compliance":—Held, that in the case of a non-resident part owner of a mine, taking no part in the management, the appointment of a certificated manager is evidence upon which, without proof of personal interference on the part of such owner, he may be acquitted of an offence under that section. Baker v. Carter, 47 L. J., M. C. 87; 3 Ex. D. 132; 26 W. R. 497.

"Owner"—Who is.]—In 1860, S. proposed in writing to take from the landlord certain coal mines for fourteen years, from Michaelmas of that year, at a certain rent, a lease to be granted and accepted, with provisions contained in a then existing lease of other mines. The landlord accepted this proposal in writing, but no lease was executed. One of the provisions mentioned was, that when and so soon as the pits, shafts, roads, &c., should be discontinued or become useless, the lessee would fill up or remove the same unless the lessor should signify his wish that the same should be kept open or continued. In 1871 S. discontinued working these mines. In December, 1875, he was convicted by justices under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, s. 41, upon a charge of not causing the tops of the shafts of these mines to be kept securely fenced for the prevention of accidents on the 29th November previously:—Held, that he was not at the date charged an owner of the shafts within the interpretation of that term in s. 72. Stott v. Dickinson, 34 L. T. 291.

Breach of Rules and Regulations—Liability of Agent and Manager.]—By a special rule for the regulation of coal mines under the Mines Regulation Act, 1860, the banksman is directed to take care that the persons descending the pit shall in no case exceed the number of eight men and boys; a breach of these rules is punishable on summary conviction by fine and imprisonment. The chartermaster of a pit (who by the rules was declared to be the responsible manager of the pit under his charge) was close to the pit, and was cognizant that more than eight men were being lowered down at one time, and had power to prevent the banksman (who was his servant) from so doing, and did not interfere:—Held, that he was properly convicted of a breach of the regulations, as being a person aiding, abetting or procuring the commission of the offence, within 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 5. Howells v. Wynne, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 3; 32 L. J., M. C. 241; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1041.

The 18 & 19 Vict. c. 108, s. 4, required certain rules to be observed in every coal mine and colliery by the owner and agent thereof. By r. 1, an adequate amount of ventilation is to be constantly produced at all collieries, in order that the working-places of the pits and levels of such collieries may, under ordinary circumstances, be in a fit state for working. Sect. 11 imposes a penalty upon the owner and agent if any colliery be worked and the aforesaid rules are neglected or wilfully violated:—Held, that the agent of a colliery which was actually worked only on week days incurred a penalty under s. 11 for a breach of r. 1, by neglecting to keep up adequate ventilation in the colliery during the suspension of actual work there between Saturday night and Monday morning; for that, notwithstanding such suspension, the colliery was worked during that time within the meaning of that section. Knowles v. Dickinson, 2 El. & El. 705; 29 L. J., M. C. 135; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 678; 2 L. T. 174; 8 W. R. 411.

By the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, s. 51, it is provided that, in the event of any contravention of the general rules set out in that section, the owner, agent and manager shall be each guilty of an offence, unless he proves that he had taken all reasonable means to prevent such contravention. The first of all such general rules provides that an adequate amount of ventilation shall be constantly produced in every mine to render harmless noxious gases, so that the working-places of the shaft of such mine, and the travelling-roads to and from such working-places, shall be in a fit state for working and passing therein. The respondent, who was a certified manager of a colliery mine, at a salary of 1*l.* per week, was charged with an offence under s. 51, r. 1. It was proved that the mine was improperly ventilated, and that the respondent might have improved the ventilation with the resources at his disposal, but that the requisite provision for the proper ventilation of the mine would have involved an outlay of 200*l.*:—Held, that the finding of the justices, that the respondent had omitted to employ the resources at his disposal for the improvement of the ventilation of the mine, disclosed an offence under s. 51, for which he was liable to be convicted. Hall v. Hopwood, 49 L. J., M. C. 17; 41 L. T. 797.

The Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, s. 51, enacts certain general rules which are to be observed in every mine to which that act applies, and that every person who contravenes or does not comply with such rules shall be guilty of an offence against the act, and that in the event of any contravention of or non-compliance with any of the rules "by any person whomsoever being proved, the owner, agent and manager shall each be guilty of an offence against the act, unless he proves that he had taken all reasonable means, by publishing and to the best of his power enforcing the said rules," to prevent such contravention or non-compliance. The manager of a coal mine in Staffordshire and the respondent, the agent of the same mine, were summoned for non-compliance with the first general rule for procuring adequate ventilation in the mine. The magistrate convicted the manager, under whose directions the mine was being worked, but declined to convict the agent also of the same offence:—Held, that the agent as well as the manager of a mine to which the said act applies was liable to be convicted of an offence against the act, in not complying with the said rules as to ventilation in the mine, unless he gives evidence to shew that he had to the best of his power enforced the said rules. Wynne v. Forrester, 48 L. J., M. C. 140; 5 C. P. D. 361; 40 L. T. 524; 27 W. R. 820.

A managing director of a colliery company appointed a duly certificated manager of a mine, and did not in any way interfere with the actual management of the colliery underground, which was left in the hands of the manager. He also caused the rules under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, and the abstract of the act itself, to be duly published at the colliery, and had authorised all necessary expenditure for the safety and working of the mine. An offence against the act having been committed in the mine:—Held, that the managing director was an "agent" within the meaning of s. 50 of the act, but that as he had caused the rules and the act to be duly published at the mine, as required by that section, he had taken all reasonable means to prevent such "contravention," and had therefore discharged himself from responsibility for such offence. Stokes v. Checkland, 5 R. 240; 68 L. T. 457; 17 Cox, C. C. 631; 57 J. P. 232.

—— Liability of Owner—Certificated Manager.]—Where the owner of a coal mine took no part in the management, had appointed a certificated manager, had duly posted up the rules in accordance with the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, and was found to have taken all reasonable means to prevent non-compliance with those rules:—Held, that he could not be convicted of permitting dangerous working within s. 50 of the above act. Bell v. Bruce, 55 J. P. 535.

Regulation Act, 1872, s. 18, the persons employed in a mine, and paid according to the weight of the mineral gotten by them, may, at their own cost, station a check-weigher at the place appointed for the weighing of such mineral, in order to take an account of the weight thereof on behalf of the persons by whom he is so stationed; and "the check-weigher shall be one of the persons employed either in the mine at which he is so stationed, or in another mine belonging to the owner of that mine." The plaintiff, a check-weigher, duly appointed under s. 18, received a fortnight's notice to quit his employment from the men employed in the mine. Before the notice expired the men held a fresh election, at which the plaintiff (with others) presented himself as a candidate, and was again appointed:—Held, that the true construction of s. 18 was to limit the class of persons from whom the men might appoint a check-weigher to persons employed in the mine by the mine-owner; that the plaintiff ceased to have any employment under the mine-owner when he was first appointed check-weigher by the men; and therefore that his second appointment was invalid. Hopkinson v. Caunt, 54 L. J., Q. B. 284; 14 Q. B. D. 592; 33 W. R. 522; 49 J. P. 550.

—— Effect of Closing and Re-opening Mine on Appointment of.]—The appellant, who was a miner in the respondents' coal mine, was appointed check-weigher by the other miners under the provisions of s. 18 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, and acted in that capacity, and was paid by the miners. Subsequently the respondents dismissed all the miners and closed the mine. No notice was given to the appellant by the respondents, or by or on behalf of the miners. On the mine being re-opened a short time afterwards, the appellant claimed to be still check-weigher and to be entitled to perform the duties of that office, and brought an action against the respondents for preventing his doing so:—Held, that the appellant had, on the dismissal of the miners, ceased to be check-weigher, and that the action could not be maintained. Whitehead v. Holdsworth, 48 L. J., Ex. 254; 4 Ex. D. 13; 39 L. T. 638; 27 W. R. 94.

Check-weighers—Misconduct of.]—A check-weigher, stationed by the person employed in H.'s mine to take an account of the weighing of the mineral gotten by them, under s. 18 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, had been convicted and imprisoned for intimidating one of the workmen with a view to compel him to abstain from working as a waggon-rider in H.'s employment. He applied to justices for a summary order for the check-weigher's removal under the provisions of that section, and the justices, although it did not so appear on the face of the conviction, admitted evidence to shew, and found as a fact, that the intimidation took place on H.'s premises, where the appellant had no right to be, except in his capacity of check-weigher. It did not appear that this intimidation caused any impediment or interruption of the working of the mine, but the justices made the order of removal:—Held, that the check-weigher had misconducted himself within the meaning of the section, and that the justices were justified in making the order. Prentice v. Hall, 37 L. T. 605; 26 W. R. 237.

Wages—Payment by Weight of Mineral—Mineral contracted to be gotten.]—Persons were employed in a mine under a contract that coals should be paid for at 1*s.* 6*d.* per ton, and heading slack at 7*d.* per ton, no other slack to be paid for; all other slack to be deducted from the different places in proportion to their loading, and a premium of 2*d.* a ton on the coal to be paid to all those places whose boxes of coal did not contain an average of more than 112 lbs. of dust each per week. The coal (including the slack gotten) was weighed close to the pit's mouth, and was then sorted and carried forty yards and shot on to a screen, more slack being caused by the operations: a note of the slack which passed through the screen was taken by a person employed only by the mine-owners, and the weight of the slack was deducted from the weight at the pit's mouth. The wages of the miners were paid according to the weight of the coal after thus deducting the slack. In an action by the miners to recover from their employers the difference between the wages so ascertained and the full wages if no such deduction had been made:—Held, that the miners were entitled to recover. By Lord Halsbury, L.C., and Lords Herschell and Macnaghten:—Because by the contract the amount of wages paid depended "on the amount of mineral gotten" within the meaning of s. 17 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, but the miners were not paid "according to the weight of the mineral gotten," nor was "such mineral truly weighed accordingly," within the meaning of that section; for "the mineral contracted to be gotten" was coal including slack, and slack was not "material other than mineral to be gotten," and was therefore not one of the deductions allowed by that section. By Lords Bramwell and Fitzgerald:—Because, though the deductions were not in contravention of s. 17, the weights were not ascertained in the manner required by s. 18. Netherseal Colliery Co. v. Bourne, 59 L. J., Q. B. 66; 14 App. Cas. 228; 61 L. T. 125; 54 J. P. 84—H. L. (E.) Affirming 36 W. R. 405—C. A.

The Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, provides (s. 12, sub-s. 1) that where the amount of wages paid to any of the persons employed in a mine depends on the amount of mineral gotten by them, those persons shall be paid according to the actual weight gotten by them of the mineral contracted to be gotten . . . provided that nothing in the section shall preclude the owner, agent or manager of the mine from agreeing with the persons employed in the mine that deductions shall be made in respect of stones or substances other than the mineral contracted to be gotten, which shall be sent out of the mine with the mineral contracted to be gotten:—Held, that, in the case of a coal mine, a deduction in respect of small coal, upon the ground that the "mineral contracted to be gotten" was large coal, was illegal under the section, and that the miners were entitled to be paid according to the actual weight of all the coal gotten by them. Brace v. Abercarn Colliery Co., 60 L. J., Q. B. 706; [1891] 2 Q. B. 699; 65 L. T. 694; 40 W. R. 3; 56 J. P. 20—C. A.

According to the true construction of s. 12 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, which provides for the payment of miners by weight, subject to the right of masters and men to agree upon certain deductions, the "deductions" therein mentioned are deductions from weight, not from wages. That from which the deduction is to be made is the whole amount of material which is sent up in tubs from the mine. That which is to be deducted is the foreign substance which is sent up in the tubs with the coal, or the slack or coal dust with which the tubs are improperly filled. Any other mode of making deductions is in contravention of the statute. Kearney v. Whitehaven Colliery Co., 62 L. J., M. C. 129; [1893] 1 Q. B. 700; 4 R. 388; 68 L. T. 690; 41 W. R. 594; 57 J. P. 645—C. A.

A miner entered into a contract of employment with the owners of a colliery, by which he agreed not to leave his employment without giving fourteen days' notice, and further agreed that deductions that were in contravention of the above section might be made from his wages:—Held, that the whole contract of employment was not thereby rendered illegal, and that he therefore was liable in damages to the colliery owners for leaving without notice. Netherseal Colliery Co. v. Bourne (14 App. Cas. 228), considered. Ib.

—— Payment by weight of Mineral—Exemption.]—Orders exempting mines from the provisions of s. 17 of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872, made by a secretary of state before the passing of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, are specially preserved and kept in force by ss. 79 and 84 of that act, unless revoked or altered by a secretary of state under the provisions of s. 72 of the same act, and exempt the mines to which they were granted from the provisions of s. 12, sub-s. 1, of the act of 1887. Dickinson v. Handsley, 60 L. T. 567; 53 J. P. 676.

2. OTHER MINES.

"Mine"—Slate Quarry.]—A slate quarry, worked by means of underground workings by levels, is a mine within the intention of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872. Sim v. Evans, 23 W. R. 730.

"Quarry"—Slag-heap.]—A slag-heap (covering a large area and about thirty-seven feet in height from the natural surface of the ground) accumulated by artificial and not natural means, the natural surface of the ground remaining intact, is not a "quarry" within the Quarries Act, 1894. Scott v. Midland Ry., 61 J. P. 358.

"Skip," or Open Box—Miners using Skip without Cover.]—By s. 23, sub-s. 11, of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, a sufficient cover overhead shall be used when lowering or raising persons in every working shaft with certain exceptions. By the last clause of s. 23, every person who contravenes or does not comply with any of the general rules in this section shall be guilty of an offence against this act. By s. 31, every person employed in or about a mine, other than an owner or agent, who is guilty of any act or omission which, in the case of an owner or agent, would be an offence against this act, shall be guilty of an offence against this act, and is rendered liable to a penalty. S. and others were working miners in the D. mine. The D. mine had two shafts, in one of which was a man engine, with a proper cover, used to lower miners from and raise them to the surface of the mine. In the other was a "skip," or open box, without a cover, used for raising ores and refuse. S. and certain other miners, who were then at the bottom of the mine, while the man engine and "skip" were both at work, got into the "skip," and were raised to the surface of the mine:—Held, that they were guilty of an offence against the act. Frecheville v. Souden, 48 L. T. 612; 47 J. P. 613.

Duty of Mine-owner towards Miner.]—It is no answer to a claim for damages by the surviving relatives of a workman accidentally killed in a mine, which was not in a safe and sufficient state, to say that he was at that moment of time in the act of leaving the work for a purpose of his own. Brydon v. Stewart, 2 Macq. H. L. 30.

The master who lets a workman down his mine is bound to bring him up safely, even though he came up on his own business, and not for that of his master. Ib.

Working—Guides in "Working Shaft"—Signalling.]—The respondents, who had completed a shaft in their mine, and were driving a level or tunnel from the same, but had not commenced to raise any ore by means of the shaft, had not provided guides nor proper means of communicating signals from the bottom of the shaft to the surface. An information was laid against the respondents, under s. 23, sub-s. 10, of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, which enacts that every working shaft of a certain depth shall be provided with guides and proper means of signalling. The information was dismissed upon the ground that as no ore was being raised, it was not a working shaft within the act:—Held, that the shaft was a working shaft, and that the respondents should have been convicted. Foster v. North Hendre Lead Mining Co., 60 L. J., M. C. 6; [1891] 1 Q. B. 71; 63 L. T. 458; 17 Cox, C. C. 216; 55 J. P. 103.

Gunpowder—Conveyance of—"Case or Canister."]—By the Metalliferous Mines Act, 1872, s. 23, sub-s. 2, "Gunpowder or other explosive or inflammable substance shall not be taken into the mines except in a case or canister containing not more than four pounds":—Held, that the word "case" as used in the section must be taken to mean something solid and substantial in the nature of a canister, and that a bag of linen or calico was not such a "case." Foster v. Diphwys Casson Slate Co., 56 L. J., M. C. 21; 18 Q. B. D. 428; 51 J. P. 470.

Obligation to Fence—Who Bound.]—A person entitled to the minerals under the land of another, with licence to make a mine shaft opening into it, is, in the absence of any stipulation to the contrary, under a legal obligation to the owner of the surface soil to fence the shaft so as to prevent its being a source of danger to his cattle, which may be upon it; and is liable to an action for injury accruing to those cattle for want of such fencing. Williams v. Groucott, 4 B. & S. 149; 32 L. J., Q. B. 237; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1237; 8 L. T. 458; 11 W. R. 886.

Harbour trustees had a licence to take flints and chalk from a quarry at a certain price:—Held, that they were not thereby "owners" of the quarry within the meaning of s. 41 of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, so as to be liable to fence same. Foster v. Newhaven Harbour Trustees, 61 J. P. 629.

—— Working Discontinued—Side Entrance.]—A side entrance of a disused mine situated upon an enclosed piece of land is not securely fenced within the meaning of s. 13 of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, unless the fence be placed close to the entrance. Foster v. Owen, 62 L. J., M. C. 7; 5 R. 50; 67 L. T. 712; 41 W. R. 240; 57 J. P. 87.

Fencing Shaft of Abandoned Mine—Who Liable for.]—The appellant was lessee of a lead mine, and of all the duties arising therefrom, under a lease from the Duchy of Lancaster, by which he had to pay to the duchy, by way of rent, all he might annually receive in respect of the mine, with an additional yearly rent of five shillings. The mine was demised to him subject to a custom by which all the subjects of the realm have a right to search there for veins of lead ore, upon paying certain duties, and the appellant had no pecuniary interest in the mine or in the minerals thereof. Sect. 13 of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, requires the owner of an abandoned mine to which the act applies, and every other person interested in the minerals of the mine, to cause the top of the shaft to be fenced, and s. 41 states that the term "owner" means any person "who is the immediate proprietor, or lessee, or occupier of a mine," and "does not include a person who merely receives a royalty, rent or fine from a mine, or is merely the proprietor of a mine subject to any lease, grant or licence for the working thereof, or is merely the owner of the soil, and not interested in the minerals of the mine":—Held, that the appellant was neither owner of the mine nor a person interested in its minerals within the meaning of s. 13, and, therefore, upon the mine being abandoned he was not liable to cause the top of its shaft to be fenced, as required by that section. Arkwright v. Evans, 49 L. J., M. C. 82.

Quære, whether the statute applies to a mine which belongs to the Duchy of Lancaster. Ib.

Sect. 41 applies to a mine abandoned or discontinued at any time before or after the time when the act comes into operation. Stott v. Dickinson, 34 L. T. 291.

Sect. 21 of the Mines Regulation Act, 1860, which imposes on the owner of an abandoned mine the duty of securely fencing it, does not apply to a mine abandoned before the passing of the statute. Reg. v. Gratrex, 12 Cox, C. C. 157.

The owners in fee of a mine granted a lease for a term of years, reserving to themselves a royalty on the minerals produced, with power to distrain for the rent, and to detain the minerals gotten until the royalty was paid:—Held, that such lessors were, during the existence of the lease, persons interested in the minerals within s. 13 of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, and were therefore liable, in the event of the mine becoming an abandoned mine, to cause its shaft to be fenced for the prevention of accidents. Evans v. Mostyn (Lady), 47 L. J., M. C. 25; 2 C. P. D. 547; 36 L. T. 856.

The owner of the soil of an abandoned lead-mine, and of the calc-spar and calk (barytes) it contains, is a "person interested in the minerals of the mine" within the meaning of s. 13 of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, and is therefore liable to fence its shafts and entrances for the prevention of accidents. Stokes v. Arkwright, 66 L. J., Q. B. 845; 77 L. T. 400; 61 J. P. 775.

The appellant was the lord of the manor of H., and freeholder of the soil of a mine, which had not been worked for over thirty years, and the workers of which or their representatives could not be traced. Notice was served on him to fence, on the ground that the entrance was specially dangerous. By the Derbyshire Mining Act, 1852, the appellant was entitled to dues of lot and cope and a third meer, and this act further only gave the worker the right to mine, and conferred no title on the soil. The appellant having failed to comply with the terms of the notice was summoned and convicted:—Held, that the appellant was a person interested in the minerals within s. 13 of the act of 1872, and that on abandonment the mine reverted to him as owner, and that, therefore, being liable to fence, he was rightly convicted. Devonshire (Duke) v. Stokes, 76 L. T. 424; 61 J. P. 406.

Neglect to securely fence Shaft—Information in Name of Inspector laid by Agent.]—An information under s. 35 of the Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act, 1872, for an offence against that act may be laid by a person authorised in that behalf by an inspector under the act. Foster v. Fyfe, 65 L. ## 1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Jurisdiction of Court.]—The court has jurisdiction to set aside an agreement on the ground of mistake, but the mistake must be plain and palpable, and it must be possible to replace the parties in substantially their original position. Beauchamp v. Wynn, 38 L. J., Ch. 556; 21 L. T. 253; 17 W. R. 866.

When in the making of an agreement between two parties there has been a mutual mistake as to their rights, occasioning an injury to one of them, the rule of equity is in favour of interposing to grant relief. S. C., sub nom. Beauchamp (Earl) v. Winn, L. R. 6 H. L. 223.

A court of equity will not, if such a ground for relief is clearly established, decline to grant relief merely because it may be difficult to restore the parties exactly to their original condition. Ib.

What is the nature of a mistake and what has been the cause of it will be considered in determining whether relief ought to be granted. Ib.

Where two parties, under a mistake of fact, enter into an agreement, either of them has a title to come to equity to be relieved from it. That relief will be given on the principles of good conscience alone. Cooper v. Phibbs, L. R. 2 H. L. 149; 16 L. T. 678; 15 W. R. 1049.

A. entered into an agreement for a lease of a fishery from B. At the time both parties believed that B. was the owner of the fishery, but it was afterwards discovered that A. was the owner. There was no fraud, and the deeds establishing A.'s title were equally known and accessible to both parties:—Held, that A. was entitled to have the agreement set aside, subject to certain equitable terms for the benefit of B., and that the maxim, ignorantia juris non excusat, did not apply. Ib.

Mistake of Law.]—Although mistake is one of the grounds for equitable relief, it must be a mistake of fact, and not of law. The construction of a contract is matter of law, and if a party acts upon a mistaken view of his rights under a contract, he is not entitled to relief in equity. Midland Great Western Ry. v. Johnson, 6 H. L. Cas. 798; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 643; 6 W. R. 510.

The court refused an injunction to restrain plaintiffs in an action at law from taking out of court money which the defendants had paid into court, in ignorance that upon such payment the plaintiffs were entitled to stay their action and take the sum so paid. G. W. Ry. v. Cripps, 5 Hare, 91; 4 Railw. Cas. 473.

If parties are entering into an agreement, and the will out of which a forfeiture arose was lying before them and their counsel, while the drafts were preparing, the parties shall be supposed to be acquainted with the consequence of law as to this point. Pullen v. Ready, 2 Atk. 591.

A party who, under a misapprehension of his legal rights, parts with his property for a valuable consideration, cannot have the transactions set aside on the mere ground of mistake. Marshall v. Collett, 1 Y. & Coll. 232.

A husband was advised by counsel that he had no title as tenant by the curtesy, and that if he intended to set up such a title, he ought not to sue in a partition suit then in contemplation. The suit was nevertheless instituted by him, and a decree was obtained. A partition was made under the decree, and the legal estate in the daughter's share conveyed to the use of the father during the infancy of the daughter, in trust for her maintenance, and afterwards to her own use in fee. The father filed a bill to be relieved from the trusts, on the ground of mistake, and to have his title as tenant by the curtesy established:—Held, that the court has power to relieve against mistakes in law as well as against mistakes in fact; but that where relief is sought against the consequences of mistakes in law, the court must be satisfied that the plaintiff's conduct has been determined by those mistakes. Stone v. Godfrey, 5 De G. M. & G. 76; 23 L. J., Ch. 769; 18 Jur. 524.

—— Payment.]—The court will only exercise its power to relieve against mistakes in law as well as against mistakes in fact where there is some equitable ground which makes it inequitable that the relief should not be granted. Rogers v. Ingham, 3 Ch. D. 351; 35 L. T. 667; 25 W. R. 338.

Therefore, such relief will not be granted in a case where, there being no fiduciary relationship between the parties, and both parties having had a full knowledge of all the facts, one party demands repayment of money received by the other, on the ground that, owing to a mistake in law, both parties had believed that the person receiving the money was entitled to it. Ib.

Although, the giving credit in account may be treated, as so far equivalent to payment under mistake of law as to prevent sums wrongly credited being recoverable at law; yet in equity the line between mistakes in law and mistakes in fact has not been so clearly and sharply drawn. Daniell v. Sinclair, 50 L. J., P. C. 50; 6 App. Cas. 181; 44 L. T. 257; 29 W. R. 569.

Forged Indorsement — Amount paid and received in Good Faith.]—The plaintiffs paid the defendants the amount due on the first and second of a bill of exchange, drawn in three sets. The defendants bought the bill in good faith, but the prior endorsements were forgeries. Some months later the third of exchange properly endorsed was presented, and the plaintiffs were compelled to pay it. The plaintiffs then sought to recover the amount paid on the first and second of exchange from the defendants as money paid under a mistake of fact:—Held, that their action failed. When money is once paid and received on a bill of exchange in good faith under a mistake, not instantly discovered, it cannot be recovered back. The rule in Cocks v. Masterman, (9 B. & C. 902) discussed and followed. London and River Plate Bank v. Bank of Liverpool, 65 L. J., Q. B. 80; [1896] 1 Q. B. 7; 73 L. T. 473.

What Proof required.]—A mistake in law, in order to be relieved against, must be distinctly stated and proved in the bill, and on the evidence. Kilvington v. Parker, 21 W. R. 121.

Compromise.]—In an agreement for compromise the consideration which each party receives is the settlement of the dispute; the real consideration being, not the sacrifice of the right, but the abandonment of the claim; and it is no objection to the validity of such contract, that the right was really in one of the parties only. Trigge v. Lavallee, 14 Moore, P. C. 271; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 261; 11 W. R. 404.

It is no objection to such a transaction, that the right was really in one of the parties only; nor is an agreement of compromise vitiated by mistake of either party in matters of law. Ib.

If the error relied on is in a matter of fact, and the fact is one not included in the compromise, and of such a character that it must be considered as the determining motive of either of the parties in entering into the agreement, its existence is regarded as a condition implied though not expressed; and then if the fact fails the foundation of the agreement fails. Ib.

A plaintiff may be entitled to relief from a contract or conveyance on the ground of ignorance and mistake, although the defendant was also in ignorance and under mistake, the contract or conveyance not being made upon the principle of compromising doubtful rights. Reynell v. Sprye, 8 Hare, 222; 21 L. J., Ch. 633. And see next case.

—— Doubtful Rights.]—When parties whose rights are questionable have equal knowledge of facts and equal means of ascertaining what their rights really are, and they endeavour to settle their claims among themselves, the court feels disposed to support the agreements to which they may fairly come, notwithstanding the subsequent discovery of common error. Pickering v. Pickering, 2 Beav. 31; 4 Myl. & Cr. 289; 8 L. J., Ch. 336; 3 Jur. 331, 743. And see preceding case.

Conveyance.]—Where there is a mistake in a conveyance so that the deed does not represent the final contract between the parties, the court will rectify the deed if both parties can be restored to their original position. Harris v. Pepperell, L. R. 3 Eq. 1; 17 L. T. 191; 16 W. R. 68.

Mistake in Drawing Deed.]—Mistakes and misapprehensions in the drawers of deeds are as much a head of relief as fraud and imposition. Langley v. Brown, 2 Atk. 202.

Where a man, in consideration of an intended marriage, and of a debt stated to be owing by him to the intended wife, conveys to her, and there is no proof of actual fraud nor of actual mistake, though some of the deeds are absurdly framed, there was no ground to relieve nor any pretence to set aside the deeds. Ib., 195.

Omission.]—An omission by mistake in an agreement stands on the same ground as an omission by fraud. Ramsbottom v. Gosden, 1 V. & B. 168; 12 R. R. 207.

Mistake in Telegram.]—The defendant wrote to the plaintiffs inquiring upon what terms they could supply him with fifty rifles. They, having stated terms, received a telegram from the defendant for "the rifles." The message by the defendant was for "three" rifles, but the telegraph clerk had mistaken the word "three":—Held, that the defendant was not bound by the mistake of the clerk. Henkel v. Pape, 40 L. J., Ex. 15; L. R. 6 Ex. 7; 23 L. T. 419; 19 W. R. 106.

Errors in Calculation.]—A contractor agreed to execute works for a gross sum. A schedule of quantities, to shew in detail how the gross sum was made up, was appended to the contract. There were in the schedule several manifest errors in calculations. The bill sought to have the errors rectified, and the defendant demurred for want of equity, and the demurrer was overruled. Neill v. Midland Ry., 20 L. T. 864; 17 W. R. 871.

Personal Contract—Mistake as to Persons making.]—Where personal considerations enter into a contract, error as to the person with whom the contract is made annuls the contract; not so where the person sought to be bound would have been equally willing to make the same contract with any other person. Smith v. Wheatcroft, 47 L. J., Ch. 745; 9 Ch. D. 223; 39 L. T. 103; 27 W. R. 42.

Ignorance of Rights.]—A negotiable security given by a party in satisfaction of a liability, from which he was discharged in law, in ignorance, cannot be enforced against him. Bell v. Gardiner, 4 Man. & G. 11; 1 D. (N.S.) 683; 4 Scott (N.R.) 621.

Tenant for Life—Death of.]—A. was tenant for life, without impeachment of waste. A. became insolvent, and B. his agent in England entered into an agreement with the official assignee's agents that the official assignee should be entitled to the timber as if the same had been felled and taken away prior to the 15th of August, but that it should not be cut until the 1st of December. It was afterwards discovered that A. had died on the 24th of August:—Held, that it had been entered into upon a mistake of the facts, and without sufficient consideration. Cochrane v. Willis, 35 L. J., Ch. 36 ; 13 L. T. 339 ; 14 W. R. 19.

2. Evidence and Onus of Proof.

Mistake in Law.]—A mistake in law, in order to be relieved against, must be distinctly stated and proved in the bill, and on the evidence. Kilvington v. Parker, 21 W. R. 121.

Compromise.]—For the purpose of reforming an instrument, clear and unambiguous evidence must be produced, not merely shewing a mistake, but shewing a deed and its proposed state to be in conformity with the intention of all the parties at the very time of its execution, and a statement by one of the parties that the deed as it stands was not according to his intention at the time ought to have considerable weight. Fowler v. Fowler, 4 De G. & J. 250.

A deed of compromise recited a letter of the mother's, stating that by her will her residuary estate would be divided equally between her sons. The deed also recited that the mother was seised of real estate, the particulars whereof were specified in a schedule. By the witnessing part the mother covenanted that her executors would at her death pay to the son a sum to which he would have been entitled if her real and personal estate had consisted of the particulars specified in the schedule, and she had died without altering her will. The description in the schedule comprehended, not only property of which she could dispose, but other property of which she was tenant for life only, and which was intermixed with the former, and this was noticed in the schedule :—Held, first, that there was not sufficient controlling context to restrict the covenant to the value of her own property. Ib.

Held, secondly, that without conclusive evidence of an intention on the part of both parties at the execution of the deed to enter into some other contract, it could not be reformed. Ib.

Bond—Declaration by Obligor.]—Bill, by the obligee in a bond who had delivered it up by mistake to one of his co-obligors, to recover the amount due on it. The joint answer of the co-obligors admitted the delivery of the bond, and that one of them had destroyed it, but traversed the allegation as to mistake :—Held, that declarations made by the obligor, to whom the bond had been delivered, tending to prove the plaintiff's allegations, were admissible against the co-obligor. Crosse v. Bedingfield, 12 Sim. 35.

Statement by Agent.]—An erroneous statement was made to a life insurance company, by their agent, as to A.'s interest in his son's life, upon which the company granted a policy to A. After the son's death, the company discovered the error. A bill by A. to have the mistake rectified was dismissed, because the evidence did not shew whether the mistake arose from the agent's inadvertency or from his having been misinformed by A. Parsons v. Bignold, 13 Sim. 518 ; 7 Jur. 591.

Parol Evidence.]—Parol evidence to prove mistake in agreement. Baker v. Paine, 1 Ves. Sen. 457.

—— Blank in Contract.]—A court of equity will not readily act on parol evidence to fill up a blank in a written contract, where the object of the evidence is to inflict a penalty or forfeiture. Kemp v. Rose, 1 Giff. 258 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 919.

—— Grant of Annuity.]—Grant of an annuity ; a bill filed to redeem, suggesting that it was part of the agreement that it should be redeemable but the agreement left out of the deeds on the idea that, if inserted, the transaction would be usurious. Parol evidence tendered to prove an agreement that the grant of the annuity should be redeemable, but not admitted to contradict the deed, not being charged to have been omitted by fraud. Irnham (Lord) v. Child, 1 Bro. C. C. 92 ; Dick. 554. See per Lord Eldon on this case, in Townshend v. Stangroom, 6 Ves. 322 ; 5 R. R. 312.

—— Lease.]—D. and F. made a written agreement for a lease ; a lease was executed according to the terms of the agreement. In a suit by D. to reform the lease by introducing a new term :—Held, that parol evidence was not admissible to shew that the lease, though in conformity with the terms of the written agreement, was contrary to its spirit. Davies v. Fitton, 2 Dr. & War. 225 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 612.

Semble, if there had not been a written agreement, the evidence would have been admissible. Ib.

A lease made in pursuance of a verbal agreement, and which included, by mistake, two fields more than the lessor intended to demise, or the lessees bargained for, was decreed to be amended as to the overplus, and parol evidence, supported by written documents and acts of the parties, was admitted to prove the mistake. Mortimer v. Shortall, 2 Dr. & War. 363 ; 1 Con. & L. 417.

There is no objection to correct a deed by parol evidence when there is anything in writing beyond the parol evidence to go by. Ib.

The mistake must be proved to the clear satisfaction of the court. Ib.

In a suit to reform a mistake in a lease, principally by parol evidence, what the defendant admits or denies is of the utmost importance. Ib.

3. Form of Relief.

Deducting Excess.]—A conveyance which passes too much may be rectified, and the excess deducted. Beaumont v. Bromley, Turn. & R. 41.

Where a deed affects by its recital to carry an agreement into execution and goes beyond the agreement, the court will rectify it. Ib.

The court will reform a deed under a previous agreement, by ordering a fresh conveyance to be executed, from which a covenant will be directed to be expunged. Rob v. Butterwick, 2 Price, 190 ; 16 R. R. 754.

Conveyance—Option of Vendee.]—The court will rectify a conveyance of lands where a clear case of mistake on the part of the conveying party is made out, but will give the vendee the option either of giving up the purchase or of taking the conveyance intended by the vendor. Harris v. Pepperell, L. R. 3 Eq. 1 ; 17 L. T. 191 ; 16 W. R. 68.

Payment out of Court.]—Words were inserted in a settlement by mistake, and the court ordered funds, paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act, to be paid to the persons who would be entitled under the settlement as intended to be drawn, without rectifying the settlement. De La Touche, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 85; L. R. 10 Eq. 599.

Release of Debtor—Rights of Surety.]—When a creditor releases the principal debtor at the request of the surety, and upon a representation made by him, which turns out to be a mistake, the surety cannot claim, as against the creditor, the benefit of the doctrine that release of the principal releases the surety. Scholefield v. Templer, 1 Johns. 155; 4 De G. & J. 429; 28 L. J., Ch. 452; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 7 W. R. 633.

A surety concurs with the debtor in suggesting to the creditor to accept a transfer of a mortgage, which the debtor knows to be fictitious, but the surety believes to be genuine. Subsequently, in reliance on the pretended transfer, the creditor releases the surety, and erases his name from the securities. Upon discovery of the fraud:—Held, that the creditor was entitled to be restored to all his rights as against the surety. Ib.

Insurance—Mistake in Rebuilding.]—B. mortgaged certain premises to C., and covenanted to insure, and, in the event of fire, to apply the insurance moneys in rebuilding. A fire took place, and B. rebuilt, but the premises so erected extended beyond the boundary line of the mortgaged property on to adjoining land belonging to the mortgagor. B. subsequently mortgaged this land to H., and also gave him a second mortgage on the premises in mortgage to C.; and H. afterwards joined with C. in a demise of the whole of the property, the rent being made payable to C., all parties being under the impression that the premises originally mortgaged to C. comprehended the property subsequently mortgaged to H.:—Held, that it was a mistake of facts, against which the court would relieve; and an apportionment of the rent was decreed. Harryman v. Collins, 18 Jur. 501.

Hardship.]—The purchaser may escape from his bargain on the ground of mistake, if it was a mistake which the vendors contributed to—that is, in other words, if he was misled by any act of the vendors; if the mistake was entirely his own, then the court ought not to let him off his bargain on the ground of a mistake made by himself solely, unless the case is one of considerable harshness and hardship. Goddard v. Jeffreys, 51 L. J., Ch. 57; 45 L. T. 675; 30 W. R. 270.

Lease—Cancellation.]—R., acting on behalf of G., the intending lessor, wrote to M., offering a lease at a rent of 33*l.* 10*s.* yearly, which was accepted by M., and a lease at that rent was executed by G. and M.:—Held, that the sum of 33*l.* 10*s.* had been inserted by mistake in R.'s offer, and in the lease, and that the offer had been accepted and the lease taken by M. with knowledge of the mistake; and therefore the court directed the lease to be delivered up to be cancelled. Gun v. M'Carthy, 13 L. R., Ir. 304.

And see Barrow v. Isaacs, 60 L. J., Q. B. 179; [1891] 1 Q. B. 417; 64 L. T. 686; 39 W. R. 338; 55 J. P. 517.

Mutual or Unilateral Mistake—Rectification or Cancellation.]—Where there is mutual mistake in a deed or contract, the remedy is to rectify by substituting the terms really agreed to. Where the mistake is unilateral, the remedy is rescission, but the court may give a defendant the option of taking what the plaintiff meant to give in lieu of rescission. Paget v. Marshall, 54 L. J., Ch. 575; 28 Ch. D. 255; 51 L. T. 351; 33 W. R. 608; 49 J. P. 85.

Money paid under Legal Process—Res Judicata.]—After money has been paid under a judgment founded on the construction of an agreement, an action to rectify the agreement, as contrary to the intention of all parties, is barred. Caird v. Moss, 55 L. J., Ch. 854; 33 Ch. D. 22; 55 L. T. 453; 35 W. R. 52; 5 Asp. M. C. 565—C. A.

—— Action to recover back Money.]—The rule that money paid under compulsion of legal process cannot be recovered back, applies where the money was paid under a material mistake of fact, and under the compulsion of a summons which was afterwards withdrawn. Caird v. Moss (supra) explained. Moore v. Fulham Vestry, 64 L. J., Q. B. 226; [1895] 1 Q. B. 399; 14 R. 343; 71 L. T. 862; 43 W. R. 277; 59 J. P. 596—C. A.

Right to Repayment—Privity of Parties.]—R. instructed his agent at A. to remit money to a bank at H. The agent paid the money into plaintiffs' bank at A., with instructions to make the remittance. By mistake the money was paid into the defendants' bank, where R. was a customer, and being indebted to the defendants, the money was placed to his credit in reduction of the debt. On the following day the defendants were informed of the mistake:—Held, that there was direct privity between the plaintiffs and the defendants, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the money. Colonial Bank v. Bank of Nova Scotia, 55 L. J., P. C. 14; 11 App. Cas. 84; 54 L. T. 256; 34 W. R. 417—P. C.

The doctrine that money paid under a mistake cannot be recovered back unless the mistake be one of fact, applies even though the person receiving the payment be one of the persons authorising it to be made. Miles v. Scotting, 1 Cab. & E. 491. See also Hooper v. Exeter Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 457; and Plater v. Burnley Corporation, 59 L. T. 636; 36 W. R. 831.

Officer of Company—Refunding.]—If the assets in the hands of an officer of the court have been increased by a transaction occasioned by a mistake of law, the court will compel its officer to repay the money. Opera, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 464; [1891] 2 Ch. 154; 64 L. T. 313; 39 W. R. 398.

Money paid to Trustee in Liquidation.]—Where money has been paid to the trustee in bankruptcy or liquidation under a mistake, the court will order it to be repaid provided that no injustice accrue to any one by such order. Simmonds, Ex parte, Carnac, In re, 55 L. J., Q. B. 74; 16 Q. B. D. 308; 54 L. T. 439; 34 W. R. 421—C. A.

Where the money so paid had been already distributed in dividends, the court ordered the money to be repaid out of sums subsequently coming to the hands of the trustee. Ib.

B., a trustee and a beneficiary, under a power of sale in a will sold a portion of the estate and appropriated to his own use more than his share of the purchase-money. He afterwards went into liquidation. In administration of the testator's estate further portions were sold, and B.'s share of the proceeds paid to his trustee in liquidation:—Held, that the payment to his trustee in liquidation was made under a mistake of law; and, in analogy to the rule laid down in James, Ex parte (L. R. 9 Ch. 609), and Simmonds, Ex parte (supra), the court ordered B.'s trustee in liquidation to refund the sum. Brown, In re, Dixon v. Brown, 55 L. J., Ch. 556; 32 Ch. D. 597; 54 L. T. 789. And see Bootle-cum-Linacre Corporation v. Lancashire County Council, 60 L. J., Q. B. 323.

Payment of Interest by Mortgagee.]—The defendant, as trustee of a settlement, invested money on a mortgage of the plaintiff's land. The mortgage deed provided for interest at the rate of 5 per cent., with reduction of the rate to 4 per cent. on punctual payments. All the payments of interest except the first had been punctual, but, through the plaintiff's ignorance of the proviso for reduction of the interest, they had been made at the rate of 5 per cent. In an action by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant, the trustee, the extra 1 per cent. paid under this mistake:—Held, that the action was rightly brought against the trustee; that the only contract was between the plaintiff as mortgagor and the defendant as mortgagee; that money had been received under that contract by the mortgagee, and that he alone could be asked or required to repay it. King v. Stewart, 66 L. T. 339.

4. Laches and Delay.

Limitation from what Time.]—In cases of mistake, the time of limitation, which by analogy is held to bar the remedy in courts of equity, begins to run from the time of the discovery of the mistake. Brooksbank v. Smith, 2 Y. & Coll. 58; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 34. And see Durrant v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 30; 6 Q. B. D. 234; 44 L. T. 348; 29 W. R. 443; 45 J. P. 270.

Laches.]—A party relying on his ignorance of facts must shew, not only that he had not the information, but that he could not, with due diligence, obtain it. The plaintiff sought to set aside a deed executed in 1848, on the ground that he had been released by a transaction in 1842, of which he was ignorant in 1848. It appeared that he had made inquiries in 1845, and was referred to persons who could give him the information, but neglected to do so:—Held, that having in 1845 the means of acquiring the knowledge, he must be deemed to have had it in 1848, and his bill was dismissed. Wason v. Wareing, 15 Beav. 151.

Reservation of Minerals.]—The conveyance on a sale of land contained a reservation of the minerals to the vendor, which was not intended. Five years afterwards the purchaser discovered the mistake, and filed a bill to have the conveyance rectified:—Held, having regard to the lapse of time, that if the defendant did not consent to have the conveyance rectified, the transaction must be set aside, in which event the plaintiff would be fixed with an occupation rent, while the defendant would have to repay the purchase-money, with interest, and also all sums expended by the plaintiff in permanent improvements. Bloomer v. Spittle, 41 L. J., Ch. 369; L. R. 13 Eq. 427; 26 L. T. 272; 20 W. R. 435.

What amount to.]—A husband was advised by counsel that he had no title as tenant by the curtesy, and that if he intended to set up such a title he ought not to sue in a partition suit then in contemplation. The suit was nevertheless instituted by him, and in 1830 a decree was obtained. A partition was made under the decree. The daughter married in 1847. In 1852 the father filed a bill to be relieved on the ground of mistake:—Held, that length of time and acquiescence constituted a sufficient answer to the suit. Stone v. Godfrey, 5 De G. M. & G. 76; 23 L. J., Ch. 769; 18 Jur. 524.

Altering Conveyance to Mortgage.]—The court refused after a long lapse of time to rectify a deed by altering it from an absolute conveyance to a mortgage. Tull v. Owen, 4 Y. & Coll. 192; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33; 4 Jur. 503.

Settlement.]—A court of equity will reform a settlement upon parol evidence alone and after a long lapse of time if it arrives at the conclusion that the actual contract made between the parties differs from that expressed in the instrument. M'Cormack v. M'Cormack, 1 L. R., Ir. 119.

A marriage settlement, reformed after a lapse of thirty-five years, by giving the lady an absolute interest in the trust funds, the evidence clearly establishing that such was the intention of all parties. Wolterbeek v. Barrow, 23 Beav. 423; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 804.

Release.]—Where a release has been executed and for a long time acquiesced in, the mere proof of errors will not induce the court either to set it aside or to give leave to surcharge and falsify. Millar v. Craig, 6 Beav. 433.

5. Pleading.

By one Party.]—It is no answer, in an action at law on an agreement, that the defendant entered into the agreement by mistake. Wood v. Scarth, 1 F. & F. 293.

What Plea allowed.]—Declaration for not delivering tea, in pursuance of a contract. A plea on equitable grounds, that the contract was made by sample, that the sample was a sample of a totally different tea, and that the defendant on the day the contract was entered into discovered the mistake, and, before the plaintiff had in any respect altered his position, gave notice of the mistake, and that he would treat the contract as void, is bad. Scott v. Littledale, 8 El. & Bl. 815; 27 L. J., Q. B. 201; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 849.

—— Mistake of Agent.]—To an action for the non-performance of an agreement to load a ship with a guaranteed freight of no less than 5,500*l.*, the court refused to allow the defendant to plead that, by mistake of the person who reduced the contract into writing in the Spanish language, it was described as an absolute guarantee that the ship should have a freight of 5,500*l.* Perez v. Oleaga, 11 Ex. 506; 25 L. J., Ex. 65; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 44; 4 W. R. 250.

To a count for not accepting petroleum pursuant to contract, by bought and sold notes, a plea, that the real contract was not that which was contained in the bought and sold notes, but was a contract for 150 cases of refined petroleum, to agree with a sample shewn, and that the brokers, who were agents for both parties, in drawing up the contract, by mistake omitted to state therein that the sale was by sample, affords a good equitable defence. Borrowman v. Rossel, 16 C. B. (N.S.) 58; 33 L. J., C. P. 111; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 679; 10 L. T. 236; 12 W. R. 426.

In trover for goods, a plea that the defendant agreed to purchase the works from the plaintiff, and the goods were to be included in the property sold, that brokers were employed to make the contract, and that they made it by bought and sold notes, and, by their mistake, the notes were so worded as not to include the stock-in-trade and materials, which were intended to be included by the plaintiff and the defendant, is good. Steele v. Haddock, 10 Ex. 643; 3 C. L. R. 326; 24 L. J., Ex. 78; 3 W. R. 172.

Restraint of Trade.]—An equitable plea (to a declaration for allowing business to be carried on on the defendant's premises near to certain premises let by plaintiff to defendant, contrary to agreement) that at the time of making the agreement the defendant possessed a shop near the premises let, where such business was carried on, as plaintiff knew; that it never was intended that such business should not be carried on there; that the agreement was by mistake so framed as to include the carrying on of such business there, is a good plea. Nicoll v. Bell, 32 L. T. 815. And see Hayman v. Gover, 25 L. T. 903.

Covenant by defendant that he would not practise in the parish of A. or C. without the consent of the plaintiff, alleging as a breach that he had so practised. The defendant was allowed to plead that part of C. was in the B. district, and that it was not intended that the covenant should restrain him from practising there, but that the covenant was so framed by mistake, and that the breaches were committed in that part. Luce v. Izod, 1 H. & N. 245; 25 L. J., Ex. 307; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 573.

Bill of Exchange.]—To an action by drawer against acceptor of a bill of exchange at three months, dated the 12th of July, a plea that the bill ought to have been, and was, represented by the plaintiff to be drawn on the 25th of July, and that three months from the 25th had not elapsed before action. The court set aside the plea, but allowed the defendant to substitute a plea of fraud. Drain v. Harvey, 17 C. B. 257; 25 L. J., C. P. 81.

To an action on a bill of exchange, the court allowed the defendant to plead that the defendant was chairman of a company completely registered; that the bill was drawn for the company's purposes, and accepted by the defendant as chairman of the company; that, in order to bind the company, it ought to have been accepted by another director also, and countersigned by the secretary; that by mistake this was omitted to be done, and that it never was intended that the defendant should be bound personally. Burgoyne v. Cottrell, 24 L. J., Q. B. 28.

Charter-Party—Agency.]—To a declaration on a charter-party, a plea that the defendants entered into the charter-party solely as agents for A., D. & Co., and that when they signed the charter-party it was agreed and understood that they were only to sign as such agents, and were not to make themselves liable as principals; that they signed: "For A., D. & Co., of Messina, H. & Co., agents," notwithstanding the charter professed to be made between the plaintiff as owner of the one part and the defendants as freighters of the other part; that the defendants had power to bind A., D. & Co.:—Held, a good equitable answer. Wake v. Harrop, 1 H. & C. 202; 31 L. J., Ex. 451; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 845; 7 L. T. 96; 10 W. R. 626—Ex. Ch.

Semble, that the plea was a good answer at law. Ib.

Grant by Company in Possession.]—The East India Company, being entitled by escheat to real property of S. in India, granted it, together with all the rents which had arisen between the death of the testator and the date of the grant, to the plaintiffs, in trust. To a declaration on this grant that the company held and enjoyed the land, and took, and had and received to their use the rents of the land from the testator's death to the date of the grant, and as a breach the nonpayment to the plaintiffs, a plea by the company that the testator appointed P. his executor in India, who agreed with the officers of the company to grant a lease of the property; and they, without the company's knowledge, entered into occupation, and the rent was paid to the date of the grant to P. during his life, and after his death to T., his executor; and that the company, at the time of the grant, had no knowledge that the company had been in possession:—Held, that the plea was an answer to the action. Billing v. East India Co., 31 L. J., Ex. 240.

Replication—Principal and Surety.]—To an action by the plaintiff to recover contribution from the defendant, his co-surety, he pleaded that without his privity or consent the plaintiff agreed to discharge the principal. A replication, on equitable grounds, that the agreement was worded by mistake so as to include the claim sued for, and that the plaintiff did not otherwise discharge the principal, is a good replication. Verley v. Barrett, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 225; 26 L. J., C. P. 1; 5 W. R. 137.

Power of Attorney.]—A plaintiff declared that he was possessed of stock in trust; that M. caused it to be represented to the plaintiff by the defendants that the trust had been executed, and that he (M.) was entitled to the stock, and they requested him to execute a power of attorney for the purpose of effecting a transfer of the stock to him (M.); that in consideration of the premises, and that the plaintiff would execute the power, the defendants promised the plaintiff to pay him 32*l.* within fourteen days. Breach, nonpayment. A plea, that before making the promise the plaintiff represented to the defendants that certain dividends on the stock had not yet been received by the plaintiff; that the power of attorney authorised M. to receive any such unpaid dividends; that the defendants, relying on such representation, made the promise, but that the same was not true, inasmuch as the plaintiff had received one of the dividends; and that the defendants would not have made their promise if they had known that the plaintiff had received the dividend, is bad, on equitable grounds. Gorsuch v. Cree, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 574; 29 L. J., C. P. 308; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1342; 2 L. T. 567; 8 W. R. 543.

A. FOR MONEY LENT.

1. When Action Maintainable.

An action will lie for a loan to the wife at the request of the husband. Stevenson v. Hardie, 2 W. Bl. 872.

But a husband is not liable for money lent to his wife, though the money is afterwards applied by her in procuring necessaries, for the supply of which he would have been liable. Knox v. Bushell, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 334.

The action will not lie against a defendant for money lent to a third person. Marriott v. Lister, 2 Wils. 141.

Where the defendant, a commercial traveller, was authorised by the plaintiff to deduct certain sums from the amount he might receive on his account, to be repaid out of the commission the defendant was to be paid by other employers: —Held, that the sums might be recovered as money lent. Shepherd v. Phillips, 2 Car. & K. 722.

Money deposited by a customer in a banker's hand is money lent, with the superadded obligation, that it is to be repaid when called for. Pott v. Cleg, 16 M. & W. 321; 16 L. J., Ex. 210; 11 Jur. 289.

Security Given.]—A person who lends money to another, and receives a gun as a security for the repayment, may recover the amount without first returning the gun. Lawton v. Newland, 2 Stark. 72; 19 R. R. 676.

A. lent B. money, and received from B. shares in a company as a security, and agreed to give twenty-one days' notice to B. before proceeding to compel the repayment of the loan, or of any part thereof; and, upon repayment of any part of the loan, to give back a proportionate amount of shares :—Held, that after twenty-one days, A. was not bound to declare specially, averring a tender of the shares, but that he might declare for money lent. Scott v. Parker, 1 G. & D. 258; 1 Q. B. 809; 10 L. J., Q. B. 244.

Worthless Security.]—Where a party advances money on exchequer bills, which are afterwards repudiated at the exchequer office, on the ground that the comptroller's signature to them is forged, he is entitled to recover it back as money lent. Bank of England v. Tomkins, 6 Jur. 348.

A. deposited with a banking company 80*l.* consisting partly of the notes of a country bank, payable either at that bank or in London, and representing 65*l.* The company gave a receipt as follows: "Received of A. 80*l.*, for which we are accountable; 80*l.* at 3*l.* per cent. interest, with fourteen days' notice." The company sent the notes, on the same day, to their agents in London, who presented them on the following day, when they were dishonoured. The agents sent them back by that evening's post to the company, who on the following day gave notice of dishonour to A., and, on A.'s giving fourteen days' notice of withdrawal, tendered the notes back, which he refused. The company refused to pay the amount of the notes. The country bank, which was about five miles from the office of the company, had stopped payment from the close of day on which the notes were deposited:—Held, that A. could not recover the amount of the notes from the company as money lent. Timmis v. Gibbins, 18 Q. B. 722; 21 L. J., Q. B. 403.

Welsh Mortgage.]—P. and F. entered into an agreement in writing, whereby P. agreed to let five fields, part of his farm, to F., "in consideration of the sum of 50*l.*" for six years, F. to pay the rent of the fields to P., and "P. to get back his said five fields when P. pays to F. the sum of 50*l.*" There was no express agreement by P. to pay the 50*l.* After the expiration of six years F.'s administrator sued P. for the 50*l.* as money lent:—Held, on the construction of the agreement, that there was no personal liability on P. to pay this sum, and that the action could not be sustained. Cassidy v. Cassidy, 24 L. R., Ir. 577.

2. Parties.

The defendant instructed his attorney S. to borrow 100*l.* upon the security of a freehold estate, and gave him his title deeds to enable him to do so. S., professedly on behalf of the defendant, applied to the plaintiff for a loan on mortgage, the amount of which was fixed at 420*l.* Thereupon, having forged a mortgage from the defendant to the plaintiff, S. delivered it to the plaintiff and received the 420*l.* He then represented to the defendant that he could not obtain the proposed advance, and afterwards lent him certain sums as his own money, taking a promissory note as security for part, and a mortgage for the whole of the advances:—Held, that on these facts there was no evidence, as to any part of the 420*l.*, of an implied promise by the plaintiff to the defendant so as to support an action for money lent. Painter v. Abel, 2 H. & C. 113; 33 L. J., Ex. 60; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 549; 8 L. T. 287; 11 W. R. 651.

Where A. lent money to B. on a guarantee of H., and afterwards B., the principal debtor, and H. signed a paper promising jointly and severally to repay the money borrowed by B. from A.:—Held, that there was evidence to charge B. and H. jointly, and that they were liable to be sued jointly. Buck v. Hurst, L. R. 1 C. P. 297; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 704.

3. Repayment secured by Deed.

A. borrowed money from B., and conveyed land in trust for him, with a power of sale, in trust to pay him principal and interest, and pay over the residue to A. He, A., afterwards borrowed other money of B., and charged that also on the land, but without any power of sale. Afterwards, C. paying both sums to B., and advancing an additional sum to A., by deed between C., A., B. and B.'s trustee, the former securities were assigned to C. (B. giving C. a power of attorney to sue in his name as to the first sum borrowed), and the lands were conveyed to C. to hold them to the same trusts, but for his own benefit, as were mentioned in the other deeds with respect to B. None of the deeds contained a covenant to pay. C. sued A. for money paid, money lent, interest, and on an account stated:—Held, that he was entitled to recover the whole sum, on proof that he had paid it as above, and that he was not bound to declare on the deed. Yates v. Aston, 3 G. & D. 351; 4 Q. B. 182; 12 L. J., Q. B. 160.

L. devised lands to the defendant on trust to sell and apply the proceeds in payment of debts. The defendant mortgaged the lands to the plaintiff as a security for money lent to him. The deed contained a covenant by the defendant that he would, out of the moneys which should come to his hands as such trustee, from the lands comprised in the mortgaged security and the personal estate (if any) of L., pay the plaintiff the principal and interest:—Held, that as there was an express covenant by the defendant to pay in a qualified manner, no contract by parol could be implied for the repayment, and consequently an action for money lent would not lie. Mathew v. Blackmore, 1 H. & N. 762; 26 L. J., Ex. 150; 5 W. R. 363.

Deed not Executed.]—Money advanced upon a contract to repay it on demand, or to execute a mortgage, may, after refusal to execute a mortgage, be recovered as money lent. Bristowe v. Needham, 9 M. & W. 729; 1 D. P. C. 700; 11 L. J., Ex. 278.

B. engaged to let A. land on building leases and to lend him 4,000*l.* to assist him in the erection of twenty houses, the money to be repaid by June, 1828. A. agreed to build the houses, to convey them as security for the loan, and repay the money. When six houses were built, and 1,168*l.* had been advanced, B. requested A. not to go on with the other fourteen houses; A. desisted:—Held, that after June, 1828, B. might recover the 1,168*l.* as money lent, and that it was not necessary to sue on the agreement, which was rescinded by consent. James v. Cotton, 7 Bing. 266; 5 M. & P. 26; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 55.

4. Illegal Purposes or Objects.

Whenever money is lent for the express purpose of enabling the borrower to do some act prohibited by law, the lender cannot recover it back. M'Kinnell v. Robinson, 3 M. & W. 434; 7 L. J., Ex. 149. S. P., Cannan v. Bryce, 3 B. & Ald. 179; 22 R. R. 342. See Pearce v. Brooks, L. R. 1 Ex. 213; Bagot v. Arnott, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 1.

But money lent for the purpose of gambling in a country where the game is not illegal may be recovered in this country. Quarrier v. Colston, 1 Ph. 147; 12 L. J., Ch. 57; 6 Jur. 959. S. P., King v. Kemp, 8 L. T. 255.

5. Evidence of Loan.

In an action for money lent, the only evidence was, that the defendant, having asked the plaintiff for some money, the latter handed him a note which was believed to be a bank-note, but the amount of which did not appear:—Held, that the jury was rightly directed to presume it to have been a note for 5*l.*, as being the smallest note in circulation in this country. Lawton v. Sweeney, 8 Jur. 964.

Evidence of the poverty of the alleged lender is admissible upon the issue, whether or not the money was lent. Dowling v. Dowling, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 236.

The payment of certain notes having been made to the defendant's credit, and the fact that he had been told the balance afterwards, is sufficient proof that the notes were paid, and had therefore been received by him. Gill v. Gillingham, 1 F. & F. 284.

It is not evidence of itself to establish a loan of money by the plaintiff to the defendant, to prove that the defendant received cash for a draft or a cheque drawn by the plaintiff on his bankers, and payable to him by name, out of money of the plaintiff's then in the bank. Carey v. Gerrish, 4 Esp. 9.

If there is a loan of money by A. to B., it is not to be inferred from the bare fact that A. delivered a sum of money to B., which A. had borrowed from another. Welch v. Seaborn, 1 Stark. 474.

An instrument in the following terms, "Nine years after the date hereof, I promise to pay to, &c., with lawful interest, provided D. M. shall not return to England, or his death be duly certified, in the mean time," is no evidence of money lent. Morgan v. Jones, 1 C. & J. 162; 1 Tyr. 21; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 41.

A. transferred 1,000*l.* in the 4*l.* per cents. to B., who possessed other stock of the same description. B., after some years, sold out all his stock, including the 1,000*l.*; B. made payments to A., equal to interest at 5*l.* per cent. upon that sum, until A.'s death. After the death of A. her executor wrote to B., referring to the transaction as a loan of money. B., in reply, asserted that he was employed by A. to purchase an annuity for her, and that he had done so. No purchase of an annuity was proved:—Held, that there was evidence to go to the jury in support of a count for money lent. Howard v. Danbury, 2 C. B. 803.

Invalid Instruments.]—The plaintiff lent money upon promissory notes or debentures, in the following form:—"The Governor and Company of Copper Miners in England. Incorporated by royal charter. Capital one million. No. 5,252. 500*l.* London. On the 15th July, 1850 the Governor and Company of Copper Miners in England promise to pay to H. J. Enthoven, Esq., or order, at the banking-house of Messrs. D., H., K. & Co., 500*l.* value received, and further to pay to the holder of the warrants annexed, on presentment as they fall due, interest on the 500*l.* at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum. Given under the common seal of the corporation, this 15th day of July, 1845. By order, J. M'Donnell. W. Inglis, secretary." When the seal of the corporation was affixed to these documents, there was a blank left for the name of the payee. At the time of depositing them with the plaintiff, the defendant filled up the blanks with the words "Enthoven or order," and indorsed them "H. J. Enthoven." Annexed to each note or debenture were warrants or coupons for the interest due half-yearly in respect of each. As each half-yearly amount of interest was paid the corresponding warrant or coupon was detached and given up to the company. The company having failed in payment of a half-yearly instalment of the interest, the plaintiff gave the defendant notice of the default, and demanded payment of him and afterwards brought an action upon the debentures. At the trial, he produced the debentures, with the warrants or coupons annexed, and also one of the warrants or coupons detached. The former were respectively stamped with a 12*s.* 6*d.* note stamp, the latter was unstamped:—Held, that the instruments were not promissory notes, and consequently were not properly stamped; but that inasmuch as they were void instruments, by reason of the blank therein at the time of sealing, they were admissible on the counts for money lent and interest for the purpose of shewing that they were worthless. Enthoven v. Hoyle, 13 C. B. 373; 21 L. J., C. P. 100; 16 Jur. 272—Ex. Ch.

Where a plaintiff cannot recover on a count for a note for want of a stamp, he may recover on a count for money lent, by proving an acknowledgment on a demand made. Tyte v. Jones, 1 East, 58, n.

I O U.]—An I O U is sufficient primâ facie evidence in an action for money lent, though it is not addressed, and no proof be given that U means the plaintiff, except his producing the document. Douglas v. Holme, 12 A. & E. 641; 4 P. & D. 685; 10 L. J., Q. B. 43.

But in a subsequent case it was decided that an I O U, though evidence of an account stated between the holder and the party signing it, is not of money lent to him by the holder. Fesenmayer v. Adcock, 16 M. & W. 449.

Terms of Lending.]—A company borrowed from a bank a sum of money, to be repaid with interest, and deposited a lease as a security. Afterwards a document was drawn up by the company, stating that the lease had been deposited as a security for the loan, without mentioning the interest. The bank refused to give up the deed until the whole of the interest as well as the loan had been repaid:—Held, in an action of detinue for the lease, that the written document was not conclusive against the bank as to the terms of the loan, and that parol evidence was rightly admitted to shew that the lease had been intended as a security for the interest as well as the principal. Pentreguinny Fuel Co. v. Young, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 56.

B. FOR MONEY PAID.

1. General Principles.

a. Request.

An action lies to recover money paid for another at his request. Alcinbrook v. Hall, 2 Wils. 309.

But the plaintiff must prove some authority, either express or implied, from the defendant, to make the payment on his account. Tappin v. Broster, 1 Car. & P. 112.

The breach of an agreement to carry goods in consideration of the carriage of other goods, which is executed by the carriage of the goods, does not support a common count stating that the defendant is indebted in money to the plaintiff for the carriage of goods at his request. Bracegirdle v. Hincks, 9 Ex. 361; 2 C. L. R.

991; 23 L. J., Ex. 128; 18 Jur. 70; 2 W. R. 232.

The action will not lie, when the money has been paid against the express consent of the party for whose use it is supposed to have been paid. Stokes v. Lewis, 1 Term Rep. 20.

A., being in want of some harness, went to B., accompanied by C., and ordered some, C. saying in A.'s presence that he would pay the money if A. did not:—Held, that C. thereby acquired an authority to pay the money on the default of A., and that having paid it he was entitled to recover it back from A., the authority not being shewn to have been countermanded. Alexander v. Vane, 1 M. & W. 511; 2 Gale, 57; 5 L. J., Ex. 187.

The drawer of an accommodation bill cannot sue the acceptor for money paid to his use, to the holder of the bill, unless not only the money paid pro tanto discharged the liability of the acceptor, but also the payment was made at his request, either express or implied. Sleigh v. Sleigh, 5 Ex. 514; 19 L. J., Ex. 345.

Though no one has a right of his own motion to pay another's debt, yet if the debtor afterwards assent to the payment or recognise or adopt it, the person paying the debt may recover it from the debtor as money paid on his account. Roberts v. Champion, 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 44.

The plaintiff accepted a bill for 25*l.* for the accommodation of F., who was pressed at the time by the defendant, a sheriff's officer, for seven guineas, claimed as being due for possession-money; F. was to get the bill discounted by the defendant or elsewhere, and to give the plaintiff the surplus above the seven guineas. He deposited it with the defendant as a security for that sum, the defendant knowing the circumstances, and that the plaintiff had no value for his acceptance: the defendant indorsed it over and kept the proceeds: the holder sued the plaintiff, who thereupon paid him the whole amount of the bill:—Held, that the plaintiff had no right of action against the defendant as for money paid to his use on a request implied by law; but that his remedy was against F. on an implied contract to indemnify the plaintiff for lending him his, the plaintiff's, acceptance. Asprey v. Levy, 16 M. & W. 851.

A., having accepted a bill drawn upon him by B., for money lent by B. to A., compounded with B. and his other creditors, and paid the composition. An indorsee of the bill afterwards sued A., and compelled him to pay the amount with interest and costs:—Held, that A. might recover the amount from B. as money paid to B.'s use. Hawley v. Beverley, 6 Man. & G. 221.

If the indorser of a bill is compelled by the holder to pay him part of the amount, he may recover it back from the acceptor in an action for money paid to his use. Pownall v. Ferrand, 9 D. & R. 603; 6 B. & C. 439; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 176; 30 R. R. 394.

A. & Co. agreed with a company to build for them two steamships within a stated time, the price to be paid by instalments; provided that if A. & Co. should make default in any of the conditions of the agreement, it should be lawful for the company to take possession of the ships, and cause the works to be completed by any persons they chose, and pay those persons such reasonable sums as should be agreed upon, and that A. & Co. should, forthwith on demand, pay the company all sums so advanced. Afterwards F. became a partner in the firm of A. & Co.; and four instalments having been paid, and A. & Co. not being able to complete the ships, another agreement was made with the firm of A. & Co., including F., whereby the company, in terms of the first contract, agreed to take possession of the ships and complete them, and for that purpose to take into their employ the workmen of A. & Co.; and as a security to the company for any advances they might make beyond the balance receivable by A. & Co., it was agreed that the company should have a lien for such balance upon certain shares of A. & Co. in the company. The company having proceeded with the works, and for that purpose made large advances:—Held, that they could not forthwith recover such advances by action against the firm of A. & Co., including F., for money paid, there being no liability to repay until the ultimate balance was ascertained, and then only after demand. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co. v. Acraman, 2 Ex. 569.

A defendant became surety for the due payment by one M. of "all such sums of money as he, M., should from time to time become indebted to the plaintiffs for goods which should be supplied to him by them in the course of their business, when and as such sum or sums of money should respectively become due and payable, at the expiration of the credit given for the same goods, according to the usual course of business of the plaintiffs." The course of business proved was for the plaintiffs to draw upon M. at two months from the first of each month, for the amount of coals delivered during the preceding month. One of these bills becoming due in the hands of third persons, and being dishonoured, M. went to the plaintiffs, and telling them that he had not funds enough by 80*l.* to take up the bill, asked them for a loan of that sum to enable him to do so, and obtained from them a cheque for 80*l.*, with which and his own moneys he paid the bill:—Held, that this was in substance a failure by M. duly to pay for the goods, and not a mere loan to him; and consequently that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the 80*l.* from the defendant. Davey v. Phelps, 2 Scott (N.R.) 564; 2 Man. & G. 300.

Leasehold property was bequeathed to the testator's wife for life, and afterwards to the defendant for the residue of the term. The wife entered with the assent of the executor, and after her death the defendant entered, and continued in possession for fifteen years, when the leaseholds were sold. No duty was ever paid on the legacy till after the sale, when 10 per cent. on the value of the leaseholds, and 10 per cent. on the amount of profits received by the defendant, were paid by the executor:—Held, that the executor was entitled to recover from the defendant, as money paid, the whole duty paid. Bate v. Pyne, 13 Q. B. 900; 18 L. J., Q. B. 273; 13 Jur. 609.

B., requiring an advance of 50*l.* to pay the stamp duty on a patent, and S. being willing to lend him that sum if A. would become surety for it, A. wrote as follows:—"If B. will get his friend S. to advance 50*l.* for the completion of the patent, I will give him or S. the 50*l.* on the patent being handed over to me." The 50*l.* was accordingly advanced by S., and the patent was afterwards tendered to A., but he declined to accept it; and S. having sued him for and recovered the 50*l.*, he brought an action against B. for money paid to his use:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover the 50*l.*, and that the refusal of the judge to put it to the jury, whether the money was advanced by S. for the joint purpose of A. and B. did not amount to a misdirection, inasmuch as it was a payment for the use of the defendant solely. Pelly v. Sidney, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 679; 28 L. J., C. P. 182; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 793.

Money expended on the alteration of premises, for the leasing of which an agreement has been entered into, but which is incapable of being enforced by reason of the Statute of Frauds, may be recovered back as on a failure of consideration. Pulbrook v. Lawes, 45 L. J., Q. B. 178; 1 Q. B. D. 284; 34 L. T. 95.

P., by letter, proposed to take a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years of one of L.'s houses, conditionally on certain alterations being made. A correspondence ensued between the parties, and it was ultimately agreed that the alterations should be carried out, P. undertaking to contribute a sum of money towards them. By L.'s consent some of the alterations were executed by P.'s workmen. Eventually P. was unable, owing to L.'s fault, to take the house:—Held, that though he was unable to recover damages occasioned through not having a lease granted, by reason of the letters not disclosing an agreement such as to satisfy the Statute of Frauds, he was, nevertheless, entitled to recover on a quantum meruit for the loss incurred in making the alterations. Ib.

The bonâ fide purchaser of stolen beasts sold in market overt cannot, in answer to a claim for them by the original owner after the conviction of the thief, counter-claim for the cost of their keep while the beasts were in the possession of the purchaser, for they were his own property until, on the conviction, the property revested in the original owner. Walker v. Matthews, 51 L. J., Q. B. 243; 8 Q. B. D. 109; 46 L. T. 915; 30 W. R. 388.

If a man buys property which is in the hands of a third person, who sets up an unfounded claim, and who will not deliver unless that claim is paid, and the purchaser several months afterwards goes and pays the demand, he is bound to give notice to the seller; and if he does not, he cannot recover the money so paid from the seller. Bevan v. Waters, 3 Car. & P. 520.

The owner of a ship mortgaged it, and subsequently entered into an agreement in contemplation of a partnership with C., under which the latter was to work the vessel, paying all expenses, and receiving all profits. The vessel was employed on several voyages, and was then given up to the mortgagor. At this time C. owed large sums for wages. The master and seamen took proceedings against the vessel for the wages unpaid, and she was seized. The mortgagor then paid the wages:—Held, that he was entitled to recover those payments from C., as money paid to his use. Johnston v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 37 L. J., C. P. 33; L. R. 3 C. P. 38; 17 L. T. 445.

The plaintiffs were the registered mortgagees of forty-eight sixty-fourth shares in a ship, the defendants being the owners of the residue of such shares. The captain, having incurred a debt for necessary disbursements made by him, instituted proceedings in rem against the ship and arrested her in the admiralty division. The plaintiffs, in order to obtain the release and get possession of the ship, paid the captain's claim, together with the cost of the proceedings:—Held, that as the plaintiffs were compelled under pressure of law to pay the sum in question in order to release the ship from arrest and get possession of her, there was an implied promise on the part of the defendants to repay them that sum, inasmuch as the mortgagor and the defendants (the co-owners) were liable to the captain for the disbursements made by him. The Orchis, 59 L. J., P. 31; 15 P. D. 38; 62 L. T. 407; 38 W. R. 472—C. A.

The plaintiffs purchased stock which the defendant agreed to transfer on a given day. In consequence of a rise, the loss on the sale amounted to 45*l.*, which the defendant refused to pay. The plaintiff afterwards paid that sum to another broker, by whom the transfer was made:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover in an action for money paid, but that he should have declared on the contract with the defendant as his claim was in the nature of unliquidated damages. Lightfoot v. Creed, 2 Moore, 225; 8 Taunt. 268.

The plaintiff, a stockbroker, at the defendant's request entered into a contract for the purchase of foreign stock, the price of which he was ultimately, according to the usage of the Stock Exchange, compelled to pay; before the settling day the defendant informed the plaintiff that he was unable to meet his engagements, but afterwards promised to pay the amount:—Held, that the jury was warranted in finding that the payment was made at the defendant's request. Pawle v. Gun, 6 Scott, 286; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 445; 1 Arn. 200; 7 L. J., C. P. 206.

Original Liability.]—The plaintiff demised a house to the defendant, who agreed to pay a yearly rent, clear of all deductions for taxes and parochial rates; after occupying the premises for some time, the defendant quitted them, leaving claims for poor-rate and land-tax unpaid, which the plaintiff, as landlord, was obliged to pay:—Held, that he could not recover the amount from the defendant, because, as there was no original liability on the defendant to pay, it could not be said to be money paid to his use. Spencer v. Parry, 4 N. & M. 771; 3 A. & E. 331; 1 H. & W. 179; 4 L. J., K. B. 186. S. P., Thurnell v. Symonds, 1 Car. & K. 44.

Relief by Payment.]—An action for money paid is maintainable in every case in which there has been a payment of money by the plaintiff to a third party, at the request of the defendant, with an undertaking, express or implied, to repay the amount, and it is immaterial whether the defendant is relieved from a liability by the payment or not. Brittain v. Lloyd, 14 M. & W. 762; 15 L. J., Ex. 43.

In order to maintain an action for money paid, it is not necessary that the defendant should be relieved, by the payment, from a liability to a third person. Lewis v. Campbell, 8 C. B. 541; 19 L. J., C. P. 130; 14 Jur. 396.

Goods lawfully Seized for another's Debt.]—The sheriff had seized goods for the debt of the defendant, and the claim of the plaintiff to the goods was barred upon interpleader, but the defendant had bound himself by admission as between the parties that the goods were the plaintiff's, and had agreed to pay a sum of money in consideration of the seizure:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover that sum from the defendant. Edmunds v. Wallingford, 54 L. J., Q. B. 305; 14 Q. B. D. 811; 52

L. T. 720 ; 33 W. R. 647 ; 49 J. P. 549—C. A. Affirming 1 Cab. & E. 334.

Occupier of part of Holding—Payment of Rent under Threat of Distress.]—A., who held certain lands under lease at a rent, gave possession of a small part thereof to B. on the terms that he was to hold rent free, and make certain expenditure in buildings, which was done. C. afterwards acquired the residue of the holding from A., subject to this arrangement, and for many years paid the entire rent reserved by the lease. One year's rent being due, the landlord brought an ejectment, and B. paid the rent claimed in order to save the lands from eviction : —Held, that he was entitled to recover the amount from C. in an action for money paid. Murphy v. Davey, 14 L. R. Ir. 28.

Voluntary Payments.]—It has always been clear that a purely voluntary payment cannot be recovered back. Voluntary payment may be divided into two classes. Sometimes money has been expended for the benefit of another person under such circumstances that an option is allowed him to adopt or decline the benefit ; in this case, if he exercises his option to adopt the benefit he will be liable to repay the money expended ; but if he declines the benefit he will not be liable. But sometimes the money is expended for the benefit of another person under such circumstances that he cannot help accepting the benefit, in fact that he is bound to accept it ; in this case he has no opportunity of exercising any option, and he will be under no liability. —Per Lord Esher, M.R. Leigh v. Dickeson, 54 L. J., Q. B. 18 ; 15 Q. B. D. 64 ; 52 L. T. 791 ; 33 W. R. 539.

b. Payment.

One of the makers of a joint and several note, after it had become due, gave his bond to the holder for the amount, but before the commencement of the action no money had been paid upon the bond :—Held, that until he had paid money upon the bond, he could not maintain an action for money paid, in order to recover contribution against any of the other makers of the note. Maxwell v. Jameson, 2 B. & Ald. 51.

If a party gives a promissory note for the debt of another, which the creditor accepts in payment, it is a payment of money to the debtor's use, and may be recovered as such. Barclay v. Gooch, 2 Esp. 571.

The plaintiff, an occupier of lands, having been sued by the vicar for tithes, gave up the occupation, and quitted the parish during the progress of the suit ; upon which the defendant undertook to indemnify him from all costs of the suit, if he would suffer the defendant to defend in his, the plaintiff's, name. The vicar having succeeded in the suit, the plaintiff's attorney paid him the costs incurred before as well as after the defendant's promise of indemnity. The plaintiff afterwards gave his attorney a promissory note for the amount of the costs so paid, but which was not paid at maturity, when he sued the defendant on his promise :—Held, that the payment of such costs by the plaintiff's attorney was equivalent to a payment by the plaintiff himself, as the attorney might be considered his agent for the purpose of making such payment. Adams v. Dansey, 4 M. & P. 245 ; 6 Bing. 506 ; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 165 ; 31 R. R. 480.

Transfer of Security by Surety to Creditor—Liability of Principal to Surety for Money Paid.] —Where at the trial of an action for money paid, the jury found that the plaintiff was surety, and the defendant one of the principals, on a promissory note, and it was also proved that the plaintiff had transferred a mortgage security, which was his property, to the holder of the note, who thereupon released him from liability, and which security was valued by the jury (under the direction of the judge) at a certain sum ; but it did not appear that any cash was paid on foot of the security or otherwise, by or on behalf of the plaintiff :—Held (diss. O'Brien, J.), that the plaintiff was entitled to retain the verdict entered for him at the trial for the value of the mortgage. Barclay v. Gooch (2 Esp. 571) discussed. Fahey v. Frawley, 26 L. R. Ir. 78.

2. On Distresses.

Where a man by compulsion of law is obliged to pay a debt, he has a remedy against those who by law were bound to pay, but did not. Exall v. Partridge, 8 Term Rep. 308 ; 3 Esp. 8 ; 4 R. R. 656.

The goods of a stranger on the premises of another were distrained by the landlord for the rent in arrear, and the stranger was obliged to pay the rent to redeem them :—Held, that the stranger might maintain an action for money paid to the use of the original lessees, who were bound by their covenant to the landlord, although some of them had, to the knowledge of the plaintiff, before he placed his goods on the premises, assigned their interest to one of their colessees, who was in the exclusive possession at the time. Ib.

An under-tenant, whose goods are distrained and sold by the original landlord for rent due from his immediate tenant, cannot immediately maintain an action against him for money paid ; for, on the sale under the distress, the money paid by the purchaser vested in the landlord in satisfaction of the rent, and never was the money of the under-tenant. Moore v. Pyrke, 11 East, 52.

A tenant under a lease cannot maintain an action on an implied promise for money paid under a distress by a superior landlord, being excluded by the express contract. The remedy is on the covenant. Schlenker v. Moxey, 5 D. & R. 747 ; 3 B. & C. 789 ; 1 Car. & P. 178 ; 27 R. R. 482.

A tenant, shortly after he had paid half-a-year's rent to his landlord, due at Lady-day preceding, was called upon by the agent of the ground landlord for ground-rent due previously to Lady-day, and which the landlord had refused to pay :—Held, that the payment of such ground-rent by the tenant was not a voluntary payment, although the agent of the ground landlord gave him time for that purpose. Carter v. Carter, 2 M. & P. 732 ; 5 Bing. 406 ; 7 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 141 ; 30 R. R. 677.

By an act for draining lands in Lincoln, it was declared, that the taxes to be charged and assessed by virtue of the same, should be paid by the tenants of the lands charged with the same, who might deduct and retain the same out of the rents payable to their respective landlords ; and also, that, in case of neglect to pay, the tax might be levied by distress on the goods and chattels which should be found on the lands charged with the tax in arrear ; and that, if the same should be untenanted, or no sufficient distress could be found, the lands and grounds chargeable should remain as a security for the payment, and might be taken possession of, and left in discharge of the tax. Where, therefore, a tenant had quitted lands liable to a drainage tax under this act, and, after he had left, the collector levied the tax in arrear upon property which he had left in the possession of the succeeding tenant:—Held, that the tenants to be charged with the tax were those in whose time the tax accrued due, and not the tenant for the time being; and, therefore, that the plaintiff might maintain an action against the landlord for money paid to his use. Dawson v. Linton, 1 D. & R. 117; 5 B. & Ald. 521. Cp. Griffinhoofe v. Daubuz, 5 El. & Bl. 746; 25 L. J., Q. B. 237; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 392—Ex. Ch.

A. and B. were under-lessees, at distinct rents, of separate portions of premises, the whole of which was held under one original lease at an entire rent. A. having paid the whole rent under a threat of distress, brought an action against B. to recover the proportion of rent due from him, as for money paid to his use:—Held, that the action was not maintainable. Hunter v. Hunt, 1 C. B. 300; 9 Jur. 375.

The plaintiff under a bill of sale seized goods on the defendant's premises, and with his knowledge, but without any express request, allowed them to remain there until rent became due. The landlord having distrained them, the plaintiff paid the rent and expenses:—Held, that this was not a compulsory payment by the plaintiff of a debt of the defendant, for his benefit or at his implied request. England v. Marsden, 35 L. J., C. P. 259; L. R. 1 C. P. 529; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 706; 14 L. T. 405; 14 W. R. 650.

A distress for rent was levied upon certain property, and cattle lent for hire by the plaintiff to the tenant were seized. The defendant, the holder of a bill of sale upon the goods and chattels of the tenant, then paid off the distress, and seized the cattle in question under his bill of sale. In an action for trover and conversion:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to set off and counter-claim the amount paid by him to relieve the cattle from the distress. Jones v. Simmons, 45 J. P. 666.

A purchaser of a leasehold interest, entering into possession before execution of an assignment, is entitled to sue the vendor for money paid to the landlord under a distress for rent accruing due before entry. Gregory v. Stanway, 2 F. & F. 309.

3. Damages and Costs.

If A. defends an action at the desire of B., in which action B. is concerned, and may be benefited by the event, and A. has a verdict against him, B. is liable to pay the expenses of the defence. Howes v. Martin, 1 Esp. 162.

A person indemnified cannot charge the person indemnifying with the costs of defending an action for a debt clearly due, unless authorised by him to defend. Gillett v. Rippon, M. & M. 406.

A declaration stated that the plaintiff, at the request of the defendant, and upon his undertaking to indemnify, defended an action for the recovery of money in which he claimed an interest; that judgment was given against the plaintiff for 42*l.*; and that he was imprisoned and paid the money under a ca. sa.:—Held, that he might recover against the defendant this sum under this count, upon proof of the judgment, without proof of the capias; or even on a count for money paid to the defendant's use; the defendant having taken out a summons to be permitted to pay such sum in discharge of the plaintiff's demand. Williamson v. Henley, 6 Bing. 299; 3 M. & P. 731.

In an action by A. against B., B. gave notice to C., against whom B. had a remedy over, to come in and defend the action. C. refused to do so, but did not prohibit B. from continuing the defence. B. suffered judgment by default, and watched the proceedings under the writ of inquiry, putting A. to the proof of his claim. At the trial of the action over by B. against C., the jury included in their verdict the costs incurred by B. in the former action, no objection being then taken by C. to the right of B. to recover such costs. The court refused to disturb the verdict, being of opinion that there was evidence to go to the jury, that C. had sanctioned the incurring of these costs. Blyth v. Smith, 5 Man. & G. 405; 6 Scott (N.R.) 199; 12 L. J., C. P. 203.

If A. has accepted three bills for the accommodation of B., and is obliged to pay them, and also to pay the costs of two actions brought upon two of them:—Held, that A. cannot in an action against B., recover the amount of the costs of the two actions, if his declaration contains only the common money accounts; but that to recover these costs he should have declared specially. Seaver v. Seaver, 6 Car. & P. 673.

A plaintiff having accepted a bill for the defendant's accommodation, defended an action brought by the indorsee, and finally paid the amount with the costs of the action. The plaintiff brought an action for money paid; the jury was directed that if the defendant requested the plaintiff to undertake the defence (as to which there was some evidence, but no express request proved) the costs were recoverable as money paid to the plaintiff's use:—Held, that the direction was right, and the costs recoverable under the count for money paid. Ganard v. Cottrell, 10 Q. B. 679.

Where a party has incurred and paid costs in bringing actions against committee-men to recover the amount of his claim, at the request of another committee-man, he may recover such costs from the committee-man at whose instance he sued as for money paid. Bailey v. Haines, 13 Q. B. 816; 19 L. J., Q. B. 73.

A plaintiff, as the agent of the defendant, ordered for him goods of a particular description and for a particular purpose, of W. and R., the defendant undertaking to save the plaintiff harmless from the consequences. The goods were of a different description from what were ordered, and unfit for the purpose required; but W. and R. contended that they had been misled by the misspelling contained in the order given by the plaintiff, who was a very illiterate person, and they refused to take the goods back. An action having been brought by W. and R. against the plaintiff for the price, and the defendant having had notice of the same, the plaintiff compromised such action by returning the goods, and paying a sum of money in discharge of debt and costs:—Held, that the plaintiff had an authority from the defendant to compromise such an action, and that he could recover from the defendant the amount so paid. Pettman v. Keble, 9 C. B. 701; 19 L. J., C. P. 325; 15 Jur. 38.

4. CONTRIBUTION.

a. In Cases of Tort.

If a plaintiff recovers in an action of tort against two, and levies the whole damages on one, that one cannot recover a moiety against the other for his contribution. Otherwise where the recovery against the two was in assumpsit. Merryweather v. Nixan, 8 Term Rep. 186; 16 R. R. 810. See Palmer v. Wick Steam Shipping Co., [1894] A. C. 318; 6 R. 245; 71 L. T. 163—H. L. (Sc.)

But the rule that there is no contribution among joint tort feasors, does not apply to a case where the party seeking contribution was a tort feasor only by inference of law, but is confined to cases where it must be presumed that the party knew he was committing an unlawful act. Pearson v. Skelton, 1 M. & W. 504; 1 Tyr. & G. 848.

Or the act is of an obviously illegal character. Betts v. Gibbins, 4 N. & M. 64; 2 A. & E. 57; 4 L. J., K. B. 1.

Nor does it extend to a case in which there is any bonâ fide doubt whatever, whether in point of law the act was authorised. Ib.

So also, the rule that a tort feasor cannot recover upon a promise to indemnify made by the person at whose request the tortious act is committed, must be similarly confined. Ib.

Contribution is indemnity, and the same consideration that will support a promise to indemnify, will also support a promise to contribute, et e converso. Ib.

Where several persons were jointly interested in a stage-coach, and there was a partnership fund, out of which expenses were first to be paid, and the residue divided amongst them:—Held, that one of them, against whom damages and costs had been recovered in an action brought by a party to whom damage was done by the negligent driving of the coach, could not recover against another proprietor his proportion of such damages and costs. Pearson v. Skelton, 1 M. & W. 504; 1 Tyr. & G. 848.

Where a liability arises from the wrongful act of several parties, each is liable for all the consequences, and there is no contribution between them, and each case is distinct, depending upon the evidence against each party. Att.-Gen. v. Wilson, 1 Cr. & Ph. 1.

b. In Cases of Contract.

The plaintiff and defendant entered into a joint and written contract with the owner of a vessel to supply her with colonial produce at Jamaica by a given time. The contract not being complied with, the owner made a demand on the plaintiff alone, who agreed to refer the amount of the damage sustained by such owner to arbitration, without the knowledge or consent of the defendant. The arbitrator having awarded a certain sum to be due to the owner, the plaintiff paid the amount, and brought an action for money paid against the defendant for a moiety:—Held, that he was entitled to recover. Burnell v. Minot, 4 Moore, 340.

Four persons, who had acted as directors of a projected company, being sued for debts contracted on account of the concern, jointly retained an attorney to defend them on personal responsibility:—Held, that one of the four, who had paid the attorney's bill, was entitled to sue the others for contribution. Edger v. Knapp, 6 Scott (N.R.) 707; 1 D. & L. 73; 5 Man. & G. 753.

A., B. and C., by an agreement in writing, hired premises of D.; the premises so hired were intended to be, and were used for the purposes of a company, of which A., B. and C. were at the time of the contract committee-men; rent was for some time paid by the company, but ultimately became in arrear; whereupon D. sued A., B. and C. upon the agreement; B. and C. suffered judgment by default, and D. recovered the amount of the rent and costs against A.:—Held, that A. was entitled to sue B. and C. for contribution; and that his remedy against B. was not affected by the circumstance of B.'s having ceased to be a member of the committee before the accruing of the rent in respect of which the action was brought. Boulter v. Peploe, 9 C. B. 493.

The right to enforce contribution between joint makers of a promissory note by an action is not affected by the fact that the makers were co-partners together with others, and that the note was given to secure money raised for the purposes of the partnership. Sedgwick v. Daniell, 2 H. & N. 319; 27 L. J., Ex. 116.

Where the plaintiff and the defendant were two of a committee, appointed at a vestry meeting, for the purpose of prosecuting nuisances on the waste lands and highways of the parish, which committee appointed an attorney, who prosecuted and obtained a verdict, and afterwards sued the plaintiff for his bill of costs, which was referred to arbitration, and 235*l.*, with costs of the action, were awarded against the plaintiff:—Held, that he might maintain an action against the defendant for contribution. Holmes v. Williamson, 6 M. & S. 158.

c. Amount and Proportion.

Where A. and B. had taken some pasturage jointly, and each had turned his cattle upon it, but how many each had turned was not shown; and A. having paid the whole rent:—Held, in an action for half the sum so paid by A., that the jury was not warranted in finding that the share of each was a moiety. Sharpe v. Cummings, 2 D. & L. 504; 14 L. J., Q. B. 10; 9 Jur. 68.

Differences and disputes having arisen between the trustees and managers of a chapel as to the conduct of B., one of the trustees, and an information having been filed in the court of chancery at the relation of all the trustees (except B.) against B. and another person, praying an account against B., in respect of such part of the trust funds as had come into his hands; and B. having by his answer charged the relators with a breach of trust in their management of the trust funds, an order was made with the consent of all parties, that the cause and all matters in difference should be referred, the arbitrator to have full authority over the costs of the suit and reference. The order expressly provided, that the death of any of the parties should not operate as a revocation of the arbitrator's authority; but that his award should be delivered to the personal representatives of the deceased party or parties. During the reference, one of the relators, being a party thereto, died, and afterwards the arbitrator made his award, and thereby directed that the costs of the reference should be borne and paid by the parties by whom they were incurred. The plaintiff, who was one of the relators, paid the solicitor, who had been retained for them in the conduct of the reference, his bill of costs and brought an action for money paid against the executors of the deceased relator for his proportion of the costs incurred after his death, including the costs of the award: —Held, that the executors were liable in such action for their testator's proportion of the costs of the reference incurred after his death, and also the costs of the award. Prior v. Hembrow, 8 M. & W. 873; 10 L. J., Ex. 371.

Where two or more members of a provisional committee jointly enter into a contract with a third party, and one of them is compelled to pay more than his just share of a debt, he may maintain an action against his co-contractors to recover contribution in respect of the amount overpaid by him. Batard v. Hawes, 2 El. & Bl. 287; 22 L. J., Q. B. 443; 17 Jur. 1154; 1 W. R. 387.

In order to determine the aliquot part of the whole amount which each co-contractor is to contribute in such a case, the number of the persons who originally entered into the contract must be looked to, and not the number of persons jointly liable to be sued as contractors at the time when the plaintiff in the action paid. Ib.

By agreement between the plaintiff of the one part, and the defendants of the other part, differences between them were referred to arbitration; the costs of the reference and award to be in the discretion of the arbitrator. The arbitrator, after finding a sum due from the defendants to the plaintiff, awarded that the costs of the reference and award, including compensation to the arbitrator, should be borne as follows: that is to say, one moiety by the plaintiff, and the other moiety by the defendants. The plaintiff took up the award, and paid the whole costs of it:—Held, that he could not recover a moiety of the costs as money paid for the use of the defendants. Bates v. Townley, 2 Ex. 152; 19 L. J., Ex. 399; 12 Jur. 606.

d. Without Legal Proceedings.

Generally, one joint contractor, who pays money for another under an equitable claim, may recover it from the other, as money paid to his use. Hutton v. Eyre, 1 Marsh. 603; 6 Taunt. 289; 16 R. R. 619.

But in all cases of partnership in illegal transactions, one partner cannot recover back money paid for the other, unless he has received express directions for such payment. Webb v. Brooke, 3 Taunt. 11. And see Simpson v. Bloss, 2 Marsh. 542; 7 Taunt. 246; Holt, 273; 17 R. R. 509.

Twenty parishioners joined at a vestry in signing an order for the repairs of the church, and one of them, a churchwarden, paid the artificers, but the rate for reimbursing him was quashed:—Held, that he could not sue for contribution from the persons who signed the order. Lanchester v. Frewer, 2 Bing. 361; 9 Moore, 688; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 40. See Sprott v. Powell, 3 Bing. 478; 11 Moore, 398; 4 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 161; 28 R. R. 665.

Where a lord of a manor, bound by tenure to repair, has repaired a bridge, he may recover contribution from a person who holds lands which were parcel of the demesnes at any time whilst the manor was so charged, in proportion to the value of the lands so held. Dimes v. Arden, 6 N. & M. 494; 5 L. J., K. B. 158.

5. Money paid by Sheriffs.

No cause of action can arise out of a breach of duty; therefore, if an officer permits a prisoner to go at large on his promise to pay the debt, and in consequence he is himself obliged to pay it, he cannot recover the money from the debtor. Pitcher v. Bailey, 8 East, 171.

If a sheriff voluntarily permits an escape, and is afterwards obliged to pay the debt, he may maintain an action for money paid against the debtor. Morris v. Berkeley, 8 East, 172, n.; Peake, 144, n.

A sheriff's officer, who discharges a debtor on payment of the sum sworn to, and is afterwards obliged to pay the residue of the debt, may recover it from the debtor as money paid to his use. Cordron v. Massarene (Lord), Peake, 143.

An action will not lie upon an implied promise to repay a sheriff the expenses incurred in seizing and keeping possession under a fi. fa. at the request of the party suing out the writ, although they were not sold on account of his refusing to give an indemnity against the claims of third persons. Bilke v. Havelock, 3 Camp. 374; 14 R. R. 758.

6. Expenses of Bail.

Where a person becomes bail above for another, he is entitled to recover all the expenses to which he has been put by reason of it, and may, therefore, recover his expenses in sending after the principal to take him, in order to render him; but not the expenses of a suit improperly defended. Fisher v. Fallows, 5 Esp. 171; 8 R. R. 843.

And not for trouble and loss of time in going to a place to become bail. Reason v. Wirdnam, 1 Car. & P. 434.

And, primâ facie, the charges of the bail for putting in bail above are due from the bail to the sheriff. Hector v. Carpenter, 1 Stark. 190.

A. entered into a recognisance of bail for B. on the removal by certiorari of an indictment for conspiracy from the central criminal court to the queen's bench. B. was convicted, and the recognisance was estreated for the nonpayment of the prosecutor's costs:—Held, that A. might maintain an action against B. as upon an implied indemnity. Jones v. Orchard, 16 C. B. 614; 24 L. J., C. P. 229; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 936; 3 W. R. 554.

C. FOR MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED.

1. General Principles to support Action.

The action for money had and received is a liberal action, in which the party waives all torts, trespasses, and damages. Anon., Lofft, 320.

The doctrine that the action for money had and received is an equitable action, must be looked on as exploded. Miller v. Atlee, 3 Ex. 799; 13 Jur. 431.

Money paid by A. to B. upon a condition which has not been complied with, cannot be recovered as money received to A.'s use. Hardingham v. Allen, 5 C. B. 793; 17 L. J., C. P. 198.

An action for money had and received will not lie where the plaintiff upon the same transaction would be liable to a cross-action to recover damages to an equal amount. Simpson v. Swan, 3 Camp. 291; 13 R. R. 805.

Goods were consigned to two persons for sale by commission; upon a dissolution of partnership the commission to sell was assumed by one:—Held, that having sold, he was rightly sued for money had and received. Wells v. Ross, 7 Taunt. 403.

When a person is employed to receive money for another, and he employs a third person to receive it for him, an action for money had and received will not lie against the first, without evidence that the money came to the hands of such third person. Matthews v. Haydon, 2 Esp. 509.

A defendant being employed to procure payment of a bill, and to remit the proceeds direct to the plaintiff, remitted it to a third person, whereby it got into the hands of the plaintiff's creditors:—Held, that the defendant was not liable for money had and received. Duncan v. Shipwith, 2 Camp. 68.

The action will lie for the assignee of a respondentia bond; the obligor having beforehand engaged, by an indorsement, to pay the same to any assignee. Fenner v. Meares, 2 W. Bl. 1269.

The plaintiff must prove to what specific sum he is entitled. Harvey v. Archbold, 5 D. & R. 500; 3 B. & C. 626; R. & M. 184.

An execution issued against one of two partners for a separate debt, under which the goods of the partnership were seized; before the sale, a fiat in bankruptcy issued against the partnership. The partnership property was afterwards sold, and the produce received by the assignees:—Held, that the exection creditor could not maintain an action against the assignees for a moiety of the produce as money had and received to his use, having acquired no legal interest in the goods. Garbett v. Veale, D. & M. 458; 5 Q. B. 408; 13 L. J., Q. B. 98; 8 Jur. 335.

The plaintiff, an attorney, agreed for a consideration to convey to the defendant an estate, which the latter had purchased, upon the terms, that the vendor and vendee should pay for the conveyance in equal proportions, and the plaintiff also agreed, that, if the vendor objected to pay any expenses, he, the plaintiff, would not apply to the defendant for any further remuneration. The conveyance was made by the plaintiff; the defendant agreed with the vendor, that, if the vendor would pay the whole expense of another transaction between himself and the defendant, he, the vendor, should not pay any of the expenses of the above conveyance:—Held, that so much of those expenses as the defendant (as between himself and the vendor) had been allowed to set off against his share of the liability on the other transaction, was money had and received to the plaintiff's use, and might be recovered by him, besides the consideration originally agreed upon for making the conveyance. Noy v. Reynolds, 1 A. & E. 159.

Upon a contract of sale and return, with a certain sum to be paid for hire if a return should be made, the money received by the seller becomes money had and received to the use of the other party if a return is made, and may be recovered as money had and received. Hurst v. Orbell, 3 N. & P. 237; 1 W. W. & H. 156; 8 A. & E. 107; 7 L. J., Q. B. 138; 2 Jur. 840.

The defendant, who had been illegally elected for the office of surgeon of a county infirmary in Ireland, entered into office, and though cautioned, kept out the plaintiff, who had been legally elected:—Held, that the plaintiff, as he had not actually discharged the duties of the office, though he had offered and was ready to do so, was not entitled to recover, as money had and received, the salary which the defendant had received under the grand jury presentment. Lawlor v. Alton, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 160.

The legal estate in lands being vested in trustees, and the plaintiff equitably entitled to the rents, by his direction a tenant, holding under the trustees, paid his rent to the defendant in discharge of an annuity claimed by the latter as charged upon the land; and the plaintiff sought, by an action for money had and received, to recover back the money so paid:—Held, that he was not entitled to sustain the action. Leader v. Leader, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 20.

A. was tenant of a farm over which two railways passed, in respect of which tenant's damages were payable to the owner of the land, or to his lessees or tenants. A. received the money:—Held, that, if the land covered by the railways passed to A. by the agreement under which he became tenant, the owner could not recover that money as received to his use. Wilson v. Anderson, 1 Car. & K. 544.

2. Privity of Contract.

A. paid a sum of money into a banker's hands for a specific purpose, and the banker's clerk, by mistake, paid the money to B.:—Held, that A. could not maintain an action against B. to recover it back. Rogers v. Kelly, 2 Camp. 123.

But if A. remits money to B. to pay C., and B. promises C. to pay it to him, C. can maintain an action against B. for money had and received. Lilly v. Hays, 1 N. & P. 26; 5 A. & E. 548; 2 H. & W. 338; 6 L. J., K. B. 5.

The plaintiff purchased the interest of a member of a building society, and paid to the manager certain instalments who misapplied the money. By the rules, the manager was only justified in receiving instalments in conjunction with the treasurer and one of the trustees:—Held, that an action would not lie against the manager for money had and received, as the money was received by the manager for the society and not for the plaintiff. Haverson v. Cole, 6 W. R. 17.

The defendant was an office-keeper of an Exeter and London coach, and servant to C., a proprietor at Exeter, where the office kept by the defendant was. The defendant from time to time made up accounts of the shares of profits due to the several proprietors, and sent them to those parties, taking the money from a balance of C.'s which he had in hand. On one occasion, the defendant sent to the plaintiff, a proprietor, a packet purporting to contain 23*l.* which was due to him, but in reality containing 20*l.* only. The plaintiff sued the defendant for 3*l.* had and received to his use:—Held, that he was not liable, there being no privity of contract between him and the plaintiff; and that he was not precluded from this defence by having told the plaintiff (after action brought), that he, the defendant, had had the 23*l.* of C., and sent it to the plaintiff and debited C. with it. Howell v. Batt, 2 N. & M. 381; 5 B. & Ad. 504; 3 L. J., K. B. 49. See Stephens v Badcock, 8 B. & Ad. 354; 1 L. J., K. B. 75.

The defendant chartered a ship to K., at a certain rate per week, to be paid every four weeks in advance. On the second payment becoming due, K. received from the plaintiff, through whom he had sub-chartered the ship to B., a cheque for half the amount due, payable to the order of the defendant, upon the terms that K. should inform the defendant that the advance was made in consideration that the ship should be allowed to perform the charter. K. paid the cheque to the defendant, but omitted to inform him of the terms on which it had been given, and he had no notice of them, and, the remainder of the money being unpaid, the defendant, who had obtained cash for the cheque, stopped the ship :—Held, that an action for money had and received to recover the amount of the cheque was not maintainable by the plaintiff against the defendant, as there was no privity between them, and that the action, if any, ought to have been brought by K. Watson v. Russell, 5 B. & S. 968 ; 34 L. J., Q. B. 93 ; 11 L. T. 641 ; 13 W. R. 231—Ex. Ch.

When a bill of exchange, payable at the house of A., had been presented there for payment, and dishonoured, and the acceptor on the following day remitted a sum to A. for the purpose of paying that bill and another ; and A. in answer stated that the bill had been dishonoured, but added that the money received should be carried to the acceptor's account, and afterwards paid the other bill :—Held, that the holder of the original dishonoured bill could not maintain an action against A. for money had and received, unless some agreement had taken place between them. Yates v. Bell, 3 B. & Ald. 643.

Guardians of a poor-law union indicted the plaintiff for disobeying an order of sessions for maintenance of a bastard. Before trial, he offered a compromise, and the clerk to the guardians on their behalf agreed with him for a sum on account of costs and maintenance, which he paid, and the indictment was dropped. Afterwards, the plaintiff discovered that the order of sessions was defective and void, and he brought an action against the clerk for money had and received :—Held, that the clerk was not liable, having done nothing in the prosecution beyond preferring the indictment ; and that, if the compromise was illegal, the plaintiff, being in pari delicto with the other parties offending, could not sue them for the money which he had paid. Goodall v. Lowndes, 6 Q. B. 464 ; 9 Jur. 177.

An action for money had and received will not lie against a mere money bearer, to recover the money he has received and paid over. Coles v. Wright, 4 Taunt. 213 ; 2 Rose, 110.

The defendant having recovered judgment against H. on the 25th of April, lodged with the sheriff a fi. fa. The sheriff neglected to execute the writ until the 11th May, when he seized the goods of H., and assigned them to the defendant, by a bill of sale, which stated the consideration to be 256*l.*, paid by the defendant to him. He then returned the fi. fa. Before the seizure, the defendant had notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by H. before the 25th of April, upon which a fiat issued in August, and assignees were appointed, who recovered from the sheriff the value of the goods seized, whereupon he brought an action to recover back the money so paid :—Held, first, that although no money, in fact, passed, the plaintiff and defendant were, as between themselves, in the same situation as if the plaintiff had sold the goods to the defendant, and received the money. Standish v. Ross, 3 Ex. 527 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 185.

Held, secondly, that though the money was not the plaintiff's, still he was entitled to recover, since it was money which he ought to have received as soon as he had been compelled by the owner to pay for the goods seized. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the plaintiff was not estopped, by his return, from saying that the then title of the debtor was defeated by matter subsequent. Ib.

Held, lastly, that the money having been paid by the plaintiff, in ignorance of the facts, he was entitled to recover it back, although the defendant could not, in every respect, be placed in statu quo. Ib.

The assignees of a bankrupt gave B., their solicitor, a cheque for the amount of the bill of costs of A., the petitioning creditor (who was his own solicitor) ; B, offered to pay A. the full amount of those costs, provided that he would engage in the receipts that the costs should be afterwards liable to taxation ; A. refused to give such engagement, and requested B. to pay out of the same some commissioners' fees included in the bill :—Held, that no promise arose upon the offer, the terms of which were not acceded to ; and without the promise there was no privity of contract to support an action for money had and received. Barron v. Husband, 1 N. & M. 728 ; 4 B. & Ad. 611. See Kymer v. Larkin, 5 Bing. 71 ; 2 M. & P. 183 ; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 237.

A legacy having been left to the plaintiff, the defendant, who acted as agent for the executor, stated, in a letter to a third party, that he would remit the plaintiff's legacy in any way the latter might suggest. He afterwards paid 24*l.* to the plaintiff, having deducted 6*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* for his trouble and expenses, and afterwards sent him an account, stating the reason of the deduction : —Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover this sum in an action for money had and received. Burlow v. Browne, 16 M. & W. 126 ; 16 L. J., Ex. 62.

The defendant, as trustee of a certain marriage settlement, invested money on a mortgage of the plaintiff's land. The mortgage deed provided for interest at the rate of 5 per cent., but contained a proviso for the reduction of the rate to 4 per cent. on punctual payments. All the payments of interest except the first had been punctual, but, through the plaintiff's ignorance of the proviso for the reduction of the interest, they had been made at the rate of 5 per cent. In an action by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant, the trustee, the extra 1 per cent. paid under this mistake :—Held, that the action was rightly brought against the trustee ; that the only contract was between the plaintiff as mortgagor and the defendant as mortgagee ; that money had been received under that contract by the mortgagee, and that he alone could be asked or required to repay it. King v. Stewart, 66 L. T. 339.

3. On Waiving, Condoning or Satisfying Torts.

A. and B. went together to the house of C.'s mother, and A. seized there a sum of money belonging to C. There was some evidence of A. and B. having gone with the intent to get the money, but there was no evidence that B. went into the house. They subsequently paid the money into a bank to their joint account :—Held, that C. might waive the trespass and maintain an action for money had and received against A. and B. Neat v. Harding, 6 Ex. 349 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 250.

Where, after a wrongful sale of goods, the owner claims the proceeds of the sale as money received to his use, and the wrongdoer thereupon pays, and the owner accepts, part of the proceeds as money received to his use ; the tort is waived, and the owner's remedy for the residue of the amount of the sale is by an action for money had and received to his use. Lythgoe v. Vernon, 5 H. & N. 180 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 164.

To an action for money received, a plea that the debt was for money due from the defendant jointly with A., and that the plaintiff had already sued A. in trover, and recovered judgment against him for 100*l.*, and that the causes of action for which the plaintiff recovered judgment included all the present causes of action. The evidence was, that the defendant and A. had wrongfully converted the plaintiff's goods by selling them, but that the defendant alone had received the proceeds, 150*l.* ; and that the plaintiff had sued A. in trover, and recovered 100*l.* as the value of the goods at the time of the conversion. The plea was then amended by striking out the allegation, that the debt was for money due from the defendant and A. jointly, and substituting that the money sued for was money received as the proceeds of the sale of the goods in the declaration mentioned :—Held, that the plea, as amended, was an answer to the plaintiff's claim for the whole proceeds of the sale. Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145 ; 2 C. L. R. 784 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 204 ; 18 Jur. 775 ; 2 W. R. 565.

4. Receiver's Knowledge of Title to Money or Appropriation.

Where money is paid by A. to B., to be applied by the latter, pursuant to a binding contract between the parties, A. cannot revoke its destination. Yates v. Hoppe, 9 C. B. 541 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 180 ; 14 Jur. 372.

The drawer of an accommodation bill, a few days before its maturity, handed money over to the acceptor, for the purpose of meeting the bill. A fiat having been issued against the drawer between the day of such deposit and the maturity and payment of the bill :—Held, that the money having been handed over to the acceptor in pursuance of a binding contract, upon a good consideration, viz., an implied contract of indemnity, the bankruptcy of the drawer was no revocation of the authority to apply the money in satisfaction of the bill, and consequently that his assignees could not recover it back from the acceptor as money had and received to their use. Ib.

Notice of an order was given to the party to whom it was directed before it was due, and he wrote letters to the plaintiff, in one of which he undertook to honour the order when he had funds in his hands, and in a later one said he had received money available for the order, but had disposed of it in other ways :—Held, it might be read in evidence against the defendant in support of a claim for money received, founded upon his assent to a direction to hold a fund in his hands for the use of the plaintiff. Griffin v. Weatherby, 9 B. & S. 726 ; 37 L. J., Q. B. 280 ; L. R. 3 Q. B. 753 ; 18 L. T. 881 ; 17 W. R. 8.

When bills of exchange are remitted for sale, and the proceeds directed to be applied to a specific purpose, the property in the bills remains in the remitter until the purpose for which they were remitted is satisfied. And when the money realised by the sale is wrongfully applied by the agent, the remitter is entitled to recover the value of the bills, as money had and received to his use, from the purchaser of them, who has notice of the purpose for which they were remitted, and the misapplication of the proceeds by the agent. Muttyloll Seal v. Dent, 5 Moore, Ind. App. 328 ; 8 Moore, P. C. 319.

A. employed B., a broker at Liverpool, to purchase a Hartlepool bond for 2,000*l.* for him, for which purpose he remitted him a letter of credit for 2,010*l.* on a bank there, payable to B. or order. C., who had had dealings with B., in the course of which the latter had become indebted to him in 1,940*l.*, under pretence of borrowing the money for a few days, and knowing that it was A.'s money, induced B. to part with it, and then insisted upon applying it in discharge of B.'s debt to him :—Held, that A. might recover the amount from C. Litt v. Martindale, 18 C. B. 314 ; 4 W. R. 465.

5. To try Title to Land or Profits.

The rule of law, that the title to land cannot be tried in an action for money had and received, does not apply to cases where only the past-gone rents of lands are in question. Moneypenny v. Bristow, 2 Russ. & M. 117. S. P., Newsome v. Graham, 10 B. & C. 234.

An action for money had and received will not lie by one tenant against his co-tenant who has received more than his share of the profits. Thomas v. Thomas, 5 Ex. 28 ; 1 L. M. & P. 229 : 19 L. J., Ex. 175 ; 14 Jur. 180.

6. To try the Right to Offices.

An action for money had and received to recover fees, was introduced in lieu of an assize. Boyter v. Dodsworth, 6 Term Rep. 681 ; 3 R. R. 315.

Money given to A., and claimed by B., as perquisites of office, cannot be recovered by B. unless such perquisites are known and accustomed fees. Ib.

It will not lie by the nominee of a perpetual curacy for the profits thereof, against one who was in possession, and claimed likewise to be curate. Powell v. Millbank, 1 Term Rep. 399, n.

Nor does it lie in the case of a donative, because the party is in full possession immediately on the nomination. Rex v. Chester (Bishop), 1 Term Rep. 396, 403 ; 1 R. R. 237.

Where the plaintiff and defendant, both claiming to act as clerks to the justices of a division, agreed to leave the dispute to the determination of third parties, who directed that the defendant should act in the office and divide his fees with the plaintiff :—Held, that an action might be maintained to recover the moiety of the fees received, and that the defendant could not allege that he was legally entitled to all the fees. Rowland v. Hall, 1 Scott, 539 ; 1 Hodges, 111.

Where a corporation, under a claim that a particular office was vacant or that it had been abolished, had for some years wrongfully received the fees payable to the holder of such office :—Held, that an action for money had and received might be brought against the corporation ; for, as it would be absurd to suppose that a corporation would contract under seal to refund money which they claimed to be their own, the necessity of the case required such a remedy. Hall v. Swansea Corporation, D. & M. 475 ; 5 Q. B. 526 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 107 ; 8 Jur. 213. See Shoubridge v. Clark, 12 C. B. 335.

7. For Money paid on Moral Obligation.

Where a man has actually paid what the law would not have compelled him to pay, but what in equity and conscience he ought, he cannot recover it back. Bize v. Dickason, 1 Term Rep. 285.

Nor where a man has paid a debt which would otherwise have been barred by the Statute of Limitations, or a debt contracted during his infancy, which in justice he ought to discharge, though not compellable by law, can he call on the payee to refund; but where money is paid under a mistake which there was no ground to claim in conscience, the party may recover it back again. Ib.

But money paid voluntarily cannot be recovered back. Cartwright v. Rowley, 2 Esp. 723.

Where a creditor refused to sign a composition deed without a bill of exchange for the remainder of his debt, which the debtor gave him, and the former then signed the deed; the debtor having subsequently paid the amount of the bill to his creditor:—Held, that it was a voluntary payment, and could not be recovered back. Wilson v. Ray, 2 P. & D. 253; 10 A. & E. 82; 8 L. J., Q. B. 224; 3 Jur. 384.

8. For Money paid under Compulsion of Law.

A voluntary payment of an illegal demand, the party knowing the demand to be illegal, without an immediate and urgent necessity (as to redeem or preserve his person or goods), is not the subject of an action for money had and received. Fulham v. Down, 6 Esp. 26, n.

Where judgment was obtained on an order which had not been duly filed, and execution was issued:—Held, that the defendant might recover from the plaintiff the amount paid to him under the execution, as money had and received to his use. Farrow v. Mayes, 18 Q. B. 816; 17 Jur. 132.

Voluntary payment, conclusive both in equity and at law, on the principle that litigation is not to be multiplied. Goodman v. Sayers, 2 Jac. & Walk. 263.

A. B. on a sale of certain lands covenanted with C. D., the purchaser, to protect him against "all judgments, charges, and incumbrances, &c." It subsequently appeared that the lands were liable to a judgment, confessed previously to the lands coming into the possession of C. D., and proceedings having been commenced by the conusee against the lands, and A. B. having been called upon by C. D. and having accordingly, and in fulfilment of his covenant, paid off the amount of the judgment:—Held, that this was not a voluntary payment. Aicken v. Macklin, 1 Dr. & Wal. 621.

If money is paid after judgment signed, it cannot be considered as a voluntary payment. Garratt v. Hooper, 1 D. P. C. 28.

Where money has been paid under the compulsion of legal process, which is afterwards discovered not to have been due, the plaintiff cannot recover it back. Marriott v. Hampton, 7 Term Rep. 269; 2 Esp. 546; 4 R. R. 439.

But an action lies to recover back money which has been obtained by compulsion under colour of process, by an excess of authority, although it has been paid over. Snowdon v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359.

The plaintiff, being a foreigner, ignorant of the English language, was arrested at Falmouth, soon after his first arrival there from abroad, by the defendant, for 10,000*l.* The defendant and plaintiff then signed an agreement, by which, in consideration of 500*l.* paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, the plaintiff was to be discharged, and not to be again arrested; and the plaintiff was to put in bail in twelve days; the sum of 500*l.* was to be "as a payment in part of the writ"; and both parties were to abide the event of the action, the agreement containing no provision for refunding the money if the action should fail. The plaintiff paid the 500*l.*, and was released. No bail was put in, and the writ was afterwards set aside for irregularity. The plaintiff then sued the defendant for the 500*l.*, as money had and received; and the jury found that he knew that he had no claim upon the plaintiff:—Held, that the action lay, the payment having been made under compulsion of colourable legal process. De Cadaval (Duke) v. Collins, 4 A. & E. 858; 2 H. & W. 54; 6 N. & M. 324; 5 L. J., K. B. 171.

Where money has been paid under compulsion of legal process, the party paying it knowing the cause of action for which the process was sued out before he paid the money, and there being no fraud on the part of the payee, the money so paid cannot be recovered back, although it may afterwards be discovered to have been not really due. Hamlet v. Richardson, 2 M. & Scott, 811; 9 Bing. 644.

Where a party, sued on a claim which he knows to be unfounded, pays it voluntarily and with notice, it is not recoverable; he cannot recover it back, though at the time he pays it, he declares he pays it without prejudice to his right to recover. Brown v. M'Kinally, 1 Esp. 279; 5 R. R. 739.

A certificated bankrupt, being arrested for a debt provable under the commission, paid the money under a protest, stating his bankruptcy and certificate, and warning the sheriff that he should apply to the court to have the money paid back:—Held, that this was not such a payment of money under legal process, with knowledge of the facts, as precluded the bankrupt from recovering back the money. Payne v. Chapman, 4 A. & E. 364.

When a man pays more than he is bound to do by law for the performance of a duty which the law says is owed to him for nothing, or for less than he has paid, there is a compulsion or a concession in respect of which he is entitled to recover the excess by condictio indebiti, or by an action for money had and received. G. W. Ry. v. Sutton, 38 L. J., Ex. 177; L. R. 4 H. L. 249; 22 L. T. 43; 18 W. R. 92.

An action may be maintained to recover back money paid under a compromise, after another action had been brought for it by the defendant against the plaintiff, and an interlocutory judgment had, and a writ of inquiry executed thereon; where it appeared that there was no real consideration for the payment, and the money had in fact been paid under a compromise, and not under the judgment of a court. Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 Term Rep. 432, n.; 2 R. R. 424.

A party paid the sheriff the amount of a forfeited recognisance, in order to prevent a sale of his goods; the sessions afterwards mitigated the recognisance to a small sum, for which alone the sheriff rendered an account to the exchequer:—Held, that as the sessions were not authorised in mitigating the recognisance, the plaintiff could not recover against the sheriff for the surplus of the money, though he had made an express promise to repay it. Haynes v. Hayton, 7 B. & C. 293; 2 Car. & P. 621; 5 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 136; 31 R. R. 205.

If one person obtains possession of goods intrusted to another to be sold at a fixed price, and at the time when the goods are to be delivered, or the price accounted for, refuses to do either, and the person to whom they were intrusted, being threatened with an action, pays the fixed price to the owner, such person may recover against him who took possession in an action for money had and received. Longchamp v. Kenny, 1 Dougl. 137.

Pending an ejectment by A. against B., A. was served with notice of B.'s intention to sue for certain statutable penalties incurred by A. An arrangement was made, under which the ejectment was discontinued, and B. received from A. 50*l.* towards the costs of B.'s defence in that action:—Held, that A. might recover back the 50*l.* as money received by B. to A.'s use, if the jury found that sum was paid with reference to and by coercion of the threatened penal actions, and not to have been paid voluntarily, and with reference to the ejectment only. Unwin v. Leaper, 1 Man. & G. 747; 1 Drink. 3; 10 L. J., C. P. 41; 4 Jur. 1037.

Money levied by a regular execution under a judgment, valid on the face of it, cannot be recovered back on the ground that judgment was signed or execution issued fraudulently for the whole sum named in the judgment, when part had been already paid. De Medina v. Grove, 10 Q. B. 152; 15 L. J., Q. B. 287; 10 Jur. 428.

A sheriff seized goods in the possession of S. to satisfy a fi. fa. issued against him upon a judgment of nonsuit for 67*l.* S. had previously conveyed all his estate and effects to H. by a deed which, it was contended, was fraudulent and void against creditors; and H. gave notice to the sheriff's officer not to sell, and demanded the goods. The officer refused to deliver them up, except on payment of 97*l.* (the additional 30*l.* being claimed for poundage, expenses, &c.), which the person sent by H. to demand the goods paid under protest. The sheriff, being ruled to return the writ, returned that he had levied of the goods and chattels of the plaintiff S. the sum of 67*l.* In an action brought by S. against the sheriff to recover back the 30*l.*:—Held, that it was not necessary to prove a tender of the 67*l.* Scarfe v. Halifax, 7 M. & W. 288; 10 L. J., Ex. 332.

Held, however, that it was a question for the jury, and ought to have been left to them, whether the money paid to redeem the goods was the money of S. or not; and that, if it was not, he was not entitled to recover; and that the sheriff was not estopped by his return to say, that the excess beyond the 67*l.* was not the money of S. Ib.

B.'s goods had been assigned to trustees for the benefit of creditors. While the goods were in the possession of the trustees, a sheriff's officer entered and claimed the goods under a fi. fa., but made no seizure; and the trustees remained in possession of the goods until a messenger took possession under a fiat of bankruptcy issued against B. Afterwards the sheriff's officer broke open the door, made an inventory of the goods, and threatened to sell. The assignees of B. having thereupon paid under protest the amount of the levy:—Held, that the payment was not voluntary, and might be recovered back. Valpy v. Manley, 1 C. B. 594; 14 L. J., C. P. 204; 9 Jur. 452.

The defendants, as sanitary authority for the borough of B., had demanded from the plaintiff, and the plaintiff had paid, a water-rate of 8*l.* 15*s.* 4*d.*, such rate being calculated on the "gross rental" of the plaintiff's premises. The plaintiff, contending that such rate ought to have been assessed on the "rateable value" only, brought an action in the county court to recover the difference overpaid. The defendants had no power to distrain for the rates, but they had a power to stop the water supply for nonpayment; they had not stopped the water supply, and had not threatened to do so. The county court judge held that the payment was not a voluntary one, and could be recovered back, on the ground that the defendants had a power to stop the water supply:—Held, that the payment was a voluntary one, and could not be recovered back. Slater v. Burnley Corporation, 59 L. T. 636; 36 W. R. 831; 53 J. P. 70; 53 J. P. 535.

9. For Money paid under a Distress.

To Goods.]—Where a party threatened with distress for rent pays money where he might legally have defended himself, it is not a payment by compulsion, and can neither be recovered back nor set off against another demand. Knibbs v. Hall, 1 Esp. 84.

A declaration alleged that the plaintiff was tenant of a house to the defendant, and the defendant wrongfully distrained for arrears of rent on goods of the plaintiff of much greater value than the arrears and the charges of the distress and appraisement and sale, although part of the goods was of sufficient value to have satisfied the arrears and charges, and thereby made an unreasonable distress contrary to the statute. There was a second count for money had and received. The plaintiff, before the distress, had assigned the goods seized to trustees, for the benefit of his wife. The plaintiff, his wife, and one of such trustees resided in the house. The sum of 9*l.* was in arrear for rent, when the defendant distrained for 18*l.* for rent in arrear and the costs, and seized goods to the value of 100*l.* The plaintiff offered to pay 9*l.* and costs and charges. This offer was refused, and the money distrained for, and the costs and charges were paid under protest. The plaintiff suffered annoyance from these proceedings:—Held, that the declaration disclosed a good cause of action, and that there was sufficient evidence of an interest in the goods, on the part of the plaintiff, to go to the jury in respect of the first count; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the excess of the money paid under protest, and damages for the annoyance which he had suffered. Fell v. Whitaker, 41 L. J., Q. B. 78; L. R. 7 Q. B. 120; 25 L. T. 880; 20 W. R. 317.

Where, rent being in arrear, the landlord takes goods of the tenant as a distress, and claims more than the amount of such arrears; and the tenant, in order to regain possession of the goods, pays the amount demanded, he cannot afterwards maintain an action to recover back the money so paid by him in excess of the amount really due. Glynn v. Thomas, 11 Ex. 870; 25 L. J., Ex. 125; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 378; 4 W. R. 363—Ex. Ch. S. P., French v. Phillips, 1 H. & N. 564; 26 L. J., Ex. 82; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1169; 5 W. R. 114—Ex. Ch.

In order to render the detention of the goods in such a case unlawful, the tenant must tender the rent really due. Ib.

A landlord who has sold his tenant's goods under a distress for rent is not liable for money had and received, at the suit of the mortgagee of the goods, to recover the overplus money in the landlord's hands, the proper remedy being by an action against him for not paying over the overplus to the sheriff, pursuant to 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 2. Yates v. Eastwood, 6 Ex. 805; 20 L. J., Ex. 303.

A landlord or a bailiff who has distrained, even if not bound (as semble he is) to restore goods remaining unsold to the premises on which he distrained them, is at liberty to do so, and his doing so will not be a conversion, even although they are the goods of third parties, and the bailiff has had notice of this from them, after the impounding, and has promised to act on the notice, both as to goods unsold and the surplus proceeds of goods sold, for such a promise does not impose any duty on the bailiff to deliver the goods to the right owner, neither will it sustain an action to recover the surplus proceeds of the goods sold. Evans v. Wright, 2 H. & N. 527; 27 L. J., Ex. 50.

Where goods, distrained by the plaintiff, are delivered by him to the defendant on his promising to pay the rent, an action for money had and received will not lie for the value of the goods, though the defendant does not pay the rent. Leery v. Goodson, 4 Term Rep. 687.

Where a broker who distrained on a tenant for rent was requested not to sell, and promised his charges in consideration of such forbearance, and time was given and the charges paid, but the tenant objected to the amount of the charges:—Held, that this was not a voluntary payment; and that if the charges were irregular, they might be recovered back. Hills v. Street, 5 Bing. 37; 2 M. & P. 96; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 215.

A tenant to B. received notice from C., a mortgagee of B.'s term, that the interest was in arrear, and requiring payment to her, B., of the rent due. A., notwithstanding the notice, paid the rent to B. (under an indemnity, which turned out to be unauthorised), and was afterwards compelled by distress to pay the amount over to C.:—Held, that the payment to B. was a voluntary payment, with full knowledge of the circumstances, and therefore not recoverable back. Higgs v. Scott, 7 C. B. 63.

To Animals.]—Where cattle are distrained as damage feasant, the owner cannot, without tendering amends, pay under protest an excessive sum demanded for damage, and recover the amount as money received to his use. Gulliver v. Cosens, 1 C. B. 788; 14 L. J., C. P. 215; 9 Jur. 666.

If a sufficient tender is made before the distress, the remedy is replevin or trespass; if after the distress (and before the impounding), detinue. Ib.

And this action will not lie to recover back money paid for the release of cattle damage feasant, though the distress was wrongful. Lindon v. Hooper, Cowp. 414.

Where an animal distrained as damage feasant is impounded on private premises, and not in a common pound, a subsequent tender of sufficient compensation for the damage actually done is good; and if the distrainor, by demanding an excessive sum for the damage as the condition of his release of the animal, obtains payment of such sum from the owner, such payment is not voluntary, and the sum paid may be recovered in an action for money had and received. Green v. Duckett, 52 L. J., Q. B. 435; 11 Q. B. D. 275; 48 L. T. 677; 31 W. R. 607; 47 J. P. 487.

10. For Money paid on Claim of Lien or Pressure.

Money paid, as the only means of recovering possession of property to which a party is entitled, constitutes a compulsory payment, and may be recovered back. Shaw v. Woodcock, 9 D. & R. 889; 7 B. & C. 73; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 294; 31 R. R. 158.

An action will lie to recover back money paid to release goods wrongfully detained on a claim of lien. Ashmole v. Wainwright, 2 G. & D. 217; 2 Q. B. 837; 11 L. J., Q. B. 79; 6 Jur. 729.

Goods had been delivered to a carrier to be carried, without any bargain as to the price; the carrier refused to give them up at the end of the journey without payment of a certain sum for the carriage, which the plaintiff paid under protest; the plaintiff then brought an action for money had and received, and delivered a bill of particulars, stating that the action was brought to recover the whole of the sum or such part as was an overcharge; the jury found that a smaller sum than that demanded and paid was due:—Held, that a tender of the smaller sum was not necessary to enable the plaintiff to maintain the action. Ib.

A lease was about to be granted to the plaintiff, to which it was necessary that C. should be a concurring party. The attorney of the proposed lessors applied to him for that purpose, and the defendant, as C.'s attorney, answered the application, requiring certain documents to be furnished; for which business the defendant had a claim on C. It was ultimately agreed that C. should concur in the lease, on the terms, as the defendant contended, that all the past costs, as well as those to be occasioned by his joining in the lease, should be paid by the lessors; as the plaintiff contended that the latter costs only should be paid. The lease, having been engrossed and executed by the lessors, was sent to the defendant to procure C.'s execution; the defendant sent an account of his costs against C. to the attorney of the lessors, who complained of the amount, on which the defendant said that C. should not execute unless that amount was paid. The attorney of the lessors, after tendering a smaller sum to the defendant, paid him the larger sum under protest, for the plaintiff, to obtain possession of the lease:—Held, that an action to recover the overplus was rightly brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, although the latter merely acted as C.'s attorney, and that such action was maintainable. Smith v. Sleap, 12 M. & W. 585.

The plaintiff and defendant, on the 21st of August, 1856, contracted through brokers on the Stock Exchange for the sale by the defendant to the plaintiff of ten shares in the Royal British Bank, the deed of settlement of which required seven days' notice of any intended transfer, as well as consent thereto on the part of the directors. No such notice was given in the present instance, but it had never been the practice of the bank to require it in the case of sales through the Stock Exchange, and no consent was obtained unless that was to be inferred from the transfer clerk at the bank giving a blank form of transfer to the defendant's broker, to be filled up by him. The defendant executed the transfer on the 2nd of September, and on the 3rd the bank stopped payment. On that day, the stoppage being then known to both parties, the defendant's broker tendered to the plaintiff's broker the transfer so executed, although unstamped, but he refused to accept it, or to pay the money, and on the same day the plaintiff desired him not to pay it under any circumstances. On the following day, in consequence of a decision of a committee of the Stock Exchange, to whom the matter was referred, the plaintiff's broker paid the amount to the defendant's broker, and the plaintiff being then threatened by his broker with legal proceedings, reimbursed him :—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover from the defendant as for money received to his use. Remfry v. Butler, El. Bl. & El. 887 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1298, n. ; 6 W. R. 782—Ex. Ch.

A. mortgaged, with a proviso for repayment and a covenant for conveyance at the costs and charges of the mortgagor. Upon notice to repay the sum borrowed, the mortgagor's solicitor sent the solicitors for the mortgagee a draft reconveyance, which was approved by them ; but they refused to redeliver up the title deeds unless their bill of costs was paid. One of the charges in the bill was in respect of the reconveyance ; the others arose exclusively from the relation of the mortgagee and the defendants, as client and solicitor. In an action by A. to recover the money so paid :—Held, that the mortgagor might maintain this action against the defendants for money extorted under duress of his goods, and paid by him under protest to the defendants for their own benefit. Wakefield v. Newbon, 6 Q. B. 276 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 258 ; 8 Jur. 735.

The attorney for a mortgagee, who had advertised a sale of the mortgaged property, under a power reserved to him for nonpayment of interest, having extorted from the administratrix of the mortgagor money exceeding the sum due for principal, interest and costs, under a threat that he would proceed with the sale unless his demand were complied with :—Held, that the administratrix might recover it as money had and received. Close v. Phipps, 7 Man. & G. 586; 8 Scott (N.R.) 381.

Deeds of the plaintiff were placed by A. in the hands of the defendant, her attorney, and upon application A. declined to give any information about them unless upon payment of a sum of money which she claimed to be due to her from the person who had devised to the plaintiff's wife the property to which the deeds related, and ultimately referred the plaintiff to the defendant. He also refused to give them up ; and the plaintiff, in order to obtain them, paid the amount claimed, saying at the same time to the defendant, "You shall hear of this again" : —Held, that this was not a voluntary payment, and that the amount was recoverable as money had and received. Oates v. Hudson, 6 Ex. 346 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 284.

A testator gave to A. "all my interest and claim on household property in W., on which I have a mortgage of 1,500*l*." At the time of his death, debts were due in respect of repairs done in his lifetime to the mortgaged premises ; these were paid by the executrix :—Held, that she was not entitled to be reimbursed by A. the sums so paid. The executrix having compelled A. to pay her the interest, and the debts above mentioned, before she would give up the title deeds of the mortgaged premises to him :—Held, that (assuming the executrix to have assented to the bequest) A. was entitled to recover back the amount. Gibbon v. Gibbon, 13 C. B. 205 ; 22 L. J., C. P. 131 ; 17 Jur. 416.

A mortgagee having agreed to assign his security on payment of principal, interest, and costs, made a claim for costs to which he was not entitled. The assignee, on the mortgagee refusing to execute the assignment on any other terms, by the direction of the mortgagor paid the sum claimed under protest :—Held, that the mortgagor might recover the excess, not as money paid under duress in the strict legal sense of the term, but as a payment made involuntarily under undue pressure. Fraser v. Pendlebury, 31 L. J., C. P. 1 ; 10 W. R. 104.

11. Overcharges by Railway Companies.

Where a railway company exacted from a carrier more than they charged to other carriers, for the conveyance of goods for him on their line, in breach of their acts of parliament :—Held, that the sums thus obtained, being payments not made voluntarily, but in order to induce the company to do that which they were bound to do without requiring such payments, were recoverable back as money had and received. Parker v. G. W. Ry., 7 Man. & G. 253 ; 7 Scott (N.R.) 835 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 105 ; 8 Jur. 194. S. P., Baxendale v. Eastern Counties Ry., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 63 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 137. Ashmole v. Wainwright, 2 Q. B. 837 ; 2 G. & D. 217 ; 11 L. J., Q. B. 79 ; 6 Jur. 729. Piddington v. S. E. Ry., 5 C. B. (N.S.) 111 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 295 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 953.

The Bristol and Exeter Railway and Great Western Railway are continuous lines, but are worked by independent companies, and by their acts of parliament are bound to charge all persons under the same circumstances for the carriage of goods, &c. By the scale bills issued by each of the companies, certain sums were specified as the charges for the carriage of goods, where the goods were to be collected and delivered by the companies, and a smaller sum was specified as chargeable where the goods were to be collected and delivered by the parties themselves. A carrier sent certain goods, which he had undertaken to collect and deliver on his own account, by the Bristol and Exeter Railway Company, to be carried upon both lines of railway ; but he objected to the charges as being excessive, and paid the whole amount claimed under protest :—Held, first, that he was entitled to recover back the amount so paid in excess of what was a fair and reasonable charge, although he had not made any tender of any specific sum as a fair and reasonable charge. Parker v. Bristol and Exeter Ry., 6 Ex. 702 ; 6 Railw. Cas. 776.

Held, secondly, that the whole sum so paid in excess was recoverable from the Bristol and Exeter Railway Company, although they had received a portion of it as agents only of the Great Western Railway Company. Ib.

Money paid in excess, in disregard of the equality clauses of railway acts, can be recovered back in an action for money had and received. G. W. Ry. v. Sutton, 38 L. J., Ex. 177 ; L. R. 4 H. L. 226 ; 22 L. T. 43 ; 18 W. R. 92.

The Great Western Railway Company, before the 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii. came into operation, was obliged by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. xxvii. s. 24, to charge for carriage to all persons equally ; but they charged a carrier differently from, and more than, the public :—Held, that the overcharge was recoverable as money received to the carrier's use. Edwards v. G. W. Ry., 11 C. B. 588; 21 L. J., C. P. 72.

Quære, whether money overpaid in case of an overcharge by a railway company can be recovered back as money received to the use of the party paying. Finnie v. Glasgow & S. W. Ry., 2 Macq. H. L. 177.

12. On Payment of Illegal Fees.

The payment of illegal fees cannot generally be considered as voluntary, so as to preclude a plaintiff from recovering them back in an action for money had and received. Morgan v. Palmer, 4 D. & R. 283; 2 B. & C. 729; 2 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 145; 26 R. R. 537. S. P., Dew v. Parsons, 2 B. & Ald. 562; 1 Chit. 295; 21 R. R. 404.

The plaintiff applied to the defendant, a parish clerk, for liberty to search the register book of burials and baptisms. He told the defendant that he did not want certificates, but only to make extracts. The defendant said the charge would be the same whether he made extracts or had certificates. The plaintiff searched through four years, and made twenty-five extracts, for which the defendant charged him 3*s.* 6*d.* each, and he accordingly paid the defendant 4*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*:—Held, that the charge for extracts was illegal, since 6 & 7 Will. 4, c 86, s. 35, only authorised a charge for a search, and for a certified copy; and that the payment was not voluntary, so as to preclude the plaintiff from recovering back the excess; and that the defendant was the proper person to be sued. Steele v. Williams, 8 Ex. 625; 22 L. J., Ex. 225; 17 Jur. 464.

When money is paid under an illegal demand, colore officii, the payment can never be voluntary. Ib.

Upon the plaintiffs claiming, as joint tenants of four separate copyhold tenements, to be admitted by one admission, the steward refused to admit unless four admittance fines, four sets of steward's fees, and four stamps were paid. The plaintiffs then claimed to be admitted by two separate admissions — one to two tenements formerly Delabere's, the other to two tenements formerly Edwards's—but insisting on the right to a single admission. In order to avoid a forfeiture, one of the plaintiffs was admitted, on behalf of himself and his joint tenant, by four admissions. On the bill of fees being presented, the solicitor for the plaintiffs said, "I protest against them," but paid them, delivering a written protest, which extended only to a claim to be admitted by two admissions:—Held, that the steward having no right to a separate fee upon the admission of each joint tenant, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the excess as money paid under compulsion. Traherne v. Gardner, 5 El. & Bl. 913; 25 L. J., Q. B. 201; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 394.

13. For Money paid under Mistake of Facts or of Law.

Principles.]—Money paid by one, with full knowledge, or the means of such knowledge in his hands, of all the circumstances, cannot be recovered on account of such payment having been made under an ignorance of the law. Bilbie v. Lumley, 2 East, 469; 6 R. R. 479. S. P., Brisbane v. Dacres, 5 Taunt. 143; Dew v. Parsons, 2 B. & Ald. 562; 1 Chit. 295; 21 R. R. 404.

But money paid by a person under a forgetfulness of facts which were within his knowledge, may be recovered. Lucas v. Worswick, 1 M. & Rob. 293.

So, money paid under a mistake of facts, there being no laches on the part of the payer in not availing himself of the means within his power of knowing those facts, may be recovered. Milnes v. Duncan, 6 B. & C. 671; 9 D. & R. 731; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 239; 30 R. R. 498.

Money paid by mistake cannot be recovered back, if the party paying had the means of knowing all the facts, and no fraud has been practised upon him. Davis v. Watson, 2 N. & M. 109; 2 L. J., K. B. 175.

Money paid under a bonâ fide forgetfulness of facts, which disentitled the party to receive it, may be recovered. Kelly v. Solari, 9 M. & W. 54; 11 L. J., Ex. 10; 6 Jur. 107.

It is not sufficient to preclude a party from recovering money paid by him under a mistake of fact, that he had the means of knowledge of the fact; unless he paid it intentionally, not choosing to investigate the fact. Ib.

In such cases, it is a question for the jury to say whether the money was paid in bonâ fide ignorance or forgetfulness, or whether with a previous determination not to inquire into the facts, and to pay it under any circumstances. Ib.

Money paid under a mistake of law is not recoverable. Ib.

When a party pays money under a mistake of fact, he is entitled to recover it back, although he may at the time of the payment have had means of knowledge of which he has neglected to avail himself. Townsend v. Crowdy, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 477; 29 L. J., C. P. 300; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 71; 2 L. T. 537.

If execution is by mistake issued for a larger sum than is really due, the party aggrieved should apply to the court. Money had and received does not lie. Holdway v. Ray, 1 N. R. 273.

By Mistake.]—When money has been voluntarily paid under a mistake, the remedy used to be at law and not in equity. Lamb v. Cranfield, 43 L. J., Ch. 408.

The plaintiff, by mistake, paid to the defendants, who were owners of the tithes of a parish, tithe rent-charge in respect of lands not in his occupation. The plaintiff did not discover the mistake until the two years limited by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, for the recovery of a tithe rent-charge, had expired, and the defendants had lost their remedy for the arrears against the lands actually chargeable:—Held, that there was no duty cast on the plaintiff in relation to the defendants which made his delay in discovering the mistake laches on his part; and that he was entitled to recover back the amount paid as money paid under a mistake of fact. Durrant v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 50 L. J., Q. B. 30; 6 Q. B. D. 234; 44 L. T. 348; 29 W. R. 443; 45 J. P. 270.

A court of equity will not direct payments made under a mistaken construction of doubtful clause in a settlement to be refunded after many years of acquiescence by all parties, and after the death of one of the authors of the settlement, especially where subsequent family arrangements have proceeded on the footing of that construction. Clifton v. Cockburn, 3 Myl. & K. 76.

Where money, which there was no ground to claim in conscience, is paid under a mistake, the party may recover it back again. Bize v. Dickason, 1 Term Rep. 285.

Money having been paid by the plaintiff, in ignorance of the facts, he can recover it back although the defendant could not in every respect be placed in statu quo. Standish v. Ross, 3 Ex. 527; 19 L. J., Ex. 185.

The corporation of E. exacted harbour dues from the plaintiff in respect of exempted articles. The plaintiff paid in ignorance of the exemption:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the money so paid. Hooper v. Exeter Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 457.

Illustrations.]—A bill bearing several indorsements was dishonoured, but was taken up for the honour of one of the supposed indorsers by the plaintiff, who struck out the subsequent indorsements. The plaintiff having discovered that the signatures of the drawer, the acceptor, and the supposed indorser to the bill were forgeries, communicated the same to the defendant, and demanded the money back; notice of the dishonour was in time to have been sent to the prior indorsers by the same day's post:—Held, that the erasure of the indorsements did not deprive the defendant of his remedy against the prior indorsers, and that the plaintiff, having paid the money in mistake, was entitled to recover it from the defendant. Wilkinson v. Johnston, 5 D. & R. 403; 3 B. & C. 429; 3 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 58.

Where the captain of a king's ship brought home in her public treasure upon the public service, and treasure of individuals for his own emolument; and received freight for both, and paid over one-third of it, according to the usage theretofore established in the navy, to the admiral under whose command he sailed; discovering that the law did not compel captains to pay to admirals one-third of the freight, the captain brought an action to recover it from the admiral's executrix:—Held, that he could not recover back the public freight, because he had paid it with full knowledge of the facts, although in ignorance of the law, and because it was not against conscience for the executrix to retain it. Brisbane v. Dacres, 5 Taunt. 143; 14 R. R. 718.

Where the agents for the grantor and grantee of an annuity rendered an account to the latter, in which they gave him credit for instalments due from the former, stating at the same time that the money had not been received, and allowed the grantee to draw upon them for the amount; and the agents having, in about twelve months afterwards, become bankrupts, and neglected to apprise the grantee in the interval that the instalments still remained unpaid by the grantor, who had become insolvent:—Held, that the money so advanced to the grantee was not recoverable back by the assignees of the agents. Shaw v. Picton, 7 D. & R. 201; 4 B. & C. 715; 4 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 29; 28 R. R. 445.

So, army agents, who allowed an officer to draw for what they conceived were increased allowances due to him in the shape of pay (but which allowances were not in fact intended by government to be given to officers in that situation), and had sent in an account admitting the receipt of the full amount, were not allowed after a lapse of time, when they found out the mistake, to retain the surplus from the representatives of the officer. Skyring v. Greenwood, 6 D. & R. 401; 4 B. & C. 281; 1 Car. & P. 517; 28 R. R. 264.

The plaintiff paid to a dock company dock dues estimated by the plaintiff according to an erroneous scale of measurement promulgated by the commissioners of customs:—Held, that the excess could not be recovered back. Moss v. Mersey Dock and Harbour Board, 26 L. T. 425; 20 W. R. 700.

An executor, acting, as he believed, in accordance with the true construction of the testator's will, paid money to the plaintiff. Afterwards, the executor having died, his administrator was advised by counsel that the money had been wrongly paid to the plaintiff, and ought to have been paid to another legatee. An independent opinion of counsel obtained by the plaintiff took the same view as to the construction of the will, and, accordingly, in winding up the testator's estate, the administrator debited the plaintiff with the money which was supposed to have been wrongly received by her, and paid over that amount and the balance of the same fund, which had been retained in the executor's hands, to the other legatee. Two years later the plaintiff filed a bill against the administrator and the other legatee for repayment of the money, on the ground that it had been paid under a mistaken construction of the will:—Held, that the suit was, in fact, merely an action for money had and received, and could not be maintained. Rogers v. Ingham, 3 Ch. D. 351; 35 L. T. 677; 25 W. R. 338—C. A.

By an agreement between the outgoing tenant of a farm and the incoming tenant, the amount to be paid by the latter to the former was referred to two valuers, who made their valuation. A promissory note for the amount of the valuation (after deducting 2,000*l.* paid on account) was given by the plaintiff to the defendant; and the plaintiff entered into possession. On the occasion of his selling his interest in the farm to a third person, the plaintiff discovered that errors had been made in the former valuation, by including items that ought not by the custom of the country to have been valued to him, and items that did not exist. He nevertheless paid the promissory note at maturity without objection. Afterwards, without having given the defendant any information as to the nature of his complaint of the valuation, and without having made any demand, he brought an action for money had and received:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Freeman v. Jeffries, 38 L. J., Ex. 116; L. R. 4 Ex. 189; 20 L. T. 533.

The plaintiff was co-surety with K. in a bond given by B. to the guardians of a union, conditioned for the due accounting to them of moneys received by him as treasurer. At the time the bond was entered into B. was a member of a banking firm, into which the moneys of the union were afterwards paid and drawn out by the guardians by cheques in their names. The firm became bankrupt, and B. having ceased to be the treasurer, the guardians demanded of the plaintiff, as such surety, the balance due from B., the late treasurer. The plaintiff, in ignorance of the facts, paid the money:—Held, that the sureties were not liable on the bond, and that the plaintiff having paid the money in ignorance of the facts, was entitled to recover it. Mills v. Alderbury Union, 3 Ex. 590; 18 L. J., Ex. 252.

When a party to secure advances made to him assigned to his creditor his present and also his after-acquired property, and, the former being insufficient to pay the debt, the creditor sold the present and also the after-acquired property with the assent of the debtor, who probably thought that the after-acquired property passed by assignment:—Held, that the proceeds of the after-acquired property, which had been sold under a mistake as to the law but without fraud, could not be recovered back. Platt v. Bromage, 24 L. J., Ex. 63.

An executrix being entitled to 200*l.* lent by her testator in his lifetime, and secured to him by bond and an equitable mortgage, applied to C., the debtor, for payment. C. referred her to a bank which had purchased of him the mortgaged property subject to the charges thereon. The bank paid the 200*l.* It turned out that by a will prepared and attested by the testator, and made subsequently to that under which C. had claimed, but which had been suppressed by the family of C., C. had no title to the property so charged:—Held, that the bank could not recover back the money as having been paid under a mistake of facts. Aiken v. Short, 1 H. & N. 210; 25 L. J., Ex. 321; 4 W. R. 645.

The defendant supplied the plaintiff with goods to the amount of 71*l.*; the plaintiff authorised M. to pay the defendant that sum. M. paid the defendant 50*l.*, and applied the remaining 21*l.* to his own use. M. also owed the defendant 24*l.*; and the defendant drew on him a bill for 45*l.*, the amount of these two sums, which he accepted, but which was dishonoured when due, and M. subsequently became a bankrupt. The defendant applied to the plaintiff for payment of the amount of the bill, representing that it had been left unpaid on the plaintiff's account by M., and the plaintiff on such representation paid the 45*l.*, and took possession of the bill. In an action to recover back the balance of 24*l.*, as having been paid under a misrepresentation of the facts:—Held, that the plaintiff was not bound to prove that before action brought he tendered back the bill to the defendant. Pope v. Wray, 4 M. & W. 451.

In 1811 L., being possessed of premises under leases which would expire at Midsummer, 1854, granted to T. and E. an annuity of 222*l.* 4*s.* 5*d.* for three lives, to secure which he granted to each of them an underlease of the premises for forty-three years, if the lives, or the survivor of them, should so long endure. In 1827 the premises were assigned to the plaintiff for the residue of the terms granted to L., subject to the annuities, and to the underleases for securing the same. In 1825 T. and E. were let into possession of the premises, at the rent of 550*l.*, payable to them in equal moieties. T., the last survivor of the cestuis que vie, died in 1851, and from his death, down to the expiration of the leases granted to L., E., as their agent, applied for and received the rent from the plaintiff for them and the representative of E., and accounted for a moiety to each of them, deducting payments thereout in respect of ground rent, rates, taxes, insurance, repairs, and commission:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the sum so paid by him under the mistaken impression that the right to receive it still continued, deducting only the sums paid by the agent in respect to ground rent, rates, and taxes. Barber v. Brown, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 121; 26 L. J., C. P. 41; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 18; 5 W. R. 79.

On Settlement of Accounts.]—There being mutual accounts between A. and B., the latter met C., A.'s brother, to settle them. Two accounts were brought by C. The first contained various items of money received by B. for A. B. settled and signed this account. C. then produced another account between the parties respecting other items, which B. disputed, and refused to settle. No evidence was given of money had and received but the above:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover upon the count for money had and received. Lorymer v. Stephens, 1 C. M. & R. 62; 4 Tyr. 869; 3 L. J., Ex. 312.

A sum of money allowed in account by mistake on a settlement between the plaintiff and the defendant, when the defendant paid the balance after deduction of that sum, cannot be recovered, the sum allowed never having passed between the parties otherwise than by such allowance. Lee v. Merrett, 8 Q. B. 820; 15 L. J., Q. B. 289; 10 Jur. 916.

Against Agents on Payment over to Principal.]—Where a defendant received from his principal abroad a bar of silver, and took it to the plaintiff, who melted it, and sent a piece to an assayer to be assayed at the defendant's expense, and paid a price for the bar to the defendant, as for the number of ounces of silver which by the assay it was calculated to contain, which number was afterwards discovered to exceed the true number:—Held, that the plaintiff might, after having offered to return the bar, maintain an action against the defendant for the price thus paid to him under a mistake, although he had forwarded his account to his principal, and in it had placed the price received to the credit of his principal. Cox v. Prentice, 3 M. & S. 344; 16 R. R. 288. And see Gomery v. Bond, 3 M. & S. 378.

But when money has been paid to an agent under a mistake of fact, and the agent has either paid it over or settled his account with his principal, and is guilty of no fraud in the matter, he is not liable to refund the money. Holland v. Russell, 4 B. & S. 4; 32 L. J., Q. B. 297; 8 L. T. 468; 11 W. R. 757—Ex. Ch.

Certain bales of cotton were consigned by merchants at Madras to London for the account of their correspondents, the plaintiffs, who were merchants at Liverpool, under bills of lading having in the margin, pursuant to the course of business at Madras, a note of the measurement and the amount of freight. On the ship's arrival, the plaintiffs' brokers sent the cotton to a wharf with a copy of the bills of lading, another copy of the bills of lading being forwarded to the plaintiffs. According to the ordinary practice, the wharfinger, on receiving the cotton, measured it, and sent a note of the measurement to the defendants, who were the ship's brokers (one of them also being the owner). The defendants as brokers made out a freight-note, adopting the measurement from the wharfinger's note, which in consequence of the swelling of the bales on the voyage was considerably more than the Madras measurement in the margin of the bills of lading. The freight-note so made out was sent by the defendants to the plaintiffs' brokers, who, assuming it to be correct, paid the amount, and received credit for it in their account with their principals; and the defendants settled the ship's accounts upon the supposition that all was right. The plaintiffs, on balancing their accounts with the Madras house at the end of the following year, discovered for the first time that they had overpaid the defendants to the extent of 88*l.* 8*s.* 3*d.*, and brought an action to recover it back:—Held, that the money having been paid under a mistake of fact, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover it back from the owner of the ship, but not as against the two defendants as ship's brokers, who had settled accounts with the owner in the bonâ fide belief that the payment had been rightly made. Shand v. Grant, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 324; 9 L. T. 390.

A. bought cotton of B., both being cotton-brokers at Liverpool, and each acting for an undisclosed principal. Weight-lists of the cotton were in the usual course delivered to each party from the warehouse-keeper at the dock; but by a mistake made by a clerk of B. in adding up the figures, the quantity appeared to be 100 cwt. more than it really was, and A., in ignorance of the mistake, paid B. 509*l.* 15*s.* too much. The mistake was not discovered by either party until several months afterwards. In the meantime, B. had allowed the money so received by him to be settled in account between himself and his principals, to whom he had made advances; and at the close of the transactions between them there was a large balance owing by his principals to B.:—Held, that A. was entitled to recover back from B. the sum so overpaid to him, the case not falling within the rule by which an agent is relieved from responsibility where he has bonâ fide paid over money received by him on account of his principals. Newall v. Tomlinson, L. R. 6 C. P. 405; 25 L. T. 382.

14. For Money paid on Illegal Contracts.

An action will not lie to recover back money paid for doing an illegal act. Webb v. Bishop, Bull. N. P. 132.

But where A. receives money to the use of B., on an illegal agreement between B. and C., in an action by B. for money received, he cannot be allowed to set up the illegality of the contract as a defence. Tennant v. Elliott, 1 Bos. & P. 3; 4 R. R. 755.

If a party knowingly engages with another in an illegal transaction, the money advanced by him in such business is not recoverable: aliter, where a party has been ignorantly drawn in by the craft or imposition of such person. Drummond v. Deey, 1 Esp. 152.

Money paid or goods delivered for an illegal purpose may be recovered back before that purpose is carried out, notwithstanding that the party seeking to recover may be compelled to allege that his purpose in making such payment or delivery was illegal. If, however, the illegal purpose has been carried out, he cannot recover by alleging its illegality. Taylor v. Bowers, 46 L. J., Q. B. 39; 1 Q. B. D. 291; 34 L. T. 938; 24 W. R. 499—C. A.

Where money has actually been paid upon an immoral or illegal consideration, fully executed and carried out, it cannot be recovered by the person who paid it from the person to whom it was paid; but where money has been paid to a person in order to effect an illegal purpose with it, the person making the payment may recover the money back before the purpose is effected. Wilson v. Strugnell, 50 L. J., M. C. 145; 7 Q. B. D. 548; 45 L. T. 218; 14 Cox, C. C. 624; 45 J. P. 831.

Where a person is, upon conviction of a criminal offence, required to find a surety for his good behaviour, and by agreement with his surety deposits money with him, he cannot afterwards sue for the amount as money had and received. The illegal object is sufficiently complete where the deposit has been made and the security executed, and the principal cannot, by repudiating the transaction before the security is forfeited and the money applied as an indemnity, recover the money. Herman v. Jeuchner, 54 L. J., Q. B. 340; 15 Q. B. D. 561; 53 L. T. 94; 33 W. R. 606; 49 J. P. 502—C. A.

The defendants, acting as solicitors for a petitioning creditor, and with his authority, entered into an agreement with the plaintiff that in consideration of a payment to them of 40*l.* by him they waived their claim for costs, and undertook not to appear at the bankrupt's public examination and not to oppose his order of discharge. The money was paid to the defendants, and they did not appear at the public examination of the bankrupt. Before any application by the bankrupt for an order of discharge, the plaintiff demanded the return of the money paid, but the defendants refused to return it:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the money back, because the contract was an illegal contract, and, where there has been a partial carrying into effect of an illegal purpose in a substantial manner, and something still remains to be performed, it is impossible for money paid under that illegal contract to be recovered back. Kearley v. Thomson, 59 L. J., Q. B. 288; 24 Q. B. D. 742; 63 L. T. 150; 38 W. R. 614; 54 J. P. 804—C. A.

If A. receives money of B., to the use of C., it may be recovered by C., though the consideration on which B. paid it was illegal. Farmer v. Russel, 1 Bos. & P. 296.

The plaintiffs, a Frenchman and a Swiss, carrying on trade at Lisbon under the name of the defendant, a Portuguese, shipped a cargo thence for a port of France, which cargo being captured by a British cruiser, and libelled for condemnation in the court of admiralty, as French and enemy's property, was ordered to be restored to the defendant on his putting in and establishing, with the plaintiffs' privity and consent, a claim to it as his own property:—Held, that the plaintiffs were, by thus colluding with the defendant to withdraw from the admiralty the decision of the true question, by establishing a false fact, estopped from maintaining an action against the defendant for the proceeds, by showing the true fact, that the property was their own, and that the defendant was their agent. De Metton v. De Mello, 12 East, 234; 2 Camp. 420.

A testator having borrowed money on a respondentia contract prohibited by the laws of this country, his executors refunded the money to the lenders:—Held, that the executors could not maintain an action to recover back this money, notwithstanding the lenders could not have compelled them to pay it. Munt v. Stokes, 4 Term Rep. 561; 2 R. R. 459.

But where A., in consideration of 210*l.* paid by B., gave a bond for the payment of an annuity to the latter of 103 guineas, till the hop duties should amount to a certain sum: before this event had taken place, B. brought an action to recover back the 210*l.* of A.:—Held, that the action was maintainable. Tappenden v. Randall, 2 Bos. & P. 467; 5 R. R. 662.

Guardians of a poor law union indicted the plaintiff for disobeying an order of sessions for maintenance of a bastard. Before trial, he offered a compromise, and the clerk to the guardians, on their behalf, agreed with him for a sum on account of costs and maintenance, which he paid and the indictment was dropped. Afterwards the plaintiff discovered that the order of sessions was defective and void, and he brought an action against the clerk for money had and received:—Held, that if the compromise was illegal, the plaintiff being in pari delicto with the other parties offending, could not sue them for the money he had paid. Goodall v. Lowndes, 6 Q. B. 464; 9 Jur. 177.

Where the captain of a king's ship brought home in her public treasure upon the public service, and treasure of individuals for his own emolument; and received freight for both, and paid over one-third of it, according to the usage theretofore established in the navy, to the admiral under whose command he sailed. He afterwards discovered that the law did not compel captains to pay to admirals one-third of the freight, and brought an action to recover it from the admiral's executrix:—Held, that he could not recover back the private freight because the whole of that transaction was illegal. Brisbane v. Dacres, 5 Taunt. 143; 14 R. R. 718.

A person who has authorised the application of his money to an illegal purpose can recover it before it has been paid over for or applied to such purpose. Bone v. Ekless, 5 H. & N. 925; 29 L. J., Ex. 438.

E., being an owner of a ship or a vessel, in order to effect a sale of it to the Turkish Government, authorised B., his agent, to bribe the officials of that government. B. accordingly sold the ship for 6,500*l.*; 6,000*l.* to be paid to E. and 500*l.* to the officials, and received the whole sum of 6,500*l.* from the government. It appeared that the whole transaction was a fraud on the government. B. paid over to the officials 300*l.*, but did not pay over the remaining 200*l.*:—Held, that E. was entitled to recover the 200*l.* from B. Ib.

To an action for money had and received the defendant pleaded, that a race was about to be run, and that an illegal game called a lottery was set up by the defendant for subscribers of 1*l.* each; to be paid to him under regulations, in substance, that the subscriber whose name should be drawn out of a box next after the name of the horse, drawn from another box, which horse should be placed first in the race, should be entitled to receive from the defendant 100*l.* The plea alleged that the subscriptions were paid by the plaintiff and others to the defendant, and that the plaintiff, under the regulations, was entitled to the 100*l.*:—Held, that the plea disclosing a transaction within the prohibition of 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 17, and 42 Geo. 3, c. 119, was good in form, as setting up illegality of consideration by statute, and did not amount to the general issue. Allport v. Nutt, 1 C. B. 974; 3 D. & L. 233; 14 L. J., C. P. 272; 9 Jur. 900. S. P., Gatty v. Field, 9 Q. B. 431; 15 L. J., Q. B. 408; 10 Jur. 980.

15. When Paid or Received under a Deed.

An action will not lie to recover back a sum of money paid as a deposit on the purchase of an estate, when the instrument under which the deposit was made was under seal. English v. Blundell, 8 Car. & P. 332.

The defendant being indebted to the plaintiff in 150*l.*, and being employed by T. to perform works, for which he was receiving a percentage, wrote an order to T. to pay the plaintiff 150*l.* out of the first moneys due to the defendant. Afterwards, being indebted to B. in 997*l.*, he executed a deed, reciting the above acts, assigning to B. such sums as then were or should become due to him the defendant, from T., in trust—first, to pay the plaintiff; and, secondly, to pay the 997*l.* The defendant afterwards received 150*l.* from T., and the plaintiff sued him for money had and received:—Held, that the action lay for the 150*l.*, though no proof was given of T.'s assent to the order; and though, at the time of making the deed, there was not 150*l.* due from T. Pooley v. Goodwin, 4 A. & E. 94; 5 N. & M. 466; 1 H. & W. 567.

In an action for money had and received, if the defendant shews a deed of assignment of the money to himself, and a receipt for the consideration-money indorsed, it is a good discharge, though there is pregnant evidence of suspicion that the consideration is falsely recited, and that the money never was paid. Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141.

The relief on the ground of imposition is in equity. Ib.

If A. agrees to sell an estate to B. and is afterwards disabled from doing so, B. may recover back the money deposited in an action for money had and received although the contract be under seal. Greville v. Da Costa, Peake's Add. Cas. 113.

16. For Money Paid on Failure of Consideration.

A., a loan contractor, delivered to B. certain scrip receipts, stating that B. had paid him 10*l.* per cent. deposit in respect of a certain quantity of Neapolitan stock, and that on payment of the balance the bearer would be entitled to certificates for that amount of stock. B. transferred the receipts to C. for a valuable consideration; A., by advertisement, offered the holders of the receipts, upon certain conditions, an extension of time for payment of the balance due on them; requiring also that the receipts should be left at his office for the purpose of being marked, as holden under the new conditions. The receipts transferred by B. to C. were by him sent to A.'s office, when indorsed by A. with C.'s name. The latter having failed to comply with the new conditions, A. refused to deliver the certificates or return the deposit. C. claimed the return of the deposit as being retained by A. without consideration:—Held, that C. was not entitled to recover the same, because B. had full consideration for the deposit in the option which the scrip receipts gave him to become the proprietor of so much stock, by payment of the balance of the price, on the day named. Rothschild v. Hennings, 9 B. & C. 470; 4 M. & Ry. 349; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 230, overruling Hennings v. Rothschild, 4 Bing. 315; 12 Moore, 559.

A contract was made for new machinery for a ship to be paid for by instalments on certificates of the plaintiffs' surveyor. Two instalments were paid when the ship was lost at sea:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover back the amount of the instalments in an action for money had and received. Anglo-Egyptian Navigation Co. v. Rennie, 44 L. J., C. P. 130; L. R. 10 C. P. 271; 32 L. T. 467; 23 W. R. 626.

A stockbroker sold for the defendant four Guatemala bonds, and paid him the amount. The bonds, after they had been in the hands of the purchaser two days, were discovered not to be marketable; whereupon the broker, without communicating with the defendant, took them back, and reimbursed the purchaser. The defendant, on being applied to, wrote to say that he was only an agent as to part of the bonds, but that if payment had been made on his part, he would reimburse the broker. The defendant failed to prove that all the bonds were not his. It was proved that brokers on the stock exchange do business as principals in dealing in foreign stock:—Held, that an action for money had and received was maintainable against the defendant. Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 724; 4 Scott, 489; 3 Hodges, 126; 6 L. J., C. P. 201.

The plaintiff remitted to the defendant the price of some hay which he had sold for the defendant, before the money had been paid by the purchaser, and then sent the defendant's servant with the hay to the purchaser. The servant having been cheated of the hay before he arrived at the purchaser's:—Held, that the defendant was liable to refund the money remitted. Gingell v. Glascock, 8 Bing. 86; 1 M. & Scott, 125; 1 L. J., C. P. 41.

On the 14th August the defendants, share brokers at Liverpool, bought for the plaintiff, in their own names, thirty railway scrip shares, to be delivered on the next account-day, which was the 29th August, at the price, including their commission, of 148*l.* 10*s.* This sum the plaintiff transmitted to the defendants on the 26th August, and requested them to forward to him the scrip. On the 22nd August the railway company called in the scrip for registration, and before it was reissued, which was not till the middle of December, made a call of 5*l.* per share. The plaintiff was aware of the circumstances. The call was necessarily paid by the party selling to the defendants, and he presented the shares to them, with the additional demand for the call. The plaintiff repudiating the transaction, they declined to accept, and the shares were resold at a loss of 226*l.*, which the defendants paid to the original seller:—Held, that the 148*l.* 10*s.* was not money received in the first instance to the use of the plaintiff; and that it had not become money had and received to the use of the plaintiff, by a failure of consideration produced by misconduct of the defendants, inasmuch as it was the duty of the plaintiff to supply the funds for meeting the call. M'Ewen v. Woods, 11 Q. B. 13; 17 L. J., Q. B. 206; 12 Jur. 329.

The defendant having sold to T., through the agency of the plaintiffs, who were factors, some bark, which he agreed should be equal to the sample, drew a bill on them for the price of the bark, which they accepted. The bark not being equal to the sample, and being rejected by the buyer:—Held, that the consideration of the bill having failed, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount of it from the defendant. Hooper v. Tuffry, 1 Ex. 17; 16 L. J., Ex. 233.

The plaintiffs in London ordered from the defendant, at Singapore, first, 25 tons, and then 150 tons of gum, at 18*s.* per cwt. all charges included. The defendant sent invoices and bills of lading of these two quantities, as shipped at Singapore, which invoices and bills were handed to the plaintiffs in exchange for their acceptances for the respective amounts according to the invoices, and before the arrival of the goods the plaintiffs paid the amount of their acceptances. When the goods arrived, they were found to be four-and-a-half per cent. deficient in weight, part of which deficiency was attributable to evaporation during the voyage, and the rest to the fact that the weight of the baskets and leaves in which the gum was packed was included in the invoice weight. At Singapore, the gum in question is usually purchased by gross weight, including the baskets and leaves; but in the London market it is bought at the net weight, deducting packages:—Held, that there was a failure of consideration, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the excess above the price of the net weight of the gum at 18*s.* per cwt. from the defendant. Devaux v. Conolly, 8 C. B. 640; 19 L. J., C. P. 71.

The plaintiff was the holder of a licence to use a patented invention from the patentee. The patentee intending to apply for a prolongation of this patent, and also for a patent for a new invention of a similar description, the plaintiff agreed to give him 150*l.* for the free use for ever of the former patent, as well as for the free use for three years of the new patent which the patentee was about to take out. The money was paid to the patentee, but he died almost immediately afterwards, and in consequence of his death no application was ever made for a renewal of the former patent, or the grant of one for the new invention. The plaintiff brought an action against the patentee's executors to recover back the 150*l.*, on the ground that the consideration for it had totally failed:—Held, that he was entitled to maintain the action, on the ground that on the true construction of the contract between the parties he had bought the right to have an application for the patents made, not merely the right to have the benefit of it if it should happen to be made, and the consideration had, therefore, wholly failed. Knowles v. Bovill, 22 L. T. 70.

An English company, being possessed of a patent (taken out and valid in England, but not valid in Berlin) for a process of utilising sewage, agreed to sell to B. for 15,000*l.* the sole and exclusive right to use and exercise the patent process in Berlin. B. was really acting on behalf of H., a large shareholder and director in the English company, and his object was to form a company for using the process in Berlin and to induce persons to take shares in the Berlin company, under the belief that the company, having bought the right sold to B. by the English company, would be entitled to the exclusive use of the process in Berlin. The scheme was carried out in the following manner:—B. conveyed his interest to L. for 30,000*l.* L. then conveyed his interest so acquired for 30,000*l.* to M., a clerk in H.'s office, as trustee for the intended company at Berlin. The 30,000*l.* was, in fact, paid to H. and not to B. B. and H. and L. all knew, but the English company did not know, that by the law existing at Berlin no exclusive right to use the process there could be obtained. B. brought an action to recover the 15,000*l.* from the English company, on the ground that, as there was no exclusive right to use the process in Berlin, the consideration had failed:—Held, that no action could be maintained, first, because B. had in fact obtained that for which he had paid the 15,000*l.*, namely, an ostensible grant of the exclusive right in order to float the Berlin company; and, secondly, because B. had paid the money for the purpose of defrauding the shareholders of the intended company at Berlin. Begbie v. Phosphate Sewage Co., 1 Q. B. D. 679; 35 L. T. 350; 25 W. R. 85—C. A. Affirming, 44 L. J., Q. B. 233.

The plaintiff had employed P. as his agent to purchase goods, which P. bought in his own name, of W. & Co., and others, and invoiced in his own name to the plaintiff, taking from him his acceptances in payment. One of these acceptances, partly for goods which had been purchased of W. & Co., remained in the hands of P. until his bankruptcy, when it was taken possession of by the official assignee, and the amount received and carried to the credit of the estate. Before the bankruptcy W. & Co. had applied to the plaintiff for payment; and after the bankruptcy and after payment of the bill by the plaintiff they sued him and he settled their claim:—Held, that he was not entitled to recover the amount of the bill from the official assignee, as even assuming that he was liable to W. & Co. for the goods bought of them, there was only a partial failure of consideration, and the payment to them was voluntary, with full knowledge of the facts. Barber v. Pott, 4 H. & N. 759; 28 L. J., Ex. 381.

A. purchased from B. an ustamped bill of exchange, which purported on the face of it to be drawn at Sierra Leone. B. declined to endorse it, but allowed A. to have it to make inquiries as to the solvency of the parties. The acceptor became bankrupt, and on proof against his estate being tendered, it turned out that the bill was drawn in London and proof of it was rejected:—Held, that A. was entitled to maintain an action for the recovery of his purchase-money against B., on the ground that there had been a total failure of consideration. Gompertz v. Bartlett, 2 El. & Bl. 849; 2 C. L. R. 395; 23 L. J., Q. B. 65; 18 Jur. 266; 2 W. R. 43.

A broker having an order to buy fifty bales of cotton executed it by buying them along with 250 other bales in a single contract with one vendor:—Held, that money given to the broker to pay for the fifty bales, in the belief that the order had been duly executed, might be recovered back as paid on a total failure of consideration. Bostock v. Jardine, 3 H. & C. 700; 34 L. J., Ex. 142; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 586; 12 L. T. 577; 13 W. R. 970.

A. agreed to take a house at a certain rent, and to pay a premium on the completion of the lease. He entered into possession and paid part of the premium, but refused to take the lease on the ground of a difference as to the terms of the agreement:—Held, that he could not recover the part of the premium as there had not been a total failure of consideration. Colton v. Dorrell, 17 W. R. 672. See Wright v. Newton, 2 C. M. & R. 124.

A., who resided in New South Wales, being entitled to an annuity for his life, assigned it, in 1847, to trustees, to dispose of it for his benefit. The plaintiff entered into a correspondence with the trustees upon the subject of the purchase; and the terms of the purchase were not finally determined upon and settled until the 28th February, 1849. Upon the 6th of that month the annuitant died. The purchase-money was paid by the plaintiff in ignorance of the fact, and was ultimately received by the executrix of the deceased:—Held, that as at the time of the purchase of the annuity it had ceased to exist, the plaintiff was entitled to recover back the whole of the purchase-money from the executrix, on the ground that the money had been paid without consideration. Strickland v. Turner, 7 Ex. 208; 22 L. J., Ex. 115.

17. On Rescission of Special Contract.

To entitle a purchaser to maintain an action to recover back a deposit paid on a contract for the sale of goods, there must be either an agreement to rescind or circumstances upon which a special action for a breach of the contract would lie. Fitt v. Cassanet, 5 Scott (N.R.) 902; 4 Man. & G. 898; 12 L. J., C. P. 70; 6 Jur. 1125.

The plaintiff contracted to buy of the defendant shares in a company, the deed of settlement of which provided that the assent of the directors to a transfer should be necessary in order to complete the title of the purchaser. The plaintiff's broker made out the transfers, and procured the signature of the defendant to them, and the plaintiff paid the price contracted to be given for the shares. The directors, however, in consequence of some dispute with the defendant, refused to assent:—Held, first, that it was the duty of the defendant to procure the assent of the directors, and to do all that was necessary to invest the plaintiff with the property in the shares; and that, on his failure to do this, an action might be maintained against him by the plaintiff to recover the price he had paid for the shares; and, secondly, that the return of the transfer was collateral to the contract of purchase, and not a condition precedent to the right to recover the purchase-money. Leeman v. Lloyd, 7 Q. B. 27; 14 L. J., Q. B. 165; 9 Jur. 328.

The defendant being employed by the owner to sell a farm, agreed by a written memorandum to sell the farm to the plaintiff for 2,700*l.*, without naming the seller. The plaintiff paid the defendant 100*l.* deposit in part of the purchase-money, and two days after signed a contract for sale by S. (the owner) to himself, whereby he agreed to pay on its execution 100*l.* as a deposit, for which S. undertook to pay interest till the completion of the purchase. The contract was afterwards rescinded for want of title in S.; but the defendant, before he had notice of the rescission, paid S. 50*l.*, retaining the other 50*l.* under an agreement with S. to give him (the defendant) half of any amount he might get for the farm above 2,600*l.*, but the retention of the 50*l.* was without the consent of S.:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover in an action against the defendant for any part of the 100*l.* Hurley v. Baker, 16 M. & W. 26; 16 L. J., Ex. 273.

An action for money had and received lies when a payment has been made on a contract which is put an end to; but if it continues open, the plaintiff can only recover damages, and then he must state the special contract and the breach of it. Towers v. Barrett, 1 Term Rep. 133. S. P., Weston v. Downes, 1 Dougl. 23; Davis v. Street, 1 Car. & P. 18.

When some act is to be done by each party under a special agreement, and the defendant, by his neglect, prevents the plaintiff from carrying the contract into execution, the plaintiff may recover back any money paid under it. Giles v. Edwards, 7 Term Rep. 181; 4 R. R. 414.

On a deposit of money by one person with another as security upon his becoming bail for the depositor, the money to be returned when the liability as bail has ceased: the question for the jury is, whether the proceedings have in effect terminated, and the rescission of an order for the institution of proceedings, with the fact that none have in fact been since instituted, coupled with lapse of time, is evidence that the proceedings have terminated. Batson v. Trance, 3 F. & F. 320.

The purchaser of a mare at an auction was induced to buy her by the description that she had been hunted with certain hounds. The conditions of sale provided that horses not answering the description must be returned before a specified time, otherwise the purchaser must keep them with all faults. The purchaser paid the price, and was casually told that the description was untrue. Nevertheless, he removed the mare to his own stables, and while being so removed, she ran away and injured herself severely, without any negligence on the purchaser's part. The description was, in fact, untrue, and on that ground the purchaser returned her to the seller within the specified time :—Held, that since the purchaser had in removing her done no more than he was entitled to do under the contract, and since the injuries were not owing to any negligence on his part, he had not lost his right to rescind the contract, and could recover the price from the seller as money had and received. Head v. Tattersall, 41 L. J., Ex. 4 ; L. R. 7 Ex. 7 ; 25 L. T. 631 ; 20 W. R. 115.

18. On Abortive or Abandoned Undertakings.

An allottee of shares, who has paid his money for shares in a concern which never came into existence, or which is abandoned, may recover it back as money had and received to his use, unless shewn to have consented to or acquiesced in the application of the money. Ashpitel v. Sercombe, 6 Railw. Cas. 224 ; 5 Ex. 147 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 82—Ex. Ch. S. P., Kempson v. Saunders, 4 Bing. 5 ; 12 Moore, 44 ; 2 Car. & P. 366 ; 5 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 6.

An allottee of shares in a mine worked on the cost-book principle is entitled to recover back deposits paid by him on the shares, where the working of the mine is abandoned before all the shares mentioned in the prospectuses are subscribed for, or the amount of deposits on all the shares paid up, the deposits not being proved to have been spent upon liabilities incurred with the plaintiff's knowledge. Johnson v. Goslett, 18 C. B. 728 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 274 ; 4 W. R. 655. Affirmed, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 69 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 122 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 50 ; 6 W. R. 127—Ex. Ch.

Where deposits were paid, according to a rule of the company, to certain bankers, and the account with them was kept in the name of five directors :—Held, that other directors who had interfered in the management were liable along with those five. Ib.

The defendant, being one of the provisional directors of a projected railway company, issued with them circulars, stating that, "in the event of the act not being obtained, the directors undertake to return the whole of the deposits without deduction." The plaintiff applied in writing for shares. The directors, by the authority of the defendant, answered in writing, inclosing the circular, stating that shares were allotted to the plaintiff, that he must pay the deposit by a given day, and that, on his doing so, and presenting that letter, a receipt would be given him, which would be exchanged for scrip on his executing the parliamentary contract. He paid the deposits, and executed a deed, which was a deed between the shareholders and two trustees ; and in terms authorised the directors to expend the deposits for the purpose of obtaining an act. The circulars were sent by the defendant to induce the plaintiff to believe that if the deposits were paid and the deed executed, the deposits would be returned by the defendant and the other directors to the plaintiff, in the event of failure to obtain the act ; and the plaintiff was induced to pay the deposit on those terms. No act was obtained :—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the defendant agreed to return an amount equivalent to the deposits, and that it was not any objection to an action for money had and received, that by the agreement the specific money deposited might lawfully be spent, and an equivalent amount paid. Londesborough (Lord) v. Mowatt, 4 El. & Bl. 1 ; 2 C. L. R. 1181 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 38 ; 18 Jur. 1094 ; 2 W. R. 568.

19. For Money Paid on Failure of Title.

Rent paid by A. to B., claiming as devisee, the amount of which A. is afterwards compelled to pay to the heir, may be recovered by A. as money had and received to his use, B. setting up no title to the lands when the action is brought, or at the trial. Newsome v. Graham, 5 M. & Ry. 64 ; 10 B. & C. 234.

A defendant supposing himself the legal representative of a lessee for years, sold the term, and delivered the lease to the plaintiff, but without any assignment or formal conveyance, saying "the premises were his, and if anything happened he would see the then plaintiff righted" :—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action against him for money had and received, the rightful administrator of the tenant for years having ousted the plaintiff by ejectment. Cripps v. Reade, 6 Term Rep. 606 ; 3 R. R. 273.

A devised to B., C., D. and E., two parcels of land upon trust, to sell and divide the money amongst his brothers' and sisters' children : B., C., D. and E., the last being one of twenty-four persons entitled under the will to a share of the money, were proceeding to sell, when it was agreed by the three first trustees, and the twenty-three other persons entitled to the money, that E. should become purchaser of the two parcels of land, paying 300*l.* for one and 700*l.* for the other ; a conveyance was accordingly prepared and executed by B. and C. only, upon which E. took possession of the lands, and paid the purchase-money, which was divided among the several persons entitled under the will ; E., being afterwards evicted from the smaller parcel, in consequence of a defect in the title derived under the will, brought an action against one of the twenty-three persons to recover the share of the 300*l.* received by him, at the same time refusing to give up the parcel of land for which 700*l.* had been paid :—Held, that he was entitled to recover. Johnson v. Johnson, 3 Bos. & P. 162 ; 6 R. R. 736.

An action will lie to recover the expenses of the conveyances, and interest of the money procured to purchase an annuity, where the grantor has misrepresented the charges affecting the estate to be charged with the annuity. Richards v. Barton, 1 Esp. 267.

When a person, bonâ fide, believing he has a title, sells to another property to which in reality he has no title, and the conveyance is duly executed, the purchaser cannot afterwards on discovery of the defect recover back the price paid as money had and received. Clare v. Lamb,

A lease for three lives, or thirty-one years, contained a clause of forfeiture if any writ of execution should issue by virtue of which it should be liable to be taken in execution or sold. Under a fieri facias issued against the lessee, the sheriff sold and conveyed his interest under the lease, "if any," to the plaintiff, who, before he bid at the auction, knew it was a freehold lease, and was aware of the clause of forfeiture; the purchaser having got possession, and having been evicted:—Held, that he could not recover the purchase-money in an action against the sheriff for money had and received. Griffin v. Cuddell, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 488.

The defendant having bought a personal chattel at a sheriff's sale, the plaintiff afterwards offered the defendant, and the defendant accepted, 5*l.* for his bargain, and the plaintiff paid the advanced price to the defendant; afterwards, the chattel was claimed by a third party under a superior title, and the plaintiff was prevented from taking possession of it; both parties knew that the sale took place under an execution:—Held, that there was no implied warranty of title by the defendant, and that the plaintiff could not recover back the price paid by him, as upon a failure of consideration. Chapman v. Speller, 14 Q. B. 621; 19 L. J., Q. B. 239; 14 Jur. 652.

An agreement recited that the defendant had, as he was advised, legally put an end to a lease granted to A. of a farm by entering thereon by reason of the bankruptcy of A., pursuant to a power in the lease, and it was agreed that the defendant should grant a lease of the farm to the plaintiff at a yearly rent, payable quarterly. The lease was to commence on a day certain if the defendant could legally make it, or as soon as he was in a situation to do so, the rent to commence from the commencement of the term, or on possession being given, which should first happen. The plaintiff was to pay the defendant 500*l.* on possession being given to him, as a bonus for the lease to be granted. The plaintiff was admitted into possession, and occupied the farm for two years, and paid 250*l.* in respect of the bonus. The defendant was unable to grant the lease, the commission of bankruptcy of A. having been superseded. The plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for not granting the lease:—Held, that the recital in the agreement was primâ facie evidence against the defendant that he had power to grant the lease, but such recital purporting to be founded on the supposed bankruptcy of A., the evidence was answered by proof that the commission against him had been superseded, and that the granting of the lease, being the consideration for the bonus, the plaintiff was entitled to recover the 250*l.* as money paid on a consideration which had failed, although he had a beneficial occupation for two years. Wright v. Collis, 8 C. B. 150; 19 L. J., C. P. 60.

20. For Money obtained by Fraud or Wrong.

If money has been obtained by fraud, an action for money had and received lies to recover it back, to which it is no answer that the defendant is really entitled to the money, if his right to it depends upon a question which is not of common law jurisdiction. Crockford v. Winter, 1 Camp. 124.

So, if one recovers money malâ fide, by suit in an inferior court, an action for money had and received will lie to make him refund. Moses v. Macpherlan, 2 Burr. 1005; 1 W. Bl. 219.

If a bill is filed to compel the performance of a contract and payment of money, and the defendant puts in no answer, and is obliged to pay the money, and he afterwards discovers that he was deceived in the contract, he will not be barred from his action by having paid the money, if he comes immediately after discovering the fraud. Jendwine v. Slade, 2 Esp. 572; 5 R. R. 754.

Where a party, knowing a cheque to be post dated, and that the drawers were insolvent, presented it for payment to the bankers upon whom it was drawn, who, without knowledge of these facts, paid it, although they had no funds of the drawers in their hands at the time, but expected some in a few days:—Held, that they were entitled to recover it back. Martin v. Morgan, 3 Moore, 635; 1 Br. & B. 289; Gow, 122; 21 R. R. 603.

A. placed in the plaintiff's hands a fund, out of which the plaintiff was directed to satisfy certain acceptances. The defendant falsely represented to the plaintiff that he held one such acceptance, and thereby induced the plaintiff to pay him the amount of the alleged acceptance out of the fund:—Held, that the plaintiff might maintain an action for money had and received against the defendant. Holt v. Ely, 1 El. & Bl. 795; 17 Jur. 892.

An action will lie against an infant, to recover money which he has embezzled. Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. 172; Peake, 223; 5 R. R. 728.

If a person undertakes to procure for another an appointment, which he knows at the time he is unable to do, and receives in consideration a sum of money to be paid back in three months if he failed in his undertaking; the other person may immediately commence an action to recover it back, without waiting till the end of the three months. Hogan v. Shee, 2 Esp. 522.

A sale of goods effected by fraud does not change the property in them: therefore, where the defendant fraudulently induced the plaintiff to sell goods to S., who could not pay for them, and on a nominal re-sale of those goods by S., in which the defendant was concerned, obtained the money paid on such re-sale:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover from the defendant the value of the goods unpaid for by S. in an action for money had and received. Abbotts v. Barry, 5 Moore, 98; 2 Br. & B. 369.

If A. fraudulently procures a bill of exchange from B., and afterwards becomes bankrupt, and his assignees receive the money for the bill, B. may recover it from them. Harrison v. Walker, Peake, 111.

The plaintiff was, by means of a fraud, induced to draw and pay away two cheques on his banker. Six days after the date of the cheques the defendant, acting bonâ fide, gave cash for them to a third person (who had not given value for them), and presented the cheques, and obtained payment. In an action by the plaintiff to recover back this money:—Held, that the cheques could not be treated as bills overdue, and therefore taken by the defendant at his peril, but that the real question in the cause was whether the defendant acted bonâ fide and with due caution. Rothschild v. Corney, 9 B. & C. 388; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 270.

A. drew a bill on B. in the country, making it payable at the house of C. in London, without authority from C.; and B. accepted the bill in this form, without giving notice to C. or providing for the payment of the bill at C.'s house. A. negotiated the bill, which, upon becoming due, was presented by the holder to C., who paid it under a supposition that the bill so presented was another bill of a different amount and date, drawn by B. on and accepted by himself, and did not discover his mistake until a fortnight afterwards, when the other bill was presented. B. became bankrupt:—Held, that C. could not recover against A. for money had and received. Davis v. Watson, 2 N. & M. 709; 2 L. J., K. B. 175.

The plaintiffs' agent abroad in fraud of his principals drew bills and discounted them with the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover without some evidence of knowledge on the part of the defendant of a fraud committed by the agent. Davies v. Willats, 5 L. J., K. B. 94.

A., acting for B., a foreign principal, but in his own name, bought of C., in London, a cargo of wheat on board a vessel represented to be on its way from Galatz, payment to be made in cash on delivery of the shipping documents. Having paid the price at the request of his principal, A. drew upon him for the amount, and the bill was duly paid. B. afterwards came to London, saw the contract, and ratified all that A. had done. It turned out that the cargo had been fraudulently disposed of by the captain, prior to the date of the contract of sale by C. to A.:—Held, that B. could not maintain an action against A. to recover back the money paid, upon a failure of consideration, but that his only remedy, whether in his own name or in that of A., was against C., the seller. Risbourg v. Bruckner, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 812; 27 L. J., C. P. 90; 6 W. R. 215.

The plaintiff sold for the defendant a horse, and received the price. The purchaser afterwards rescinded the contract, on the ground of fraud, and was repaid the purchase-money. In an action by the plaintiff for the keep of the horse:—Held, that the defendant could not set off the price as money received for his use, it having ceased to be so when the contract was defeated by the purchaser, although the defendant was ignorant of the fraud. Murray v. Mann, 2 Ex. 538; 17 L. J., Ex. 256; 12 Jur. 634.

The plaintiff became a purchaser of shares in a mining company, which carried on business upon the cost-book principle, and he paid deposits upon the shares. The mine was worked, dividends were declared, and he received additional shares as an equivalent for such dividends as were due to him afterwards, and while he continued to hold the shares, the company was registered as a company with limited liability, and was subsequently wound up under an order in chancery. While the proceedings for winding-up were going on, the plaintiff discovered, as he alleged, that he had been deceived by the fraudulent representations of the defendants, who were three of the directors of the company and who by fraud had induced him to become a shareholder, and he therefore brought an action to recover back the money which he had paid on account of the shares which had been allotted to him, claiming to recover it as money received by the defendants for his use:—Held, that he could not maintain the action. Clarke v. Dickson, El. Bl. & El. 148; 27 L. J., Q. B. 223; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 832.

The plaintiff, being in embarrassed circumstances, offered his creditors a composition of 5*s.* in the pound. The defendant, a creditor, refused to accept it unless the plaintiff paid him 50*l.*, and gave him a bill of exchange for 108*l.* The other creditors would not accept the composition if the defendant did not. The plaintiff paid the defendant the 50*l.*, and gave him the bill of exchange, and the defendant executed the composition deed:—Held, that the plaintiff might recover back the 50*l.* in an action for money had and received. Atkinson v. Denby, 7 H. & N. 934; 31 L. J., Ex. 362; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1012; 7 L. T. 93; 10 W. R. 389—Ex. Ch.

21. On Payment, Sale, Discount or Exchange of Forged or Worthless Securities.

If a forged bill is accepted and paid by the drawee, he cannot recover the money back from the indorsee to whom he paid it. Price v. Neale, 3 Burr. 1354; 1 W. Bl. 390.

If the banker of a supposed acceptor of a forged bill discounts it for the agent of one of the indorsers, on the discovery of the forgery, he may recover back the sum paid on the bill, notwithstanding he was the banker of the supposed acceptor, and therefore might be taken to know his handwriting. Fuller v. Smith, 1 Car. & P. 197; R. & M. 49; 28 R. R. 772.

A Bank of England note, which had been materially altered in number and date, was paid to the plaintiffs' bank for value by the defendant, both parties believing the note to be good. The plaintiffs paid away the note, which was afterwards presented at the Bank of England, where the alteration was perceived and payment was refused. The note was returned to the plaintiffs as a bad one, and, after a fortnight spent in tracing the note to the defendant, the plaintiffs demanded payment of it from him, and on the 21st of July, 1882, sued him for the amount:—Held, that the plaintiffs having received from the defendant a worthless note, on which no one could be sued, were entitled to recover in the action for money had and received. Leeds & County Bank v. Walker, 52 L. J., Q. B. 590; 11 Q. B. D. 84; 47 J. P. 502.

A. deposited with a banking company 80*l.*, consisting partly of the notes of a country bank payable either at that bank or in London, and representing 65*l.* The company gave a receipt as follows: "Received of A. 80*l.*, for which we are accountable; 80*l.* at 3 per cent. interest, with fourteen days' notice." The company sent the notes, on the same day, to their agents in London, who presented them on the following day, when they were dishonoured. The agents sent them back by that evening's post to the company, who, on the following day, gave notice of dishonour to A., and on A.'s giving fourteen days' notice of withdrawal, tendered the notes back, which he refused. The company refused to pay the amount of the notes. The country bank, which was about five miles from the office of the company, had stopped payment from the close of the day on which the notes were deposited:—Held, that A. could not recover the amount of the notes from the company as money had and received. Timmins v. Gibbins, 18 Q. B. 722; 21 L. J., Q. B. 403.

A person who discounts a forged navy bill for another, who passed it to him without knowledge of the forgery, may recover the money as had and received to his own use, upon the failure of the consideration. Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488 ; 1 Marsh. 157 ; 15 R. R. 561.

So, a person who receives forged bank notes in payment. Ib.

So of a victualling bill, although the full apparent amount has been paid by the office on presentment. Bruce v. Bruce, 1 Marsh. 165 ; 5 Taunt. 495, n. ; 15 R. R. 566, n.

A bill of exchange with a forged acceptance, purporting to be payable at the house of A. & Co., bankers in London, with whom the supposed acceptor kept cash, was indorsed to B. for a valuable consideration : B. indorsed it to his agent in London, who presented it on the 23rd of April at the house of A. & Co. for payment ; A. & Co. paid it, and sent it on the 30th April to the supposed acceptor, who disavowed it : A. & Co. immediately gave notice of the forgery to B. and demanded repayment, which B. refused ; all parties were ignorant of the fraud : —Held, that A. & Co. by paying the bill, without ascertaining that the acceptance was genuine, were precluded from recovering the amount from B. Smith v. Mercer, 1 Marsh. 453 ; 6 Taunt. 76 ; 16 R. R. 576.

Fauntleroy, being one of three co-trustees, proprietors of stock and also one of three co-partners in a banking-house, forged the names of his co-trustees to a power of attorney, under which he sold the stock and paid the money into his banking-house. Neither of his co-trustees was privy to the transaction. Fauntleroy was executed for forgery. The surviving trustees sued the surviving partners for the money. On an issue from chancery, directing that no objection should be taken that Fauntleroy had been interested both as a trustee and a partner in the banking-house :—Held, that the money constituted a debt due from the bankers to the trustees. Stone v. Marsh, 9 D. & R. 643 ; 6 B. & C. 551 ; R. & M. 364 ; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 201 ; 30 R. R. 420.

A cheque being drawn upon the G. branch of a banking company by H., who kept an account at that branch, was presented by the defendant at the B. branch of the company, where it was cashed in the usual way across the counter, and the same day sent to G., but H. having no funds there, it was returned to the branch, who gave notice of dishonour to the defendant. H. had no account with the B. branch ; and the two branches were distinct in respect of the accounts kept, and issued cheques denoting the particular branch upon which they were drawn :—Held, that this did not amount to payment of the cheque by the B. branch as the bankers of H., or on his credit, but on the credit of the defendant, and that the cheque proving to be worthless, the bank was entitled to recover back the money paid. Woodland v. Fear, 7 El. & Bl. 519 ; 26 L. J., Q. B. 202 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 587 ; 5 W. R. 624.

A vendor of a bill of exchange, though no party to the bill, is responsible for its genuineness, and if it turns out that the name of one of the parties is forged and the bill becomes valueless, he is liable to the vendee, as upon a failure of consideration. Gurney v. Womersley, 4 El. & Bl. 139 ; 3 C. L. R. 3 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 46 ; 1 Jur (N.S.) 328.

22. For Foreign Money and Securities.

An action for money had and received will not lie to recover the value of foreign securities paid to the defendant, where it appears that he had no opportunity of converting such securities into British money. M'Lachlan v. Evans, 1 Y. & J. 380.

But a debt incurred in foreign coin is recoverable as for lawful money of Great Britain. Harington v. Macmorris, 1 Marsh. 33 ; 5 Taunt. 228.

Where money has been received by an agent in India, on account of goods sold by him for his principal in England, the latter on the agent's coming to England is not prevented from recovering in an action for money had and received, by reason of the proceeds having been received not in English but in foreign money. Ehrensperger v. Anderson, 3 Ex. 148 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 132.

23. By Owners of Lost Securities.

An action for money had and received will lie by the true owner of money or notes against a third person, into whose hands they have come malâ fide ; provided their identity can be traced and ascertained. Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 197, 334 ; 2 Dougl. 698, n.

An agent for the sale of goods was authorised to draw bills on the purchasers at the usual credit ; and by the terms of his employment he was to transmit them indorsed to his principals. He sold goods at a credit beyond the usual period, and drew for the amount ; but instead of transmitting the bills to his principals, he used them for his own purposes. They got into the hands of a bill-broker who discounted them :—Held, that proof of these facts alone did not afford sufficient evidence of fraud, connected with the bill-broker, to give the principals a primâ facie right to recover the amount of the bills from him as money had and received, and make it incumbent on him to shew that he gave full value for the bills. Davis v. Willis, 1 H. & W. 679.

To an action by an indorsee for value of a bill which had been lost, it is no defence that the bill was taken under circumstances which ought to have excited the suspicion of a prudent and cautious man. Crook v. Jadis, 3 N. & M. 257 ; 5 B. & Ad. 909 ; 3 L. J., K. B. 87.

Unless the circumstances are such that mala fides can be inferred. Backhouse v. Harrison, 3 N. & M. 188 ; 5 B. & Ad. 1098.

L. & Co., being the bankers of K., received on his account a cheque for 100*l.* from T., drawn by him upon the Bank of England, which cheque was lost by L. & Co. T., at the request of L. & Co., wrote to the Bank of England, requesting them not to pay the cheque, if presented. T. was afterwards requested by L. & Co. to give them another cheque for the same amount, upon receiving an indemnity for all loss which he might sustain from so doing, which he promised to do, and the indemnity was accordingly sent. T. subsequently wrote to L. & Co., to say that he could not conveniently send the cheque, but that he would take the earliest opportunity of handing them the amount. L. & Co. were called upon and obliged to pay the amount of the lost cheque to K :—Held, that an action by L. & Co. against T. for money paid, or on an account stated, could not be supported ; and that L. & Co.'s remedy was by an action of special assumpsit. Lubbock v. Tribe, 3 M. & W. 607 ; 1 H. & H. 160 ; 7 L. J., Ex. 158.

24. By Husbands.

A husband having received a sum of money, which had been bequeathed to his wife, gave it to her to take care of. The wife, without his knowledge, deposited it in a bank, in the name of her son by a former marriage, who was then an infant, and took from the bankers an accountable receipt in her son's name, bearing interest:—Held, that the bankers were liable to the husband for the amount, in an action for money had and received. Calland v. Loyd, 6 M. & W. 26; 9 L. J., Ex. 56.

Action for money had and received. Plea, by way of defence on equitable grounds, that the money had been bequeathed to the separate use of the plaintiff's late wife, who, during the coverture, assigned the money to the defendant, on trusts in which the plaintiff took no interest. Replication, that before this assignment the plaintiff's wife assigned the money to the plaintiff, and that the receipt by the defendant was as agent for the wife, in order to give a discharge to the executors:—Held, that the plea was good, admitting a receipt of the money primâ facie to the use of the husband, and avoiding it by shewing that in equity the receipt was on trusts in which the husband took no interest, thereby sufficiently negativing any marital right arising on her death. Sloper v. Cottrell, 6 El. & Bl. 497; 26 L. J., Q. B. 7; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1046.

Held, also, that the replication was good as shewing a prior equitable assignment for the husband's benefit. Ib.

25. Against Stakeholders, Trustees, Bailees and Others.

Stakeholders.]—An action will not lie between two parties who have by consent deposited money with a stakeholder, unless it is proved that the defendant refused to permit the plaintiff to receive the money. Robson v. Hall, Peake, 127.

In order to recover a share of a stake from a stakeholder, the plaintiff must shew his exact proportion of the sum deposited. Robson v. Andrade, 2 Chit. 263; 1 Stark. 372.

The particulars stated the cause of action to be for the amount of stakes deposited in the defendants' hands by the plaintiff and R., and won by the plaintiff of R.:—Held, that he could not recover the amount of his own stake, on proof that he had re-demanded it from the defendant before it was paid over. Davenport v. Davies, 1 M. & W. 570; 1 Tyr. & G. 931; 5 L. J., Ex. 214.

Where money in litigation between two parties has by mutual consent been paid over to a trustee in trust for the party entitled, it can only be sued for and recovered from the stakeholder by the party entitled to it, and not from the original party who was indebted, though he agreed to waive all objections to form. Ker v. Osborne, 9 East, 378.

By an agreement A. undertook to procure for B. a licence for an hotel, then in the occupation of B., or to forfeit a sum of money deposited with a stakeholder. Notice was given to both to attend before the magistrates on the licensing-day; but B. would not attend, and the licence was refused:—Held, that B. could not maintain an action for the deposit. Bryant v. Beattie, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 254; 5 Scott, 751; 1 Arn. 65; 7 L. J., C. P. 78; 2 Jur. 276.

A. took from the board of works a piece of ground at Westminster for the erection of galleries at the king's coronation, and underlet part of it to B. on the same terms. The rent was paid by B. to A., who deposited it in the hands of his bankers, with a condition, that if the coronation did not take place, and the rent was in consequence remitted by the board of works, the money was to be returned to B. The coronation took place; but, in consequence of the speculation being unprofitable to the parties, the crown remitted the whole rent to A., who refused to return the money paid him by B.:—Held, that B. might maintain an action for money had and received against the bankers as stakeholders. Truscott v. Marsh, 2 D. & R. 712; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 164.

In an action to recover sums deposited with the defendant, as the treasurer of a money club, it appeared that the money had been deposited, not by the plaintiff, but by his son, a minor, who was a member of the club, and who had made several payments himself, but had afterwards run away from his service, and the payments were then continued by his sister, from money furnished by her mother. There was no evidence that the defendant knew anything of the plaintiff:—Held, that the proper question for the jury was, whether there was any privity of contract between the defendant and the plaintiff; and that a direction, that if the money deposited was the money of the plaintiff he was entitled to recover, was wrong. Bluck v. Siddaway, 15 L. J., Q. B. 359.

A., a subscriber to a lottery for the Derby stakes established by the defendant, drew a ticket and sold it to the plaintiff. The agreement was, that the holders of the tickets having on them the names of the first and second horses should have prizes. The ticket which A. drew had on it the name of the second horse. The defendant had no notice of the transfer of the ticket to the plaintiff till after the race was run:—Held, that the plaintiff could not maintain an action for money had and received against the defendant. Jones v. Carter, 8 Q. B. 134; 15 L. J., Q. B. 96; 10 Jur. 33.

A dispute having arisen as to whether B. was entitled, in respect of 200 shares, to be registered as a shareholder in a company, it was arranged between him and the company that he should deposit 400*l.*, on account of such shares, with the secretary, which was to be repaid if B. failed to make out his claim. The following minute of the transaction was made by the defendant:—"26th April, 1838. E. C. R. Company. B. has deposited with me 400*l.*, on account of 200 shares, for which he claims to be registered, on condition that B. is to accept back the money so deposited, if he cannot substantiate, to the satisfaction of the board of directors, his claim to be registered for the same. (Signed) J. C. N., Secretary." The 400*l.* being paid to the secretary in a cheque, he paid it into his bankers, on his private account. He quitted the employment of the company in February, 1839. B. was never registered in the books as a shareholder:—Held, first, that an action for money had and received, and which was not commenced until more than two years after the money was so deposited, was rightly brought against the secretary; and, secondly, that B. was entitled to recover the 400*l.* without shewing that he ever attempted to substantiate his claim to be registered as a shareholder. Baird v. Robertson, 1 Man. & G. 981.

On a sale of premises by auction, the memorandum of agreement to purchase and sell was signed by the auctioneer as agent for the purchaser, and by the vendor's attorney subscribing himself as "agent for the said S. S., the vendor." The purchaser paid his deposit to the attorney, who gave a receipt, signed by himself, as "agent for S. S." The sale going off through the vendor's default, and the deposit money not being returned:—Held, that the purchaser could not bring an action for it against the attorney, for that he was not a stakeholder, but merely the vendor's agent, and payment of the deposit to him was payment to the vendor. Bamford v. Shuttleworth, 11 A. & E. 926.

A party who repudiates a wager before the result of it is ascertained is not precluded from recovering his deposit from the stakeholder by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, s. 18, which avoids contracts by way of gaming and wagering, and prohibits the maintenance of an action for the recovery of money won upon any wager, or deposited in the hands of a stakeholder to abide the event of any wager. Martin v. Hewson, 10 Ex. 737; 24 L. J., Ex. 174; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 214.

Agents in London of a foreign government, having money in their hands for the payment of a dividend on a loan, on the 22nd May advertised that the coupon due on the 1st June would be paid in full; but on the 1st June, being advised by the foreign government, they advertised that the payment would be made less 5 per cent. An action having been brought by a bondholder against the agents:—Held, that the announcement was not an admission of assets which gave the bondholders a right of action for money had and received. Henderson v. Rothschild, 56 L. J., Ch. 471; 56 L. T. 98; 35 W. R. 485—C. A. Affirming 33 Ch. D. 459.

Trustees.]—Where money is paid into the hands of a trustee for a specific purpose, it cannot be recovered back, until it is shewn that the trust is closed, and that a balance is left. Case v. Roberts, Holt, 500.

The defendant's son agreed to communicate to the plaintiff a secret for a dye, and the plaintiff agreed to pay him 25*l.* if a colour should be produced to the satisfaction of B., and the plaintiff handed over to the defendant a cheque for 25*l.*, to be paid to his son in that case; but if the colour was not good, the money was to be returned. On the 2nd September an experiment was commenced as to the dye, and on the 3rd, before it was concluded, the defendant got the cheque cashed; on the 4th the experiment was finished, and the dye turned out a failure, and was disapproved of by B. The plaintiff demanded the money of the defendant, but without mentioning the decision of B.:—Held, that as the cheque had been treated throughout as money, the defendant had not committed any breach of his duty by getting it cashed, so as to make him liable for money had and received. Wilkinson v. Godefroy, 3 P. & D. 411; 9 A. & E. 536.

By the deed of consecration of a chapel built by subscription, of which the plaintiff was one of the founders, the chapel-wardens for the time being were to receive the pew-rents, the surplus of which, after payment of certain expenses, was to go towards the repayment of the expense of building the chapel. S. and G., the chapel-wardens for 1838, at the close of their year of office, had in their hands a surplus, payable to the plaintiff as one of the founders. The plaintiff and the defendant were the succeeding chapel-wardens. G. handed over the money to the defendant together with his accounts, with a direction not to pay it over to the plaintiff, until the determination of an action against the plaintiff by another of the founders, to recover back money advanced towards the plaintiff's share of the expenses of building of the chapel:—Held, that the plaintiff could not sue the defendant for the amount before the determination of that cause. Sewell v. Raby, 6 M. & W. 22.

Administrator receiving a sum of money and, with the beneficiaries' consent, promising to pay it to the plaintiff for funeral expenses incurred by him, is liable in an action for money had and received. Meert v. Moessard, 1 M. & P. 8; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 3.

Where money has been received by A. upon trust to make payments of an unascertained amount, and to pay the surplus to B., B. cannot sue A. for money had and received while the trusts remain open. Edwards v. Bates, 7 Man. & G. 590; 2 D. & L. 299; 8 Scott (N.R.) 406; 13 L. J., C. P. 156; 8 Jur. 539.

D. was appointed by deed by the plaintiff, the mortgagor of an estate, and P., the mortgagee, the receiver of the rents of the estate; and by the terms of the deed he was, after allowing for taxes and repairs, to hold all the remaining rents in trust for certain purposes: viz. first, to pay taxes; secondly, the costs of collection; thirdly, a commission; fourthly, premiums on a policy of insurance; and lastly, to apply the surplus in or towards satisfaction, on the 6th January and 6th July in each year, of the accruing interest on the principal money secured, and to pay the ultimate surplus, if any, to the plaintiff, with a proviso, that if, on the 6th January or 6th July, he should have rents and profits in hand, it should be lawful for him to retain the whole or part for the purpose of paying the premiums in that year on the policy of insurance. D. did not execute the deed:—Held, that D. was not bound by the terms of this deed to pay the surplus existing on each 6th January and 6th July to the plaintiff; and, therefore, that although he had a balance in his hands on either of those days after payment of the half-yearly interest, he was not liable, the trust still continuing, to be sued by the plaintiff for money had and received. Bartlett v. Dimond, 14 M. & W. 49; 14 L. J., Ex. 372.

Stock was bequeathed in trust to pay H., a married woman, the accruing dividends for her sole use, her receipts to be the only good discharges to the trustees. The trustees received a dividend, and informed H. that the sum was lodged with their agents, and would be paid to her on her signing a receipt, and on execution by her and her husband of a deed prepared under an order of the court of chancery relating to the trust affairs. H. and her husband did not give the receipt or sign the deed, and, the dividend not being paid, they brought an action for money had and received:—Held, that the deposit with the agents, and notice to H., were not such an appropriation and admission of a balance as made the amount demandable from the trustees without giving H.'s receipt, and that the refusal to give such receipt justified them in withholding the dividend, though they had also demanded, as a condition of payment, execution of the deed, which they had no right so to enforce. Bond v. Nurse, 10 Q. B. 244; 16 L. J., Q. B. 196; 11 Jur. 655.

A paper as follows: "I hold of M. T. 37*l.* to put into a savings bank for her," signed and dated, is evidence of a legal debt of 37*l.* from the party signing to M. T., the money not having been put into a savings bank, but partly paid to the use of M. T., and does not shew a mere trust: and M. T. may recover, though parol evidence is given that the party signing received the money to be applied, at his direction, to the use of M. T. Remar v. Hayward, 2 A. & E. 666; 4 L. J., K. B. 64.

Bailees.]—An action for money had and received does not lie against the bailee of a bill of exchange not due at the time of action brought, which he has wrongfully deposited with his own bankers, although he has obtained money upon the joint credit of that and other bills. Atkins v. Owen, 6 N. & M. 309; 4 Ad. & E. 819; 6 L. J., K. B. 267. See Palmer v. Jarmain, 2 M. & W. 282.

A sum of money was handed by the plaintiff to the defendant to carry to a particular place, and there to pay to a certain person for the plaintiff. The defendant took the money, but in answer to the inquiries of the plaintiff on the subject, said that he had lost it:—Held, that an action for money had and received was maintainable on proof of these facts merely; though it was objected that the proper form of action was a special action for the negligence. Parry v. Roberts, 5 N. & M. 669; 3 A. & E. 118; 1 H. & W. 242; 4 L. J., K. B. 189.

Agents.]—A person who has received money as agent is bound not only to account for the same, but also to pay it over to his principal when requested so to do; and, in an action for money had and received, is chargeable with interest on the amount so received from the date of the refusal to pay it over. Pearse v. Green (1 Jac. & W. 135) followed. Harsant v. Blaine, 56 L. J., Q. B. 511—C. A.

The brokers to a ship charged their employers certain sums of money for work done to their ship under the head of "stevedore." The labour of a stovedore was performed by a man whom they employed, and to whom they paid several sums of money, but far less in amount than their own charges; the shipowners were aware that the brokers charged them more than they paid the workmen, but made no objection, on account of their zeal and diligence:—Held, that one of the workmen under such circumstances could not maintain an action for the larger sums received by the brokers, as money received to his use. Wilson v. Cohen, 2 Car. & P. 363.

The plaintiff authorised the defendant, as his broker, to negotiate for the purchase of a particular ship on the basis of an offer of 9,000*l.*, but eventually the ship was purchased through the defendant for 9,250*l.* Prior to the sale, an arrangement had been made between the vendor and a broker, S., that if S. could sell the ship for more than 8,500*l.* he might retain to himself the excess; and it was arranged between S. and the defendant, without the knowledge or sanction of the plaintiff, that the defendant should receive from S. a portion of such excess; and accordingly the defendant received 225*l.*, part of the excess over 8,500*l.* On discovering this, the plaintiff brought an action for money had and received for the 225*l.* In addition to the above facts, the jury found that the defendant was the agent of the plaintiff to purchase the ship as cheaply as she could be got, and that the plaintiff could have got her cheaper but for the arrangement between the vendor and S.:—Held, that the action would lie. Morison v. Thompson, 43 L. J., Q. B. 215; L. R. 9 Q. B. 480; 30 L. T. 869; 22 W. R. 859.

Three shipbrokers agreed in writing with a shipowner to freight his vessel at a certain commission, dividing profits of commission. One of the brokers alone paid and received money on account of the ship; and delivered to the owners an account, charging a liquidated sum for commission. The owner acquiesced in the accuracy of the account, but objected to the charge for commission, but which the broker retained in his hands. There was no adjustment of account between the brokers:—Held, that an action for money had and received would not lie by the two brokers against the third for their share of the commission. Borill v. Hammond, 9 D. & R. 186; 6 B. & C. 149; 5 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 145.

Where agents in England effected a policy of insurance for a correspondent abroad, on which a loss happened, and he drew a bill upon them, which was presented for acceptance by an indorsee, but they said they could not accept it, having no funds in hand, but that on a settlement taking place with the underwriters it should be paid:—Held, that after they had received a sum from the underwriters less than the amount of the bill, it might be recovered from them by the indorsee as money received to his use. Langston v. Corney, 4 Camp. 176.

The plaintiff in Calcutta wrote to his agent in England, to transmit to him a sum of money through the defendants' house, to be placed to his credit there. His agent shewed his instructions to the defendants, and paid them the money, who placed it in their books to the credit of their correspondents in Calcutta, and sent them a letter of advice to account for it to the plaintiff. Before this letter reached Calcutta their correspondence failed, but the defendants had, between the date of the letter and the failure, accepted bills, drawn by their correspondents before the receipt of such letter, to an amount exceeding the money paid in by the plaintiff:—Held, that the money could not be recovered from the defendants, for that they had done all they were instructed or were bound to do, and the situation in which they stood towards their correspondents had been thereby altered. M'Carthy v. Colvin, 1 P. & D. 429; 9 A. & E. 607; 8 L. J., Q. B. 158.

R., possessed of a licensed house, mortgaged the premises, together with the licence. After the licence had been suspended for irregular conduct on the part of R., the mortgagee sold the premises, under a power of sale contained in the deed. The defendant, the assignee of R., who had in the meantime become bankrupt, obtained a new licence in the name of the purchaser, for which the latter paid him 150*l.*:—Held, that this was not money had and received to the use of the plaintiffs. Manifold v. Morris, 7 Scott, 404; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 420; 2 Arn. 19; 8 L. J., C. P. 218; 3 Jur. 362.

Partners.]—A., B. and C., being separate traders, agreed to a joint speculation in importing corn. The agent for buying the corn abroad knew that the speculation was on the joint account of A., B. and C., and was to consign to A., drawing on him at two or three months. Corn was bought, and bills for the value drawn on and accepted by A., payable at a bankers' in London, the correspondents of the plaintiffs, who were bankers at Hull. A. had a banking account with the latter, who, being in the habit of paying his acceptances at the house of their London correspondents, paid the above among other acceptances, not then knowing of the joint speculation of A., B. and C. A., by way of part security to the plaintiffs, indorsed to them two accommodation bills drawn by himself on B.; these were unpaid, and A. and B. became bankrupts; C. had contributed his third of the purchase, but did not appear to have known from what source A. obtained his funds for that purpose:—Held, that the Hull bankers could not recover against C., as for money lent, or had and received, the amount of the bills drawn by A. on B., though they had given A. credit for them in his account, as partly liquidating their advances to pay for the corn bought for A., B. and C., at their joint profit or loss. Smith v. Craven, 1 Tyr. 308; 1 C. & J. 500; 9 L. J. (O.S.) Ex. 174.

A., a manufacturer, contracted with B., C. and D., who were partners, occupying a mill, the property of B., for the drying of his wool in a room in the mill. B., C. and D. effected an insurance on the mill, covering wool in the room. D. retired from the partnership, after which C. and D. had no interest in the room. B. and C. effected another insurance, also covering goods in the room. A dissolution of partnership took place between B. and C., which was not communicated to A., and C. afterwards effected an insurance in his sole name; and A.'s wool being damaged by fire, the insurance office paid the proceeds of the damaged wool to A., and the amount of loss on the wool, to the extent of the sum insured thereon, to C. Similar losses had been paid by the partnership to A., under the former policies:—Held, that as it was not shewn that B. had authorised the effecting of the then policy, or that the partnership was bound to insure, an action for money had and received could not be maintained by A. against B. and C. jointly. Armitage v. Winterbottom, 1 Man. & G. 130; 1 Scott (N.R.) 23.

And see PARTNERSHIP.

Sale by Sheriff.]—After the death of a sheriff and before the appointment of his successor, the under-sheriff sold goods under a writ delivered to him before the death of the sheriff. He did not pay over all the proceeds to the execution creditor, who more than six months after the death of the under-sheriff, and also more than six months after they had undertaken administration, sued his executors for money had and received and also for the tort:—Held, that the action for money had and received would lie; and that as that action did not require the same evidence to support it as the action for tort, it was not necessary to waive the tort. Gloucestershire Banking Co. v. Edwards, 56 L. J., Q. B. 514; 19 Q. B. D. 575; 35 W. R. 842.

Privity.]—The plaintiff, having married a lady possessed of funded property, to which she was entitled by the settlement on her marriage with a former husband, they employed the defendant to dispose of it, and out of the proceeds, first to pay off a mortgage of the former husband, and then to prepare a settlement of the residue, the interest to be secured for the wife for life, with remainder to the plaintiff for life if he survived her, with reversion to her children; the defendant and two other persons to be trustees:—Held, that although the defendant had paid over to the plaintiff certain sums out of the proceeds of the sale (after payment of the mortgage), the plaintiff could not sue him for the residue, as money had and received to his use. Mileham v. Eicke, 3 M. & W. 407; 1 H. & H. 102; 7 L. J., Ex. 151.

A seizure of spirits having been made on the plaintiff's premises by an excise officer, and a writ of appraisement issued, the commissioners afterwards, upon the application of the plaintiffs, restored the spirits to them at the appraised value, under an agreement that "they (the plaintiffs) gave up all claim to the seizure, and held themselves responsible for such proceedings for penalties as the board might think fit to institute." The appraised value was paid by the plaintiffs to the defendant, the receiver-general of excise. Penalties were subsequently recovered of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs then gave the defendant notice of action, and re-demanded the money:—Held, that the plaintiffs could not recover back the money so paid, inasmuch as it was paid on a binding agreement, made upon good consideration, whereby the plaintiffs agreed that it should not be recoverable back; and further, that they were precluded from recovering by the provisions of the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 98:—Held, also, that, at all events, the action could not be maintained against the defendant, inasmuch as the money was received by him only for the purpose of its being paid over pursuant to act of parliament, and it was not shewn that it remained in his hands till he had notice to retain it. Atlee v. Backhouse, 3 M. & W. 633; 1 H. & H. 135; 7 L. J., Ex. 234.

26. PROOF OF RECEIPT.

The defendant, captain of the plaintiff's ship, drew a bill on the plaintiff's agent for expenses incurred on account of the ship; and the plaintiff's agent having paid the bill, the plaintiff afterwards brought an action for money had and received to his use against the captain; and, at the trial, proved payment only of the bill by his agent, without giving evidence that any of the sum for which the bill was drawn had ever reached the defendant's hands:—Held, that the bill of exchange was not evidence of money had and received to the plaintiff's use. Scott v. Miller, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 811; 5 Scott, 11; 3 Hodges, 169; 6 L. J., C. P. 314.

By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 48, an overseer neglecting to sign the burgess list of a borough is liable to a penalty of 50*l.*, to be recovered by any person suing within three calendar months, and the money so recovered, after payment of the costs and expenses attending the recovery, is to be paid and apportioned, one moiety to the person suing, and the other moiety to the treasurer of the borough. The defendant recovered a penalty against an overseer with taxed costs, as between party and party, and received the amount:—Held, that in an action against the defendant by the corporation for money had and received, it was sufficient primâ facie for the corporation to prove the recovery and receipt of the penalty and the taxed costs; and that, in default of proof by the defendant of extra expenses, the corporation was entitled to a verdict for half the penalty. Harwich Corporation v. Gant, 5 El. & Bl. 182; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 708; 3 W. R. 493.

Upon the reading of the will of A. in the presence of her family, B., who had resided with her, produced a parcel containing bank notes, and stated that A. had given it to her about a fortnight before her death; upon which C., the brother of B., took up the notes, and said that he would keep them until B. required them, or, as stated by other witnesses, until the claims of the executors were disposed of:—Held, that in an action by B. against C. for money had and received, evidence of what had been stated by B. was admissible to shew her title to the notes. Hayslip v. Gymer, 3 N. & M. 479; 1 A. & E. 162; 3 L. J., K. B. 149.

Held, also, that such statement, coupled with evidence of possession, of B.'s conduct at the time of the reading of the will, of her having told her sister some days before the death of A. of the gift having been made to her, and of the circumstance of other money of A.'s being untouched, although B. had had opportunities of possessing herself dishonestly of the notes, was sufficient evidence to go to the jury, upon a question raised whether B. was justly entitled to the notes. Ib.

The executor of B., the survivor of A. and B., had, by instituting legal process, obtained payment of a promissory note, purporting to be payable to A. and B. The administrator of A. brought an action for money had and received, and adduced evidence to shew that the note had been made payable to A. and had been altered so as to make it payable to A. and B.:—Held, that there was no evidence to go to the jury in support of the count for money had and received to the use of the administrator, because, assuming his case to be correct, the money was not received in discharge of the genuine note which belonged to him. Vaughan v. Matthews, 13 Q. B. 187; 18 L. J., Q. B. 191; 13 Jur. 470.

Where a party sued for money had and received, rested his defence on his having obtained the money bonâ fide, in satisfaction of an equitable claim, and the plaintiff at the trial merely endeavoured to impeach the fairness of the receipt, and the claim generally, and the jury found for the defendant; the court refused to entertain a motion for a new trial, made on the ground that, admitting the fairness of the transaction, the defendant appeared, upon the plaintiff's case at the trial, to be not entitled to retain more than a part. Moore v. Eddowes, 2 A. & E. 133.

Where an action was brought in the name of A. against B. on a bill of exchange, but it appeared that C., the drawer of the bill, was the real plaintiff, and that A. only lent his name, because C. was unwilling that his should appear, and that A. gave no instructions to, and had no communication with, the attorney; and the attorney received a sum of money from B., on the settlement of that action:—Held, in an action by A. against the attorney to recover such sum, the jury having found that it was received for C. and not for A., that the plaintiff could not recover. Clark v. Dignam, 3 M. & W. 478; 1 H. & H. 166; 7 L. J., Ex. 195; 2 Jur. 419.

An action for money received for the use of a plaintiff cannot be maintained unless there has been an actual receipt of money by the defendant, or something equivalent to it, or unless the defendant is estopped by representations made to the plaintiff from denying the receipt. Prince v. Oriental Bank Corporation, 47 L. J., P. C. 42: 3 App. Cas. 325; 38 L. T. 41; 26 W. R. 543.

IV. ACCOUNT STATED.

1. What Amounts to.

A plaintiff cannot recover on an account stated, without shewing some item, to a specific amount, agreed upon as due, though a single item would be sufficient. Lane v. Hill, 18 Q. B. 252; 21 L. J., Q. B. 318; 16 Jur. 496. S. P., Highmore v. Primrose, 5 M. & S. 65; Kirton v. Wood, 1 M. & Rob. 253.

In order to support an account stated, there must be an admission of a debt due. Lemere v. Elliott, 6 H. & N. 656; 30 L. J., Ex. 350; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1206; 4 L. T. 304.

Therefore where a defendant verbally agreed to purchase of the plaintiff the lease and goodwill of his premises, and on being asked for a deposit, gave an I O U for 25*l.*, but afterwards refused to complete the purchase:—Held, that the I O U was evidence of an account stated. Ib.

There must be an acknowledgment of a subsisting debt. Tucker v. Barrow, 1 M. & Ry. 518; 7 B. & C. 623; M. & M. 139; 3 Car. & P. 85, 89; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 121. S. P., Burgh v. Legg, 5 M. & W. 418; 7 D. P. C. 814; 8 L. J., Ex. 258.

The plaintiff demanded 40*l.* upon an agreement by the defendant, an incoming tenant, to pay for growing crops; he offered to pay 17*l.*:—Held, no evidence to support an account stated. Wayman v. Hilliard, 7 Bing. 101; 4 M. & P. 729; 9 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 30.

Whether a conversation between the defendant and a witness is sufficient to entitle a plaintiff to recover on an account stated, is a question of law and not of fact. Bishop v. Chambre, 3 Car. & P. 55; M. & M. 116.

Where A. was shewn an account, and he objected to one of the items, but made no remark with respect to the rest:—Held, evidence of an account stated by him of the items of the account to which no objection was made. Chisman v. Court, 2 Man. & G. 317; 2 Scott (N.R.) 569; 10 L. J., C. P. 124.

An offer to pay a sum less than the sum claimed, if not accepted, is no evidence against a defendant for the larger sum on an account stated. Atkinson v. Woodhall, 1 H. & C. 170; 31 L. J., M. C. 174; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 720; 6 L. T. 361; 10 W. R. 671.

A landlord being in possession of premises lately held by his insolvent tenant, in which were fixtures belonging to the latter, agreed to give up possession on his assignees paying 7*l.* for the rent due. They entered and sold the fixtures, but no occupation by them was proved:—Held, that the 7*l.* could not be recovered on an account stated, the agreement to pay that sum not being bottomed on any previous transaction between the parties. Clarke v. Webb, 1 C. M. & R. 29; 2 D. P. C. 671; 4 Tyr. 673; 3 L. J., Ex. 300.

In an action by indorsee against indorser evidence of an acknowledgment of an existing debt and of a promise to pay by the defendant is admissible, and sufficient to support an account stated. Wagstaffe v. Boardman, 9 D. & R. 248; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 139.

An admission by a defendant, that so much was agreed to be paid to the plaintiff for the sale of standing trees, made after the trees had been felled and taken away by the defendant, will support an account stated, though not for goods sold and delivered. Knowles v. Michel, 13 East, 249. S. P., Pinchon v. Chilcott, 3 Car. & P. 236.

In an action for goods sold, and on an account stated, to recover the value of growing poles purchased from the plaintiff by the defendant, and afterwards carried away by him; it appeared that, at the time of the bargain, some memoranda in writing had been made, but which were neither stamped nor signed by the parties; and that the defendant, after the poles were carried away, admitted that a balance was due to the plaintiff, who, under these circumstances, was nonsuited:—Held, that such nonsuit was proper, as it was not proved that the defendant had admitted a precise and definite sum to be due to the plaintiff; and, therefore, that he could not recover on the account stated, without reference to the memoranda, which were not admissible. Teall v. Auty, 4 Moore, 542; 2 Br. & B. 99; 22 R. R. 656.

A qualified acknowledgment of a sum due to the plaintiff will not entitle him to recover on an account stated. Evans v. Verity, R. & M. 230.

An acceptor of a bill of exchange, on application to him for payment, answered that the bill had been altered as to the acceptance, by being made payable at a particular place; that he never made it payable there, nor elsewhere than at his own house; and that he should take such steps as the law would authorise on the subject; that he had been prepared for payment, and the party might have had the money by calling at his house:—Held, that this was no acknowledgment of a subsisting debt. Calvert v. Baker, 4 M. & W. 417; 1 H. & H. 404; 7 D. P. C. 17; 8 L. J., Ex. 40; 2 Jur. 1020.

The defendant agreed to buy a piece of land, and to pay the purchase-money on the 1st January, 1845, and the plaintiff agreed, upon payment of the purchase-money, to convey the land to the defendant. The plaintiff, in support of an account stated, put in a document, dated the 19th January, 1849, in these terms: "I acknowledge the above account to be correct, the amount owing by me as cash the 12th January, 1849, being 1,053*l.* 7*s.* 1*d.*" Signed by the defendant. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant became bound to pay the purchase-money on the 1st of January without a conveyance, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover upon the account stated. Yates v. Gardiner, 20 L. J., Ex. 327.

It is a good plea that the account was stated solely of and concerning charges for work done as an attorney, and that no bill of costs was delivered. Scadding v. Eyles, 9 Q. B. 858; 15 L. J., Q. B. 364.

In an action by an attorney for business for which no signed bills have been delivered, an admission by the defendant, in an examination before the commissioners under a commission of bankruptcy since superseded, that the sum claimed was due, is not sufficient evidence of an account stated. Eicke v. Nokes, 4 M. & Scott, 585; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 69; 3 L. J., C. P. 256; 1 M. & Rob. 359.

A member of a banking company wrote to the manager of it, respecting a mistake which had been made, in not debiting his account and crediting the bank for the payment of the several calls due from him, and added, "Please debit me with the amount of the calls due on my 200 shares. I think it will be 500*l.*, the second call, on the first hundred shares, and 1,000*l.* on the two calls on the second hundred shares; and advise me in a private letter. Your bank shall be credited here upon that date." To this letter no answer was sent:—Held, not sufficient evidence of an account stated. Hughes v. Thorpe, 5 M. & W. 656; 9 L. J., Ex. 109. And see Newhall v. Holt, 6 M. & W. 662; 9 L. J., Ex. 293.

2. Where a Deed Exists or has been Executed.

Where money is secured by a deed, and a balance is struck for the purpose of ascertaining how much remains due thereon, and the obligor admits the correctness of the account, and promises to pay it, an action on an account stated will not lie, but the action must be brought on the deed. Middleditch v. Ellis, 2 Ex. 523.

In an action for dividends sold and assigned it appeared that the plaintiff, being entitled to the dividends on bank stock, agreed to sell them to the defendant for 175*l.* After the bargain was made, it was found that the stock was standing in the name of the accountant-general, and that it required an order of the court to enable the defendant to receive the dividends. It was then agreed that the deed of transfer should be executed, and the question as to the costs of obtaining the order should be referred to two solicitors. The deed was accordingly executed, and 125*l.* paid by the defendant to the plaintiff at the time of its execution. The deed stated that the whole purchase-money was paid, and released it, but in pursuance of a previous arrangement the defendant retained 50*l.* to abide the event of the reference. The plaintiff's evidence consisted of a paper signed by the defendant, in which credit was given for 125*l.* and 50*l.* stated as remaining due. The defendant gave in evidence the deed of transfer, and also an agreement signed by the parties at the time of signing the paper, to refer the question as to the costs, and an arrangement whereby the 50*l.* was to abide the decision of that question:—Held, that the plaintiff could not recover the remainder of the purchase-money, inasmuch as there was no debt until the deed was executed, and upon its execution the debt was released, and that there was no evidence of an account stated. Baker v. Heard, 5 Ex. 959; 20 L. J., Ex. 444.

3. Consideration to Support.

A plaintiff was allowed to recover on a subsequent promise, under a count on an account stated, where the original agreement was void by the statute of frauds. Seago v. Deane, 4 Bing. 459; 1 M. & P. 227; 3 Car. & P. 170; 6 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 66; 29 R. R. 599.

An agreement respecting the transfer of an interest in land, required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing and signed, cannot be enforced by an action upon the agreement against the transferee for the stipulated consideration, notwithstanding that the transfer has been effected, and nothing remains to be done but to pay the consideration; but when, after the transfer, the transferee admits to the transferor that he owes him the stipulated price, the amount may be recovered as money due upon an account stated. Cocking v. Ward, 1 C. B. 858; 15 L. J., C. P. 245.

The defendant promised the plaintiff, orally, that if certain goods were supplied to A., a third party, he would see the plaintiff paid for them. The plaintiff accordingly supplied the goods, and A. left the country without having paid for them. The defendant subsequently orally acknowledged his liability to the plaintiff for the price of the goods:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover, upon the account stated founded upon the acknowledgment; for, although the admission of a liability to pay a liquidated sum is primâ facie evidence of an account stated, evidence had been properly given to shew the nature of the consideration upon which it was founded; and, it appearing that the sum acknowledged was not the subject of a direct liability from the defendant to the plaintiff, a verdict for the defendant had been rightly entered. Marshall v. Wilson, Ir. R. 2 C. L. 356; 14 W. R. 699—Ex. Ch.

Although an account stated may be founded upon a mere equitable liability, it must be a direct liability from the defendant to the plaintiff. Ib.

The circumstance that the statute of frauds bars a party from recovering upon a mere parol contract does not prevent the liability created thereby from forming a good ground for an action founded upon a subsequent statement of accounts between the parties. Ib.

A plaintiff put in evidence an account signed by the defendant, shewing a balance of 321*l.* 5*s.* to be due. The first item in this account was, "To principal and interest of old account with Dr. J. French, transferred as per letter, 146*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*" The letter was as follows:—"I hereby acknowledge to have received from J. M. French, Esq., 321*l.* 5*s.*, and should I die during my absence from England, or at any time before the said debt is liquidated, it is my desire that he should be paid out of whatever property I might possess at the time of my death, with legal interest on the same":—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the 146*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.*, the evidence shewing a mere promise, without consideration, to pay the debt of a third person. French v. French, 3 Scott (N.R.) 121; 2 Man. & G. 644; 10 L. J., C. P. 220; 5 Jur. 410.

A widow, being pressed to pay M. a debt owing from her deceased husband to the deceased husband of M., signed and gave to M.'s attorney the following note, addressed to the attorney: "I beg you will not proceed against me for M. for the 100*l.* and interest which I owe her; I will pay the interest amounting to 9*l.* due on the 23rd December, and the principal as soon as I am able":—Held, that this did not support a count for money found to be due from the widow to M. on an account stated between them. Petch v. Lyon, 9 Q. B. 147; 15 L. J., Q. B. 393.

A company having contracted a debt with the plaintiff, and the debt not being paid, he laid an attachment on money of theirs in the hands of bankers. While the attachment was in force, the defendant, representing himself to be a director of the company, called on the plaintiff's attorney for the purpose of making an arrangement about the debt, when it was agreed that the following letter should be written by the defendant to the plaintiff, which was accordingly done: "As director of the company, I have to request you will accept 50*l.* on account of your claim of 116*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.* against the company; and in consideration of your withdrawing the attachment against the funds of the company, I agree on the part of myself, and on behalf of the other directors, to pay you the balance of 66*l.* 19*s.* 7*d.*":—Held, that this letter, coupled with the facts, was evidence of an account stated, and that it was no answer to shew that the defendant was not a member of the company when the original debt was contracted. Barker v. Birt, 10 M. & W. 61; 11 L. J., Ex. 375; 6 Jur. 736.

A plaintiff signed a contract of sale of goods to the defendant; he afterwards sued the defendant for a sum which he contended was due to him out of the proceeds of the goods as a balance, after repaying the amount advanced by the defendant on their security. The plaintiff gave evidence that on the sum being demanded by his agent as the balance out of the proceeds, the defendant admitted the correctness of the amount, and said he would pay it over:—Held, that though the sale was absolute in law, there was evidence that it was accompanied by a trust that the defendant should account for the proceeds, and that the facts shewed a sufficient consideration for the account stated by the defendant to entitle the plaintiff to recover the balance, as money due upon an account stated. Howard v. Brownhill, 2 C. L. R. 125; 23 L. J., Q. B. 23.

A plaintiff, having a claim for work and materials against the defendant, to the amount of 67*l.*, was indebted to him in 111*l.* The defendant, as security for 100*l.*, held an equitable mortgage upon land of the plaintiff. The parties having met together, ascertained the value of the plaintiff's interest in the land to be 70*l.*; and it was verbally agreed that the defendant should have the plaintiff's equity of redemption, and that the plaintiff should be credited with 70*l.*, which being added to the 67*l.*, the debt of 111*l.* was to be wiped out, and a balance of 26*l.* left in his favour; but it was finally agreed that it should be taken at 22*l.* The plaintiff, before action, sold the land to the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the balance of 22*l.* as money due upon an account stated. Laycock v. Pickles, 4 B. & S. 497; 33 L. J., Q. B. 43; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 336; 9 L. T. 378; 12 W. R. 76.

A claim which is absolutely void by reason of an illegality or immorality in the consideration, cannot be relied on in support of a count upon an account stated. Kennedy v. Brown, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 677; 32 L. J., C. P. 137; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 119; 7 L. T. 626; 11 W. R. 284.

A promise by a client to pay money to a counsel for his advocacy, or for other services incidentally connected with litigation, whether made before, during, or after the litigation, has no binding effect, and therefore such a promise is not sufficient to support an account stated. Ib.

4. By or Against what Persons.

Agents.]—To connect B. with A., who had stated an account with the plaintiffs as a co-promisor, it was shewn that they were the trustees of an insolvent estate, in respect of which the debt arose; that A. and B. were at the counting-house of the plaintiffs on several occasions together; and at a meeting of the creditors of the insolvent estate the amount of the plaintiff's debt was stated by one of the defendants in the presence of the other, and that B. had admitted in a letter that there was a debt due to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the jury was justified in coming to the conclusion that A., in stating the account with the plaintiffs, had authority to bind B. Chisman v. Court, 2 Man. & G. 317; 2 Scott (N.R.) 569; 10 L. J., C. P. 124.

In order to constitute an account stated, the admission of liability must be made to the opposite party or his agent. Bates v. Townley, 2 Ex. 152; 19 L. J., Ex. 399; 12 Jur. 606.

The particulars in an action were, "to a beast sold and delivered, 13*l.* 10*s.*" The only evidence was that the plaintiff admitted, in a conversation with a third person, not shewn to be an agent of the plaintiff, that he owed the latter 13*l.* 10*s.* :—Held, that this was no evidence of an account stated, and that it was not evidence on the count for goods, as it was not shewn to be applicable to the particulars. Breckon v. Smith, 1 A. & E. 488.

The plaintiff's solicitor, who carried on business within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, wrote to the defendant demanding payment of 7*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* for goods sold and delivered to him by the plaintiff. Neither of the parties resided or carried on business, nor was the contract entered into, within the jurisdiction. The defendant, in a letter written to the plaintiff's solicitor—posted outside, but received within the jurisdiction—admitted that he owed 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* to the plaintiff. The plaintiff having brought an action in the mayor's court to recover 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* on an account stated, the defendant obtained a writ of prohibition :—Held, that the admission of the defendant and the bringing of the action amounted to an account stated; that the account was stated within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court, and that the plaintiff's solicitor was his agent to receive the admission and to state the account, and that therefore the mayor's court had jurisdiction to try the action. Grundy v. Townsend, 36 W. R. 531—C. A.

Executors.]—Among the papers of a testator were found two letters sealed and directed, "For G., my late servant." G. had been in his service as housekeeper for some years before his death, but had left him for some time previously to that event. These letters contained promissory notes for large sums of money; and one of the letters stated that the testator inclosed 200*l.* as a mark of respect, and the other letter stated that the inclosed was for her long and faithful services. G. applied to the executors for payment of the notes, and upon seeing the notes they paid her a portion, and promised to pay the remainder, but afterwards refused to do so :—Held, as an action was not maintainable by G. upon the notes, which were in effect a legacy, and an informal one, in not being duly attested as required by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26, and therefore void, that the action was not maintainable on an account stated, inasmuch as the promise of the executors was made on a supposed debt which in fact was not due. Gough v. Findon or Tindon, 7 Ex. 48; 21 L. J., Ex. 58.

In an action by the executors of the payee of a note, against the makers, the executors proved the note, with the following indorsement upon it, signed by the makers and one of the executors :—"Hull, 1838.—Memorandum, that the sum of 1*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.*, one quarter's interest, was paid on the within note. William Purdon, Thomas Purdon" :—Held, sufficient evidence of an account stated with the executors, without any proof of the time of the testator's death. Purdon v. Purdon, 10 M. & W. 562; 12 L. J., Ex. 3.

Husband and Wife.]—A count by husband and wife for money found to be due from the defendant to the wife before her marriage on accounts stated between them, and for money found to be due from the defendant to the plaintiffs since their intermarriage on accounts stated between them since the intermarriage, is a bad count, for not averring that the accounts were stated in respect of money due in right of the wife, or otherwise showing her interest in the money. Johnson v. Lucas, 1 El. & Bl. 659; 22 L. J., Q. B. 174; 17 Jur. 1066.

Semble, that a count by husband and wife on an account stated with them in respect of a debt averred to be due in right of the wife, or for which she had been the meritorious cause of action, would be good. Ib.

Lunatics.]—A. kept cash with a banker, and the balances to his credit were stated from time to time in a pass-book. He became a lunatic, but the account continued to be kept by his family; and, in the pass-book, the entries in which were in the banker's handwriting, a balance was stated to the credit of A. :—Held, that this was not evidence to support a count on an account stated with A., in an action by his representative against the banker, to recover the amount of such balance. Tarbuck v. Bispham, 2 M. & W. 2; 6 L. J., Ex. 49.

Partners.]—A., B. and C. were railway contractors in partnership, and had entered into a contract to do work for a railway company. D. had entered into a sub-contract to do part of the work, for which part bricks were required, and it was necessary that D. should have coals to burn the bricks. In order to induce the plaintiff to supply D. with coals, A., without the previous knowledge or subsequent assent of his copartners, entered into a guarantee, in the name of the firm, to secure the payment of the price of the coals to be supplied to D. by the plaintiff. The managing clerk of the firm, without the knowledge of B. and C., wrote letters to the plaintiff containing evidence of an account stated respecting the amount due under the guarantee :—Held, that as the giving the guarantee was not a partnership business, the letters of the clerk respecting it were not evidence of an account stated as against B. and C. Brettel v. Williams, 4 Ex. 623; 19 L. J., Ex. 121.

5. Evidence to Support.

In an action to recover sums received by the defendant, as servant to the plaintiff, the defendant put in the following memorandum, written by the plaintiff on the back of an unstamped receipt, "Balanced up to this day as per cash book, 19th November, 1845, S. F." :—Held, that this memorandum was admissible without a stamp, though the receipt on which it was written was not; and that in the absence of any evidence by the plaintiff to the contrary, it was evidence that up to the day of its date the account between the parties had been adjusted, and that nothing was then due from the defendant. Finney v. Tootel, 5 C. B. 504; 17 L. J., C. P. 158; 12 Jur. 291.

When the particulars of demand were on an account stated, "as appears by a memorandum under the hand of the defendant of this date," and the memorandum was inadmissible for the want of a promissory note stamp :—Held, that the account stated might be proved by other evidence than the memorandum. Singleton v. Barrett, 2 C. & J. 368; 2 Tyr. 409; 1 L. J., Ex. 134.

Held, also, that verbal evidence was admissible of an admission of the money being due, and a promise to pay it by instalments, though such admission and promise were made at the time of signing the memorandum, and were embodied in it. Ib.

In August, 1844, the defendant gave the plaintiff a promissory note for 23*l.* 2*s.* 8*d.*, which the note described as being the amount of interest due on a note for 117*l.* 4*s.*, dated 6th July, 1838, up to 6th July, 1844 :—Held, to be evidence of an account stated in August, 1844, of a subsisting debt of 117*l.* 4*s.* Perry or Penny v. Slade, 8 Q. B. 115 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 10 ; 10 Jur. 31.

A note payable five years after date, for value received, is evidence of an account stated against which the statute of limitations does not commence running until the maturity of the note. Fryer v. Roe, 12 C. B. 437.

In an action on a bill or note against an indorser by an indorsee, the bill will not be evidence of an account stated, unless there is an admission of the money being due. Bird v. Legge, 7 D. P. C. 814 ; 5 M. & W. 418 ; 3 Jur. 823. See also Jardine v. Payne, 1 B. & Ad. 663 ; 9 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 129.

In an action for use and occupation, 4*l.* was paid into court on the account stated. The plaintiffs proved that the defendant being indebted to them as surviving executors, and having no other account with them, was called upon by them for payment, and refused, saying he had a cross-demand on the funds of the testator. The plaintiffs gave evidence of a debt exceeding 4*l.*, and contended that these facts with the admission implied by the payment into court entitled them to recover the larger sum on the account stated, the other accounts being inapplicable :—Held, that they could not so recover, for that the averment of an account stated could only refer to a single occasion ; and the answer of the defendant, with the subsequent payment into court, merely showed that upon that accounting, which alone was in question, the defendant was found indebted 4*l.* Kennedy v. Withers, 3 B. & Ad. 767 ; 1 L. J., K. B. 260.

Evidence of an account stated, whereby the defendant admitted a balance due to the plaintiff, is not done away, but confirmed by evidence of a foreign judgment recovered by the plaintiff for the same sum, with a stay of execution for six months to enable the defendant to prove a counter-demand, if he had any. Hall v. Odber, 11 East, 118 ; 10 R. R. 443.

T., by will, desired that 500*l.* lent by her to the defendant should be allowed to remain in his hands during the life of her sister, he paying the interest to her sister, but that on her sister's death T.'s executors should collect the 500*l.* and divide it between her two nieces, one of whom was the plaintiff and the other the defendant's wife, the same to be for their sole and separate use, free from the control and debts of any husband, with benefit of survivorship. During the lifetime of the tenant for life, the plaintiff's husband took from the defendant his acceptance for 242*l.* payable in twelve months, and as for the share of the plaintiff's wife in the legacy. The plaintiff and her husband, and the defendant and his wife, signed a receipt to the executor of T.'s will as and for a receipt of the legacy of 500*l.* But no money ever in fact passed ; the 500*l.* was never collected from the defendant ; the acceptance was never negotiated ; and on the death of the plaintiff's husband the defendant procured a return of it to him. Again : the plaintiff's father bequeathed to her the proceeds of a life policy, and made the defendant his executor, who, acting in that capacity, received 200*l.* upon the policy. Afterwards, and after the death of the plaintiff's husband and the defendant's wife, the plaintiff claimed from the defendant payment of the two sums of 242*l.* and 200*l.*, and a further sum for money lent by her to him. At an interview between them, in the presence of the plaintiff's attorney, the defendant dictated, and the attorney wrote out, a memorandum, by which the defendant charged himself with the 242*l.* and 200*l.*, and the item for money lent, and with interest from the date of the death of the plaintiff's husband. At the same interview he mentioned certain claims of his against the plaintiff's husband, and asked whether he could set them off, but did not enter them in the memorandum. He also afterwards, at the same interview, signed on the back of the memorandum an authority to his attorney to pay the plaintiff the amount due to her out of any moneys that might be received on his account, referring verbally to an intended sale of some property on his behalf. At the trial no evidence was given of any set-off. It was objected that the 242*l.* had been reduced into possession by the plaintiff's husband, and therefore she had no right of action in her personal capacity ; and that the 200*l.* was held by the defendant as executor, and therefore he could not properly be sued in his personal capacity ; and that the memorandum and authority, taken together, were not, under the circumstances, a statement of an account as due in præsenti :—Held, that the jury was justified in finding that the memorandum was a statement of account sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to maintain her action in respect of both the sums. Topham v. Morecraft, 8 El. & Bl. 972 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 611 ; 6 W. R. 294.

In an action on an attorney's bill of costs, if he fails on the count for work and labour, because no bill has been delivered, he cannot recover upon an account stated, though he proves that the charges were assented to by the client. Brooks v. Bockett, 9 Q. B. 847 ; 16 L. J., Q. B. 178 ; 11 Jur. 284.

B. lent money to A. upon C.'s promise to become surety for its repayment ; and on the money being advanced, A. and C. signed and delivered to B. the following memorandum : "We, jointly and severally, owe you 60*l.*" :—Held, evidence of an account stated by A. & C. jointly. Buck v. Hurst, L. R. 1 C. P. 297 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 704.

An acknowledgment by a defendant, after action, of money being due to the plaintiff, when there is no debtor account between them proved to have existed before action, is not evidence on an account stated. Allen v. Cook, 2 D. P. C. 546.

Nor is an offer of a cognovit after action brought. Spencer v. Parry, 4 N. & M. 770 ; 3 A. & E. 331 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 186.

A plaintiff sued upon an account rendered by the defendant :—Held, that the plaintiff might impeach an item in the account by which the defendant sought to retain money under an illegal contract, notwithstanding that account was the only evidence in the action. Rose v. Savory, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 145 ; 1 Hodges, 269 ; 2 Scott, 199.

I O U's.] — C. joined in giving a joint and several promissory note for a debt due to the plaintiff from another of the makers, for which C. was not previously liable. The note was afterwards returned to the makers to have another maker's name added (which was afterwards done), and an I O U for value received, signed by C. and another of the makers, was in the meantime left with the plaintiff as a security. Semble, that such a document given for a debt for which C. was not primarily liable would not support an action on an account stated against C. Gould v. Coombs, 1 C. B. 543; 14 L. J., C. P. 175; 9 Jur. 494.

Held, that, even if the note was for want of a stamp in consequence of the addition of a new maker void, it was admissible upon the account stated, to show that, before the alteration, and at the time when the I O U was given, there was a debt due to the plaintiff upon the note, to which C. was primarily liable. Ib.

An I O U in the defendant's writing, not addressed to anyone, but produced by the plaintiff, is primâ facie evidence of an account stated with him. Douglas v. Holme, 4 P. & D. 685; 12 A. & E. 641; 10 L. J., Q. B. 43. S. P., Payne v. Jenkins, 4 Car. & P. 324; Lemere v. Elliott, 6 H. & N. 656; 30 L. J., Ex. 350; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1206; 4 L. T. 304.

But not of money lent. Fesenmayer v. Adcock, 16 M. & W. 449.

If the defendant wishes to rebut the inference arising from its production by the plaintiff, he should show that it has been in the hands of some other party. Curtis v. Richards, 1 Man. & G. 46; 1 Scott (N.R.) 155; 9 L. J., C. P. 240; 4 Jur. 508.

The directors of a mine, conducted on the cost-book principle, wanting money to work the mine, entered into an agreement that they should each take 100 shares in it, at 1*l.* per share, and each of them accordingly gave his I O U to the secretary for 100*l.*:—Held, evidence of an account stated between the secretary and a director who had given his I O U pursuant to the agreement. Graves v. Cook, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 475.

Upon a sale of a leasehold, the vendee agreed to pay a deposit of 50*l.*, and the residue on completion. Instead of actually paying the 50*l.* he gave the vendor 5*l.* and an I O U for 45*l.*:—Held, that the vendor, failing to make a good title, was not entitled to recover the 45*l.*, as money due upon an account stated, and that the defence was admissible under the plea of never indebted. Wilson v. Wilson, 2 C. L. R. 818; 14 C. B. 616; 23 L. J., C. P. 137; 18 Jur. 581; 2 W. R. 421.

At the sale of an estate, one of the conditions being that a deposit should be paid immediately, a lot was knocked down to a person, who having no money with him, an arrangement was entered into, with the sanction of the vendor's solicitor, in virtue of which the vendee gave his I O U, addressed to the auctioneer, for the deposit, and signed a memorandum that he had purchased the property, and paid the deposit, and bound himself to complete the purchase, which memorandum was also signed by the auctioneer as agent of the vendor. The bargain having afterwards gone off:—Held, that the auctioneer might recover the amount of the I O U under an account stated. Cleave v. Moors, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 48; 5 W. R. 234.

The premium stated in an indenture of apprenticeship was 50*l.*, but at the time of execution the defendant agreed to give the plaintiff (the master) four I O U's for 20*l.* more, for which instruments the defendant, on the application of the plaintiff, who feared that they were void promissory notes, afterwards substituted a single I O U in a proper form, and on that the action was brought. The jury found that the deed of apprenticeship, though void, was the very deed which the defendant bargained for:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Westlake v. Adams, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 248; 27 L. J., C. P. 271; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1021. S. C., at nisi prius, 1 F. & F. 183.

A., in January, 1853, gave to B. his I O U for 65*l.* After A.'s death, B. having claimed the amount, his receipt for the amount was produced. B. swore positively that the amount had never been received. A court of equity held, that it could not act on his unsupported testimony against the written evidence. Farrow, In re, 22 Beav. 400.

An agreement for the purchase of a public-house contained the following stipulations:—"And, as earnest of this agreement, the purchaser has paid into the hands of the vendor 50*l.*, which is to be allowed in part payment at the completion of this agreement. If the vendor shall not fulfil the same on his part, he shall return the deposit, in addition to the damages hereinafter stated; and, if the purchaser shall fail to perform his part of the agreement, then the deposit-money shall become forfeited, in part of the following damages; and if either of the parties neglects or refuses to comply with any part of this agreement, he shall pay to the other 50*l.*, mutually agreed upon to be the damages ascertained and fixed, on breach hereof." Instead of depositing the 50*l.* the purchaser gave an I O U for the amount. The purchaser failed to complete the purchase, and the vendor sold the public-house for 10*l.* less than the purchaser agreed to pay for it. In an action by the vendor against the purchaser for breach of the agreement:—Held, that he was entitled to recover the 50*l.*, and was not limited to the amount of damage which he had actually sustained. Hinton v. Sparks, 37 L. J., C. P. 81; L. R. 3 C. P. 161; 17 L. T. 600; 16 W. R. 360.

The plaintiff, the grantee of a bill of sale, having taken possession of the goods, the defendant, the brother of a grantee under a subsequent bill of sale, reimbursed the plaintiff part of the money he had paid to satisfy a distress for rent on the goods, and gave him an I O U for the residue, upon an undertaking by the plaintiff not to remove or sell the goods:—Held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover upon the I O U, on an account stated. Bain v. Harris, 1 L. T. 40; 8 W. R. 79.

1. IN GENERAL.

Whether Mortgage or not.]—The fair criterion in equity to decide whether a deed be a mortgage or not, is, are remedies mutual and reciprocal? Has the grantor all the remedies a mortgage is entitled to? Goodman v. Grierson, 2 Ball & B. 278; 12 R. R. 82.

In equity, the rule is, once a mortgage always a mortgage. Ib.

By way of Trust.]—Whether a security by way of conveyance to a trustee, on trust to sell and pay out of the proceeds the sum secured, is a legal mortgage within Lord Loughborough's Order, quære. Barnett, Ex parte, Allen, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 662.

Mortgagee, under a trust to raise money by sale or mortgage, has only the remedies of a mortgagee, and cannot call upon the trustees for execution of the trust. Palk v. Clinton (Lord), 12 Ves. 48; 8 R. R. 283.

A mortgage of real estate made by way of a conveyance to a trustee, upon trust to sell at discretion and out of the proceeds of sale to pay the mortgage debt, and to pay the surplus moneys to the mortgagor, does not constitute an express trust in favour of the mortgagor within 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 25. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 8 Ch. 30; 27 L. T. 635; 21 W. R. 113.

A conveyance of an estate in trust, that the same should stand charged with payment of a sum of money and interest, with a power of sale on default in payment after notice, is not a mortgage, but the trustee is entitled to the aid of the court in effecting a sale. Sampson v. Pattison, 1 Hare, 533.

A. being indebted to B. conveys lands to a trustee, in trust "out of the interest, proceeds, or annual rent, to pay the head rent, and also the premiums of insurance on the life of A. for 500*l.*; and also to pay over to B. the sum of 400*l.* with legal interest at six per cent. for every year until the same shall be paid off and discharged; and from and after the payment thereof to reconvey to A. or his assignees." The policy was assigned by a separate deed to the trustee to secure the 400*l.*:—Held, that B. was not a mortgagee under this deed, and was not, therefore, entitled to have the land sold, but should be paid out of the rents and profits, and have a continuing receiver appointed for that purpose. Taylor v. Emerson, 2 Con. & L. 558; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 224; 4 Dr. & War. 117.

Charge on Lands Purchased.]—S., being indebted to E. in 15,000*l.*, and having covenanted to secure it on land, agreed to purchase lands from E., and, for part of the consideration, to give a mortgage of those lands, "subject however to a prior mortgage for 15,000*l.*":—Held, that these words did not charge the 15,000*l.* debt upon the purchased lands. Eyre v. Sadlier, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 10.

Personal Assets.]—A mortgage in fee is considered as personal assets. Casborne v. Scarfe, 1 Atk. 605.

2. PARTIES.

Mortgagor—Position of.]—In a court of law a mortgagor, in the actual possession of the mortgaged premises, may properly be described as tenant of the mortgagee. Partridge v. Bere, 1 D. & R. 272; 5 B. & Ald. 604; 24 R. R. 487.

Where the mortgagee suffers the mortgagor to remain in possession of the mortgaged premises, the latter is not tenant at will to the former, but at most tenant by sufferance only, and may be treated either as a tenant or a trespasser, at the election of the mortgagee. Doe d. Roby v. Maisey, 8 B. & C. 767; 3 M. & Ry. 107. S. P., Doe d. Fisher v. Giles, 5 Bing. 421; 2 M. & P. 749; 7 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 134; 30 R. R. 686.

A deed, after the usual power of sale by public auction or private contract in the event of the nonpayment of the mortgage money, contained a proviso and covenant by the mortgagee that no sale or public notice or advertisement for any sale should be made or given, or any means be taken for obtaining possession, until the expiration of twelve calendar months after notice in writing of such intention should have been given to the mortgagor. There was likewise a covenant by the mortgagee for quiet enjoyment by the mortgagor as tenant at will to the mortgagee, on payment of a yearly rent, by two equal half-yearly payments, but no livery of seisin was made to the mortgagor:—Held, that the mortgagor was only tenant at will to the mortgagee, and that those clauses in the deed did not create in him a tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Dixie v. Davis, 7 Ex. 89; 21 L. J., Ex. 60; 16 Jur. 44.

A mortgagor will never be permitted to dispute the title of his mortgagee. Goodtitle d. Edwards v. Bailey, Cowp. 601. S. P., Doe d. Bristowe v. Pegge, 1 Term Rep. 760, n.; 4 Dougl. 309.

—— After Default.]—By indenture of mortgage A. released premises to the mortgagee in fee, and demised to him other premises for years, provided that, if A., the mortgagor, should pay the mortgage money on the 5th October next, the deed should be void; but, if the mortgagor should not then pay, it should be lawful for the mortgagee, after giving one month's notice, as after mentioned, to enter, and, whether in or out of possession, to lease and sell. Covenant by mortgagee not to sell or lease until he had given one month's notice demanding payment, and the mortgagor should have made default:—Held, that, inasmuch as after the 5th October the time, if any, during which the mortgagor was to hold was uncertain, and there was no affirmative covenant that he should hold at all, this was a covenant only, and not a redemise to the mortgagor; and that, on default by the mortgagor, the mortgagee might, after that day, bring ejectment against him without notice. Doe d. Parsley v.

Day, 2 Q. B. 147 ; 2 G. & D. 757 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 86 ; 6 Jur. 913.

A mortgage deed contained a provision by which the mortgagor "did attorn tenant to the mortgagee," at a rent "payable quarterly," to be recoverable by distress and sale, action of "debt and otherwise howsoever" :—Held, that, after default made in payment of the principal, the mortgagee might eject the mortgagor without any notice to quit. Doe d. Snell v. Short or Thom, 4 Q. B. 615 ; 3 G. & D. 637 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 264 ; 7 Jur. 847.

—— Covenant not to Call in Principal.]—Land was mortgaged in fee, with a proviso for redemption, on payment of the principal in June. 1833 ; but it was agreed that the mortgagee should not call in the principal till 1840, if interest was regularly paid in the meantime, and that the mortgagor should hold the premises, and take the rents, issues and profits for his own use, until default should be made in payment of principal and interest :—Held, that, although, by the first part of the deed, the fee was vested in the mortgagee, the subsequent part operated as a redemise of the premises to the mortgagor till 1840, provided the interest was regularly paid in the meantime. Wilkinson v. Hall, 4 Scott, 301 ; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 508 ; 3 Hodges, 56 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 82.

—— Insanity of.]—The mere insanity of a mortgagor to whom or to whose agent the mortgage money has been honestly paid, and of whose insanity no advantage was taken in the transaction, does not annul the rights of the mortgagee. Campbell v. Hooper, 3 Sm. & G. 153 ; 3 Eq. R. 727 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 644 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 670 ; 3 W. R. 528.

3. Form, Validity and Effect.

Deed—Alteration.]—A mortgagor executed a mortgage deed to A., the solicitor who prepared it. On the following morning A. filled in the date, the names of the tenants, and the date of the proviso for redemption :—Held, that this alteration did not render the deed void. Adsetts v. Hives, 33 Beav. 52.

—— Description.]—B., in consideration of a sum of money lent to him by parties who carried on business under the name of "The City Investment and Advance Co.," assigned by deed certain goods of his to the company by way of mortgage to secure the loan :—Held, that the parties need not be described in the deed by their christian names or surnames, and that the conveyance of the property to the company operated as a conveyance to the company, on its being ascertained that they were the persons described under the name of such company. Maughan v. Sharpe, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 443 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 19 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 989 ; 10 L. T. 870 ; 12 W. R. 1057.

—— Delivery.]—A., being indebted to his bankers, executed a deed purporting to be a mortgage to them for securing the debt. After executing it, he delivered it to his attorney, who retained it in his possession till A.'s bankruptcy, which occurred about a month afterwards. The attorney then delivered it to the mortgagees :—Held, that this was a good delivery by A. to the mortgagees. Grugeon v. Gerrard, 4 Y. & C. 115.

—— Delivering up.]—A delivery up of mortgage deeds does not cancel the debt. Hurst v. Beach, 5 Madd. 351 ; 21 R. R. 304.

Purchase for value without notice is not an absolute defence to a suit to set aside on equitable grounds a mortgage of a fund in court ; the court will determine the rights to the fund as between the parties, without waiting till it becomes distributable, and according to such determination will declare a deed under which the purchaser claims as mortgagee to be void as against one of the parties thereto whose property was thereby mortgaged. Tabor v. Cunningham, 24 W. R. 153.

—— Proof of.]—A mortgage deed could not be produced, and a copy purporting to have been furnished by the solicitor who held the deed was produced on behalf of the plaintiff as evidence of the deed ; the plaintiff also deposed to the existence of the mortgage. The defendants had in their answers not expressly challenged the mortgage deed, and had admitted that there had been a reconveyance of part of the property comprised in the mortgage :—Held, that as against them the mortgage deed was sufficiently proved. Heath v. Crealock, 44 L. J., Ch. 157 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 22 ; 31 L. T. 650 ; 23 W. R. 95 —C. A.

Validity.]—A harbour company was empowered by its acts of incorporation to raise money on mortgages of the works and tolls, which were not to be effectual until they were entered in the company's books by its clerk, and a memorial of the entry was indorsed on them :—Held, that an unindorsed mortgage, regular in other respects, was effectual. Jortin v. S. E. Ry., 6 De G. M. & G. 270 ; 3 Eq. R. 281 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 343 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 433 ; 3 W. R. 190.

Such provisions as these respecting the indorsement depend on the purpose of the act. If it be one of public concern, they are construed largely, as in the Annuity Acts, Shipping Acts, and the modern statutory provisions for registering judgments ; but, if not, the effect is limited by the purposes of the act. Ib.

A subscriber to the Customs Annuity and Benevolent Fund, which was established by act of parliament for the benefit of widows, children, and other relatives of officers of the customs, by instrument duly executed and deposited with the directors, irrevocably assigned two-thirds of the portion payable on his death to mortgagees to secure an advance made to him, and the mortgagees were duly admitted by the directors as his nominees :—Held that the mortgage was valid as against the widow, children, and relations of the subscriber. Maclean, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 145 ; L. R. 19 Eq. 274 ; 31 L. T. 632 ; 23 W. R. 206.

A debt, secured by an assignment by way of mortgage of an interest in a legacy charged on land, expectant upon the death of a tenant for life, became barred or extinguished by the Statute of Limitations before the death of the tenant for life :—Held, that the assignment did not thereupon cease to operate as a valid security. Seager v. Aston, 26 L. J., Ch. 809 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 481 ; 5 W. R. 548.

Fraud of Solicitor.]—A. B. is induced to intrust C. D., his co-trustee and a solicitor, with trust moneys, upon his representation that E. F. wishes to obtain the amount upon mortgage. C. D., who is also confidential solicitor of E. F., induces him to execute a mortgage to A. B. and C. D. of certain property of which C. D., as his solicitor, holds the title deeds. E. F. executes this deed in ignorance of its contents and effect from his confidence in C. D. The money advanced by A. B. is retained by C. D., nor is any part of it ever received by E. F. Two years afterwards C. D. becomes bankrupt, and is subsequently struck off the rolls. Mortgage deed set aside as fraudulent and void as against E. F., and an action upon the covenant by A. B. restrained, the money not having been advanced by him upon the execution of the mortgage deed, but upon the false representation of C. D., who retained the money in his own possession. Rushout v. Turner, 5 W. R. 670.

Usury Law.]—A mortgagee, before the repeal of the Usury Acts, advanced to a mortgagor the sum of 342*l.* 0*s.* 10*d.*, being the produce of a sale of stock; and the mortgagor agreed that the sum so advanced to him should be regarded as 360*l.*, so as to protect the mortgagee against loss on reinvestment, and to pay interest on 360*l.* at 5*l.* per cent.:—Held, that this was a fair bargain, and, therefore, not void within the Usury Acts. Baskett v. Skeel, 2 N. R. 547; 11 W. R. 1019.

Condition Precedent.]—By a mortgage deed between the mortgagor and two others, as sureties, and the mortgagee, after reciting that the mortgagor was possessed of certain hereditaments, and of a policy of insurance on his life for ——l., and that the mortgagee had agreed to lend him 1,000*l.* to be secured as therein provided, and that "upon treaty for the loan it was agreed that the repayment should be further secured by the sureties joining in the deed"; the mortgagor mortgaged the hereditaments and the policy of insurance for ——l., and all moneys assured or to become payable under it, as security for the debt. There were covenants by the mortgagor and the two other sureties to pay the interest and to pay the premiums on the policy and any sums necessary for effecting another, if it should become void. There was a power of sale by the mortgagee of the hereditaments and the policy. The mortgagor covenanted that, if the mortgagee should be unable to execute the power of sale, or if the proceeds should not be sufficient, he would pay the deficiency to the amount of 300*l.* To an action on this covenant it was pleaded that no policy was effected; and that one of the sureties had not executed the deed:—Held, first, that it was a condition precedent that a policy should have been effected. Coyte v. Elphick, 22 W. R. 541.

Held, secondly, that in the absence of express provision it was not a condition precedent that the other surety had signed. Ib.

Mortgage after Contract for Sale.]—A mortgage made subsequently to a contract for the sale of an estate conveys to the mortgagee only that which the vendor is entitled to under that contract. If the mortgagee gives no notice of an intention to interfere with the contract, its stipulations remain as before, and affect the mortgagee as they would have affected the mortgagor. Rose v. Watson, 10 H. L. Cas. 672; 33 L. J., Ch. 385; 3 N. R. 673; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 297; 10 L. T. 106; 12 W. R. 585.

Usual Provisions Omitted.]—Although no day was fixed in the mortgage deed for repayment, yet, there being a covenant by the borrower to pay when required to do so, and a covenant by the lender to reconvey upon being repaid, it was held that a bill for foreclosure and sale was maintainable. Balfe v. Lord, 1 Con. & L. 519; 2 Dr. & War. 480; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 468.

A court of equity will presume an instrument of this nature, intended as a security for money advanced, to be an ordinary mortgage accompanied with the usual remedies, unless the term of the instrument exclude such a construction. Ib.

Freehold property was conveyed to A. B. in trust for sale, and to pay himself his debt. The deed contained a proviso for reconveyance, on payment of principal and interest, and a covenant by A. B. not to sell under the trust until six months after notice to pay:—Held, that the object of the trust being to secure money, it was in the nature of a mortgage, though no equity of redemption was expressly reserved; and that A. B. was not entitled to a decree for an immediate sale, but that the debtor ought to have six months to redeem. Bell v. Carter, 17 Beav. 11; 22 L. J., Ch. 933; 17 Jur. 478; 1 W. R. 270.

Unusual Provisions.]—Unusual provisions in a mortgage had been stipulated for by the mortgagee, who was a solicitor, but had been fully explained to the mortgagor:—Held, that they were binding upon him, except that, as to certain additional property, which had been included solely for the mortgagee's own protection, an additional rate of interest must be disallowed. Jones v. Linton, 44 L. T. 601.

Power of Attorney.]—In 1841 a client, before going abroad, gave a power of attorney to his solicitor in England to manage the whole of the client's property and concerns in England while he was abroad, and, generally, to do all other acts, deeds, matters or things whatsoever in or about the estates, property and affairs of the client, as amply as the client could do or have done. In the year 1849 the attorney, professing to act under the power, borrowed 500*l.* upon deposit of a policy of assurance belonging to the client, and afterwards misapplied the money:—Held, that, whether the power of attorney per se authorised the raising of the money upon the security of the policy or not, yet, when coupled with a correspondence beween the attorney and client, showing that the latter, believing the power to have that effect, desired it to be so exercised when occasion should require, it precluded the client from disputing the validity of the mortgage. Perry v. Holl, 2 De G. F. & J. 38; 29 L. J., Ch. 677; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 661; 2 L. T. 585; 8 W. R. 570.

Estate to be Absolute on Default.]—Proviso in mortgage, that, if mortgagor fails in payment by certain day, estate shall be absolute in law and equity:—Held, a good condition, and no relief against it. Tasburgh v. Ecklin, 2 Bro. P. C. 265.

Inequitable Condition for Loan.]—The purchase of a piece of land, at an exorbitant price, will not be allowed to stand when made the condition of a loan of money to a party whose necessities compelled him to borrow. A mortgage of a fund in court, in a suit of Collett v. Maude, by W. G. C., the purchaser of the land, to secure 6,000*l.*, the purchase-money, to G. W. F., the vendor, set aside on the ground that the transaction was fraudulent. An assignment of a chose in action must be taken subject to all prior claims. Sub-mortgages of the fund in court, made without noticing G. W. F., were therefore set aside; or his title was either void or subject to the prior equity of W. G. C., notwithstanding he had been induced to create or countenance such sub-mortgages. The acts of W. G. C. in joining to create the sub-mortgages were not a recognition of, or an acquiescence in, the sub-mortgages, as they were done in entire ignorance of his rights, and under the idea that the original transaction with G. W. F. was unimpeachable. Cockell v. Taylor, 15 Beav. 147; 21 L. J., Ch. 545.

Absence of Independent Advice—High Rate of Interest—Unrestricted Power of Sale.]—The plaintiff, who had only just attained his majority, and his sister and brother, being entitled in remainder under a will of which R., who was their father, and P. were trustees, and under which R. was tenant for life, joined with R. in mortgaging the property to secure advances, with interest thereon at 10 per cent., which was made for R.'s benefit. The power of sale was exercisable without notice, and the mortgage contained a clause providing that, if the power of sale should arise in the lifetime of R., it should be lawful for P. to postpone the sale, or to await R.'s death, and then obtain payment of the shares of the children. P. was a certificated conveyancer, and prepared the deeds for all parties. In an action by the plaintiff against R. and P. and the other mortgagors, claiming to have the deeds set aside on the ground of undue influence and want of proper advice, or that R. might indemnify the plaintiff, the judge being satisfied that the plaintiff had, on his own evidence, acted voluntarily and with full understanding, the plaintiff was refused relief against P., but R., having used the trust funds for his own benefit, was ordered to indemnify the plaintiff against his liability to P.:—Held (on appeal against the judgment in favour of P.), that, the court being dissatisfied with the mortgage (1) on account of the interest being 10 per cent.; (2) on the ground that the exercise of the power of sale could be postponed; and (3) on the ground that the power of sale was unrestricted, the judgment would only be affirmed on the terms of (1) P. asking for no costs in the court below or on appeal; (2) P. undertaking to press for no interest against the plaintiff which had accrued due in R.'s lifetime; (3) P. allowing the plaintiff to redeem his share on payment of a sum proportionate to his share of the property mortgaged. Readdy v. Pendergast, 56 L. T. 790—C. A.

Presumed Intention to Keep Alive after Reconveyance.]—Where a person who claims to be owner of an equity of redemption, but whose title to a share of the property is disputed in a pending action, pays off the mortgage and takes a reconveyance, the court will presume an intention to keep the mortgage alive as against the share in dispute. Pride, In re, Shackell v. Colnett, 61 L. J., Ch. 9; [1891] 2 Ch. 135; 64 L. T. 768; 39 W. R. 471.

Whether Mortgage Extinguished or Kept Alive is Question of Intention.]—Where the question is whether a mortgage security is to be considered as extinguished by merger, or kept alive for the benefit of a transferee, it is in every case a question of the intention of the parties. Such intention may be found in the mortgage deed or in the circumstances attending the transaction, or it may be presumed from the fact that it is for the benefit of the transferee that the charge should be kept alive. Adams v. Angell (5 Ch. D. 634) followed; Toulmin v. Steere (3 Mer. 210) distinguished. Thorne v. Cann, 64 L. J., Ch. 1; [1895] A. C. 11; 11 R. 67; 71 L. T. 852—H. L. (E.)

Payment off by Purchaser of Mortgaged Property—Merger—Intention to keep Charge Alive—Presumption.]—Where a purchaser of a property pays off a mortgage on it without showing an intention to keep it alive, still, if its continuance as an existing charge is beneficial to him, it will be treated in equity as subsisting unless an intention to the contrary can be inferred from the terms of the purchase deed or from other legitimate evidence. But the opportunity of making a very doubtful claim against third parties is not such a benefit as is meant in this enunciation of the doctrine; and, if an intention to keep alive a charge of property is inconsistent with the real intention of the parties to the deed by which the property was assigned to the purchaser, the charge cannot be treated as still subsisting simply because the purchaser afterwards finds it would have been better for him to have kept the charge alive (Kay, L.J., dissentiente). Toulmin v. Steere (3 Mer. 210) discussed. Liquidation Estates Purchase Co. v. Willoughby, 65 L. J., Ch. 486; [1896] 1 Ch. 726; 74 L. T. 228; 44 W. R. 612—C. A.

Payment off by Tenant for Life—Merger—Intention to keep Charge Alive—Presumption—Relationship of Parent and Child.]—When a tenant for life pays off a mortgage on the estate, the fact that he is the parent of those entitled in remainder is not of itself sufficient to rebut the presumption that he intends to keep the charge alive for his own benefit. Harrey, In re, Harrey v. Hobday, 65 L. J., Ch. 370; [1896] 1 Ch. 137; 73 L. T. 613; 44 W. R. 242—C. A.

Grant of Annuity by Grantee's Attorney—Annuity charged on Estate of less Value than Annuity—Bankruptcy, Proof in.]—Grant of annuity void for want of a memorial registered, being charged on an estate of less annual value than the annuity, the grantor being the grantee's attorney, preparing the security and depositing the title deeds, but misrepresenting the value of the estate; proof admitted under his bankruptcy only for the money advanced, with liberty to file a bill to establish an equitable lien, upon the ground of fraud, and the deposit of the deeds. Wright, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 255.

Mortgage by Legal Personal Representative.]—A mortgage of a term of years by a legal personal representative solely for his own benefit, which is bad as being a breach of trust, cannot be treated as, at all events, operating on such estate as he can pass in his character of legal personal representative. Scott v. Alvarez, 64 L. J., Ch. 376; [1895] 1 Ch. 596; 72 L. T. 455.

Practice—Setting Aside—Insolvency of Mortgagor—Evidence.]—In proceedings to set aside a mortgage on the ground of the insolvency of the mortgagor at the time of the mortgage, the fact of the insolvency must be proved by legal evidence, and in case of doubt the mortgagee is entitled to an issue. Jones v. Mackenzie, 7 W. R. 717—P. C.

4. Mortgage or Purchase.

Generally.]—The court leans against the contract for liberty to repurchase, where made at the same time as the grant, and endeavours to make it a redemption. Longuet v. Scawen, 1 Ves. 405.

A mortgage will not easily be presumed against an absolute conveyance; especially where possession has gone along with the conveyance, and an acquiescence for many years, although there be an incongruous covenant in the deed. A defeasance contained in a separate deed is suspicious, and ought to be discouraged. Cotterell v. Purchase, Cases t. Talbot, 61.

If a mortgagee afterwards gets an absolute deed, but suffers possession to go some time contrary to it, it will again make it but a mortgage. Harris v. Horwell, Gilb. 11.

Mortgage.]—W., being indebted to M., made an absolute assignment of a reversion, but took a memorandum from M. that M. would reconvey, on repayment, with interest, by W., in six months, W. paying part of the costs. Nothing further was done for eighteen years:—Held, that the transaction was a mortgage. Waters v. Mynn, 14 Jur. 341.

A security for money lent was made in the form of a conveyance to the lender on trust to sell. He entered into possession and remained in possession for more than twenty years. His devisees in trust agreed to sell the mortgaged estate for a sum exceeding the amount then due for principal, interest and costs, and conveyed it to the purchaser by a deed in which the trust for sale was recited:—Held, that such a security is simply a mortgage. Alison, In re, Johnson v. Mounsey, 11 Ch. D. 284; 40 L. T. 234; 27 W. R. 537.

An absolute conveyance from A. to B., dated 4th August, 1814, without any statement of consideration, was held to constitute a mortgage,—the evidence chiefly consisting of a draft bond from B. to A. to reconvey on payment by A. or C. of a debt due to him from the latter, and a lease of part of the premises by A. and B., in which it was stated that the premises were in mortgage to the latter. Gordon v. Selby, 11 Bligh (N.S.) 351.

An absolute conveyance of a reversionary interest to a solicitor reduced by decree to a mortgage, the solicitor standing in a quasi though not an absolute relationship of trustee and solicitor, and failing to prove that the transaction was clearly understood, and that full value was given. Denton v. Donner, 23 Beav. 285.

Case where, under the circumstances, a transaction was held to be a mortgage and not a conditional sale. Fee v. Cobine, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 406.

Sale or Purchase—Conditional.]—Where the grantee of lands subject to a limited power of redemption has not all the remedies of a mortgagee, the conveyance is not a mortgage but a conditional sale. Goodman v. Grierson, 2 Ball & B. 275; 12 R. R. 82.

A., having contracted to purchase some freehold hereditaments, which he was not able to pay for, entered into an agreement with B., that the hereditaments should be conveyed to B., in consideration of certain moneys advanced by B. to A., some of which was applied to pay the deposit in respect of the purchase, and part applied to other purposes; and it was provided that, if A. should, by a given day, repay to B. the purchase-money, and the advances by him, A. being at liberty in the meantime to make sale of the hereditaments with the approval of B., then the agreement was to be void, but otherwise the sale was thereby confirmed absolutely to B. The money was not repaid to B., and he afterwards paid the whole purchase-money and was let into possession. A. became bankrupt:—Held, that this agreement constituted a conditional purchase, and not an equitable mortgage: and that, as the money was not paid at the appointed time, B. was entitled to retain the estate. Perry v. Meddowcroft, 4 Beav. 197; 12 L. J., Ch. 104.

The owner of an equity of redemption conveyed it by a conveyance, absolute on the face of it, to the mortgagee. A contemporaneous memorandum was executed, declaring that, if he repaid the consideration at any time within three years, the mortgagee would reconvey. The purchase-money was the amount at which the lands were valued, and possession followed the deed, and there was parol evidence to show that the transaction was a purchase, and not a mortgage:—Held, a conditional purchase, and not redeemable. Neal v. Morris, Beat. 597.

A. conveyed a life estate to B., in consideration of 4,739*l*. By a deed of even date B. contracted that if A. should at any time desire to repurchase the life estate for 4,739*l*., B. would reconvey it to him for that sum. All the expenses of this transaction were paid by A. B. took possession, insured A.'s life for 4,739*l*., and after payment of premiums the surplus rent was between 6*l*. and 6*l*. 10*s*. per cent. on the purchase-money. B. left a will, by which he spoke of the life estate as redeemable on payment of 4,739*l*. and interest, and spoke of his interest as a security. A., after a lapse of nearly thirty years, and many years after the death of the solicitor who conducted the transaction, filed a bill to redeem, and failed in proving by direct evidence that the parties intended a mortgage:—Held, that the transaction was to be treated as a conditional sale, and not as a mortgage, and that A. had no right to an account of rents and profits. Alderson v. White, 2 De G. & J. 97; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 6 W. R. 242.

—— Lapse of Time.]—Held, that if the transaction, considered as a purchase, had been so grossly oppressive that the court would, on that ground, have treated it as intended to be a mortgage, the right to have it so treated would not have been enforced after such a lapse of time, and after the death of the other parties concerned in the transaction. Ib.

—— Presumption of Adverse Possession.]—Conditional sales are to be regarded in the same light as mortgages, and adverse possession is not, therefore, to be presumed against a mortgagee under such a conditional sale. Prannath Roy Chowdry v. Ramrutton Roy, 8 W. R. 29—P. C.

—— Absolute.]—By an agreement it was recited that the defendant was entitled to two leasehold farms, and that the plaintiff had lent to him a certain sum, and had agreed to make him further advances, in consideration of the agreement thereinafter contained; and it was agreed that the sum and such further sums as should be thereafter advanced, with interest, should be repaid at the time therein mentioned; but, if default should be made in payment, the defendant agreed to assign to the plaintiff the leasehold farms for the residue of the terms, without any further consideration, together with the furniture, and growing crops, at a valuation. The plaintiff agreed to pay the amount of such valuation, less the moneys advanced. A valuation was taken, and a further payment was made by the plaintiff to the defendant, and the former entered into possession of the property, and tendered the amount of the valuation, but the defendant refused to receive the same, alleging that the agreement was for a mortgage, and not for a sale:—Held, that the relation of vendor and purchaser, and not that of mortgagor and mortgagee, was constituted by the agreement. Tapply v. Sheather, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1163; 7 L. T. 298; 11 W. R. 12.

When a mortgagor conveyed to his mortgagee by a deed which was in form an absolute conveyance with a right of redemption within a limited time, and that time expired without such right being exercised, and where it was clear that such was the intention of the parties, and that the mortgagor had had sufficient professional assistance:—Held, that the transaction was an absolute conveyance by sale, and not of the nature of a mortgage. Gossip v. Wright, 21 L. T. 271; 17 W. R. 1137—H. L.

—— Right of Repurchase.]—In circumstances, held upon the construction of certain instruments that, taken together, they did not operate as a mortgage, but as an absolute sale, to which was attached a conditional right of repurchase to be exercised on the happening of a given event. Shaw v. Jeffery, 13 Moore, P. C. 432.

A conveyance, as upon an absolute sale, accompanied by a contemporaneous agreement for reconveyance, upon payment, on a day certain, of the purchase-money with interest, and of the expense of the present conveyance, which had been paid by the purchaser:—Held, on a bill for redemption brought after the day certain had passed, to have been a sale, with a proviso for repurchase, and not a mortgage. Williams v. Owen, 5 Myl. & Cr. 305; 12 L. J., Ch. 207; 5 Jur. 114. Reversing 10 Sim. 386.

A., who held under a lease from Trinity College customarily renewable, demised to B., who subdemised to C. In 1861 B., being 160*l.* in C.'s debt, assigned by deed all his interest in the premises to C., who wrote the following letter: "At any time within the next ten years you come forward and pay 160*l.*, provided you want it for yourself or any of your children, or satisfactorily arrange the 160*l.* by three or four instalments, (that is to say) the house I have purchased this day in [&c.], I will hand you the possession of same with pleasure, and become your yearly tenant":—Held, that the transaction was not a mortgage, but a sale with an agreement for repurchase. O'Reilly v. O'Donoghue, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 73.

Five years afterwards, A.'s interest was evicted by the college, who adopted C. as their yearly tenant. B. tendered the 160*l.* within the ten years:—Held, that he had no equity under his right of repurchase to get the new interest acquired by C., or to have it declared a graft on the old interest. Ib.

Right to Repurchase.]—Where a vendor is entitled to repurchase on payment of a sum of money by a given day, and such sum of money can only be ascertained by accounts to be rendered by the purchaser in possession, such purchaser cannot, by rendering such account so late as to preclude the possibility of a settlement within the time, deprive the vendor of his right to repurchase. Ponsford v. Hankey, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 938; 5 L. T. 226; 9 W. R. 510—L.JJ.

—— Account.]—A contract provided for repurchase by the plaintiff from the defendant of hereditaments, upon payment to him of a stipulated sum within a certain time, but deducting the net proceeds of all sales, if any, which should have been previously made by him, including all moneys laid out in repairs or improvements of the property. The right to purchase was in no case to be exercised after the time fixed. Several proceedings were had between the parties on the footing of the contract, but the defendant never furnished to the plaintiff any proper account of the property. A bill was accordingly filed to obtain the benefit of the contract, for an account, an injunction, and a receiver. The defendant demurred to the bill:—Held, that the terms of the contract threw on him the obligation of rendering an account to the plaintiff, and that the demurrer must be overruled. S. C., 2 Giff. 604; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 929; 9 W. R. 358. Affirmed, supra.

Statute of Frauds.]—A., a mortgagee with power of sale of real estate, informed L., the mortgagor, that he should sell it for 220*l.*, unless more were offered. It was thereupon verbally agreed between L. and W. that W. should buy it on L.'s behalf for 230*l.*, and have a lien on it for that sum; that L. should pay interest, and continue to occupy the part he then occupied, and that W. should receive the rents of the rest to reduce the principal. An offer by W. to purchase for 230*l.* was then sent by L.'s agent to the mortgagee, who accepted it, and under his power of sale conveyed to W.'s infant daughter by W.'s direction. L. continued in occupation of the part he was to occupy, and paid interest, W. receiving the rents of the rest. This continued for about ten months, when W. died. After his death the daughter brought ejectment, claiming to be absolute owner:—Held, that the transaction was a mortgage and not a sale, and that the Statute of Frauds was no defence to a bill by L. to enforce the agreement, the parol agreement having been in part performed by A. continuing in possession of a portion of the property conveyed. Lincoln v. Wright, 4 De G. & J. 16; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1142; 7 W. R. 350.

—— Part Performance.]—L.'s continuance in possession after the conveyance, being referable only to the verbal agreement, amounted to part performance of that agreement, and excluded the operation of the statute. Semble. Ib.

—— Fraud.]—Without reference to part performance, the Statute of Frauds was no defence, because W.'s insisting on the conveyance as absolute, when it had been agreed that it should be a mortgage, was a fraud, and the Statute of Frauds is not allowed by courts of equity to cover fraud. Semble. Ib.

Specific Performance.]—Case of a contract for sale and not a mortgage to secure a debt, and to be specifically performed. Bunning v. Bunning, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 56.

Evidence of Recitals—Lapse of Time.]—A. and wife, by lease and release, dated in 1792, and a fine levied in 1793, conveyed two estates, M. and F., belonging to the wife, to O. in fee. By deeds of July, 1798, A. and wife conveyed M. alone to O. in fee, and covenanted that the fine of 1793, and all other fines, &c., should enure to the uses of this second deed. This deed was executed by all the parties, but no other fine was levied. It appeared that O. did not take possession of M. till the execution of this deed. By another deed of November, 1798, reciting that the transaction of 1792 was a mortgage, and that it had been discovered that the wife's interest in F. was for life only, and that part of the mortgage debt was satisfied by the conveyance of M., and that the remainder, with a further sum, was to be the value of the wife's interest in F., A. and wife conveyed to O. the wife's life estate in F. This deed was not executed by O., though he entered under it. On the death of the wife in 1834, F., with the deed, was given up to her son. On a bill filed by the heir of the wife, after the death of A., in 1836, against the devisee of O., to recover the estate of M., either absolutely or by way of redemption :—Held, that, as O. never signed the deed of November, 1798, though he entered under it, the recitals therein were not conclusive evidence against him, so as to contradict the conveyance of 1792, and as the other circumstances of the case were connected with the transaction being a purchase, and a considerable time had elapsed, the bill was dismissed. Tull v. Owen, 4 Y. & C. 192 ; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 33.

Proof in Bankruptcy.]—H., a money broker, was in the habit of depositing bills of exchange with B. & Co. as a security for advances, but he did not indorse the bills, nor were they negotiated by B. & Co., or ever presented for payment. Amongst the bills so deposited was one for 1,000*l.*, accepted by C., who became bankrupt on the 5th of March, 1824, which was some time after the bill fell due. H. also became bankrupt on the 12th December, 1825, when B. & Co. proved the amount of the balance he owed them, excepting this bill as a security, but made no attempt to prove the bill under C.'s commission until January, 1826, when the commissioners rejected the proof :—Held, that the delivery of the bill by H. to B. & Co. must be taken to have been by way of pledge, to secure the amount of the advance then due from H. to B. & Co., and not with an intention to transfer the property in it, and that the amount of those advances having been since paid, B. & Co. could not, under these circumstances, prove the bill under C.'s commission. Britten, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 35.

Trust.] — The plaintiff for 80*l.* conveys an estate absolutely to the defendant, and brings a bill to redeem ; defendant insists the conveyance was absolute, but confesses that, after the 80*l.* paid with interest, it was to be in trust for the plaintiff's wife and children. Plaintiff replies to the answer, and no proof of the trust, yet decreed the trust for the benefit of the wife and children. Hampton v. Spencer, 2 Vern. 287.

Resettlement.]—A wife's property was limited upon such trusts as the husband and wife should jointly appoint ; and in default to the use of the husband for life, with remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the children of the marriage, with an ultimate remainder to the wife in fee. Two days later a joint appointment was made by the husband and wife to A. and B., to such uses as the husband should appoint ; and, in default, upon the same limitations before mentioned. Four months afterwards the husband appointed, and the trustees conveyed, the estate to C., upon trust to sell, and pay a sum of money advanced to the husband, and to pay the residue to the husband, "his executors, administrators or assigns," and to convey the unsold estate to the husband, his heirs or assigns, or as he or they should direct :—Held, that the two deeds could not be regarded as one transaction, and that the last deed was not merely a mortgage, but a resettlement to new uses. Heather v. O'Neill, 27 L. J., Ch. 512 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 957 ; 6 W. R. 484—L.JJ.

Redemption and Reconveyance.]—What circumstances may induce the court to make an absolute conveyance redeemable or not. Where there is a clause or provision in the conveyance, for the vendor to purchase, the time limited for that purpose ought to be precisely observed. Barrell v. Sabine, 1 Vern. 268, 269 ; 3 Salk. 241.

A deed of absolute conveyance, dated in August, 1842, of property of the alleged value of more than 1,000*l.*, to the defendant, for 101*l.*, subject to a prior mortgage to F. for the repayment of 150*l.*, was in 1860 set aside, and a reconveyance directed on terms, on the ground that the defendant knew the plaintiff's object was to borrow money, and not to sell the property, and that the solicitor, who was employed by both parties in the transaction, betrayed the plaintiff's interest, and made himself the tool of the defendant to obtain the execution of an absolute conveyance at an undervalue. Douglas v. Culverwell, 3 Giff. 251 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 65 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 29. Affirmed, 4 De G. F. & J. 20 ; 6 L. T. 272 ; 10 W. R. 327.

This court having jurisdiction in personam, upon equity arising out of transactions concerning lands abroad (particularly if in the British dominions), a purchase of an estate in the West Indies by a creditor under his own execution, was, upon the circumstances, held only a security for the debt ; the expenses of the proceeding and incumbrances paid by him with interest ; and subject thereto, a reconveyance was decreed. Cranstown (Lord) v. Johnston, 3 Ves. 170 ; 3 R. R. 80.

A. having granted a mortgage of anticipation to B., of a West India estate, being found, upon an account taken, to be greatly indebted to him, releases the equity of redemption to B. and his heirs ; it not appearing, however, at the time, to have been intended as an absolute sale, and B. having, both by letter and in conversation, stated himself as being only mortgagee in possession, a redemption was decreed. Vernon v. Bethell, 2 Eden, 110.

Absolute conveyance, and a deed of defeasance, on payment of mortgage money, during the joint lives of mortgagor and mortgagee :—Held, a restraint upon mortgagor, and a redemption decreed, there being also fraudulent and oppressive conduct on the part of the mortgagee. Spurgeon v. Collier, 1 Eden, 55.

A., for 500*l.*, makes an absolute assignment of a lease for three lives to B., and B., by a writing under his hand, agrees that, if A. pays B. 600*l.* at the end of the year, B. will reconvey ; B. dies, leaving C. his son and heir ; money was not paid, and two of the lives die, and the lease is twice renewed ; yet redemption decreed on payment of the 500*l.*, and the two fines with interest ; and, during the life of B., the profits to be set against the interest of the 500*l.* Manlove v. Bale, 2 Vern. 84.

Conveyances held upon the circumstances and answer of defendant, to be mortgages, and not absolute conveyances ; and, defendant having insisted upon their being absolute conveyances, plaintiffs were allowed to redeem with costs. England v. Codrington, 1 Eden, 169.

R. M. being possessed of a leasehold interest in the premises of G. B. and D., in 1815 mortgaged the same (subject to a prior mortgage) to L., and executed a bond and warrant as a collateral security, and by deed of 1821, reciting that the mortgage money was equal to the value of the premises, released to L. the equity of redemption in all the premises except D., but the bond and covenants in the mortgage deed were suffered to remain outstanding. In a letter from L. to R. M., written subsequently to these transactions, he stated that he considered he held the premises merely as a pledge for the money due to him :—Held, that, notwithstanding the deed of 1821, the creditors of R. M. were entitled to redeem. Willis v. Latham, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 69.

A. mortgaged land to B. worth 15*l.* per annum, to secure 200*l.*, and gave a bond that, if the principal and interest were not paid within a year, then he should pay to A., his executors or administrators, the further sum of 78*l.* in full for the purchase of the premises. A. died, and the 78*l.* was paid the day after the mortgage was forfeited :—Held, that A.'s heir may redeem, paying the 200*l.* together with the 78*l.* that was paid to the administrator of A. Willett v. Winnell, 1 Vern. 488.

One for 300*l.* grants a rent of 60*l.* per annum for seven years ; whether redeemable. Fawcet v. Bowers, 2 Vern. 287.

A rent-charge of 20*l.* granted in consideration of 240*l.*, redeemable on repayment of the consideration to the grantee's heirs, within a year after notice of the death of his wife, ceases on repayment of the sum stipulated to his executors, the conveyance being considered as a security for money. Stokes v. Verrier, 3 Swanst. 634.

Practice.]—An original bill sought relief against mortgagee in possession. He, by his answer, claimed under a conveyance from the plaintiff. By amendment, the plaintiff, abandoning the relief under the mortgage title, sought to avoid the conveyance. A motion by the mortgagee that the amended bill might be taken off the file, or that the plaintiff might pay the costs up to the amendment, was refused. Allen v. Spring, 22 Beav. 615.

—— Question for Jury.]—In ejectment, the plaintiff and the defendant claiming to have purchased the premises, and the defendant having, in fact, had them knocked down to him at an auction, but the plaintiff having paid the deposit and the purchase-money, and had the estate conveyed to him ; the case for the defendant being that the plaintiff was to advance the money to him for the purchase, and that the estate should be conveyed to the plaintiff only by way of mortgage, the question was left to the jury whether this was so understood by or agreed on between the parties. Braddock v. Derisley, 1 F. & F. 60.

5. Subject-Matter.

Real Property.]—A mortgagor, by the deed of mortgage, charged the property by a description in several particulars, and the deed continued, "all which said several closes, pieces or parcels of land had been then lately thrown together . . . and were situate in . . . and were then in the occupation of S. as tenant thereof to the mortgagor, or by whatever other name or names, description or descriptions, the said lands had been theretofore or were then called or known, with the appurtenances, and all the estate and interest of the mortgagor in the same, with the repayment . . ." of the money lent. The parts particularised were freehold, but part of the other property in the occupation of S. as tenant of the mortgagor was leasehold. In an action against a solicitor for misrepresentation, it was part of the case of misrepresentation that the solicitor had told the mortgagor that he had a charge upon freehold land, when, in fact, part of the land was leasehold. In the defence, it was contended that the mortgage did not extend, and was never intended to extend, beyond the parts particularised :—Held, that the charge was not confined to the parcels particularised, but comprised all the estate and interest, whatever it might be, of the mortgagor in the property then in the occupation of S. as his tenant. Young v. Wallingford, 52 L. J., Ch. 590 ; 48 L. T. 756 ; 31 W. R. 838.

A lord of a manor, which was situated in the parish of K., in the county of M., being entitled also to other real estate in K., not parcel of the manor, mortgaged this last-mentioned estate, not including the manor, to A. Afterwards, by a deed reciting that he was seised of or entitled to the messuages, lands, hereditaments and premises thereinafter intended to be conveyed, subject to the mortgage to A., he conveyed to B., by way of mortgage, all the property comprised in the mortgage to A., "and all other the lands, tenements and hereditaments in the county of M., whereof or whereto the mortgagor is seised or entitled for any estate of inheritance" :—Held, that the manor of K. was not included in this mortgage to B. Rooke v. Kensington (Lord), 2 K. & J. 753 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 795 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 755 ; 4 W. R. 829.

A mortgage was expressed to comprise by way of grant in fee "all and every the estate, right, title, property and interest of the mortgagor of and in all and every those two fields or parcels of land, containing together about twenty-two acres or thereabouts, situate at and abutting upon the main road at" H., and "bounded upon one side by" B. lane, "and also of and in all and every other, if any, the lands, hereditaments and premises at H. aforesaid of, in or to which the mortgagor hath any estate, right, title, property or interest." All of the mortgagor's property at H. was freehold, except a strip of land of about three-quarters of an acre which lay between the freeholds and B. lane, and which was of copyhold tenure :—Held, that the copyhold strip passed under the general words and was included in the mortgage. Rooke v. Kensington (2 K. & J. 753), and Crompton v. Jarratt (30 Ch. D. 298) distinguished. Early v. Rathbone, 57 L. J., Ch. 652 ; 58 L. T. 517.

Semble, having regard to the position of the property and the description in the deed, the copyhold strip was included in the parcels themselves. Ib.

A. being possessed of an undivided moiety of a messuage in Ratcliffe highway, in fee, and having a lease of the other moiety with covenants to repair and to insure and not to assign without licence, by a deed—reciting that he was seised in fee of the messuage in Ratcliffe highway, and also of two leaseholds, one in Newgate street, the other in Crawford street—granted to C., by way of mortgage in fee, all his estate and interest in the messuage in Ratcliffe highway, in the most general words, and also granted to C. an underlease of the premises in Crawford street, and covenanted to assign to her the premises in Newgate street, to secure payment of a debt :—Held, that the undivided moiety in fee which A. had in the messuage in Ratcliffe highway alone passed by this deed, and not his leasehold interest in the other moiety. Francis v. Minton, 36 L. J., C. P. 201 ; L. R. 2 C. P. 543 ; 16 L. T. 352 ; 15 W. R. 788.

A party being seised in fee of a piece of land called "the Lydes," built thereon a row of houses called "Somerset place." While this row was yet unfinished, he agreed to charge with the repayment of a certain sum four houses which were part of such row, and which were particularly specified, and "also all and every other the messuages or dwelling-houses, lands, hereditaments and fee farm ground-rents, also situate and lying in Somerset place, adjoining the said unfinished dwelling-houses." Subsequently to the date of this agreement, he constructed a reservoir in the lawn before the houses, and let out the water to different persons at a rent. He also built a house, called "Ivy House," on a further corner of the land called "the Lydes," and which was separated from the lawn by the road which ran round the lawn, and which led to the houses :—Held, that the reservoir (which had not been noticed in an agreement of further charge made subsequent to its construction) and "Ivy House" were charged by the agreement first mentioned. Turner v. Dickenson, 3 Cl. & F. 593.

Colliery.]—Primâ facie a mortgage of a colliery is a mortgage of the colliery business as a going concern, and passes the right to work the mines. A mortgage of the land and beds and seams of coal, so construed. Whitley v. Challis. ([1892] 1 Ch. 64) distinguished. County of Gloucester Bank v. Rudry Merthyr Steam, &c., Co., 64 L. J., Ch. 451 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 629 ; 12 R. 183 ; 72 L. T. 375 ; 43 W. R. 486 ; 2 Manson, 223—C. A.

Chattels.]—A mortgage of chattels, without delivery of possession to the mortgagee, is valid, if the mortgagor's continuing in possession is consistent with the terms of the deed. Reed v. Willmott, 5 M. & P. 553 ; 7 Bing. 577.

A mortgage of a personal chattel may be made without deed. Flory v. Denny, 7 Ex. 581 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 223.

Goodwill.]—Although in some cases the goodwill of trade premises passes to a mortgagee, that does not apply to the case when the goodwill depends on the personal skill of the owner. Cooper v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 53 L. J., Ch. 109 ; 25 Ch. D. 472 ; 50 L. T. 602 ; 32 W. R. 709—C. A.

The goodwill of a mortgaged public-house belongs to the mortgagor's trustee in liquidation as against the mortgagee. Punnett, Ex parte, Kitchin, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 212 ; 16 Ch. D. 226 ; 44 L. T. 226 ; 29 W. R. 129—C. A.

Stock.]—A mortgagee who has advanced money on the security of stock for a fixed period is bound, in the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, to return the identical stock pledged at the expiration of the loan, and for this purpose stock is as capable of identification as any other security. If he sells the stock in pledge during the currency of the loan, he is accountable to the mortgagor for any profit made by the sale. Langton v. Waite, 37 L. J., Ch. 345 ; L. R. 6 Eq. 165. See S. C. on appeal, L. R. 4 Ch. 402 ; 17 W. R. 475.

Insurance Policy.]—In a second mortgage of personal estate, whether in possession or expectancy, "except book debts and securities for money" :—Held, that a policy of insurance was a security for money, and therefore excepted. Lawrance v. Galsworthy, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1049.

Bills of Exchange.]—Bills of exchange are not proper subjects of mortgage, and are primâ facie presumed to be given in part payment as they become due. Hills v. Parker, 14 L. T. 107 —H. L.

Fixtures.]—A house fitted up for and intended to be used as a club was mortgaged with all fixtures therein :—Held, that, in determining what articles were included as "fixtures," regard must be had to the intention of the parties, the one in mortgaging and the other in taking a security for the sum advanced ; and that such things as were substantially part of the house so that they could not be removed without depriving the house of what was intended to be used with it must be regarded as fixtures. Smith v. Maclure, 32 W. R. 459.

A mortgage of premises will pass the fixtures upon the premises. Meux v. Jacobs, 44 L. J., Ch. 481 ; L. R. 7 H. L. 481 ; 32 L. T. 171 ; 23 W. R. 526.

A mortgage of a lease made by the lessee will carry the fixtures of that property which is in lease, and the power to remove which fixtures was in the tenant. Ib.

Fixtures attached by the mortgagor to the property after the date of the mortgage, will also (unless under special stipulations) pass to the mortgagee. Ib.

There is no difference in this respect between a mortgage in fee by a freeholder and a mortgage by way of assignment of a term by a leaseholder. Ib.

—— Mortgage by Sub-demise.]—Words, which are sufficient when used in a conveyance in fee to pass trade fixtures, are also sufficient to pass them when used in a demise. Southport Banking Company v. Thompson, 57 L. J., Ch. 114 ; 37 Ch. D. 64 ; 58 L. T. 143 ; 36 W. R. 113—C. A.

By a mortgage by sub-demise, a corn-mill and other leasehold premises, together with certain fixtures specifically mentioned, and constituting the motive power of the mill, were conveyed by sub-demise to the mortgagees, to secure a sum due to them by the mortgagors. The deed contained the following general words:—"Together with all buildings, fixtures, rights, lights, easements," &c.:—Held, that the word "fixtures" in the general words was not restricted to fixtures ejusdem generis with those previously specifically mentioned, but was intended to extend and enlarge that class; and that, therefore, the trade fixtures in the mill passed by the sub-demise to the mortgagees. The observations of Blackburn, J., in Hawtry v. Butlin (L. R. 8 Q. B. 293) explained. Ib.

Trade Fixtures and Machinery.]—A mortgagor in possession of premises let them to a tenant who brought on to them certain trade fixtures. The mortgagee subsequently entered and sold the premises under the power of sale contained in the mortgage:—Held, that the fixtures did not pass under the mortgage, but remained the property of the tenant. Sanders v. Davis, 54 L. J., Q. B. 576; 15 Q. B. D. 218; 33 W. R. 655.

A limited company, lessees of a colliery, in 1883 demised it to their bankers, by way of mortgage, together with all fixed machinery and machines then standing and being, or thereafter to stand and be, upon the mortgaged premises. In July, 1889, the company entered into an agreement with certain vendors for the erection by them at the colliery of a machine. The purchase-money was to be paid by monthly instalments; and it was also provided that, immediately on the vendors receiving payment of the balance, the machine should become the property of the company; but that, until fully paid for, it should remain the property of the vendors. The machine was erected, and commenced working in August, 1890. The company paid the first two instalments of the purchase-money, but failed to pay any further instalments. In February, 1891, the bankers brought an action to enforce their security, and a receiver was appointed, who took possession of the colliery. Shortly afterwards the company resolved to wind up voluntarily; and, in May, a supervision order was made. The receiver now desired to give up possession of the colliery:—Held, that the provision in the agreement that the machine, until fully paid, should remain the property of the vendors was valid; that, notwithstanding the form of the mortgage deed, the company could not confer on their mortgagees a better title to the machine than they themselves had; and that, consequently, the vendors were now entitled to remove the machine. Cumberland Union Banking Co. v. Maryport Hematite Iron Co., 61 L. J., Ch. 227; [1892] 1 Ch. 415; 66 L. T. 108; 40 W. R. 280.

The defendants supplied and fixed for E., a nurseryman, on his premises, which were mortgaged to the plaintiff, a trade fixture, which, according to a hire-and-purchase agreement between E., E.'s landlord and the defendants prior to the mortgage, was to remain the property of the defendants till the instalments of purchase-money were paid. The plaintiff took the mortgage without notice of the agreement. E. having made default in payment of the instalments, the defendants removed the fixture before the plaintiff entered into possession:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to remove the fixture. Sanders v. Davis (15 Q. B. D. 218) and Cumberland Union Banking Co. v. Maryport Hematite Iron and Steel Co., [1892] 1 Ch. 415) followed. Gough v. Wood, 63 L. J., Q. B. 564; [1894] 1 Q. B. 713; 9 R. 509; 70 L. T. 297; 42 W. R. 469—C. A.

A mortgagee, as against the assignees of the tenant of the mortgagor, is entitled to trade fixtures affixed to the freehold by such tenant subsequently to the date of the mortgage. Cullwick v. Swindell, 36 L. J., Ch. 173; L. R. 3 Eq. 249; 15 W. R. 216.

A lessee erected trade fixtures, firmly attached to the freehold, but removable as between himself and the landlord. He then mortgaged the premises by way of demise by the same description as that in the lease, and without referring to the new erections, the sum secured being a floating balance limited to an amount greater than the premises would be worth without the fixtures. He became bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to the fixtures. Bentley, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 591; 6 Jur. 719.

The S. company carried on the business of manufacturing zinc and spelter, sulphuric acid, and zinc oxide on leasehold premises. They had erected a number of cupola and other furnaces for the purposes of their manufacture, which as between them and their landlord, were admitted to be trade fixtures. In 1880 the company conveyed the land and buildings comprised in its lease to trustees for debenture-holders upon trust, to permit the company to carry on business until default in payment of the debentures or winding-up, and then to sell. In 1883 the company executed a second mortgage to trustees, for a second set of debenture holders, which comprised, besides the land and buildings, all stock-in-trade, stock of ores, and loose plant and material. It appeared that, in the course of smelting metals for the company's business, small quantities of gold and silver were given off in the form of vapour, and become imbedded in the bricks lining the furnaces. The company having been ordered to be wound up, the trustees of the first mortgage deed entered and sold. The second mortgagees took out a summons that they might be allowed to enter, and remove the gold, silver, and other metal imbedded in the said bricks, claiming that it was included in their mortgage and not in the first. It was admitted that the metals could not be extracted without pulling down the furnaces and pounding up some of the bricks:—Held, that the doctrine of trade fixtures has no application as between mortgagee and mortgagor; that, whatever might have been the case between landlord and tenant, the mortgagee was entitled to everything which his mortgagor, intentionally or not, for trade fixtures or otherwise, had fixed to the mortgaged premises; and that the summons must be dismissed. Tottenham v. Swansea Zinc Ore Co., 52 L. T. 738.

Mortgage of iron works and rolling-mills with the machinery specified in schedule, "and all engines, machinery, fixtures and things which might thereafter be fixed and fastened in or upon the premises, whether in addition or substitution":—Held, that the words "fastened in or upon the premises" governed the sentence, and that subsequent additions, consisting of an engine for turning a lathe, a steam-hammer and an anvil, a boiler and a furnace, passed to the mortgagees; but that cutters, bed plate, straightening plate, and the metal flooring of the mill, did not. Metropolitan Counties Insurance Society v. Brown, 26 Beav. 454; 28 L. J., Ch. 581; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 378; 7 W. R. 303.

Under an assignment of the machinery, fastened in or upon a mill, an anvil, though not fastened or fixed to it, passes, as essential to a fixed steam-hammer. Ib.

By a registered deed made in 1875, the owners of a mill mortgaged in fee to the plaintiffs, the mill, together with all the engines, plant, machinery, and gear described in the schedule. The schedule included certain driving belts which connected the power machinery with certain machines, which were so affixed as to be part of the realty. The machines could not be worked without the belts, which would only fit other machines of nearly the same size. These belts were passed round the shafting and then laced together and could not be removed from the shafting without being unlaced. They could be slipped off the machines when the machines and shafting were not in motion. The mortgage contained no power to deal with the belts separately from the freehold. The defendant, a trustee in bankruptcy of one of the mortgagors, removed the belts. In an action against him by the plaintiffs to recover the value:—Held, that the belts being essential parts of the fixed machines formed part of the realty, and as such passed under the mortgage deed, which, therefore, did not require registration under the Bills of Sale Act, 1854. Sheffield and South Yorkshire Permanent Building Society v. Harrison, 54 L. J., Q. B. 15; 15 Q. B. D. 358; 51 L. T. 649; 33 W. R. 144—C. A.

Two persons, carrying on business in copartnership as copper roller manufacturers, executed a mortgage of the land, mills or factories on which the business was carried on, and of which they were seised in fee, and all and singular the steam-engine, steam-boilers, mill-gear, millwright work and machinery then or thereafter to be fixed to the said lands, hereditaments and premises, together with all outhouses, edifices, fixtures, &c. The partners having become bankrupts:—Held, that the mortgagees were entitled, as against the assignees, to all machinery which was fixed to the freehold. Mather v. Fraser, 2 K. & J. 536; 25 L. J., Ch. 361; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 900; 4 W. R. 387.

A mortgage was effected of certain plots of land, and "also all that silk-mill then erected, or in the course of erection, and all other buildings then or thereafter to be erected thereon, and also all those the steam-engines or steam-engine boilers, steam-pipes, main shafting, mill-gearing, millwrights' work, and other machinery and fixtures whatsoever, then erected or set up, or standing or being, or which should at any time thereafter be erected or set up, or stand or be, in or upon the land, mill and premises, or any part thereof":—Held, that all the machinery and fixtures used in the manufacturing of silk within the mill were included in the mortgage. Haley v. Hammersley, 3 De G., F. & J. 587; 30 L. J., Ch. 771; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 765; 4 L. T. 269; 9 W. R. 562.

A banking company entered into an agreement dated the 29th May, 1886, to sell certain paper-mills and machinery to the L. Company for 20,000*l.* to be paid by instalments. By clause 2 of the agreement it was provided that upon payment of the first two instalments the bank should convey the premises to the L. Company, upon their executing a mortgage for the balance of the purchase-money, and that the mortgage should contain a clause enabling the bank, in case the business of the L. Company should be suspended, to re-enter and take possession of the premises, and of everything which should have been built or placed thereon, and which should not require registration within the Bills of Sale Act, 1878, and to hold the same for their own use and benefit absolutely, but without prejudice to the liability of the L. Company for the unpaid balance of the purchase-money. This agreement was not registered as a bill of sale. The first two instalments of the purchase-money were paid, but no conveyance or mortgage of the property was executed in pursuance of the agreement. The L. Company entered into and held possession of the property until a winding-up order was made on the 7th February, 1887. The bank thereupon re-entered on the property. The official liquidator of the L. Company asked by summons for delivery up of a paper-making machine and all other trade machinery attached to the mills. The bank claimed possession of the fixtures and trade machinery under their vendors' lien:—Held, that the position of the parties under the agreement was the same as if a conveyance and mortgage of the property had been actually executed; and that the agreement to mortgage did not extend to any property which required registration under the Bills of Sale Acts, and the trade machinery was therefore not included in the security; and must be delivered up to the liquidator of the L. Company, but in other respects the agreement remained valid. London and Lancashire Paper Mills Co., In re, 58 L. T. 798.

Stock-in-Trade.]—A mortgage of a foundry, with the engines, fixtures, machinery, tools, and working plant therein, described the chattels assigned as being "more particularly enumerated and specified in an inventory of even date herewith, to be signed by the parties hereto, and read and construed as forming part of these presents." The deed contained no mention of stock-in-trade. The inventory, which was signed by the mortgagors on the same day as the deed, extended over twenty-one pages. The first twenty pages contained a detailed description of the engines and other chattels which were mentioned under general heads in the deed. At the bottom of page 20 was this clause: "The stock-in-trade consists of bolts, brass work, wrought and cast-iron work, brass and other work, both finished and in preparation." And at the top of page 21 were these words: "Also all cast and wrought iron, steel, timber, and all other stock-in-trade in and upon the before-mentioned foundry, workshops and premises." Then came this clause: "The contents of the twenty preceding sheets is a complete and exact inventory of the fixtures, machinery, utensils, and things in, upon or about the foundry mortgaged by us this day." This was immediately followed by the signatures of the mortgagors:—Held, that the stock-in-trade was not included in the mortgage. Jardine, Ex parte, McManus, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 58; L. R. 10 Ch. 322; 32 L. T. 681; 23 W. R. 736.

A trader (being solvent) mortgaged his furniture, shop-fittings and stock-in-trade and book debts for securing a debt due and a new advance. The bankrupt being permitted to have possession of those goods, and being in possession also of other personal chattels to which the creditor's security did not extend, the bankrupt's landlord distrained for rent, not upon the former only, but upon both sets of goods. The person in possession under this distress was requested by the mortgagee, and consented, to hold possession of the goods for him, as well as for the landlord, without prejudice to the landlord's rights. A sale took place under the distress. The goods which were the subject of the distress were not all sold, but they included some of those which were the subject of the mortgagee's security, while the goods to which the security did not extend remained unsold. A fiat having issued against the mortgagor, the mortgagee petitioned to have his security declared as against the remaining furniture, the stock-in-trade at present existing and the book debts:—Held, that the mortgagee's security extended only to such of the furniture, fixtures and stock-in-trade and property purporting to be included in the assignment as were in the house and shop at its date, and remained at the time of the bankruptcy. Stephenson, Ex parte, 1 De G. 586; 17 L. J., Bk. 5; 12 Jur. 6.

Sheep and their Increase.]—By an indenture of mortgage made between B. & W., certain flocks of sheep and certain herds branded B., then depasturing on a station in the colony of Victoria, "together with all and singular the issue, increase and produce of the sheep and cattle respectively," were assigned by B. to W. by way of mortgage. By a subsequent indenture of mortgage reciting the former indenture, B. assigned "all the issue, increase and progeny of the sheep" on the station to P. and D., with a power of sale. Previously and subsequently to the latter indenture, B. purchased and brought upon the station large additions to the flock of sheep, and branded them with the letter B. B. also obtained a lease of the station, and deposited it with P. and D. as additional security:—Held, on a bill filed by W., after a sale by P. and D. both of the sheep and the lease, praying for payment of advances out of the proceeds of the sale of all the sheep and the lease, first, that by the words "increase of the sheep" in the first indenture was meant the natural increase or offspring of the original sheep mortgaged, and that such words did not include additions made to the flock by purchase. Webster v. Power, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 92; 37 L. J., P. C. 9; L. R. 2 P. C. 69.

Held, secondly, that the mortgagees under the first indenture of mortgage were precluded from claiming the proceeds of the sale of the lease or any personal equity to have the sheep purchased substituted for the original sheep, no such claim having been raised by the original bill. Ib.

Harbour Dues.]—By virtue of an act mortgages were granted by harbour trustees of the tonnage rates and duties of the harbour. By subsequent acts the rates and dues had been altered and changed in substitution of the rates and duties so mortgaged:—Held, that the present rates and dues were virtually mortgaged, the subsequent acts not extinguishing the mortgagees' rights or remedies, and a decree was made for account and payment of principal and interest accordingly. Postlethwaite v. Maryport Harbour Trustees, 20 L. T. 138.

Generally.]—As to the extent and priority of a mortgage security, see the case of Fournier v. Paine, 9 Bligh (N.S.) 282. S. C., nom. Fournier v. Dickenson, 3 Cl. & F. 593.

In Fee—Subsequent Allotment.]—A man mortgages an estate in fee without noticing rights of common. Afterwards allotments made to him in respect of his rights of common by virtue of an inclosure act, which enacts that the allotted lands shall be subject to the same uses as the lands in respect of which they are allotted. Semble, the legal estate in the allotments passes to the mortgagor, and not the mortgagee. Lloyd v. Douglas, 4 Y. & C. 448; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 34.

By Tenant for Life.]—A tenant for life in possession of settled estates, with power to charge them with a principal sum and interest for his own benefit, exercised the power and mortgaged the principal and interest thus charged, together with property of his own, for a larger amount than that of the charge, and kept down the interest on the whole mortgage moneys. The rents and profits of the settled estates were insufficient to pay the interest of the sum charged under the power:—Held, after the death of the tenant for life, that his mortgagees were not entitled to a charge on the inheritance for the deficiency. Kensington (Lord) v. Bouverie, 7 H. L. Cas. 559; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 105—H. L. Reversing 7 De G. M. & G. 134.

By a private act, lands and stock were vested in trustees, upon trust to pay the yearly income to C., or for his benefit, as by the act provided; and the court of chancery, on the application of C. or the trustees, might, in accordance with the act, and so far as the rules of law and equity and the jurisdiction of the court would admit, make orders and give directions so as to ensure that the life estate of C. should be inalienable, and be applied solely for his exclusive personal enjoyment. An order in conformity with this last provision was made by Romilly, M. R., subsequently to which C. became indebted for money lent to the plaintiff, to whom he mortgaged his life-estate, as a security for the loan, in respect of which he gave a judgment. The plaintiff applied to the trustees, who resisted payment on the ground of the act and order, and the bill was filed by the plaintiff to enforce his security against C.'s life estate. To this bill a demurrer by the trustees was overruled. Green v. Mortimer, 3 L. T. 642—L.JJ.

Contingent Remainder—Destruction of—Acquisition of New Interest.]—A contingent remainderman conveyed his interest to secure a debt. The remainder was afterwards destroyed by the tenant of the prior estate: the remainderman afterwards acquired a new interest in the property under the will of that tenant:—Held, that it was available to the creditor. Noel v. Bewley, 3 Sim. 103.

Reversionary Interest.]—A. mortgaged to B. his reversionary interest in 3,681*l.* stock, which the deed represented as standing in the names of two executors of a testator to secure three annuities. A. gave notice to the executors. There was no such sum standing in the names of the executors, but there was a sum of 2,080*l.* standing in the name of the testator, and a second sum of 2,451*l.* in the name of one of the executors, to answer the annuities. A subsequent incumbrancer on the whole fund also gave notice to the executors :—Held, that A.'s security was limited to 3,681*l.* stock. Woodburn v. Grant, 22 Beav. 483.

Share of Residue.]—A residuary legatee, having an option of purchase of real property of a testator, elected to purchase, and afterwards, by a voluntary deed, assigned his share of the moneys to arise from the testator's estate to trustees to secure 3,000*l.* thereby settled. The purchase-money of the real property was afterwards deducted from the purchaser's share of residue :—Held, that the 3,000*l.* was charged, not merely on the balance of the residuary share, but also upon the purchased realty. Harrison v. Barton, 1 John. & H. 287.

After-acquired Property.]—A mortgagor by deed assigned to the mortgagee all his household goods and farming stock, and "also all moneys of or to which he then was or might during the security become entitled, under any settlement, will or other document, either in his own right, or as the devisee, legatee, or next of kin of any person"; and also all real and personal property "of, in, or to which he was or during that security should become beneficially seised, possessed, entitled, or interested, for any vested, contingent, or possible estate or interest." The mortgagor afterwards became entitled under a will to a share of the personal estate of the testator :—Held, that the assignment of after-acquired property was divisible; and that, although the general assignment of all property to which the mortgagor might become entitled might be too wide, as to which the court gave no decision, the assignment for valuable consideration of all moneys to which he should become entitled under any will operated as a contract which the court would enforce, and that the share of the personal estate of the testator was accordingly included in the mortgagor's security. Belding v. Read (3 H. & C. 955) questioned. Clarke, In re, Coombe v. Carter, 56 L. J., Ch. 981; 36 Ch. D. 348; 57 L. T. 823; 36 W. R. 293—C. A.

By Trustee beneficially Interested.]—A widow who, under her marriage settlement and otherwise, was entitled to annual and other sums charged on her husband's estates, was one of the trustees of his will, whereby the estates were devised in trust to raise 2,000*l.* for her benefit, and subject thereto in trust to convey the estates as the testator's daughter by a former marriage should direct. The daughter borrowed money upon the security of a mortgage of some of the estates, in which the widow and her co-trustee joined, and whereby, after reciting the will and the agreement for the loan, and that the daughter had directed the widow and her co-trustee to make such conveyance as was thereinafter contained, the widow and her co-trustee, as devisees in trust, by the direction of the daughter, conveyed the estates to the mortgagee upon trusts for sale and for payment of the mortgage debt, and of the surplus as the daughter should appoint, and subject thereto according to the trusts of the will :—Held, firstly, that the mortgage did not pass the beneficial interest of the widow; secondly, that, nevertheless, her charges must be postponed to the mortgage, she having concurred in it, without reserving her priority. Stronge v. Hawkes, 4 De G. M. & G. 186.

By Executor.]—An executor, who was also a legatee, borrowed 5,000*l.*, and gave the lender a memorandum reciting that the money was borrowed for the purposes of the will, and agreeing to charge the trust estate, "so far as he could and lawfully might," and his legacy, and a policy, which was part of the assets, with the repayment, and to execute a mortgage. Afterwards the executor borrowed from the same person 400*l.*, and by a deed reciting the will and stating certain sums to be due from the estate to the executor, and that the executor owed the lender 900*l.*, the executor assigned to the lender all the sums mentioned to be due from the estate to the executor by way of security for the 900*l.*, with interest :—Held, that the lender had by this deed given up such claim, if any, against the testator's estate, as he had under the memorandum, and could only establish a security upon the executor's beneficial interest. Brettle, In re, Brettle v. Burdett, 2 De G. J. & S. 244.

Leaseholds.]—Where, after a mortgage of leasehold for a term, the mortgagor and mortgagee joined in a lease of part of the premises for the residue of the term, at a rent of 3*l.* per annum, payable to the mortgagor, his executors, &c., with a clause reserving a right of entry to him, &c., in case of nonpayment of the rent, and declaring that nothing should affect the rights of the mortgagee under the mortgage deed so far as affected the entirety of the premises. On the mortgagor becoming bankrupt :—Held, that the tenant was entitled to his lease, exempt from the mortgage, but that the mortgagee and not the assignees was entitled to the rent of 3*l.* Edwards v. Jones, 1 Coll. C. C. 247; 13 L. J., Ch. 371; 8 Jur. 416.

A new lease obtained by a mortgagee of a leasehold interest, which had been evicted for nonpayment of rent, taken after the expiration of the six and nine months allowed to the lessee and mortgagee to redeem by statute 3 Geo. 1, c. 2, s. 4, but in pursuance of a contract entered into in the period between the six and nine months, if the parties interested did not redeem, is not a graft upon the former lease, nor a trust for the lessee, the mortgagee not being in possession, nor procuring the lease behind the back of the lessee. The principles on which courts of equity, in considering renewed interests obtained by mortgagees, trustees, &c., to be grafts, are, that the advantage was procured either by being in possession, or, when out of it, by contrivance to oust the lessee of the benefit of renewal. Nesbitt v. Tredennick, 1 Ball & B. 29, 46; 12 R. R. 1.

One possessed of a renewable term, mortgages to J. S., who gains a new term from the original landlord, to commence after the old one; this new term shall be subject to the old equity of redemption. Rakestraw v. Brewer, 2 P. Wms. 511; Sel. Ch. Ca. 55; Moseley, 189.

The defendants, who were entitled to the equity of redemption of leaseholds charged with a mortgage, attempted to get rid of it by fraudulently incurring a forfeiture, which they induced the lessor to take advantage of. They afterwards obtained a new lease from him, which they sold :—Held, that the new lease was subject to the mortgage, notwithstanding the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, ss. 2, 10, and a decree was made for payment by the defendants of the mortgage, with costs. Hughes v. Howard, 25 Beav. 575.

Attendant Term.]—Right of mortgagees to the benefit of a term attendant on the inheritance, though the term was not assigned, nor the inheritance conveyed to them. Buckinghamshire (Earl) v. Hobart, 3 Swanst. 201; 19 R. R. 197.

Mortgage after Contract for Sale.]—A mortgage made subsequently to a contract for the sale of an estate conveys to the mortgagees only that which the vendor is entitled to under that contract. If the mortgagee gives no notice of an intention to interfere with the contract, its stipulations remain as before, and affect the mortgagee as they would have affected the mortgagor. Rose v. Watson, 10 H. L. Cas. 672.

Lapse of Time.]—Where there is a mortgage over several denominations of land, and the mortgagor subsequently sells some of the denominations to a purchaser for valuable consideration, without the concurrence of the mortgagee, and the interest due under the mortgage is regularly paid out of the remaining denominations, the lands sold are not discharged from the mortgage, although no proceedings have been taken against them within twenty years (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28). Muskerry, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 94.

Recital notwithstanding.]—Mortgagee held, notwithstanding a recital in the declaration of trust, to have obtained a security to the extent of the interest of mortgagor in the premises. Sheldon v. Cox, 2 Eden, 224.

By a deed, dated in 1847, entered into between A. and his son B., and C., after reciting that A. and B. were indebted to C. in 10,000*l.* advanced by him, and that C. was then liable, as surety on behalf of A. and B., to R. B. and J. T. for a further sum of 3,000*l.* advanced by them, it was further recited that the deed was executed in favour of C. "as well to give further security for the 10,000*l.* as to secure him from all sums of money which he might pay, or become liable to pay in discharge of his liability to R. B. and J. T." At the time the deed was executed it was asserted by C., and understood and believed by A. and B., that C. was under legal liability to repay R. B. and J. T. the 3,000*l.*; whereas, in fact, he was only morally liable to see that their debt was discharged. A. in his examination stated that, had the real facts been known at the time of the execution of the deed, this debt would have been included therein. In 1849 B. executed a creditors' deed in favour of L., as trustee, for the benefit of the creditors of A. and B. L. filed a bill against C., praying an account of what was due to C. under the deed of 1847, and contesting his right to be allowed the 3,000*l.*:—Held, that C. not being legally liable for the repayment of the 3,000*l.*, the plaintiff was, notwithstanding the recital in the deed of 1847, in taking the account entitled to have the 3,000*l.* disallowed. Lake v. Bruton, 25 L. J., Ch. 842; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 839—L.JJ.

Practice.]—In suits for redemption and foreclosure, F., a third mortgagee (who was also first mortgagee), on taking the accounts, raised a question as to the validity of the security in regard to certain chattels expressed to be comprised in it. The court being of opinion that the question ought to have been raised at the hearing, and could not be raised afterwards:—Held, consequently, that the respective mortgages must be taken to comprise what was expressed to be included in them. Begbie v. Fenwick, Fenwick v. Begbie, L. R. 6 Ch. 869; 25 L. T. 441; 20 W. R. 67.

Order to Execute Disentailing Deed.]—In a mortgage suit by a judgment creditor of a tenant in tail in possession, the latter was ordered to execute a disentailing deed, in order to give full effect to the plaintiff's charge. Lewis v. Duncombe, 20 Beav. 398.

b. Charge.

Contingent Liability.]—A security to be held as long as any debt shall be due or growing due cannot be retained to answer the contingent liability of the mortgagor as drawer or indorser of a current bill. Merchants' Bank of London v. Maud, 18 W. R. 312.

Attorney's Charges.]—Attorney acting as agent for mortgagor and mortgagee, and as agent and quasi banker for mortgagor, will not be allowed to charge the mortgaged premises with a greater sum (although actually advanced by him on account of his principal and client, and within the amount of the sum to be borrowed on mortgage) than shall be proved to have been really paid to him in money by mortgagees on account of, and as agent for, mortgagor; nor will the most minute fraction advanced by him to make up the integral sum of mortgaged money, be allowed to stand as a charge on the estate. Lewis v. Morgan, 5 Price, 42; 4 R. R. 860.

Mortgage to secure Balance with Bank—Reduction by Sale.]—A. mortgaged an estate to a banking company with which he dealt, for the purpose of securing the balance that might at any time be due from him, so as the whole amount of principal to be ultimately recovered by virtue of the security should not exceed 5,800*l.* Afterwards three portions of the estate were sold with the concurrence of the banking company, and the money paid directly to them, but credit was given to A. for them in his account:—Held, that the moneys recoverable under the mortgage were reduced by these payments as far as they went. Johnson v. Bourne, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 268.

Mortgage to Surety—Further Bond by Heir of Surety.]—A. was bound as surety for B. in 4,000*l.*, and then B. conveyed a manor to him as a counter-security. A. died, and then his son D., and heir, became bound with B. for 2,000*l.* more, but there was no agreement that the mortgage should extend to secure the latter bond. Yet held, that the heir of B. (who died) shall not redeem without paying the whole. St. John v. Holford, 1 Ch. Ca. 97.

Money advanced for Investment.]—In 1875 L. advanced 800*l.* to C., his solicitor, to be invested by the latter. On the 12th February, 1876, L. asked C. for some evidence of the investment, and C. wrote and gave him a memorandum stating that the 800*l.* was in C.'s hand at interest at 5*l.* per cent., "being part of a large sum advanced to P. on security of freehold houses at K." C. afterwards died insolvent, and it then appeared that there was no mortgage by P., but that in 1873 P. and Y. had entered into a partnership arrangement for the purchase of houses at K.; C. by himself or his clients providing the purchase-money; P. executing the mortgages necessary to raise the money; P. paying back half the money provided by C. personally by the 1st November, 1876, and paying interest at 5*l.* per cent. in the meantime; and either party having the right to demand a sale after that date. A sum of nearly 7,000*l.* was due to C. on the 1st January, 1876:—Held, that L. was entitled to a charge on C.'s share of the proceeds of the sale of the houses to the extent of the 800*l.* and interest. Crowdy, In re, Burges v. Crowdy, 46 L. T. 71—C. A.

Defective Title.]—A., tenant for life, remainder to his son B. in tail. A. mortgaged to S., who, finding his title defective, sent 100*l.* to B., and took a mortgage from him of the same land. The son shall redeem, paying the 100*l.* only. Bromley v. Hamond, 2 Ch. Ca. 23.

Bonus.]—A mortgage was executed for 1,000*l.*, but the sum of 700*l.* only was advanced. The mortgagee alleged that, in consequence of the unsatisfactory nature of the security, he had agreed to advance only 700*l.*, the remaining 300*l.* being a bonus for the risk and hazard. The evidence supported this allegation. Upon a bill to redeem, upon payment of 700*l.*:—Held, that the mortgagor could only be entitled to a decree upon payment of the full sum of 1,000*l.* Potter v. Edwards, 26 L. J., Ch. 468.

Proviso limiting Amount recoverable.]—The mortgage of a leasehold public-house was to secure 700*l.*, and such further sums as might become due from the mortgagor to the mortgagees for money advanced, goods sold, or otherwise. The mortgage contained a power of sale, and it was declared that the sale moneys should, after payment of the costs of sale, or in anywise consequent on the mortgagor's default, and the reimbursement to the mortgagees of all moneys paid by them for insurance or repairs, or for keeping on foot the lease and the licences, be applied in payment of the principal and interest due on the mortgage, and, subject thereto, in payment of the principal and interest due to a second mortgagee, and that the surplus should be paid to the mortgagor, "Provided always that the total amount to be recovered by the mortgagee under these presents shall not exceed 900*l.*" The property was sold under the power, and on the account being taken by the court it was certified that at the time of the completion of the sale there was due to the mortgagees 1,415*l.* principal and 615*l.* interest, and that they had or might have received 396*l.* for rents and profits. The property sold for 2,650*l.* The 1,415*l.* included the 700*l.* lent and 88*l.* for goods supplied; the rest of it was made up of payments of rent and fire insurance:—Held, that the proviso limiting the amount recoverable did not apply to interest, or to outgoings incident to the possession of the premises which the mortgagor was bound to reimburse to the mortgagees, and that, as the sum due for moneys lent and goods supplied did not exceed the limit, the mortgagees were entitled to retain out of the proceeds of sale the balance due to them. White v. City of London Brewery, 58 L. J., Ch. 855; 42 Ch. D. 237; 61 L. T. 741; 38 W. R. 82—C. A.

Payment off by Third Person—Mortgage kept alive—Subrogation.]—The plaintiffs, at the request of trustees of a marriage settlement, and of the tenant for life under the settlement, paid off 600*l.*, part of a mortgage debt of 1,000*l.* on a leasehold house comprised in the settlement. There was no transfer of the 600*l.* of the mortgage debt to the plaintiffs, but interest was paid to them. On the death of the tenant for life the appointees of the leasehold house obtained a transfer to themselves from the mortgagee of the remaining mortgage debt of 400*l.*, and of the premises, but subject to the equity of redemption, and they also obtained the title deeds. The plaintiffs advanced 600*l.* out of the trust money. On action:—Held, that the mortgage was not discharged, but was kept alive to the extent of 600*l.*, that the doctrine of subrogation applied to the case, and the plaintiffs had a right to stand in the shoes of the trustees of the settlement. Patten v. Bond or Boyd, 60 L. T. 583; 37 W. R. 373.

Money entrusted to Solicitor for Investment.]—W. intrusted to P., his solicitor, 7,700*l.*, and verbally arranged with a clerk of P. for its investment on a mortgage of leaseholds at C., which investment P., by letter, informed him had been made as arranged with the clerk. P. having died insolvent, it was found that no mortgage in favour of W. existed, but that P. had advanced upwards of 100,000*l.* in his own name on mortgage of the property at C. Of this sum considerably more than 7,700*l.* had been advanced by P. between the date at which W. had intrusted that amount to him, and the date of the letter informing W. of the investment. Under an order of the court in a suit for the administration of the estate of P., the mortgage property was sold, and the proceeds carried to a separate account:—Held, that the advances made by P. on mortgage of the property at C. included the moneys intrusted to him by W., and that W. was entitled to repayment of such moneys out of the fund in court. Middleton v. Pollock, Wetherall, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 39; 4 Ch. D. 49; 35 L. T. 608; 25 W. R. 94.

Misconduct of Solicitor.]—B. borrowed 4,000*l.* of the trustees of H., and executed the mortgage deed, with a receipt for 4,000*l.* endorsed. 500*l.* was allowed by B.'s solicitor to be retained by W., solicitor for the mortgagees, and a bill being taken from W. for that amount by B.'s solicitor, without his knowledge. The money was lost, B.'s solicitor stating falsely to B.'s agent that it had been paid into his (B.'s) bankers. On a bill by B. to redeem, on the footing that 3,500*l.* and interest only was due, decree made in the usual way. Boyd v. Craster, 10 L. T. 480; 12 W. R. 787.

Bond for Arrears of Interest, not Paid.]—A mortgagee takes a bond from the assignee of the devisee for the arrears of interest then due, and gives a receipt; the bond is still unpaid; the interest is still secured by the mortgage. Hardwick v. Mynd, 1 Anst. 111; 3 R. R. 562.

Mistake.]—C., believing himself and three others to be entitled, under a will, to four-eighths of freehold and copyhold estates, joined them in a mortgage of his estates in the four-eighths to P. Subsequently it was discovered that the supposed last will had been revoked by a later will, by which the estates were devised to C. for life, but subject to several annuities, with remainders over:—Held, that the mortgage passed C.'s life interest in the entire four-eighths, and was the first incumbrance on one one-eighth of the copyholds to which P. had been admitted. Carter v. Carter, 3 K. & J. 618; 27 L. J., Ch. 74; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 63.

Held, also, that although P. had acquired the legal estate in this one-eighth for valuable consideration, as it were, by accident, and without notice that the former will had been revoked, so that his conscience was not affected by any of the trusts to which, by the subsequent will, the estate was subjected, he must hold subject to those trusts, since the will by which they were created was the very instrument upon which his title to the legal estate depended. Ib.

B. mortgaged certain premises to C., and covenanted to insure, and, in the event of fire, to apply the insurance moneys in rebuilding the mortgaged premises. A fire took place, and B. rebuilt, but the premises so erected extended beyond the boundary line of the mortgaged property on to an adjoining slip of land belonging to the mortgagor. B. subsequently mortgaged this slip of land to H., and also gave him a second mortgage on the premises in mortgage to C.; and H. afterwards joined with C. in a demise of the whole of the property, the rent being made payable to C., all parties being under the impression that the premises originally mortgaged to C. comprehended the property subsequently mortgaged to H. Upon a bill filed by H., praying an apportionment of the rent:—Held, that it was a mistake of facts, against which the court would relieve; and an apportionment of the rent was decreed accordingly. Harryman v. Collins, 18 Beav. 11; 18 Jur. 501; 2 W. R. 189.

Other Cases.]—W., the owner and occupier of a public-house, gave to H. & Co., brewers, a mortgage to secure 1,300*l.*, and also all sums which should at any time be owing to them from W., "his executors, administrators, or assigns," on any account whatsoever. W. gave, by will, all his property to his wife for life, without any directions as to carrying on his business. Letters of administration, with the will annexed, were granted to the widow. The widow carried on the business, and was supplied with beer by H. & Co., to whom she from time to time made payments which discharged the moneys due to them from W. at his decease other than the 1,300*l.*, but a balance of 138*l.* was due from her to them at her decease for beer supplied. H. & Co. sold the property under a power of sale, and claimed to retain not only the 1,300*l.* but the 138*l.*:—Held, that, as the widow was assign of the public-house, the 138*l.* was covered by the security, and H. & Co. were entitled to retain it. Watts, In re, Smith v. Watts, 52 L. J., Ch. 209; 22 Ch. D. 5; 48 L. T. 167; 31 W. R. 262—C. A.

A. gave an undertaking to pay C. 35*l.* upon the execution of a mortgage from S. to B. S. conveyed to B. the property intended to be the subject of the mortgages, by assigning it to him in trust to sell it, and for B. to pay himself the sum advanced, and to pay 22*l.* to C. as part of his claim, and after other payments, which were specified, to pay the surplus to S. C. was not only aware of this arrangement, but was at one time intended to have been a trustee under the deed of assignment:—Held, that this conveyance was a mortgage within the meaning of the undertaking, but that C. could not recover, in an action upon the undertaking, the 22*l.* mentioned in the deed, as he had allowed that to become a subject of the trusts. Crook v. Beetham, 6 Car. & P. 761.

B., the owner of a lease of a house, assigned it to D. for the residue of the term by way of mortgage to secure 3,000*l.* and interest. D. submortgaged the debt, and assigned the house for the residue of the term, less three days, to E., to secure 1,200*l.* and interest. B. died, and, in an administration suit against his executors, D. and E. brought in a claim for 3,000*l.* B.'s executors assigned their equity of redemption to D. D. further sub-mortgaged the debt, and assigned the house for the residue of the term, less three days, to L., to secure 1,000*l.* and interest. D., by registered deed, assigned all his estate to trustees for the benefit of creditors. E. filed a bill against D.'s trustees and L. for foreclosure; B.'s executors not being parties. D.'s trustees disclaimed by answer, and L. was foreclosed. E., who had been paying the ground rent for some years, at length ceased, and the original lessors entered:—Held, that E. was entitled to prove against B.'s estate, which was insufficient, for the whole sum of 3,000*l.*; but that he was not to receive more than the amount due to him for principal, interest and costs on the 1,200*l.* mortgage debt. Burrell, In re, Burrell v. Smith, 38 L. J., Ch. 382; L. R. 7 Eq. 399; 17 W. R. 516.

Held, also, that the disclaimer by D.'s trustees extended only to matters in issue in the suit, and did not operate so as to enlarge the estate of E. Ib.

A. gave his acceptance to B. for 18,700*l.*, payable (six months after date) on the 5th of February, 1867, and it was discounted by a bank. A. mortgaged a station, and also mortgaged the stock upon it to B. to secure the repayment of 18,700*l.*, with interest at 12½ per cent., on the day above mentioned, and to secure the payment of any bill which the mortgagee might receive, take, make, or endorse by way of renewal or in substitution for the acceptance, or on account of all or any part of the sum therein mentioned, or on any other account incidental thereto. It was also stipulated in the mortgage of the stock that, if default should be made in payment by the mortgagor of the licence fees, or rent charges, fines, penalties and other charges which should become payable in respect of the station or run, or the stock thereon, or in relation thereto, the mortgagee might pay it, and the run, stock, &c., should be chargeable therewith. The bill was renewed from time to time, B. paying the discounts to the bank on A.'s behalf, and debiting A. with the amount in an account current rendered to A., in which he charged A. with interest and mercantile commissions:—Held, that, notwithstanding this mode of keeping the accounts, the amount of the advances for discounts was secured by the mortgage. Fenton v. Blackwood, L. R. 5 P. C. 167; 22 W. R. 562.

Held, also, that advances for payment of government rent due and for scab licences for sheep might be charged to the mortgage, but that sheep-wash could not. Ib.

K. & Co. accepted bills for L. & Co., and L. & Co. mortgaged to K. & Co. an estate to secure a cash credit, granted by K. & Co. to the extent of 75,000 dollars. There was a general current account between the two firms, both of whom became insolvent:—Held, that the mortgage was security for money advanced to meet the bills. City Bank v. Luckie, L. R. 5 Ch. 773; 23 L. T. 376; 18 W. R. 1181.

Account—Charge for Amount found Due.]—The tenant for life of property held by a mortgagee in possession filed a bill to redeem all the charges on the property, including a legacy charged upon it by the will of an ancestor of her testator; for an account of what was due to herself in respect of the excess of the rents received by the mortgagee beyond interest on the mortgage debt; for a charge upon the property in respect of what was so due; and for consequential relief:—Held, first, that she had a right to a charge upon the property for the excess. Colyer v. Colyer, Pawley v. Colyer, 3 De G. J. & S. 676; 11 W. R. 1051.

Held, secondly, that she had a right in case she redeemed, to all the costs of the suit as against the parties taking in remainder under her testator's will. Ib.

—— Disallowance—Construction of Recital and Covenant.]—In taking the mortgagees' accounts in a foreclosure action the following charges were disallowed—(1) for the costs of an order, made subsequent to the mortgage, appointing trustees under the Settled Land Act, 1882, for the purpose of leasing part of the mortgaged property; (2) for costs incurred by one of the mortgagors to the solicitor-mortgagee, as her solicitor, subsequently to the mortgage and in matters unconnected with it; and (3) a fee paid by the solicitor-mortgagee to the auctioneer-mortgagee for his valuation; the court holding that a recital and covenant in the mortgage deed read together, did not cover any of these charges. Field v. Hopkins, 44 Ch. D. 524; 62 L. T. 774—C. A. Affirming 59 L. J., Ch. 174.

Evidence.]—An indenture of mortgage contained a borrowing clause, and subsequently small sums were from time to time advanced by the mortgagee to the mortgagor; in a suit for the general administration of the estate of the mortgagor, the master, in taking the accounts, refused to report that the cash advances had been made on the security of the borrowing clause, or to allow interest thereon:—Held, on exceptions, that the report was wrong, and that the mortgagee was justified in referring these payments to the borrowing clause. Cairncross v. Bradley, 2 Dr. & Wal. 482.

Practice.]—A., being entitled to a remainder for his own life, after the decease of B., and to a remainder in tail, contingent on his having no male issue, in 1837, in consideration of 4,000*l.*, granted all his estate and interest, with a clause of redemption, on payment of 9,500*l.* All parties were under the impression that A.'s estate was for his life only. B. died in 1841. A. afterwards, by a deed, under the statute, converted his estate tail into a fee. The mortgage was in form for all A.'s interest, and the mortgagee filed the bill, praying for relief against all his interest:—Held, that in this suit A. could not rely on the nature of the transaction as a defence, without filing a cross bill. Richards v. Bayly, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 545; 1 Jo. & Lat. 120.

But, semble, the transaction would be impeachable within the rules relating to post obit securities, although A.'s remainder for life was contingent. Ib.

It was admitted that the contract for the mortgage was for the life estate only, and relief beyond that was waived. There was a judgment to secure the same sum:—Held, that the relief under the judgment, as well as the mortgage, must be confined to the life estate. Ib.

7. Further Advances.

New Security — Effect on old.]—A new security of as high an order for old debt and further advances does not necessarily prejudice the old security. Tenison v. Sweeny, 1 Jo. & Lat. 710; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 511.

Priority.]—Where there is a mortgage for present and future advances, and a subsequent mortgage of the same description, further advances made by the prior mortgagee, with notice of the subsequent mortgage, have no priority over antecedent advances made by the subsequent mortgagee. Rolt v. Hopkinson, 3 De G. & J. 177. Affirmed S. C., nom. Hopkinson v. Rolt, 9 H. L. Cas. 514; 34 L. J., Ch. 468; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1209; 5 L. T. 90; 9 W. R. 900.

—— Further Advances by first Mortgagee after Notice of Second Mortgage.]—The principle of the decision in the case of Hopkinson v. Rolt (9 H. L. Cas. 514), is not confined in its application to the law of England, but it is applicable also to the law of Scotland. M., who was indebted to the respondent bank, conveyed certain freehold property in Greenock to them to hold in accordance with the terms of a "back letter" "in security and until full and final payment of all sums of money due or which may hereafter become due by me to you." Some time afterwards she assigned all her remaining interest in the property to the appellant bank, as security for the balance due under two bills of exchange, and notice of this assignment was given to the respondents. After notice of the assignment the respondents made further advances to M. She afterwards became bankrupt, and the security proved insufficient to meet the claims of both banks:—Held, that the respondent bank had no power to bind the security by further advances after they had notice of the assignment to the appellant bank, notwithstanding the terms of the back letter. Union Bank of Scotland v. National Bank of Scotland, 12 App. Cas. 53; 56 L. T. 208—H. L. (Sc.) See also Lloyd's Banking Co. v. Jones, 54 L. J., Ch. 931; 29 Ch. D. 221; 52 L. T. 469; 33 W. R. 781; and Macnamara's Estate, In re, 13 L. R., Ir. 158.

Costs.]—A mortgage to secure future advances will not operate as a security for costs subsequently incurred. Shaw v. Neale, 6 H. L. Cas. 581; 27 L. J., Ch. 444; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 695; 6 W. R. 635.

Mortgage by N. to R., a solicitor, to secure present "and future advances," with subsequent registered judgment in favour of S., without notice of the mortgage. N. became indebted to R. for costs:—Held, that those costs were not bonâ fide advances, and that, upon S. redeeming R., the latter was not entitled to have those costs included in the account. Ib.

Evidence.]—A mortgagee having advanced to the mortgagor a further sum upon his bond:—Held, that the bond, though obscurely worded, was evidence of an agreement for a further charge upon the mortgaged premises. Hearn, Ex parte, Buck, 165.

8. COVENANTS.

a. To pay Money.

Who liable.]—A covenant to pay the mortgage money not suable in equity, unless covenantor receives the money; as, where a feme sole seised of lands, subject to a mortgage, marries B., and the mortgage is assigned, and B., in the deed of assignment, covenants to pay the money, and dies, his personal estate not liable in equity to pay the mortgage money. Bagot v. Oughton, 1 P. Wms. 347.

If A. borrows money for B. on a mortgage of his estate, the covenant in the mortgage deed to pay the money will bind him for whom it is borrowed. The mortgagor may file a bill against his debtor, to have his estate disencumbered; and so may every surety against his principal; for he shall not be put to his indebitatus assumpsit. Lee v. Rook, Moseley, 318.

Where father and son join in mortgage of father's estate, and father receives the money, and son conveys in consideration of 10*s.*, and there is no covenant in mortgage for payment of money, neither the real nor personal assets of son are bound. Lloyd v. Thursby, 9 Mod. 463.

Absence of.]—In a mortgage, the absence of a covenant of repayment, and of a collateral bond, cannot vary the transaction. Goodman v. Grierson, 2 Ball. & B. 278; 12 R. R. 82.

Usual.]—A debtor covenanted to execute a mortgage of some property to secure a debt, and covenanted that the deed should contain all the covenants usually inserted in a mortgage. The instrument of charge was under seal:—Held, that, as a covenant to pay is a usual covenant in a mortgage deed, the debt became a specialty debt. Saunders v. Milsome, L. R. 2 Eq. 573; 14 L. T. 788; 15 W. R. 2.

Conditional.]—Where there is a present debt and a promise to pay on demand, the demand is not considered to be a condition precedent to the bringing of an action. Secus, where there is a promise to pay a collateral sum on demand. Birks v. Trippet (1 Wms. Saund. 32), followed. Where a mortgage contained joint and several covenants by a surety and the mortgagor to pay the debt "on demand," and "in the meantime from the date" of the deed to pay interest, and a proviso for redemption if the mortgagor should "on demand" pay the debt and interest from the date of the deed:—Held, that the demand was a condition precedent, and that no right of action accrued against the surety until demand made. Brown's Estate, In re, Brown v. Brown, 62 L. J., Ch. 695; [1893] 2 Ch. 300; 3 R. 463; 69 L. T. 12; 41 W. R. 440.

To pay Commission if debt paid off—Validity.]—Mortgagor covenanted, in case mortgage were paid off, to pay mortgagee a commission of 5 per cent. upon the sum advanced, and interest upon that commission from date of the advance:—Held, illegal and void, as contrary to the nature of a mortgage security and a clog on redemption. Chapple v. Mahon, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 225.

What are.]—In a mortgage bond, given to secure the due payment by instalments of a sum due, a provision making the total sum due enforceable on any default is not to be considered a penalty. Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 50 L. J., Q. B. 49; 5 App. Cas. 685; 43 L. T. 258; 29 W. R. 81.

A mortgagee agreed to advance to a mortgagor a sum to be repaid at specified dates by instalments, with interest at 6*l.* per cent. per annum, and, if the bank rate should exceed 4*l.* per cent., additional interest equal to the excess. If default was made in payment of any instalment at due date, there was also to be paid a "commission" of 1*l.* per cent. for every month or part of a month from the due date to the date of payment of such instalment:—Held, that this "commission" was not in the nature of a penalty, and that the mortgagee was entitled to charge for it in taking the account. General Credit and Discount Co. v. Glegg, 52 L. J., Ch. 297; 22 Ch. D. 549; 48 L. T. 182; 31 W. R. 421.

Where a mortgage to secure an existing debt, payable by instalments, with interest to the times of payment, contained a proviso that, in the event of the debt not being punctually paid by instalments as specified in the deed, the full amount of the debt should immediately become payable:—Held, that the proviso was not in the nature of a penalty, and that relief could not be granted to the mortgagor against it. Sterne v. Beck, 2 N. R. 346; 1 De G. J. & S. 595; 32 L. J., Ch. 682; 8 L. T. 588; 11 W. R. 791.

In a mortgage of chattels, which was duly registered as a bill of sale, to secure the repayment of 400*l.* then advanced, and a further sum of 144*l.* for interest and expenses, by instalments payable every three months, and in default of payment of any one instalment the whole amount remaining unpaid to become immediately due, followed by a proviso that, in default of payment of the moneys secured, or any part thereof, or if the mortgagor should become a liquidating debtor or bankrupt, or upon the happening of certain other contingencies, the mortgagee might enter, sell, and repay himself the whole of the sums due to him upon the security of the mortgage. The mortgagor having become a liquidating debtor:—Held, that the provisions of this mortgage were not in the nature of a penalty, and that the mortgagee was entitled to possession of the property comprised in the mortgage deed. Cochrane, Ex parte, Sendall, In re, 48 L. J., Bk. 31; 9 Ch. D. 698; 38 L. T. 820; 26 W. R. 818.

Default of Payment.] — A creditor having agreed with his debtor to remit part of the debt upon having a mortgage to secure the payment of the balance within two years, without prejudice to his right to recover the whole debt if such balance was not paid within that time, the debtor executed a mortgage for such balance, containing a proviso that, if the mortgage debt was not paid within the two years, the whole of the original debt should be recovered. The debt was not paid within the two years:—Held, that the proviso was not of the nature of a penalty, from which the mortgagor was entitled to be relieved in equity, and that the mortgagee was not entitled only to recover the smaller sum. Thompson v. Hudson, 38 L. J., Ch. 431; L. R. 4 H. L. 1. Reversing, L. R. 2 Eq. 612.

Against Redemption.]—A covenant in mortgage not to redeem is unreasonable. East India Co. v. Atkyns, 1 Comyn. 348.

For Sale.]—A mortgagor, by a proviso in a mortgage deed, agreed in a certain event to sell to B., the mortgagee, for a fixed sum, part of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the proviso was totally void, as being an onerous engagement entered into at the time of the mortgage. Edward, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 367.

Collateral Advantage.] — A man shall not have interest for his money on a mortgage, and a collateral advantage besides for the loan of it, or clog the redemption with any by agreement. Jennings v. Ward, 2 Vern. 520.

Rights of Third Party involved.]—A. mortgaged his property to D. to secure 700*l.*, agreed by D. to be taken in lieu of a judgment debt of 3,000*l.*, and the 700*l.* was to be payable by instalments at certain times, and, if not punctually so paid, D. was to be remitted to his original rights, and to have the mortgage security also. The judgments were assigned, by a contemporaneous deed, to trustees for D., and on punctual payment of the 700*l.* for A. and B. A. had previously mortgaged his property to B. as a counter security, and for other debts. The instalments were not paid punctually, and the 3,000*l.* was therefore claimed in full:—Held, that, though the court would not interfere if the arrangement were between him and D. only, yet, as the rights of B. were involved, the condition in default of punctual payment should be treated as a penalty, and relieved against, and this equity could be enforced by A. as well as by B. Carroll v. O'Connor, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 200.

c. For Title.

Further Assurance.] — Mortgagor compelled under the covenant for further assurance, to supply a defect in a mortgage against judgment creditors. Burgh v. Francis, 3 Swanst. 536, n. 19 R. R. 275.

Tenant in tail makes a mortgage, with covenant for further assurance, and becomes bankrupt; his assignees are bound by the covenant. Pye v. Daubuz, 3 Bro. C. C. 595.

A., in November, 1841, mortgaged estates of which he was tenant in tail in remainder, and the indenture contained the usual covenant for further assurance. In September, 1842, A. was adjudicated a bankrupt, and subsequently received his certificate. In July, 1855, an order was made which declared that A. was entitled to two parts of the estates in S., and that they were comprised in the mortgage deed. A disentailing assurance was in February, 1856, tendered by the mortgagee to A. for execution, but he refused to execute it; and thereupon a bill was filed against A. and his assignees in bankruptcy, praying that it might be decreed pursuant to his covenant for further assurance, to execute and deliver to the plaintiff a proper disentailing assurance of all the hereditaments in S. to which he was entitled for an estate in tail male. A demurrer to the bill by A. was allowed, and the bill was subsequently dismissed. Davis v. Tollemache, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1181.

Semble, unless there be words in a conveyance to show it was intended that the covenant for further assurance should extend to enlarging the estate conveyed, and to barring an interest in other persons than the grantor, the court will not resort to its extraordinary jurisdiction for specific performance, to compel the grantor to execute an assurance of a kind that was not contemplated when the grant was made. Ib.

Freedom from Incumbrances.] — H. having mortgaged an estate to the defendant, H., as mortgagor, and the defendant as mortgagee, conveyed a part of the same to A. for building a house thereon, by deed, in which A. was empowered to erect a "porte cochère or projection" on one side of her proposed house, such projection to extend over the foot pavement of a certain road, and the plan thereof to be submitted to and approved of by H. Afterwards H. and the defendant conveyed other part of the same estate to the plaintiff by deed, in which was granted to the plaintiff and his friends, servants, &c., and all other persons for the benefit of the plaintiff, the right to pass and repass over and along certain roads, of which the road over which A. had been allowed to build the projection was one; and by the same deed the defendant for himself covenanted with the plaintiff that he, the defendant, "had not done, omitted, or knowingly suffered, or been party or privy to anything whereby the premises were or might be impeached, affected, or incumbered":—Held, first, that upon the construction of the deeds the covenant of non-incumbrance was not broken by the defendant having been party to the deed whereby A. was allowed to erect the porte cochère or projection. Clifford v. Hoare, 43 L. J., C. P. 225; L. R. 9 C. P. 362; 30 L. T. 465; 22 W. R. 828.

Held, secondly, that the defendant, having joined as mortgagee only, would not have diminished his liability upon the deeds if the court had construed them against him. Ib.

9. Fraud or Improper Conduct.

a. By Mortgagee or his Agents.

Generally.]—A person who will take advantage of the statute against Clandestine Mortgages, 4 & 5 Will. & M., c. 16, must be an honest mortgagee, and, therefore, if a man has used any fraud or ill practice in obtaining a second mortgage, he shall not have the benefit of the statute. Stafford v. Selby, 2 Vern. 589.

A. mortgages certain premises to B.; and B. assigns the mortgage to C. subject to redemption. C. files a bill of foreclosure against A. and B., and A. files a cross bill against B. and C., impeaching the mortgage from himself to B.: this bill will be dismissed as against C. with costs. Darcy v. Callan, 1 Jones, 614.

C. cannot tack those costs to his demand on foot of his mortgage. Ib.

Antedating.] — If mortgagee fraudulently antedate mortgage for purpose of over-reaching marriage settlement, mortgage is void, but fact must be first tried at law. Osborn v. Lea, 9 Mod. 96.

Restraint on Mortgagor.]—Where mortgagee by agreement, either in the mortgage deed or a separate one, fetters the redemption with a fraudulent design to get the estate, it will not avail. Mellor v. Lees, 2 Atk. 495.

Absolute conveyance and a deed of defeasance, on payment of mortgage money, during the joint lives of mortgagor and mortgagee:—Held, a restraint upon mortgagor; and a redemption decreed, there being also fraudulent and oppressive conduct on the part of the mortgagee. Spurgeon v. Collier, 1 Eden, 55.

Suspicion.]—A father, having a power of appointment among his children, appointed a large portion of the property to one son, and by deed bearing date shortly after the son mortgaged it. Both deeds were prepared by the mortgagee's solicitor, but were both altered by the family solicitor of the father and son. The mortgage and receipt indorsed treated the money as paid to the son, but the father, who had a legal estate, was a party to the mortgage, and the mortgagee wrote a letter of the same date to the father, promising not to call in the money for three years. Both father and son joined in a collateral bond. The draft mortgage furnished to the family solicitor differed in date from that executed. An underhand agreement was alleged, but not proved to have been made by the mortgagee's solicitor, against whom the bill was dismissed by consent. There was no proof that the father received the money, except a transfer to his credit at a banker's a considerable time after :—Held, that, although the transaction was suspicious, it must be supported in favour of the mortgagee. Hamilton v. Kirwan, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 278 ; 2 Jo. & Lat. 393.

Undue Influence.] — A bill impeaching a security upon charges of actual fraud which were not sustained, dismissed with costs so far as related to the charges of fraud, although the security was set aside on the ground of undue influence. Tabor v. Cunningham, 24 W. R. 153.

Where unfair advantage was taken of the necessities of one who wished only to raise money upon mortgage, but was induced to execute an absolute conveyance at a considerable undervalue by his solicitor, who betrayed his interests to serve the purposes of the purchaser, the court set aside the transaction as an absolute sale. Douglas v. Culverwell, 3 Giff. 251 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 65 ; 10 W. R. 189. Affirmed, 6 L. T. 272.

When a solicitor and mortgagee took a conveyance from the mortgagor, a day labourer, who had no independent legal advice :—Held, that the deed was not valid unless the circumstances were all explained to the mortgagor, and that the onus of showing that this was done lay on the solicitor. Prees v. Coke, L. R. 6 Ch. 645.

Immoral Purpose.]—A., being requested by B. (in consequence of reports that he was paying improper attentions to a daughter of the latter) to discontinue visiting at his house, in order to lay B. under obligation to him, and so, by obtaining permission to continue his intercourse with B.'s family, to gain free access to the daughter, whom he had in fact secretly seduced, advanced to B. a sum of money on mortgage. Upon a bill by A. to foreclose, and by B. to set aside the deed :—Held, that, notwithstanding the pecuniary consideration, the immoral purpose vitiated the whole deed : and a decree was made for its cancellation, leaving A. to sue at law, if he thought fit, for the money lent. Willyams v. Bullmore, Bullmore v. Willyams, 32 Beav. 574 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 461. S. C., 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1115 ; 9 L. T. 216 ; 11 W. R. 506.

In a suit by a father and his two daughters, seeking to be relieved from a mortgage deed which, as to the daughters, was voluntary, it is not irrelevant and scandalous to state that the money was advanced by the mortgagee spontaneously, in order that he might be able to continue his visits to, and obtain an influence over, the family, and by that means attain his object, which was the seduction of one of the daughters. W. v. B., 31 L. J., Ch. 755 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1141 ; 10 W. R. 617.

Consideration—Improperly stated.]—Where a mortgage professes to be made in consideration of a sum down, and which is, by the deed, made immediately payable, whereas the contract was for an annuity, and the consideration was not to be payable until after the death of a person named, such mortgage is fraudulent and void as against a mortgagor who joins therein as surety only. Spaight v. Cowne, 1 H. & M. 359.

—— Absent.]—A. obtained a mortgage of real and personal estate from B., without consideration. It was afterwards deposited with C. as a security, who had no notice of the circumstances under which it had been obtained :—Held, that C. could stand in no better position than A., and the deed being void as against A., was equally void as against C. Parker v. Clarke, 30 Beav. 54.

—— Unconscionable Bargain.]—Persons in a humble position, being entitled in reversion expectant on the death of a tenant for life, to a sum of 1,500*l.* charged on land, purported to mortgage this interest to B. as security for 500*l.*, though 250*l.* only was actually advanced. B. subsequently advanced 150*l.* more, for which a further charge for 300*l.* on the same reversionary interest was taken as security. The securities were prepared by B.'s solicitor, acting for all parties, and the borrowers had no independent adviee. Only one year's interest was ever paid. On the death of the tenant for life :—Held, that the mortgage and further charge could stand as security only for the sums actually advanced, with six years' arrears of interest only. Slater's Trusts, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 473 ; 11 Ch. D. 227 ; 40 L. T. 184 ; 27 W. R. 448.

Semble, the court will, upon petition for payment out of court, hear and decide questions of this nature without directing the issue of a writ. Ib.

Collateral Advantage taken by Mortgagee—Bonus Payable on gaining Action.]—The plaintiff and G. were co-heirs of M., and in that capacity were parties to a probate action in which a will of M. was propounded. Being at the time in poor circumstances, the plaintiff by deed in consideration of 60*l.* then advanced by the mortgagees, agreed to give a promissory note for that amount and for any further advances (which the mortgagees were not bound to make, but did make to the extent of 40*l.*), with interest at five per cent. per annum ; and the plaintiff thereby agreed to employ the solicitor in the probate action, who was then acting for G., and not to remove him without the mortgagees' consent ; and also, if the plaintiff's title should be established, to pay to the mortgagees within three months thereafter by way of "bonus" 225*l.* ; and the advances, interest, and bonus were thereby charged on the plaintiff's interest in the real estate of M. The plaintiff's title was ultimately established in the probate action, whereupon he claimed to redeem without payment of the bonus :—Held that he was entitled to do so, since the stipulation for the bonus was a collateral advantage stipulated for by mortgagees contrary to law. James v. Kerr, 58 L. J., Ch. 355 ; 40 Ch. D. 449 ; 60 L. T. 212 ; 37 W. R. 279 ; 53 J. P. 628.

Extent of Charge.]—A., and B., a solicitor, raised 2,500*l*., by sale of a sum of stock, of which they were trustees. A. enabled B. to receive the 2,500*l*. for the purpose of lending it, on mortgage, to C., and intrusted him with the conduct of the transaction. B. prepared the mortgage-deed ; and procured C. (who knew that the money was in B.'s hands) to execute it, and to sign a receipt, on the back of it, for the 2,500*l*. It was then executed by A. and sent to B., who paid to C. 1,563*l*., in part of the 2,500*l*., and died insolvent : —Held, that, as between A. and C., A. was to be treated as mortgagee for the whole 2,500*l*. West v. Jones, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 205 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 362.

Validity.]—Where, under the pretence that it was a deed of covenant to produce title deeds, a solicitor procured his client to execute a deed of mortgage to himself, to secure payment of a debt, the existence of which was not shown ; the deed thus fraudulently procured to be executed :—Held, to be false and fictitious, and wholly void. Vorley v. Cooke, 1 Giff. 230 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 185 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 3.

—— Partly Valid.]—A bill prayed that a mortgage might be cancelled and for further relief, but it proved to be valid to some extent. The court refused the relief asked, or to make a decree for redemption on payment of what was properly due, and dismissed the bill with costs. Crenver Mining Co. v. Willyams, 35 Beav. 533.

Where a mortgage was taken in part in respect of a sum for which the mortgagee represented himself to the mortgagor as being liable as a surety for the latter, and such representation was erroneous, to the knowledge of the mortgagee :—Held, that to that extent the security could not be supported. Lake v. Brutton, 8 De G. M. & G. 440 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 839.

—— After Payment of Interest.]—Notwithstanding payment for twenty-three years, by a widow, of the interest on a void mortgage, created by her while coverte :—Held, that her representatives were not precluded from disputing its validity. Blandy v. Kimber, 24 Beav. 148.

—— As against Sub-mortgagee.]—A purchaser of a chose in action takes it subject to all equities ; and, therefore, where A. mortgaged a fund in court to B., and after joined B. in a sub-mortgage to C., and it was decided that the mortgage to B. was fraudulent and void :—Held, that it was void also as to C., and that neither A.'s concurrence in the first nor second mortgage prevented him from insisting on the invalidity of the transaction with B., he, A., not being cognizant of his rights. Cockell v. Taylor, 15 Beav. 103 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 545.

Setting Aside.]—The solicitor and confidential friend of a father and son, being a large creditor of the father on a mortgage of his life estate, with certain policies of assurance on the father's life, induced the son, who was immediate tenant in tail in remainder, to concur in executing a disentailing deed a month after the son came of age, and to execute a mortgage charging this debt of the father on the inheritance, the policies of assurance being at the same time assigned for the benefit of the son. The counsel employed to prepare the deeds cautioned the solicitor that the transaction might be impeached ; and, by his advice, another solicitor was consulted on behalf of the son, who declined to advise the son to enter into the transaction :—Held, that the son was entitled to set aside the mortgage on the terms of restoring the policies of assurance. Held, also, that one of the policies having been sold by the son, by advice of the solicitor, to pay the premiums on the others, the restoration of the money produced by that sale was sufficient. King v. Savery, 1 Sm. & G. 271 ; 1 W. R. 141.

Three subsequent mortgages, one to the solicitor, and the two others to strangers, the moneys advanced on which were applied or invested in land, of which the son had the benefit :—Held, not to be a sufficient confirmation. Ib.

Four years after the first mortgage, the solicitor, after an ineffectual attempt to sell on behalf of the father and son, himself became the purchaser of the family estate, on an apportionment of a part of the purchase-money to the son, which was less than the fair value of his remainder in fee :—Held, that the sale was invalid, and that the conveyance as against the son could only stand as a security for the amount of purchase-money appointed to the son. Ib.

The plaintiff, relying upon a false representation of her solicitor that it was necessary to raise money to pay off an old mortgage on her sister's estate, and that she herself would not incur any liability by so doing, executed a mortgage of her estate in favour of the defendant. The solicitor applied the mortgage-money for his own purposes, and the fraudulent nature of the transaction was not discovered until his death :—Held, that the mortgage must be set aside. Lee v. Angus, 15 L. T. 380 ; 15 W. R. 119.

Solicitor—For both Parties.]—An equitable mortgagee, by deposit of title deeds, at the instance of the solicitor who had acted for both mortgagee and mortgagor, handed him the title deeds for the purpose of preparing a legal mortgage. The solicitor, in fraud, and upon misrepresentations made to the mortgagor, procured a legal mortgage to be executed to himself. He afterwards gave to the equitable mortgagee forged documents purporting to be a legal mortgage, and subsequently transferred the valid mortgage to purchasers without notice : —Held, that the loss occasioned by the fraud must fall upon the mortgagor, and not upon the equitable mortgagee. Adsetts v. Hives, 33 Beav. 52 ; 2 N. R. 474 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1063 ; 9 L. T. 110 ; 11 W. R. 1092.

—— Of Mortgagee.]—Trustees placed money in the hands of their solicitors for investment, and the solicitors, by means of a fraud practised on A., induced him to execute a mortgage of property to the trustees, handed to them the deeds, and appropriated the money to their own use. No part of the consideration was paid to A. The solicitors became bankrupt. The trustees brought an action against A. on the covenant, who, in ignorance of the facts, allowed judgment to go by default. A bill was filed for the delivery up of the deeds to be cancelled :—Held, that A. was entitled to the relief prayed. Wall v. Cockerell 10 H. L. Cas. 229 ; 1 N. R.

486 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 276 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 447 ; 8 L. T. 1 ; 11 W. R. 442. Reversing 3 De G. F. & J. 737.

—— Acquiescence — Press.]—The onus of proving a case of acquiescence was on the mortgagee, and could not be discharged, except by proving that the mortgagor was aware of the time and manner in which the mortgagee's money was deposited with the solicitors, and of the fact that no part of it had been applied for the use and benefit of the mortgagor. Ib.

Trustee—Right of Beneficiary.]—A fund, the property of A., was, together with moneys the property of a third party, lent to X., who secured the same by a legal mortgage to B. as A.'s trustee. B.'s trusteeship not appearing on the face of the mortgage, he, by a separate instrument, declared the trusts of A.'s fund in favour of A. B. afterwards wrongfully deposited the mortgage deeds with C. to secure an advance to himself. The fund being paid into court by arrangement on paying off the mortgage :—Held, that A. was entitled to receive his portion to the exclusion of C.'s right as depositee. Stackhouse v. Jersey (Countess), 1 J. & H. 721 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 359 ; 4 L. T. 204 ; 9 W. R. 453.

The mere possession of the deeds by C. gave him no advantage which he could actively assert. Ib.

Notice.] — Circumstances under which an assignee of a security may be held to be put upon inquiry by the terms of the security itself as to matter of equitable fraud affecting its validity. Tabor v. Cunningham, 24 W. R. 153.

Where the solicitor employed by mortgagor and mortgagee obtained the execution of the deed in such an irregular and informal manner as ought to have excited the suspicion of the mortgagee, and to have put him upon making inquiries :—Held, to amount to constructive notice of the fraud by which it was obtained, and a reassignment decreed : decree affirmed upon appeal, but as there was no actual knowledge, without costs. Kennedy v. Green, 3 Myl. & K. 699.

Practice.]—Where a suit was instituted by a mortgagor to set aside the mortgage deed, on the ground that it was obtained by the mortgagee under circumstances of pressure and surprise, which, however, the mortgagee denied, the court, upon motion, ordered the production of the deed, it appearing that the mortgagee was a solicitor, and that he had been the mortgagor's only professional adviser in the transaction. Davis v. Parry, 27 L. J., Ch. 294 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 431 ; 6 W. R. 171.

b. By Mortgagor or his Agents.

Generally.]—Mortgagors cannot impeach a mortgage when by their own conduct they have enabled their managers and bankers to mislead the mortgagees by fraudulent misrepresentations that their money was invested as stated in the mortgage-deed. Wall v. Cockerell (10 H. L. Cas. 229 ; 32 L. J., Ch. 276 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 447 ; 1 N. R. 486 ; 8 L. T. 1 ; 11 W. R. 442) explained and distinguished. London Freehold and Leasehold Property Co. v. Suffield (Baron), 66 L. J., Ch. 790 ; [1897] 2 Ch. 608 ; 77 L. T. 445 ; 46 W. R. 102—C. A.

Preference.]—A bill by assignees of a bankrupt prayed to set aside a mortgage executed to a creditor by a bankrupt on the eve of bankruptcy, as being in fraud of his general body of creditors, and it also prayed general relief. The bill failing on the ground of fraud :—Held, that they were not entitled to a decree for redemption. Johnson v. Fesenmeyer, 25 Beav. 88 ; 3 De G. & J. 13.

Executor, Personation by.]—A son who was heir-at-law to his father, who was one of the executors and trustees of his father's will, though he had not proved the will, and whose christian names and description were identical with those of his father, after his father's death, executed mortgages of freehold and leasehold property of the father and applied the mortgage-money to his own purposes. He handed over the title deeds to the mortgagees. The transaction took place without the knowledge of his mother and sister, who were co-trustees and co-executrixes with him, and who had proved the will. The will had not been registered in the Middlesex registry, though the property was situate in that county. The mortgage deeds were registered. They purported to be executed by the absolute owner of the property, and the solicitor who acted for both parties believed the son to be the absolute owner. The son told him nothing about the father's will. The solicitor searched the Middlesex registry. The son took a beneficial interest under the trusts of the father's will. After the son's death the fraud was discovered, and the mother and sister, as trustees of the father's will, brought an action against the mortgagees, claiming a declaration that the mortgages were void against them, and delivery up of the title deeds. The other beneficiaries under the will were made defendants :—Held, that the son in executing the mortgage deeds was personating his father ; that the deeds were forgeries and passed nothing to the mortgagees, except the son's beneficial interest under the father's will ; and that the mortgagees could obtain no title by virtue of the Middlesex Registry Act. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862 ; 20 Ch. D. 611 ; 47 L. T. 89 ; 30 W. R. 648—C. A.

—— Forgery.]—Semble, the son could have been convicted of forgery by reason of his executing the mortgage deeds. Ib.

—— Delivery of Deeds.]—Held, also, that the mortgagees must deliver up the title deeds to the plaintiffs. Since the Judicature Act the chancery division has jurisdiction on the application of the legal owner of title deeds to order them to be delivered up by a purchaser for value without notice. McLeod v. Drummond (14 Ves. 353 ; 17 Ves. 152 ; 11 R. R. 41) distinguished. Ib.

Privity to.]—A testatrix died in 1837, and all her debts were paid in 1838. In 1850 H. advanced 850*l.* in cash, and 150*l.* in wine, to the surviving trustee of the will, on the deposit of the deeds of the testatrix's real estate. This money was paid off, and in 1854 H. again advanced 1,000*l.* on a deposit of the deeds and a memorandum of deposit, the trustee at the same time buying some wine. T. paid off H., and in 1858 a mortgage in fee was made to T. for securing the 1,000*l.*:—Held, that H. could not have supposed the money to have been advanced for the payment of the debts of the testatrix, and that T. was in no better position than H., and could not maintain the mortgage. Burt v. Trueman, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 721 ; 8 W. R. 635.

Solicitor.]—A mortgagee of leasehold premises was induced by the mortgagor (his solicitor) to execute deeds, represented as being leases, but by which, in consideration of a sum, never in fact paid, the mortgagee was made to assign the premises, by way of sale, to a female servant, by whom they were afterwards mortgaged for value to the defendant. On a bill by the first mortgagee to set aside these deeds :—Held, that they were wholly void, and were decreed to be delivered up to be cancelled. Ogilvie v. Jeaffreson, 2 Giff. 353 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 970 ; 8 W. R. 745.

Liability of Trustees for.]—A voluntary settlement was suppressed by A., the settlor, who was tenant for life, with the privity of B. and C., the trustees, and under the advice of D., a solicitor, in order to facilitate the obtaining from a person not aware of the settlement, and to whom A. represented herself as absolute owner, of advances of money on the mortgage of the trust estate. Two former trustees, X. and Y., on an application being made to them either to raise the money under certain powers in the settlement, or to relinquish their trust, refused to raise the money, but consented to retire from the trust in favour of B. and C. :—Held, that A., B., C. and D., as having all joined in the suppression of the settlement, were liable to the mortgagee, for the advances made by him ; but that X. and Y. were, in the absence of any proof that they were accessory to, or contemplated the suppression of the settlement which resulted from their retirement, not liable to the mortgagee. Clark v. Hoskins, 37 L. J., Ch. 561. Affirming, 16 L. T. 730.

Relief against.]—Tenant for life, remainder to his first son, assures the mortgagee that he had no son, whereas he had a son, born five days before, and delivers the settlement to the mortgagee. The mortgagee, being advised that before the birth of a son the tenant for life might destroy the contingent remainder, lends his money, having no notice a son was born. The son of the mortgagor shall not be relieved against this mortgage. Hitchcock v. Sedgwick, 2 Vern. 159.

Defendant representing that his estate was encumbered only to the amount of 18,000*l.*, borrowed that sum, agreeing to mortgage the estate as a security, paying off the incumbrances out of the money. The lender's solicitor being very negligent, the mortgage was executed and great part of the money paid, when it was discovered that the incumbrances exceeded 30,000*l.* : —Held, it was not too late to relieve the lender in equity. Brown v. Stepney, Beat. 588.

—— Negligence.]—The mortgagee in possession of certain copyhold property was, by the fraud of her solicitor, induced to sign, without knowing the contents thereof, a deed which, after falsely reciting that the solicitor had agreed to pay to the mortgagee the amount due to her upon the mortgage, purported to transfer the mortgage debt and the securities for the same to the solicitor. The solicitor then deposited the deeds of the property with the plaintiff as security for money lent to him. The solicitor absconded, and the trustee of his estate executed a deed mortgaging the property to the plaintiff. The original mortgagee thought, when she signed the deed, that she was only signing a lease of the property, and she did not intend to deal with her mortgage or with her possession thereunder : —Held, that the mind of the mortgagee did not go with the deed which she signed, and as she had not been guilty of any negligence the deed was void. Favell v. Wright, 64 L. T. 85.

—— Forgetfulness no Defence.]—S., on the request of H., agreed to lend to him a sum of money upon the security of four houses which were being erected on a site belonging to C., and of a lease to which H. represented himself to be entitled, at a peppercorn rent, from C., if an assurance could be obtained from C. that he would grant a lease of the houses to H. C. gave the required assurance to H., and he also wrote a letter to the solicitors of S., stating that he was quite ready to grant a lease of the houses, at a peppercorn rent to H. Underleases of the same houses, dated in January, 1857, were thereupon prepared by the solicitors of S., and executed by C. to H., and he, on the 2nd May, 1857, executed a mortgage of the underleases to the plaintiff, in consideration of moneys advanced by him to the mortgagor. H. afterwards became involved in pecuniary difficulties, and left the country. S. then discovered that C. had, in August, 1856, granted to H. a lease, for ninety-nine years, of property which included the same four houses as were comprised in the underleases of January, 1857. A bill was filed by S. against C. and H., praying for a declaration that the plaintiff had been induced to lend his money by fraud, misrepresentation and concealment on the part of both C. and H., and that each might be decreed to repay the money and interest. It was on behalf of C. contended that he had acted in good faith, and in forgetfulness of the former lease, and that there was no fiduciary relation between him and the plaintiff. The vice-chancellor held (6 Jur. (N.S.) 190) that the forgetfulness of C. was no justification, and that, as he had suggested what was false to, and concealed what was true from, the plaintiff, he must repay the whole of the mortgage-money, with interest, and the costs of the suit. On appeal, the decision was affirmed. Slim v. Croucher, 1 De G. F. & J. 518 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 273 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 437 ; 8 W. R. 347.

Jurisdiction.]—Held, also, a case in which the courts of law and equity had a common jurisdiction, but a court of equity was the more proper tribunal. Ib.

Mortgage of Railway Stock—Conversion by Broker of Mortgagor — Negligence of Mortgagor.]—The plaintiff, through the agency of his broker, obtained a loan from an insurance company upon the security of railway stock, which the plaintiff transferred to the insurance company. Afterwards, at the broker's suggestion, the plaintiff agreed to have the security transferred to the broker's bank, and the transfer was carried out through the agency of the broker, and executed by the insurance company to the bank. A nominal consideration only was expressed in this transfer. The plaintiff gave no notice of his interest to the bank, and placed no distringas on the stock. Subsequently the stock was sold on the market by the broker, and the bank at his request, believing him to be the owner, executed transfers to the purchasers, and, after payment of the amount of the advance, the broker received the balance and converted it to his own use. In an action by the plaintiff against the bank to recover the difference between the amount of the advance and actual proceeds of sale :—Held, that the bank were not put upon inquiry as to the plaintiff's title ; that the plaintiff's loss was attributable to his own negligence, and that he could not recover against the bank. Marshall v. National Provincial Bank, 61 L. J., Ch. 465 ; 66 L. T. 525 ; 40 W. R. 328.

Notice.]—Solicitors for trustees for sale purchased part of the trust property, and mortgaged it to A. and B. The purchase was set aside :—Held, that A. and B., who had notice of the relation in which their mortgagors stood to the vendors, could claim no better title than their mortgagors. Cookson v. Lee, 23 L. J., Ch. 473.

W., a solicitor, being indebted to E., and being pressed for payment or further security, proposed to give him a second mortgage on the G. estate. This estate had been bought in the name of the plaintiff, who was, however, only a trustee for W., a fact which did not appear in the deeds. The proposal being acceded to, W. sent to E.'s solicitors the draft of a mortgage deed, which was in the common form of a mortgage from the plaintiff to E., for money advanced at the time. The draft being approved by E.'s solicitor, the deed was engrossed, and was executed by the plaintiff, and handed to W., who delivered it to E., no communication taking place between E. or his solicitors and the plaintiff. The security of the estate proved deficient. E. sued the plaintiff on the covenant in the deed, and the plaintiff thereupon filed a bill to be relieved, on the ground that he had been defrauded by W. into executing a deed containing a covenant to pay :—Held, that E. was not bound to inquire whether the plaintiff, who was not the real borrower, had agreed to enter into a covenant for payment, and that the frame of the deed did not affect E. with notice of any fraud that might have been practised by W. on inducing the plaintiff to execute such deed. Greenfield v. Edwards, 2 De G. J. & S. 582 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 419 ; 12 L. T. 411 ; 13 W. R. 668.

—— Purchase for Value without.] — The defendant, who was in possession of a piece of land, under an agreement for sale, upon which he had built a granary, allowed his sons, who were partners, to have the occupation of the land and premises. The sons erected other buildings of considerable value upon the land, and supplied the father with goods for the amount of the cost of the granary erected by him. The sons afterwards applied to bankers, for a loan upon the security of the land and premises, and having obtained surreptitious possession of the agreement for the sale of the land to the father, without his knowledge, deposited the agreement with the bankers, alleging that the father had given up to them all his interest in the land, and would execute a conveyance to the bankers when required. The father had previously to this transaction become surety for the sons to another bank, and was called upon to pay a large debt in respect of this surety. The father alleged that he had never given the land to the sons, and had never intended to do so until he was released from his liability as surety. The bankers filed a bill to establish, as against the father, a charge on the land for the advances to the sons :—Held, that the sons had an equitable charge upon the land, as against the father, for the amount paid by them to the father, and for their own expenditure on the land ; that, although the deposit was made under false representations, and did not bind the father, yet the bankers were purchasers for value without notice, and were entitled to a charge on the land to the full extent of the lien of the sons ; and that, although the father, in respect of his suretyship, had a right to set-off against his sons, yet it could not be enforced against the bankers, whose right accrued without notice of any claim of the father. Unity Joint Stock Banking Association v. King, 25 Beav. 72 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 585 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 470 ; 6 W. R. 264.

—— Constructive.] — Husband and wife in treaty for a loan on the security of her real estate, informed the mortgagee's solicitor of the existence of a settlement executed on their marriage, whereby, on her attaining twenty-one, the property was to be conveyed to trustees upon the usual trusts, although no such conveyance was ever executed. The solicitor told them that he should not mention this to the mortgagee, lest he should refuse to make the advance :—Held, that this was not constructive notice to the mortgagee, for husband and wife were bound, upon the statement of the solicitor's intention, themselves to bring the facts to the knowledge of the mortgagee, and by omitting to do so had become parties to the fraud upon him. Sharpe v. Foy, L. R. 4 Ch. 35 ; 19 L. T. 541 ; 17 W. R. 65.

10. Agreements for, and Specific Performance.

Generally.]—Title deeds were deposited by the defendant with the plaintiff as an indemnity against contingent payments, but there was no agreement to execute a formal mortgage. Before the plaintiff had made any payment, he filed a bill to have a formal mortgage executed : —Held, that he was not entitled thereto, but only to a memorandum, signed by the defendant, specifying the terms of the deposit. Sporle v. Whayman, 20 Beav. 607 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 789.

A. enters into an agreement to the following effect : That he should execute a mortgage, payable, with interest at 5*l.* per cent., in four years to B. and C., to secure to them an amount awarded, viz. 3,120*l.*, with interest at 5*l.* per cent. on the principal, and 2,600*l.* from the date of the award, A. giving reasonable proof that he has power to grant such mortgage, and that the property to be mortgaged is adequate security for it :—Held, that such an agreement (though not sufficient to ground a decree for immediate specific performance) would authorise the court to order A. to select a sufficient portion of his estates, and make it a security in compliance with the agreement. Humble, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 132.

Held, also, that after the lapse of four years and A.'s death, it could not be specifically enforced against the heirs and devisees of A., but would enable B. and C. to institute an administration suit, and claim that a sufficient portion of A.'s real estate should be applied in payment of the debt. Ib.

De T., being given up to the authorities of a foreign country, under an extradition treaty, to be tried on a charge of murder, assigned all his property to P., and executed a general power of attorney in favour of P. and T. The object of these instruments was, as the court held, to enable money to be raised for his defence. T. was co-trustee with the plaintiff of a marriage settlement, and proposed to him that consols belonging to the trust should be sold out, and the proceeds advanced on the security of a charge on De T.'s property. The plaintiff assented, and the consols were sold and the proceeds paid to T., who produced to the plaintiff a document purporting to be a memorandum of deposit of the assignment and power of attorney, and an equitable charge to secure the advance. The court held on the evidence that B. knew of the charge, and either actually authorised it or left T. to do as he liked:—Held, that the money had been advanced upon the faith of an agreement to charge the property of De T., that such agreement was within the powers of P. and T., and that, if the agreement had not been fully carried out, the plaintiff was entitled to have the charge carried into effect. Parish v. Poole, 53 L. T. 35. Affirmed in C. A.

Specific performance decreed of articles of agreement to grant a mortgage for money to be lent, a small part being already advanced, and a voluntary deed, creating a term to secure an annuity for the wife of the borrower, declared fraudulent and void as against the articles and against the mortgage agreed to be executed under the circumstances; but, subject to the mortgage, the decree to be without prejudice to the deed. Hunter v. Langford (Lord), 2 Moll. 272.

Agreement to Borrow.] — An agreement to borrow a sum of money is not such a contract as the court can compel the specific performance of. Rogers v. Challis, 27 Beav. 175; 29 L. J., Ch. 240; 7 W. R. 710.

—— Immediate Power of Sale.]—The court will decree specific performance of an agreement to execute a mortgage with an immediate power of sale. Hermann v. Hodges, 43 L. J., Ch. 192; L. R. 16 Eq. 18; 21 W. R. 571.

—— Effect of.]—An agreement to give a legal mortgage, superadded upon an agreement to charge land, gives a right to have that contract enforced in equity, and by the same decree to foreclose, unless the money is paid. Matthews v. Goodday, 31 L. J., Ch. 282; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 90; 5 L. T. 572; 10 W. R. 148.

—— Absolute Power of Sale.]—When a person had agreed to execute a mortgage of leasehold premises in the usual form, containing an absolute power of sale, in consideration of money due, and had, when requested to do so, failed to execute such mortgage:—The court made a decree for specific performance. Ashton v. Corrigan, 41 L. J., Ch. 96; L. R. 13 Eq. 76.

—— On Future Property.]—A. granted an annuity to B., and covenanted to charge any property that he might become possessed of at his wife's death, either under her will or otherwise, with the payment of the annuity. A. became bankrupt, and afterwards obtained his certificate, and then his wife died, having, under a power in her settlement, bequeathed to him an annuity of 700*l.* A. was decreed to execute a proper deed to charge the annuity of 700*l.* with payment of the annuity granted to B. Lyde v. Mynn, 4 Sim. 505; 1 Myl. & K. 683; Coop. t. Brough. 123.

Agreement to Lend—Not to call for Title.]—Where A. agreed to lend 2,000*l.* on mortgage of leaseholds, and not to call for the lessor's title; and afterwards called for the title, and filed a bill for specific performance, or a sale of the premises: specific performance was decreed, but with costs to the defendant. Bass v. Clivley, Tam. 80; 31 R. R. 71.

—— Not to call in Money.]—When, default having been made in payment of interest, a mortgagee has recovered judgment for the amount of the principal and interest, and a bill is filed to restrain execution and for specific performance, on the ground that the mortgage deed is not in accordance with the terms of a previous agreement, which provided that the principal should not be called in for a term still unexpired; an injunction will be refused except on the terms of the amount recovered being paid into court, since, if a clause in accordance with that provision in the agreement had been inserted in the deed, it would, as a matter of course, have made the not calling in of the principal conditional on the punctual payment of interest. Seaton v. Twyford, 40 L. J., Ch. 122; L. R. 11 Eq. 591; 23 L. T. 648; 19 W. R. 200.

Locus Pœnitentiæ.]—A gentleman, who had a valuable collection of historical books, paintings, &c., applied to auctioneers to undertake the sale of the same, and to advance him money on account of the proceeds. An agreement was come to in writing between the parties, by which, in consideration of the advance, the owner of the collection agreed to deposit the whole of the collection with the auctioneers for sale. A portion was deposited with and sold by them, but realised much less than was anticipated and did not amount to more than one-half of their advance. Upon his refusal to deposit the remainder of the collection, a bill was filed by the auctioneers against the owner, and prayed specific performance of the agreement. To this a demurrer was filed for want of equity:—Held, that the court would allow the defendant a locus pœnitentiæ, and that, subject to the satisfaction of the auctioneers' claim for what they had done (which was a matter to be decided in a court of law), the defendant had not, by the agreement, lost the control over that portion of his property which he had retained. Chinnock v. Sainsbury, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1318; 3 L. T. 258; 9 W. R. 7.

Signing by some of several.]—A number of persons having an interest in an estate, which was the subject of litigation, some of them executed an undertaking, to the town agent of their country solicitor, to mortgage the estate to secure the present and future costs; but it was not signed by the other parties. A bill for specific performance was brought by the town agent against such of the parties as had signed the undertaking. The Master of the Rolls, being of opinion that it was part of the agreement that all should sign, dismissed the bill with costs. Jones v. Williams, 5 L. J., Ch. 253.

Damages for not Executing or Completing.]—The owner of building land, upon which he had erected houses, mortgaged it, first, to a building society, for 4,300*l.*, with a power of sale in default of payment; secondly, to the defendant for 350*l.*, and afterwards to several other persons for various sums. Being unable to proceed with the building, by deed, to which he, the building society, the defendant, and other mortgagees, were parties, the premises were conveyed to the plaintiff in fee, discharged from all equity of redemption, but subject to the mortgage of the building society, in trust, in his discretion, to sell the same, and out of the proceeds to pay, first, expenses; secondly, the building society; thirdly, the defendant; fourthly, advances made by the plaintiff; and afterwards the other mortgagees in the order of their priority; with liberty for the plaintiff to raise a sum not exceeding 5,000*l.*, for the purpose of carrying into effect the trusts of the indenture. The defendant covenanted that he would execute all assurances reasonably required for enabling the plaintiff to execute the trusts of the deed. The plaintiff had made advances to the extent of 1,150*l.* He had also arranged with the building society to accept 4,100*l.* in satisfaction of their claim; and he had contracted for a loan of 5,000*l.* on mortgage of the premises. The mortgage deed was prepared and all parties attended, when the defendant refused to execute it unless he was paid his debt of 350*l.*, and in consequence the building society sold the premises for 4,510*l.*, which was not more than sufficient to pay their mortgage and expenses:—Held, per Pollock, C.B., and Bramwell, B., that the plaintiff was only entitled to recover as damages the costs of the abortive mortgage. Per Martin, B., that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, in addition to the costs of the abortive mortgage, the difference between 5,000*l.* and the value of the land as building land; or, at all events, 900*l.*, the residue of the 5,000*l.*, after paying the 4,100*l.* to the building society. Duckworth v. Ewart, 2 H. & C. 129; 33 L. J., Ex. 24; 9 L. T. 297; 12 W. R. 608.

11. Rectification.

Generally.]—W. H. was entitled for life to the interest of certain residuary estate, to the principal of which the wife of A. J. was entitled absolutely. W. H., being largely indebted to A. J., executed an indenture assigning to A. J. all his, W. H.'s, interest in the said residuary estate. It was subsequently discovered that the residuary estate consisted partly of a fund, the existence of which was unknown to either of the parties at the time of the execution of the indenture. W. H. thereupon filed a bill, which, not complaining that the indenture had been executed by fraud, sought to exclude from its operation the additional fund, by treating the indenture merely as a security for the amount then due from W. H. The Lord Chancellor, however, dismissed the bill, holding that the words of the indenture were sufficient to pass the interest of W. H. in the fund in question, and that no case was made on the pleadings for reforming the instrument. Hawkins v. Jackson, 2 Mac. & G. 372; 2 Hall & Tw. 301; 19 L. J., Ch. 451.

Feoffment without Livery.]—If a defective conveyance be made, as a mortgage in fee by way of feoffment without livery, equity will make good this conveyance; and this though, after such incomplete feoffment, a judgment is confessed to a third person, whose debt did not originally affect the land. Burgh v. Francis, 1 Eq. Abr. 320.

Omission—Of Covenant for Redemption.]—A mortgagee, in an agreement for a mortgage, omits to insert a covenant for redemption; the mortgagor shall be permitted to read evidence, to show the omission. Joynes v. Statham, 3 Atk. 389. And see Walker v. Walker, 2 Atk. 99.

—— Of Execution.]—So a mortgage drawn in two deeds, one an absolute conveyance, and the other a defeasance, which the mortgagee omits to execute, the mortgagor shall be admitted to show the mistake. Ib.

Mortgagee's Valuation.]—Prior to a mortgage the mortgagee's valuer included several articles in his valuation, and which the mortgagees expected would be comprised in their mortgage, but they were omitted from the deed. A bill to rectify the deed by including them was dismissed, there being no proof of a common mistake of mortgagor and mortgagees. Metropolitan Counties Assurance Society v. Brown, 26 Beav. 454; 28 L. J., Ch. 581; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 378; 7 W. R. 303.

Agreement for Mortgage.]—B., having verbally agreed to give his bankers an equitable charge on three leasehold houses, which he pointed out to their manager, signed a document which was intended to create a charge on such houses, but by a mistake in the parcels three houses were charged, being described as comprised in a certain lease, which in fact comprised only one house, and which had been sold by A. prior to the date of the document. On his bankruptcy:—Held, that the bank was entitled to have the document rectified by the insertion of the property intended to be comprised in it. National Provincial Bank of England, Ex parte, Boulter, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 11; 4 Ch. D. 241; 35 L. T. 673; 25 W. R. 100.

—— Stipulation against calling in.]—When an agreement for a mortgage contains a stipulation that the principal shall not be called in for a certain time, the court, in settling the form of the deed, will, although the agreement is silent on the subject, insert a proviso that the postponement shall be conditional on punctual payment of interest, and, if the property is leasehold, on observance of the covenant; so that, if the mortgagor should make default in either of these respects, the mortgagee's remedies by sale or foreclosure will immediately arise. Seaton v. Twyford, 40 L. J., Ch. 122; L. R. 11 Eq. 591; 23 L. T. 648; 19 W. R. 200.

—— Evidence explaining.]—An agreement for an equitable mortgage was held to be explainable by other memoranda of agreement. Glyn, Ex parte, Medley, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 29.

12. VARIATION BY PAROL EVIDENCE.

Of Further Advances.]—Parol evidence of subsequent advances made on the security of a prior equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, and memorandum in writing not under seal. Ede v. Knowles, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 172.

To Vary Amount.]—Parol evidence admitted to increase the amount secured by the deposit beyond the sum stated in a memorandum accompanying the deposit. Nettleship, Ex parte, Buskill, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 124; 10 L. J., Bk. 67; 5 Jur. 733.

A. lends money on mortgage at 8 per cent., and afterwards by parol agrees to reduce it. Agreement, though verbal, held binding though the fact is first triable by issue. Milton v. Edgworth, 5 Bro. P. C. 313.

Parol evidence admitted at law that, though a bond on mortgage was for 150*l.* per annum, yet the agreement was for 100*l.* The bill dismissed as founded on a private agreement, calculated to deceive a material party. It was dismissed, however, without costs. Pitcairne v. Ogbourne, 2 Ves. 375.

Parol evidence admitted to prevent fraud. Ib.

To prove Agreement for Redemption.]—Parol evidence not admitted to prove an agreement, made upon the purchase of an annuity, that it should be redeemable. Hare v. Shearwood, 1 Ves. J. 241; 3 Bro. C. C. 186.

On a written agreement parol evidence admissible in equity in cases of fraud, and where party will admit there was some agreement. Ib., 243.

Parol evidence that it was part of the agreement for an annuity that it should be redeemable, although not made part of the contract in writing, refused to be admitted. Portmore v. Morris, 2 Bro. C. C. 219.

Grant of an annuity; a bill filed to redeem, suggesting that it was part of the agreement that it should be redeemable, but the agreement left out of the deed on the idea that, if inserted, the transaction would be usurious. Parol evidence offered to this, but not admitted to contradict the deed, not being charged to have been omitted by fraud. Irnham v. Child, 1 Bro. C. C. 92; Dick 554.

1. EQUITABLE MORTGAGES.

a. By Deposit of Title Deeds.

i. Creation of.

In General.]—Equitable mortgage, by deposit of deeds. Mountfort, Ex parte, 14 Ves. 606; 9 R. R. 359.

A deposit of title deeds as a security is an equitable mortgage. Hankey v. Vernon, 2 Cox, 12.

If mortgagor and mortgagee deposit deeds with A., A. is a trustee for mortgagor before condition is broken, and for mortgagee afterwards. Anon., 2 Eq. Abr. 284.

Without Words.]—Mere deposit without more will give equitable mortgage. Kensington, Ex parte, 2 V. & B. 79; G. Cooper, 96; 13 R. R. 32.

Equitable mortgage, by a deposit of deeds, upon an advance of money without a word passing. Langston, Ex parte, 17 Ves. 230; 11 R. R. 66.

A deposit of title deeds as security for a debt, will, without more, create in equity a charge upon the property. Shaw v. Foster, 42 L. J., Ch. 49; L. R. 5 H. L. 321; 27 L. T. 281; 20 W. R. 907.

A mere deposit of deeds, even without a word, may constitute an equitable mortgage, but it can only occur, as against strangers, in cases where the possession of the title deeds can be accounted for in no other manner, except from their having been deposited by way of equitable mortgage, or the holder being otherwise a stranger to the title and to the lands. Bozon v. Williams, 3 Y. & J. 150.

Without Memorandum.]—An equitable mortgage by deposit is not taken out of the operation of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 113 (Locke King's Act), because it is unaccompanied by a memorandum. Davis v. Davis, 24 W. R. 962.

Not Favoured.] — Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, not favoured, especially when contradicting a written instrument. Coombe, Ex parte, 17 Ves. 369; 1 Rose, 268.

With Agreement to Mortgage.]—An agreement to mortgage, with a subsequent delivery of the title deeds, will amount, in equity, to a mortgage, and will be effectual from the time of the agreement. Edge v. Worthington, 1 Cox, 211; 1 R. R. 20.

An equitable mortgage by the deposit of title deeds, with an agreement in writing by the party making the deposit, to execute a formal mortgage of the property to the mortgagee for the balance which might be due to him, constitutes the equitable mortgagee a purchaser for good consideration within 27 Eliz. c. 4, in respect of such balance. Lister v. Turner, 5 Hare, 281; 15 L. J., Ch. 336; 10 Jur. 751.

The bankrupt agreed with A. to execute a mortgage of certain premises for the security of a debt, and he sent, in order that A. might prepare the mortgage, all the title deeds except the immediate conveyance to himself: the bankrupt, being also indebted to B., took that conveyance and deposited it with him as a security for his debt, at the same time promising to send him the remainder of the title deeds :—Held, that A. and B. had not, either separately or collectively, an equitable mortgage upon the premises. Pearse, Ex parte, Buck, 525.

—— Usury.]—Where title deeds were originally deposited to secure an advance of money at usurious interest, but without any written memorandum, and afterwards a further advance was made upon the promissory note of the depositor, also at usurious interest, and it was subsequently agreed by parol that a mortgage should be executed of the premises comprised in the deeds for both debts, with interest at 5*l.* per cent. per annum :—Held, upon motion ex parte, the defendant not appearing, to take pro confesso a bill praying a foreclosure or sale of the premises comprised in the deeds, that, though the original deposit was void under the usury statutes, and the deeds had henceforth remained in the possession of the plaintiff, yet the subsequent parol agreement constituted a valid equitable mortgage by deposit to secure both debts, just as if the deeds had been returned to the defendant, and re-delivered by him to the plaintiff upon the occasion of such agreement being entered into. James v. Rice, 5 De G. M. & G. 461 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 819 ; 18 Jur. 818 ; 2 W. R. 542.

With Wife of Debtor.]—No equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds with wife of debtor. Coming, Ex parte, 9 Ves. 115 ; 7 R. R. 149.

By Debtor of Crown.]—Deposit of title deeds by a simple contract debtor of crown, for securing part of purchase money to be paid in consideration of other lands sold to him, is an equitable mortgage, and binds the crown ; and that although purchaser has also given his bond to vendor for whole amount. As to what constitutes such an equitable deposit, quære. Casberd v. Att.-Gen., 6 Price, 411 ; 20 R. R. 671.

By Trustee having Beneficial Interest.]—A trustee having a partial beneficial interest in the trust property may, by deposit of the title deeds for a debt of his own, create a good equitable mortgage. Smith, Ex parte, Hildyard, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 587 ; 11 L. J., Bk. 16 ; 6 Jur. 610.

By Executor for Payment of Debts.]—There being a charge of debt in a will, and an executor, according to a direction therein contained, having invested the produce of the personal estate in the purchase of lands, directed by the will to be subjected to the trusts thereof, deposited the deeds of the purchased estate as a security for money borrowed professedly for the payment of debts :—Held, a good equitable mortgage by deposit against the devisees in trust. Ball v. Harris, 3 Jur. 140.

Mortgage included in Settlement.]—A person gave a bond for 5,000*l.* to his sister, but, failing to pay the interest due on that bond, gave her another bond to secure the arrears of interest. He afterwards deposited with his sister the title deeds of his real estates "as a collateral security for the bond debts." Subsequently in contemplation of the marriage of the sister, the two bonds were, with the consent and privity of the obligor, settled upon trusts for the benefit of the intended husband and wife, no reference, however, being made in the settlement to the deposit of title deeds. The marriage took effect, and about four years after the obligor became bankrupt :—Held, that, assuming the consideration for the first bond to have been voluntary, yet, there being no fraud suggested against any party or insolvency proved against the obligor, the settlement was a valuable security, and that by virtue of the bonds, the instrument of deposit, and the settlement, the trustee of the settlement was equitable mortgagee of the real estate for the moneys due on the bonds. Meggison v. Foster, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 336 ; 12 L. J., Ch. 415 ; 7 Jur. 546.

Rights of Third Parties.]—A trader executes a mortgage of real estate, with a borrowing clause, and deposits the title deeds with the mortgagee. He subsequently accepts a bill drawn by third parties, and, being unable to pay the bill when at maturity, writes to the drawers to say that it shall be paid out of the produce of the mortgagor's premises, and that he will not take his title deeds out of the mortgagee's hands until the bill is paid. The mortgagee communicates to the drawers his assent to the arrangement :—Held, that the drawers were entitled to an equitable mortgage. Crossfield, Ex parte, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 67.

Where A. accepted bills for the accommodation of B., and B. deposited title deeds of A.'s with C., the holder of the bills, as security for their payment, a letter from A. to C. referring to the existence of the debt, and saying, "The security you hold is a great deal more than you hold acceptances for on my account ; my real account is not more than half you hold, but you have full security for all and more" :—Held, a sufficient acknowledgment of the security to the full amount of bills, though B. had no direct authority to pledge. Skinner, Ex parte, Bell, In re, 1 Deac. & C. 403.

Sub-mortgage by Re-deposit.]—To create an equitable sub-mortgage by re-deposit of deeds originally deposited by way of equitable mortgage, it is not necessary that the written memorandum accompanying the first transaction should be deposited upon the second. Smith, Ex parte, Hildyard, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 587 ; 11 L. J., Bk. 16 ; 6 Jur. 610.

Sub-mortgage by deposit of Bonds and Bills —No Notice to Obligor.]—A bond which is executed for the payment of bills of exchange, is mortgaged together with the bills, which are indorsed. Afterwards the mortgagor deposits the bonds and the bills by way of sub-mortgage, and becomes bankrupt, no notice of the sub-mortgage having been given to the obligor :—Held, that the sub-mortgage was good against the assignees. Barnett, Ex parte, Reay, In re, 1 De G. 194.

Deposit, by way of mortgage, of a land-order of the New Zealand Company held to be good, without notice having been given to the company of the deposit. Ib.

Construction.]—The expression "may advance," in the written memorandum accompanying an equitable mortgage, does not necessarily prevent the deposit from being a security for past advances. Smith, Ex parte, Hildyard, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 587 ; 11 L. J., Bk. 16 ; 6 Jur. 610.

Effect.]—Whether a deposit of title deeds, in pursuance of a contract to charge real estate, is a sufficient part performance to take a case out of the statute of frauds, quære. Whitmore v. Farley, 45 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 825; 14 Cox C. C. 617.

An equitable deposit with memorandum of charge by a devisee is an alienation which pro tanto prevents a creditor of the testator from subsequently obtaining a charge on the estate as assets under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104. British Mutual Investment Co. v. Smart, 44 L. J., Ch. 695; L. R. 10 Ch. 567; 32 L. T 849; 23 W. R. 800.

Semble, that an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds made by an heir-at-law or a devisee of a legal estate would be good as against creditors of the ancestor or testator who had not obtained any judgment or decree binding the land before the mortgage was made. Ib.

A simple deposit of deeds is a charge enforceable in equity, but gives no right to have a legal mortgage, although, in the view of a court of equity, it is a contract to charge the land, and the remedies are the same. Matthews v. Goodday, 31 L. J., Ch. 282; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 90; 5 L. T. 572; 10 W. R. 148.

Presumption of Intention.]—An intention of charging an estate may be presumed, where the proprietor deposits all or part of the title-deeds. Richards v. Borrett, 3 Esp. 102.

Evidence.]—In order to constitute an equitable mortgage by deposit, there must be proof, either of the actual deposit or of the loan being made. Kebell v. Philpot, 7 L. J., Ch. 237; 2 Jur. 739.

—— Production.]—The mere production by a bond creditor of the title deeds to the obligor's real estate, without explanation, constitutes neither an equitable mortgage nor a sufficient ground for an inquiry before the master. Chapman v. Chapman, 13 Beav. 308; 20 L. J., Ch. 465; 15 Jur. 265.

—— Possession.]—Possession of title deeds by a bond creditor is not of itself sufficient evidence of a deposit by way of equitable mortgage. Ib.

——Of Intention.]—In 1878 A. entered into a contract for the sale to him of two freehold houses at the price of 650*l.* The deposit of 50*l.* was paid by him, and 360*l.*, part of the balance, was obtained from his niece B., to whom he gave his I O U. On the 21st August, 1878, the wife of A., by his direction, wrote to B. as follows: "A. bought two houses yesterday, and he is going to have them settled and signed in your name, and give them to you. I send you the conditions of sale for you to look at, and I should like you to come and see A. . . . Bring your bank book with you, as what you have might as well go into them as for us to pay interest. It is all right, I can assure you. I sent the 50*l.* by cheque last night, on deposit." On the 25th October, 1878, the two houses were duly conveyed to A., and he directed his wife to hand over the title deeds to B., and he also said to his wife that the deeds belonged to B., and were of no use to his wife. The deeds were sent to B., by A.'s wife. Subsequently A. died intestate, and his eldest brother and heir-at-law commenced an action against B., claiming a declaration that he, the plaintiff, was entitled to the rents and profits of the two houses and the delivery up of the title deeds:—Held, that there was evidence of an intention on the part of A. to give the property to B.; but that no gift of it had in point of law been made; but held, that there was sufficient evidence of a contract to create an equitable mortgage in favour of B., and upon which the possession of the title deeds by B. originated; and that there should be a redemption decree upon that footing, the costs of B. being added to her security. McMahon, In re, McMahon v. McMahon, 55 L. T. 763.

—— Onus.]—A. filed a bill against a stock and share broker for the recovery of indentures, which, as alleged, had been deposited with B. for safe custody. B. claimed to hold the indentures as having been deposited with him by A., his customer, as a collateral security, by way of equitable mortgage, to secure the payment of a balance of an account found due to him; and, in support of this claim, produced a memorandum signed by A., but not dated, containing a statement to the effect that A. was agreeable to deposit the indentures with B. as security for the amount he owed to him. In answer, A. alleged that the indentures were left with B. for safe custody merely, and he denied that they were deposited by way of security, and he further denied that a balance of account had been ascertained:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the burden of proof lay upon A., who sought to recover the deeds; and that B. was entitled to hold the deeds by way of equitable mortgage to secure the balance due. Burgess v. Moxon, 2 Jur. (N.S) 1059.

The case of Chapman v. Chapman (13 Beav. 308; 20 L. J., Ch. 465; 15 Jur. 265) observed upon. Ib.

ii. What Deeds.

What Title to be shewn.]—To constitute a good equitable mortgage, it is necessary that the deeds deposited should shew a good title in the depositor. Roberts v. Croft, 24 Beav. 223.

To constitute a good equitable mortgage, it is not necessary that the deeds deposited should shew a complete title in the depositor, provided they are material to the title. Dixon v. Muckleston, 26 L. T. 752; 20 W. R. 619.

Whether all necessary.]—It is not necessary to create an equitable mortgage that all the title deeds, or even all the material title deeds, should be deposited. It is sufficient if the deeds deposited are material evidences of title, and are shewn to have been deposited with the intention of creating a mortgage. Lacon v. Allen, 3 Drew. 579; 26 L. J., Ch. 18; 4 W. R. 693.

Where a mortgagor had previously borrowed money upon copyhold property by depositing the conveyance to himself:—Held, that a subsequent deposit of the remaining documents in the mortgagor's possession constituted a good equitable mortgage. Ib.

Equitable mortgage, from a deposit of part of the title deeds, with evidence, not merely parol, but in writing, that the object was to create a security upon the whole. Wetherell, Ex parte 11 Ves. 398. S. P., Haigh, Ex parte, Id. 403; 8 R. R. 189. See 6 Price, 434; 1 Bro. C. C. 269.

Equitable mortgage may be created by deposit of one of the title deeds, where the others are in the hands of the depositor's solicitors, but not as equitable mortgagees. Chippendale, Ex parte, Potter, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 299; 1 Deac. 67.

Partition.]—Held, that, on a deposit of deeds by a joint tenant after partition, the omission of the partition deed, as it did not belong to him solely, did not impeach the security. Farley, Ex parte, New, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 683; 10 L. J., Bk. 55; 5 Jur. 512.

iii. To Prepare Legal Mortgage.

Generally.]—Equitable mortgage held to be created by delivery of deeds for the purpose of preparing a legal mortgage. Bruce, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 374.

The delivery of title deeds to an attorney to prepare a mortgage deed does not amount to an equitable mortgage; otherwise, if deposited expressly as a security for a debt. Bulteel, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 243; 2 R. R. 39.

Where a mortgagor deposits the title deeds of his estate with his solicitor, by way of equitable security to the mortgagee, until the completion of a legal mortgage, the solicitor is thereby constituted trustee for the mortgagee, and an equitable charge upon the estate will be created by such deposit. Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De G. & J. 614; 29 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1322.

Lien by possession of title-deeds disapproved, and not to be extended with reference to the statute of frauds. In this instance it failed, the deeds being delivered not as a present immediate security, but for the purpose of having a mortgage security created. Norris v. Wilkinson, 12 Ves. 192. See id. 200, n.

Past and Future Advances.]—A deposit of title deeds, to be delivered to a solicitor for the purpose of preparing a legal mortgage to secure an antecedent debt and future advances, though there is no agreement in writing for a mortgage, constitutes a valid equitable mortgage. Bulfin v. Dunne, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 198.

Where title deeds are left in the hands of an attorney, for the purpose of preparing a mortgage, as a security for money previously advanced, this is an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds. Keys v. Williams, 3 Y. & C. 55; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 59; 2 Jur. 611.

Where, in order to prevent immediate proceedings against a debtor, the title deeds of an intestate were deposited by him with his creditor's attorney, for the purposes of preparing a mortgage of the property:—Held, that this transaction amounted to an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds. Ib.

Evidence.]—Deposit of deeds until a mortgage, as evidence of an agreement for a mortgage, a good equitable title. Wright, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 258.

Bankruptcy Intervening.]—B., having contracted a debt with defendant, proposed to mortgage his estate to him as a security, and left his title deeds with his attorney to prepare the mortgage; but the attorney died before it was done. Afterwards defendant carried the deeds to another scrivener for the same purpose; but, before he had prepared the mortgage, B. became bankrupt, and plaintiff, as his assignee, brought a bill to have the deeds delivered up, and the estate sold for the benefit of the creditors; which was decreed. Brander v. Boles, Pre. Ch. 375; Gilb. Eq. Rep. 35.

iv. Extent of Security and Charge.

Security.]—A deposit of title deeds primâ facie creates an equitable mortgage upon the whole property comprised in them. Ashton v. Dalton, 2 Coll. C. C. 565; 10 Jur. 451.

A. and B. (brothers) were tenants in common in tail of copyhold property, with cross remainders between them. B. obtained a loan for A. from C., for which A. gave his promissory note, and deposited the title deeds with C. as a collateral security, and gave a written memorandum, by which he engaged "to make a formal surrender of my interest in the estate to which the said deeds relate, by way of further security, whenever thereunto required"; and B. wrote at the foot, "I join in the deposit." A. died unmarried, and without having surrendered to C. or barred the remainders. Upon a bill by C. against B., seeking to foreclose the entirety:—Held, first, that this was a good equitable charge, not merely upon A.s "interest" in his moiety, but also upon B.'s estate in remainder, and that B. must bear the expense of surrendering that moiety; secondly that the charge extended only to the moiety of the estate which originally belonged to A. Pryce v. Bury, 2 Drew. 11; 23 L. J., Ch. 676; 18 Jur. 967.

Adjoining premises (X. and Y.) were respectively conveyed to a testator by deeds of 1840 and 1843, and then united. He devised them to his sons, who made an equitable mortgage by deposit of the deeds of Y. and the probate of the will. The mortgagee believed, from the son's statement, that the whole property was comprised:—Held, that the property X. was not comprised in the equitable mortgage. Jones v. Williams, 24 Beav. 47; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1066; 5 W. R. 775.

—— Fixtures.]—Under an equitable mortgage by the simple deposit of a lease, unaccompanied by any memorandum, the tenant's fixtures will be included. Williams v. Evans, 23 Beav. 239.

Leases were deposited by way of equitable mortgage, accompanied by a memorandum of deposit. Tenant's fixtures were included in the security, although they were not mentioned in the memorandum. Cowell, Ex parte, 17 L. J., Bk. 16; 12 Jur. 411.

A lessee annexed tenant's fixtures, and then deposited the lease by way of mortgage, with a memorandum, not noticing the fixtures:—Held, on his becoming bankrupt, that the security extended to the fixtures. Tagart, Ex parte, 1 De G. 531.

Where the memorandum of deposit accompanying an equitable mortgage stated that the bankrupt had deposited "the deeds and documents under which he held the steam-mills, cottages, land, buildings and premises at L.":—Held, upon construction of the contract, the point of "order and disposition" not having been taken, that the equitable mortgagee had a lien on the fixtures, whether erected before or after the time of the deposit, and including tenant's fixtures. Price, Ex parte, Stead, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 518; 11 L. J., Bk. 27; 6 Jur. 327.

—— Intention.]—Copyhold property not otherwise subject to any charge, held to be within the meaning of the security in an equitable mortgage, the recital describing the property as freehold estates at Iver, subject to the charge affecting the same, but the operative part describing it merely as "lands, tenements and hereditaments at or near Iver":—Held, also, that freehold property at Iver, which was not subject to any charge, was within the mortgagee's security; the intention, from other written memoranda, being clearly to give a general charge. Glynn, Ex parte, Medley, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 29; 9 L. J., Bk. 41; 4 Jur. 395.

—— Evidence of Memorandum.]—Where freehold title deeds were intended to be deposited with an equitable mortgagee, together with deeds relating to leasehold property, and were accordingly specified in the memorandum of deposit, the freehold property was included in the order for sale. Leathes, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 112.

Where on the deposit of a deed, by one part of which a house was conveyed to the bankrupt, and by another part, and for a distinct consideration, the furniture was assigned, the memorandum of deposit spoke of the deeds deposited (being the lease and release) "as the title deeds of my Bognor estate":—Held, that the house only was charged. Hunt, Ex parte, 1 Mont. D. & D. 139; 4 Jur. 342.

Charge.]—A. and B. being seised of estate for life of A., C. advances them a sum of money to pay off a mortgage thereon, and for other purposes, it being agreed estate should be mortgaged to C. for the whole sum lent. C. receives the title deeds; B. refuses to execute mortgage deed. On bill against A. and B.'s infant heir-at-law, C. held only entitled to mortgage to amount of former mortgage paid off with his money, and that the rest was not charged on the land, the proof of B.'s assent to the deposit of the deeds not being satisfactory. Williams v. Medlicot, 6 Price, 495.

A. B. voluntarily assigned to trustees bonds and promissory notes amounting to 600*l.*, in trust for himself and his wife and children, and he handed over the securities. The trustee gave no notice to the debtors. A. B. received 200*l.*, part of the 600*l.* (the securities for which had been returned to him), and the remainder was lost by the insolvency of the debtors. A. B. invested the 200*l.* with other moneys of his own on freeholds, and by writing acknowledged the 200*l.* to be trust property. He afterwards deposited the title deeds with the trustees as a security for the whole 600*l.*:—Held, that the equitable mortgage was valid to the extent of 200*l.* but no further. James v. Bydder, 4 Beav. 600; 5 Jur. 1076.

—— Evidence cf.]—When a deposit of title deeds is accompanied with a memorandum in writing, the kind and amount of charge intended to be created by the deposit must be ascertained solely by reference to the written document. Shaw v. Foster, 42 L. J., Ch. 49; L. R. 5 H. L. 321; 27 L. T. 281; 20 W. R. 907.

v. Further Advances.

Extension to.]—Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds extended beyond original purpose to advances subsequent by implication or parol. Kensington, Ex parte, 2 V. & B. 79; G. Cooper, 66; 2 Rose, 138; 13 R. R. 32.

Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, though not now to be disturbed, disapproved, and not extended by inference from a legal mortgage to a subsequent advance. Hooper, Ex parte, 9 Ves. 477; 13 R. R. 244.

Equitable mortgage by agreement, for a farther advance upon a former deposit of a deed, continued. Ib.

Though an equitable deposit may be extended to subsequent advances, where an agreement for the extension is proved, yet it cannot be so extended, if the proof of both the original deposit and loan fails. Kebell v. Philpot, 7 L. J., Ch. 237; 2 Jur. 739.

An agreement in writing, accompanying the deposit of title deeds to secure a specific sum, may be extended as a security beyond that sum by a subsequent verbal agreement. Nettleship, Ex parte, Buskill, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 124; 10 L. J., Bk. 67; 5 Jur. 733.

Equitable mortgage, by a deposit of title deeds, established, but disapproved; extended to a subsequent advance by the same person only upon clear proof that it was upon security of the deposit, not to an advance by a third person unless connected with some dealing with the estate; and the person holding the deposit, a mere trustee, having made no advance. Whitbread, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 209.

A further debt, agreed to be secured by pledge of property equitably mortgaged, is also tantamount to a further equitable mortgage; and possession of the deeds by the first mortgagee is a possession by the second. Fector v. Philpott, 12 Price, 197; 26 R. R. 650.

b. Without Deposit.

By Parol.]—Parol agreement to deposit lease, when granted as security for money advanced, does not constitute equitable mortgage. Coombe, Ex parte, 4 Madd. 249; 20 R. R. 294.

The bankrupt, being indebted to a banking company, made an oral promise to the directors to give them, when required, security for the debt. He was then entitled to a reversionary interest in one-fifth of a farm, to come into possession on the death of his mother, who was tenant for life, and who held the title deeds. The mother afterwards died, and the title deeds came into the possession of the respondent, who was manager of the bank, and who was also entitled to one-fifth of the property. The respondent told the bankrupt that he had possession of the deeds, and that he held his (the bankrupt's) one-fifth for the bank. The bankrupt expressed his assent:—Held, that the company had not a valid equitable mortgage of the bankrupt's share in the farm, for there was no memorandum in writing to satisfy the statute of frauds, and the conversation which took place between the bankrupt and the respondent as to the custody of the deeds, not being followed by any act which altered the legal position of the parties, was not such a part performance of the oral promise to give security as would exclude the operation of the statute. Broderick, Ex parte, Beetham, In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 635; 18 Q. B. D. 766; 35 W. R. 613—C. A.

By order on Third Party.]—There must be some actual deposit to constitute an equitable mortgage. An order on a third party to deposit a lease, when executed, is not sufficient. Perry, Ex parte, Collins, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 252.

A. being entitled to three properties, the title deeds of one of which were held by his bankers as a security, deposited the title deeds of the other two with B. as a security for a debt, and he gave him an order to the bankers (written by himself, but not signed) to deliver over the deeds of the third property when their lien had been satisfied : — Held, that this gave B. a valid equitable mortgage on the property mortgaged to the bankers. Daw v. Terrell, 33 Beav. 218 ; 3 N. R. 285.

An equitable mortgage may be created by an agreement to assign the interest in securities, although in the hands of third parties : and the obtaining a security for an antecedent debt, three weeks only before the issuing the fiat, is not of itself sufficient to prevent the creditor obtaining the usual order at once without a preliminary inquiry. Heathcote, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 711 ; 6 Jur. 1001.

By Memorandum or Agreement.]—A memorandum or an agreement shewing an intention to deposit title deeds by way of equitable mortgage, or to charge the property comprised in those deeds with the payment of the debt, is sufficient to create an equitable charge without actual deposit. Sheffield Union Banking Co., Ex parte, Carter and Justins, In re, 13 L. T. 477.

T. agreed to let to B. premises in Holborn, which B. was to fit up forthwith as a luncheon-bar and restaurant, such fittings to be of the value of 500*l.* and to T.'s satisfaction, and B. was to pay a premium of 1,000*l.*, upon payment of which, "the premises being fitted up as aforesaid," T. was to grant B., and B. agreed to take, a lease for twenty-one years ; and T. further agreed to lend or obtain for B., "upon security of the premises as fitted and licensed," 1,000*l.* for two years at 5 per cent. Before any lease was granted or any money paid, B. became bankrupt, and his assignee seized and sold the fittings and fixtures under an order of the court : —Held, that, until the execution of the proposed lease, the agreement constituted an equitable contract between T. and B. that "the premises as fitted and licensed" should stand as a security for the 1,000*l.* premium, and consequently that T. was entitled to them as equitable mortgagee. Tebb v. Hodge, 39 L. J., C. P. 56 ; L. R. 5 C. P. 73 ; 21 L. T. 499—Ex. Ch.

John S. entered into an agreement with E. for securing payment of sums of money owing by him to E. In this agreement there was a covenant that John S. would give to E., as part of the securities, a mortgage on the lots of a particular estate, and James S., the brother of John, and therein described as being the owner of lot No. 1, was to join in the mortgage of it. By a subsequent agreement, under seal, to which John S., E. and James S., were parties, after reciting the first agreement, John covenanted that he would, before a certain time, convey, or cause to be conveyed, to E., lot 1, to be held by E. in fee ; "And it is agreed by and between the parties hereto" that, if John S. shall pay E. the moneys due to him, E. shall re-transfer "all securities of whatever nature or kind." Provided that, if payment shall not be made, E. may, by "entry, foreclosure, sale, or mortgage of any part or parts of the lands," levy the deficiency. "And each of them, John S. and James S., for himself, his executors, &c.," covenanted to pay any deficiency, so that out of the interest or dividends on railways shares (previously deposited), or by cash payments of John S. or James S., there should be received a certain sum every year. All the three parties duly executed this agreement : —Held, that this amounted to an equitable mortgage binding on the estate of James S. Eyre v. M'Dowell, 9 H. L. Cas. 619.

Agreement by A. with C. as follows :—"In case I fail to pay you any promissory note or bill of exchange of mine, when due, I agree to execute to you a mortgage on all my houses and lands, to secure to you the payment of all sums of money you may advance me on my promissory notes or bills of exchange, with interest, till paid, at such rate as may be provided by such promissory note or bill of exchange" :—Held, to create a valid equitable mortgage on lands, the property of A. at the time of the agreement, for the amount of notes or bills remaining unpaid at maturity. Hurley's Estate, In re, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 488.

Agreement by B. with C. as follows :—"In consideration of the advance this day made by you to me I hereby agree that, in case I fail to pay you any promissory note or bill of exchange of mine when due, I shall, upon demand, execute to you a mortgage on all my houses and lands, to secure to you the payment of all sums advanced, or to be advanced, by you to me on my promissory notes or bills of exchange, with interest till paid, at such rate as may, in each case, be provided by such promissory notes or bills of exchange" :—Held, to create, without any demand, a valid equitable mortgage on lands, the property of B. at the time of the agreement, for the amount of notes or bills unpaid at maturity, the words "on demand" having reference to the execution of a legal mortgage. Ib.

The bankrupt, being indebted to the petitioners as the acceptor of two bills of exchange, entered into an agreement with them and W. L. that the bills should be paid out of the proceeds of certain property, the deeds of which were then in the hands of W. L. for sale :—Held, that the petitioners might claim as equitable mortgagees, but subject to any prior lien of W. L. Greenhill, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 334.

One of two executors and trustees, who had in their possession title deeds of an estate of which their testator and a debtor to his estate had been tenants in common, requested the debtor to allow the executor to retain the title deeds as a security for the debt. The debtor wrote an answer, that the executor might retain the deeds till the debtor got the whole of his affairs settled with the executors, and that he was endeavouring to arrange so as to buy or sell the property :—Held, a good equitable mortgage for the debt. Fenwick v. Potts, 8 De G. M. & G. 506.

—— By Secretary of Bank, for Credit Account.]—A secretary of a banking company had a credit account with the bank to the extent of 5,000*l.*, secured by a memorandum, specifying certain securities by way of equitable mortgage. On his dying a debtor to the bank in 4,000*l.*, there was found in his office in the banking-house the securities mentioned in the memorandum, with others, tied in a bundle and indorsed and labelled as securities. There was evidence that he had stated that the bank was secured in 5,000*l.* :—Held, that the bank was equitable mortgagee of all the securities. Ferres v. Mullins, 2 Sm. & G. 378 ; 2 Eq. R. 809 ; 18 Jur. 718 ; 2 W. R. 649.

—— Power of Attorney.]—P. being seised under a lease of lives renewable for ever of premises in Dublin, and being indebted to F. in 448*l.*, in order to secure the repayment executed a power of attorney, whereby he authorised F. to mortgage the premises, and which power of attorney he declared to be "irrevocable until F. should have received the whole of his account against P., or payment of any bill, promissory notes or bills of exchange for which P. is or shall become liable to or on behalf of F." :—Held, that the power of attorney constituted an equitable mortgage of the premises. Parkinson, In re, 13 L. T. 26.

Upon the advance of a sum of money by K. to S., the latter executed her bond and warrant, and effected an assurance upon her life; and also perfected a letter of attorney, authorising K. to receive the rents of her estates; and, by contemporaneous instruments, stating that the letter of attorney was given for the repayment of the money borrowed, she agreed not to revoke it until the sum borrowed should be repaid, with interest; and authorised K. to apply the rents in payment of the premiums on the policy, and the interest on the debt:—Held, that this constituted an equitable mortgage of the lands. Abbott v. Stratten, 3 Jo. & Lat. 609; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 233.

Sale.]—Usual order for sale of equitable mortgage made, notwithstanding argument that, there being no deposit of deeds, the agreement was a mere executory agreement for a mortgage and gave no lien on the property. Jones, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 750.

Scotch Law.]—According to English law, an equitable mortgage was effected of Scotch property. The special case found that, "by the law of Scotland, no lien or equitable mortgage on the estate in question was created by the deposit":—Held, nevertheless, that the parties contracting, as well as the assignees under a subsequent fiat against the mortgagors being resident here, the property came to the hands of the assignees charged with the equity, and, therefore, they were bound to pay the mortgage-debt out of the proceeds of the particular property. Pollard, Ex parte, Courtney, In re, Mont. & C. 239; 4 Deac. 27. Reversing 3 Mont. & Ayr. 343; 6 L. J., Bk. 95; 1 Jur. 288.

Evidence.] — Equitable mortgage, established by means of written documents, coupled with parol evidence, against a prior voluntary settlement. Semble, a post-dated cheque is receivable in evidence, to prove its own invalidity. Ede v. Knowles, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 172.

An informal document, signed by a trustee who was indebted to the trust, construed to amount to an equitable mortgage in favour of the trust, notwithstanding a denial by the answer. Baynard v. Woolley, 20 Beav. 583.

2. Loan for a Period.

Form.]—When an agreement for a mortgage contains a stipulation that the principal shall not be called in for a certain time, the court, in settling the form of the deed, will, although the agreement is silent on the subject, insert a proviso that the postponement shall be conditional on punctual payment of interest, and, if the property is leasehold, on observance of the covenant; so that, if the mortgagor should make default in either of these respects, the mortgagee's remedies by sale or foreclosure will immediately arise. Seaton v. Twyford, 40 L. J., Ch. 122; L. R. 11 Eq. 591; 23 L. T. 648.

Redemption.]—A mortgagor in 1855 covenanted with the mortgagee that he would pay him the sum secured in May, 1875, and the mortgagee covenanted that the principal should remain on the security for the term of twenty years from the date of the deed, and that he would not proceed to a sale, or institute any proceedings, at law or in equity, until the expiration of that term, or until two months after default made in payment of interest; and it was declared that the mortgagor, his executors or administrators, should not nor would pay or tender the principal, nor institute any suit for redemption, until the expiration of twenty years, nor after the expiration of that period without giving twelve months' notice of his intention so to do. The mortgagee was solicitor of the mortgagor, and had been since 1846 in the habit of lending the mortgagor money on mortgage for terms of years certain, on the request of the mortgagor, and the term of twenty years was inserted in the draft by the mortgagor:—Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to a decree for redemption on the usual terms of paying principal, interest and costs of suit, considering that a great part of the costs had been occasioned by charges of an injurious kind against the mortgagee, which had, on amendment, been struck out of the bill, and although the costs had been increased by the mortgagee resisting that right to redeem. Cowdry v. Day, 1 Giff. 316; 29 L. J., Ch. 39; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 1 L. T. 88; 8 W. R. 55.

—— Right of Second Mortgagee.]—A. mortgaged some property to B.; he subsequently mortgaged it to C., who covenanted not to bring any suit, &c., within ten years, for obtaining possession or foreclosing:—Held, that by this covenant C. was precluded from redeeming B. within the ten years. Ramsbottom v. Wallis, 5 L. J., Ch. 92.

A mortgage deed contained a stipulation that the mortgagee should not be at liberty to foreclose, nor the mortgagor to redeem, within five years. The mortgagor, to secure a sum, part of which was for costs incurred and to be incurred, executed a second mortgage to the solicitor who acted for him in arranging the terms of the first, which became forfeited within the five years:—Held, that the second mortgagee was not at liberty to redeem the first during the five years; and, semble, he could not have a sale of the equity of redemption. Lawless v. Mansfield, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 113; 1 Dr. & War. 557.

Quære, as to the validity of the second mortgage and as to right to charge interest on the costs from date of deed. Ib.

Foreclosure.]—The proviso for redemption in a mortgage of a leasehold for years was that upon payment of the principal on a day mentioned, and interest thereon, and the head-rents in the meantime, the deed should be void. By deed of equal date, reciting that the agreement of the parties was that the principal should not be called in until after the decease of the mortgagor, but that by mistake it was not stated in the mortgage deed that the principal money should not be called in until after the decease of the mortgagor, anything in the deed of the mortgage to the contrary notwithstanding:—Held, that the mortgagee could not foreclose the mortgage during the life of the mortgagor, though the interest was in arrear, and the mortgagor had not paid the head-rent. Burrowes v. Molloy, 2 Jo. & Lat. 521 ; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 482.

Where, upon the whole mortgage deed, it appears that, although the redemption is expressed to be upon payment of the principal money and interest at the end of several years, yet the agreement of the parties is that the interest shall be paid half-yearly in the meantime, the mortgagee, upon non-payment of the interest, may foreclose within the period. Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jo. & Lat. 1.

Sale.]—A mortgage contained a covenant by the mortgagor not to redeem for eight years, and, five years being yet unexpired, the mortgagor presented a petition for sale in the usual form : —Held, that the covenant was cause against making an absolute order for sale. Hone, In re, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 65.

Default—Waiver.]—Agreement in writing not to call in a mortgage for two years, the mortgagor fulfilling his covenants. On one occasion within the two years interest was not paid on the day, and the mortgagee shortly afterwards, after giving notice that he was no longer bound by the agreement, demanded and received payment of the interest and incidental costs :— Held, a waiver of the default ; and an injunction was granted to restrain an ejectment brought within the two years. Langridge v. Payne, 2 J. & H. 423 ; 7 L. T. 23 ; 10 W. R. 726.

A mortgagee agreed with the mortgagor that if the interest was duly and punctually paid the principal should remain for two years. Six months' interest became due and was demanded, but was not paid ; and the mortgagee then demanded payment of principal and interest. Three days afterwards the mortgagor paid the six months' interest, which was received by the mortgagee :—Held, that the mortgagee had not thereby, nor by a subsequent unaccepted offer to receive an instalment, waived his right to call in the principal. Keene v. Biscoe, 47 L. J., Ch. 644 ; 8 Ch. D. 201 ; 38 L. T. 286 ; 26 W. R. 552.

Proviso in a mortgage that, if the interest should be punctually paid, the principal should not be called in before a certain date ; the mortgagee might enter notwithstanding any subsequent acceptance of interest. The first half-year's interest was not paid within the time limited. During that time the mortgagee was out of the country. The interest was forwarded upon the mortgagee's sending instructions as to the mode of remittance. The next half-year's interest was liquidated in advance, by a bill of exchange accepted by the mortgagor for the mortgagee's convenience ; and the mutual relations of the parties were treated as subsisting unchanged :—Held, that there had been no default in the payment of the interest ; and that, if any default had been made, the subsequent conduct of the mortgagee would have amounted to a waiver of it. Tuaffe, In re, 14 Ir. Ch. R. 347.

Practice—Injunction till Period Expired.]—Written agreements relating to the working of some quarries contained the following provisions : That the defendants should allow and pay to the plaintiffs for two years, from the 7th of December, 1870, 400*l.* for each year, by equal quarterly sums of 100*l.* ; that the sums of money which should be paid to the plaintiffs under that clause should be added to a debt of 7,035*l.* then due from the plaintiffs, and that the whole amount of such debt should bear interest from time to time at the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum ; that the sum, meaning the 7,035*l.* and all additions thereto, whether by means of the two sums of 400*l.* above mentioned, and all interest upon the said debt, should be a first charge upon the purchase-money which should become payable to plaintiffs under the sixth clause of the last agreement. The defendants had advanced 7,035*l.* and other moneys to the plaintiffs on their personal account and also on the security of the working of the quarries which were managed by the plaintiffs. The defendants considered the workings were not successful ; and in June, 1872, they sued the plaintiffs at law for their debt. The plaintiffs then filed a bill for the specific performance of the agreements, an account, and an injunction to restrain the action :—Injunction granted until the expiration of the two years. Curteis v. Fenning, 41 L. J., Ch. 791.

3. Welsh Mortgages.

Creation.]—A., being entitled in fee to a freehold estate in remainder expectant on the decease of B., demised his interest to C. for a term of 500 years, subject to a proviso for redemption, on payment of the sum of 1,000*l.* and interest, without any time being fixed by the proviso for payment of the money. The deed contained a covenant by A. for payment of the money on demand, and also a covenant that it should be lawful for C. to enter into the property, and to hold and enjoy the same until the payment of the principal money and interest :— Held, that the mortgage was in the nature of a Welsh mortgage ; and a bill of foreclosure, filed by C. against a person to whom A. had conveyed his reversionary interest, was dismissed, but without costs. Teulon v. Curtis, Younge, 610 ; 2 L. J., Ex. Eq. 17.

Where mortgage is made in trust that mortgagee should continue in possession till, by perception of the rents and profits, he should be satisfied the principal and interest, the mortgagee is in the nature of a tenant by elegit, and, as soon as his principal and interest are satisfied, his estate ceases, and the mortgagor may maintain an ejectment ; nor, unless the mortgagee had continued in possession twenty years after the money had been paid off, could the statute of limitations have run. Yates v. Hambly, 2 Atk. 362.

The mortgagor may come into a court of equity for an account of the profits received, as in an elegit the conusor has a right to see if the conusee on the extended value has received a satisfaction of his whole debt, and to have the surplus paid to him. Ib.

Redemption.]—In common Welsh mortgages, on tendering principal and interest, the person entitled may come into this court for redemption at any time. Ib.

The mortgagor entitled to redeem on the common terms, and not obliged to bring ejectment for possession, but shall have decree for it here. Ib.

Time no bar to redemption in case of a Welsh mortgage, unless twenty years after principal and interest paid by perception of rents and profits. Fenwick v. Reed, 1 Mer. 114.

In a Welsh mortgage there is a perpetual power of redemption in mortgagor, and mortgagee cannot compel a redemption or foreclosure. Longuet v. Scawen, 1 Ves. 406.

Foreclosure and Sale.]—The bill stated a mortgage made by the defendant in consideration of 219*l.*, and that the said mortgage contains a proviso for redemption, in favour of the said defendant, his heirs, executors and administrators, upon his or their at any time paying off the said 219*l.* with interest, as by said indenture in plaintiff's possession, and to which they crave leave to refer, when produced will appear; and prayed an account of the sum due, and that the defendant might be foreclosed of all equity of redemption, and for a sale; and that the defendant might be ordered to bring in the title deeds. To this bill a general demurrer was allowed, as it appeared by the bill that this was in the nature of a Welsh mortgage; and no case was shown entitling the plaintiffs to have a sale independently of a foreclosure; and it did not appear that the title deeds were sought otherwise than for the purposes of the foreclosure and sale, to neither of which were the plaintiffs entitled by their bill. O'Connell v. Cummins, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 251.

Priority.]—The true meaning of the Exchequer Loan Commissioners Acts is that the commissioners have power to sell property comprised in their securities as against all persons over whom they have an absolute priority, but not as against prior incumbrancers, except so far as these may have conceded their priority. Jortin v. S. E. Ry., 6 De G. M. & G. 270; 24 L. J., Ch. 343; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 433; 3 Eq. R. 281; 3 W. R. 190.

Therefore, where prior mortgagees of the works and tolls of a harbour agreed that, on the commissioners making an advance, the tolls should be applied, first, in paying interest on the commissioners' advances; secondly, in paying interest on the prior mortgages; and, thirdly, in reduction of the principal of the commissioners' advances till it was paid off; and, the tolls being insufficient to keep down the interest on the commissioners' advances, they sold the subject of their security to a railway company with notice of the agreement:—Held, that the purchasers took subject to the charge of the prior mortgages, in respect of the interest on their securities. Ib.

Practice.]—The mortgages were in the nature of a Welsh mortgage, being in a form prescribed by the harbour act, whereby the works and tolls were demised until the mortgages were paid off:—Held, that, whether the mortgagees could proceed at law or not, they were entitled to sue in equity. Ib.

4. Stock Mortgages.

Replacing Stock — After Discharge.] — A. agreed to lend B. 500*l.* navy stock; he sold the stock for 522*l.*, which he paid to B.; a bond was drawn to repay "the sum of 522*l.* (being the produce of 500*l.* navy 5 per cents., or such other sum as would replace the stock) with lawful interest." B. on discharging the bond refused to replace the stock; A. received the money, and gave up the bond:—Held, that, after having received the money, he could not come to equity for relief. Barnham v. Munn, Tam. 86.

—— After Depreciation.]—Transfer of stock, by way of loan, upon bond, with condition to replace the stock six months after the date, and in the meantime to pay interest at 5 per cent.; the stock not being replaced, and being depreciated, the obligee is entitled to the value of the stock at the time of the transfer, with interest at 5 per cent. to the date of the report, credit being given for some payments on account of the principal. Forrest v. Elwes, 4 Ves. 492.

A stock mortgage was made for a term of years, for securing the retransfer of stock at the end of the term, and payment in the meantime of interest calculated on the proceeds of the stock sold to raise the loan. The mortgage having been allowed to run after the end of the term, and the stock having fallen in price:—Held, that the mortgagee was not entitled to the market value of the stock at the end of the term, but that the mortgagor could redeem on replacing the specific amount of stock originally sold. Blyth v. Carpenter, 35 L. J., Ch. 823; L. R. 2 Eq. 501; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 898; 15 L. T. 154; 15 W. R. 3.

—— Deduction of Interest.]—A borrower, who is bound to replace a certain amount of stock, and in the meantime to pay the lender the dividends, continues during many years to pay 5 per cent. interest on the sum which the stock had produced. He is entitled, when called upon to replace the stock, to deduct from it the excess of the interest thus paid beyond the amount of the dividends. Tyler v. Manson, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 34.

5. Charges.

In General.]—S. and N., having money of R. in their hands, wrote a letter to her, agreeing to give her a charge for the amount on a mortgage for 600*l.* due from M. on a mortgage of his share in an estate in Kent. S. and N. had formerly had a mortgage for 600*l.* on M.'s share of the estate, but before the date of the letter the estate had been sold, and the purchase-money invested in consols, in the names of trustees, of whom S. himself was one, in trust to indemnify the purchaser against certain claims, and subject thereto, as to M.'s share, upon trust for securing the debt to S. and N. S. and N. became bankrupt:—Held, that the letter created a valid charge on S. and N.'s interest in the consols. Rogers, Ex parte, Selby, In re, 8 De G. M. & G. 271; 25 L. J., Bk. 41; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 480.

Held, also, that, as S. was one of the trustees of the stock, there was notice sufficient to prevent the charge from being defeated on the ground of reputed ownership. Ib.

In 1875 L. advanced 800*l.* to C., his solicitor, to be invested by the latter. On the 12th February, 1876, L. asked C. for some evidence of the investment, and C. wrote and gave him a memorandum stating that the 800*l.* was in C.'s hands at interest at 5*l.* per cent., "being part of a large sum advanced to P. on security of freehold houses at K." C. afterwards died insolvent, and it then appeared that there was no mortgage by P., but that in 1873 P. and Y. had entered into a partnership arrangement for the purchase of houses at K.; C. by himself or his clients providing the purchase-money; P. executing the mortgages necessary to raise the money; P. paying back half the money provided by C. personally by the 1st November, 1876, and paying interest at 5*l* per cent. in the meantime; and either party having the right to demand a sale after that date. A sum of nearly 7,000*l.* was due to C. on the 1st January, 1876 :—Held, that L. was entitled to a charge on C.'s share of the proceeds of the sale of the houses to the extent of the 800*l.* and interest. Crowdy, In re, Burges v. Crowdy, 46 L. T. 71.

Creation of, through Existence of Condition.]—A mortgagor having an equity of redemption, or an ultimate interest in a fund by the performance of some condition without which he cannot get at it, does not by that condition create a charge in his own favour as against his mortgagee. Saunders v. Dunman, 47 L. J., Ch. 338 ; 7 Ch. D. 825 ; 38 L. T. 416 ; 26 W. R. 397.

Equitable.]—An equitable charge upon land may be created by an instrument in writing which shews the intention of the parties that a security should be created, although it contains no general words of charge. Cradock v. Scottish Provident Institution, 63 L. J., Ch. 15. Affirmed, 70 L. T. 718—C. A.

A father, upon the marriage of his daughter, executed a deed whereby he covenanted to pay his daughter an annuity, and, for the purpose of securing the annuity, appointed a receiver of the rents and profits of lands in which he had an estate for life, with a direction to apply the moneys received as specified in the deed. The deed contained provisions that the appointment should not be revoked by the appointor, and for the appointment of subsequent receivers if necessary :—Held, that the deed created a charge upon the father's life estate in the lands. Ib.

L., on the 14th June, 1858, in consideration of the forbearance of the plaintiff in not requiring immediate repayment of the moneys he had advanced to or for him, signed an agreement undertaking to execute to the plaintiff a charge on the interests to which, by right of marriage with Mrs. L., he was or claimed to be entitled in the property settled on, or in or to which she might be interested or entitled in respect of, her former marriage, or the income arising therefrom, as a security to the plaintiff for the repayment of the moneys he had advanced to him ; and L. pledged himself not to incumber his interests in such property or income by way of settlement or otherwise. Notice of the agreement was on the following day sent by the plaintiff to A., one of the trustees. L., on the 18th June, 1858, with the knowledge, but without the consent of the plaintiff, executed a post-nuptial settlement, by which he conveyed all his interest, in right of his wife, in the property settled on her, on her first marriage, to trustees, for her for life, then for himself for life, and after the decease of the survivor, for the children of the marriage. On the 13th July, 1858, L. executed a deed whereby he charged all the dividends, interest and annual proceeds of the funds which were settled at the time of his wife's first marriage, and also his share in the funds themselves, with the payment of 800*l.* and interest from the 14th June, 1858, to the plaintiff. L. also assigned the same property to the plaintiff by way of mortgage, with a proviso for redemption on repayment of the sum and interest by him :—Held, that a valid equitable charge was created by the agreement of the 14th June, 1858, in favour of the plaintiff, as a creditor of L., upon the dividends to which the wife was entitled under her first marriage settlement ; that the deed of mortgage of the 13th July, 1858, bound the estate of L. only ; that, inasmuch as, by the post-nuptial settlement of the 18th June, 1858, the whole of the dividends had been, subject to the charge, settled to the separate use of the wife, and vested in trustees for her benefit, it was improper to reserve an equity of redemption to L., yet the deed operated as a recognition of the debt due to the plaintiff, and, coupled with the agreement of the 14th June, gave the plaintiff a right to an account and payment of what should be found due, and, in default of payment, a right of foreclosure against L. and his assignee in insolvency. Carew v. Arundell, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 71 ; 5 L. T. 498.

An agreement that a certain judgment debt and interest thereon should be paid to the plaintiff out of any moneys which might be recovered by the defendant in respect of certain claims which he had against third parties :—Held, to create a valid equitable charge upon these moneys when recovered. Riccard v. Prichard, 1 K. & J. 277 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 750.

The defendant having recovered the moneys so due to him in an action, and the same having been paid into the court of common pleas, the court of chancery, in a suit by the judgment creditor to establish his equitable charge on the fund, granted an injunction to restrain the defendant from receiving it until he should have paid the judgment debt and interest, and the costs of the suit. Ib.

Effect given to an equitable charge for valuable consideration upon expectant legacies. Bennett v. Cooper, 9 Beav. 252 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 315 ; 10 Jur. 507.

A., the owner of Blackacre, and B., the owner of Whiteacre, mutually covenanted to bear the expense of keeping in repair a private road, of which they had joint use, in proportion to the acreage of their respective properties, and the deed contained a proviso that, in addition to the covenants thereinbefore contained, it was contended that, by virtue of the deed, the expense of the repair of the road should be considered as a charge in equity, and, as far as circumstances would admit, at law also, upon the owners for the time being of Blackacre and Whiteacre, in the above proportions :—Held, that the proviso did not create a charge on the lands, and consequently that, upon the registration of Blackacre with an indefeasible title under the 25 & 26 Vict. c. 53, B. was not entitled to have a notice of the proviso entered on the record of title. Mason, Ex parte, Drew, In re, 35 Beav. 443 ; 35 L. J., Ch. 845 ; L. R. 2 Eq. 206 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 425 ; 14 L. T. 278.

—— By Deposit.]—A. writes word to B., that he has "inclosed the particulars of certain title deeds of property, which he has deposited with B. for the security of a debt," and in the schedule inclosed, among other entries, is the following : "9,000*l.*, buildings, houses, &c., at Titherington." A. sends B. a box containing the deeds and other securities, which B. does not examine until after A.'s bankruptcy, when he finds that the only deed relating to the Titherington estate is an old paid-off mortgage :—Held, nevertheless, that the letter and the schedule, taken together, created an equitable charge on the Titherington estate. Arkwright, Ex parte, Daintry, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 129.

Where a mortgagor deposits the title deeds of his estate with his solicitor, by way of equitable security to a mortgagee, until the completion of a legal mortgage, the solicitor is thereby constituted trustee for the mortgagee, and an equitable charge upon the estate will be created by such deposit. Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De G. & J. 614; 29 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1322.

The owner in fee of a farm deposited deeds of conveyance of the farm dated 1774, by way of security for money due, writing at the same time a letter which stated that the deeds were the title deeds of the farm, and were to be a security. He afterwards deposited the subsequent title deeds of the farm, the earliest being dated 1787, with his bankers, by way of security for money due to them; the title was investigated by the bankers, and they had no notice of the prior charge:—Held, that the letter created an equitable charge on the farm, and that, under the circumstances, credit must be taken to have been given by the owner of the prior charge to the statement made by the mortgagor, that the deposited deeds were the whole of the title deeds; and that the owner of the prior charge had therefore not been guilty of negligence so as to deprive herself of her priority. Dixon v. Muckleston, 42 L. J., Ch. 210; L. R. 8 Ch. 155; 27 L. T. 804; 21 W. R. 178.

Extent of.]—A reservoir of water made, and a house built, after an agreement to charge certain unfinished houses, and all other the messuages, lands, hereditaments, and fee farm or ground rents adjoining the said unfinished messuages, were held to be subject to the charge. Turner v. Dickenson, 3 Cl. & F. 593. S. C. nom. Fournier v. Paine, 9 Bligh (N.S.) 282.

Rectification.]—B., having verbally agreed to give his bankers an equitable charge on three leasehold houses, which he pointed out to their manager, signed a document which was intended to create a charge on such houses, but by a mistake in the parcels three houses were charged, being described as comprised in a certain lease, which in fact comprised only one house, and which had been sold by A. prior to the date of the document. On his bankruptcy:—Held, that the bank was entitled to have the document rectified by the insertion of the property intended to be comprised in it. National Provincial Bank of England, Ex parte, Boulter, In re, 46 L. J., Bk. 11; 4 Ch. D. 241; 35 L. T. 673; 25 W. R. 100.

6. Liens.

a. Creation and Extent.

In General.]—Agreement for a mortgage creates specific lien against creditors. Burn v. Burn, 4 Ves. 582.

A testator was in the habit of selling land to builders, and of advancing them money for the purpose of building on it; and, on the statement of an account between the parties for the balance of unpaid purchase-money and money lent, the builders, by a memorandum in writing, acknowledged that the balance agreed upon was a charge upon the land. The testator, by his will, authorised his executors to make such agreement with the purchasers of any part of his real estate, and to advance money to them for building in the manner he had been accustomed to do. The executors accordingly sell a portion of land for this purpose, leaving the purchase-money to remain a charge upon the land; and they also make advances to the purchaser to enable him to build thereon, but without taking any memorandum in writing, declaring that the advances were to be a charge upon the land. The purchaser becomes bankrupt:—Held, that the executors had a lien on the land so sold for the advances made by them since the death of the testator. Linden, Ex parte, Baker, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 428; 10 L. J., Bk. 22; 5 Jur. 57.

Plaintiff, by his bill, stated that J. G. and others, next of kin of R., agreed that he should have 300*l.* for his trouble and services in collecting evidence, &c., to establish their claim, which was disputed, and that they, and particularly J. G., promised he should have a lien for that sum on the assets; that, in consequence of his exertions, the parties were declared next of kin; and that J. G., and another of them, since deceased, took out administration. The bill prayed that the plaintiff might be decreed to have a lien on the assets:—Held, on demurrer, that the claim, so far as it was a personal claim, was a demand for work and labour, and was recoverable, if at all, at law; that the promise by J. G. to give a lien on the assets before administration could not be enforced against the assets when J. G. and another afterwards administered; and, even if she alone had administered, such previous promise was by a stranger, and could be of no avail. Quære, would such promise be binding, even after administration. A demurrer for want of equity will lie to a cross bill. Kirwan v. Gorman, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 154.

The rebuilding of a dissenting chapel was entrusted to three of the trustees in whom the estate was vested. There being a deficiency of money, they borrowed, on a deposit of the title deeds of the chapel, 500*l.*, which they personally engaged to pay. Interest was, for a long time, paid out of the chapel funds, but ultimately the representatives of the trustees were compelled to pay the money. The legal estate was vested in new trustees:—Held, that the representatives of the person who had paid the 500*l.* had a lien on the deeds, but they were not entitled to a decree for foreclosure or sale, as by granting such relief the trust would be altogether destroyed. Darke v. Williamson, 25 Beav. 622.

A solicitor, having in his possession the title deeds of an estate mortgaged to his client, deposited the deeds with his banker as security for an advance, which he applied in the purchase of an estate on his own behalf. When the mortgage was paid off, he applied that money in repaying the loan from his banker, and informed his client that he had reinvested the mortgage money upon other good security. His client thereupon executed a reassignment of the mortgage; but in fact the solicitor never reinvested the money, although he continued to pay interest upon it until his death:—Held, that the client was entitled to a lien upon the estate so purchased by the solicitor. Hopper v. Conyers, L. R. 2 Eq. 549; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 328; 14 W. R. 628.

Where a bankrupt held a bond from a debtor, with a warrant of attorney to secure the same debt, and he deposited the bond only:—Held, that a lien was thereby created on the debt, but that a policy of assurance referred to in the memorandum of deposit as being deposited also, but in fact retained by the bankrupt, was not charged. Hallifax, Ex parte, Ridge, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 544.

Of Mortgagor—Mortgage of Renewable Leasehold—Purchase of Reversion by Mortgagor—Mortgage of Reversion.]—An ecclesiastical lease of a house for a term of years, which was renewable by custom, though it contained no covenant by the lessors for renewal, was mortgaged, and the equity of redemption was afterwards assigned for value. The ecclesiastical commissioners, in whom the reversion had become vested, would not renew the lease, but before its expiration they agreed to sell the reversion to the assignee of the equity of redemption. The conveyance was not executed till after the expiration of the lease. While the negotiation for the purchase of the reversion was in progress the assignee borrowed 300*l.*, giving the lender a memorandum in writing, which stated that the money was to be secured by a mortgage from him of the house "so soon as he had completed the enfranchisement of the property from the commissioners." The lender had no notice of the mortgage of the lease:—Held, that the mortgagor could only hold the fee simple of the property subject to the mortgage of the lease, and that he (and consequently the lender of the 300*l.*) was not entitled to any prior lien on the property for the purchase-money of the reversion, notwithstanding the fact that the mortgagor was under no obligation to the mortgagees of the lease to obtain a renewal of it, or to purchase the reversion. Leigh v. Burnett, 54 L. J., Ch. 757; 29 Ch. D. 231; 52 L. T. 458; 33 W. R. 578.

Of Mortgagee.]—A railway company, requiring possession of land which was subject to an equitable mortgage by deposit, proceeded to pay into court the amount of the valuation, and to enter into the usual bonds with the landowner and the equitable mortgagees. They afterwards assessed the purchase-money and compensation before a jury, as between themselves and the landowner, without giving notice to the mortgagees, who, however, were aware of, though they took no part in, the inquiry. The amount fixed by the jury was not enough to pay the mortgagees their debt, and was, moreover, less than the sum paid into court by the company. The mortgagees then filed a bill against the company and the landowner:—Held, that the sum in court, being deposited under the act as a security for what the jury should find, was not available for any other purpose, and consequently that the plaintiffs had no lien upon it; but that, as equitable mortgagees, they were entitled to a lien on the property comprised in the memorandum of deposit, and, in default of payment, to an assignment to them by the company of such property. Martin v. L., C. & D. Ry., 35 L. J., Ch. 795; L. R. 1 Ch. 501; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 775; 14 L. T. 814; 14 W. R. 880.

Held, moreover, that the company was not, under the circumstances, entitled to proceed under the Lands Clauses Act, s. 124, which provides for the purchase of interests omitted to be purchased by mistake or inadvertence. Ib.

Among the effects of a testatrix were found title deeds belonging to a trader, and a letter written by the testatrix to her agent, directing him to advance a certain sum to the trader, and stating that the advances were made on the security of certain title deeds and documents therein described; and at the foot of this letter the trader signed a receipt for the advances. The title deeds found among the testatrix's effects did not answer the description in the letter; but it did not appear whether any others were deposited with her on the occasion of the loan. The trader became bankrupt, and the usual petition of an equitable mortgagee was presented by the testatrix's personal representative:—Held, that there was a good lien on the property comprised in the title deeds found in the testatrix's possession for the amount of the advances, but that there was no sufficient memorandum to entitle the petitioner to costs. Powell, Ex parte, 6 Jur. 490.

Equitable.]—A., a director, received from the company a cheque, paid in one of his own for a like amount, and received in exchange a deposit note for the same amount. This transaction was never confirmed by a general meeting:—Held, that his mortgagee was entitled to an equitable lien on the sum secured by the deposit-note. Woodhams v. Anglo-Australian, &c. Assurance Society, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 148; 5 L. T. 629; 10 W. R. 290.

In 1884, M., in consequence of H. advancing 60,000*l.*, agreed to cede one-third of the profits to be derived from a contract that he had for the construction of a railway in Spain; and to assist in raising 30,000*l.* by giving such bills of acceptance or otherwise as might be required. The agreement contemplated that H. should advance 30,000*l.* in cash, and the rest in bills, but he failed to perform the whole of his part of the contract; but H. had advanced some money in furtherance of the object which M. had in view when he entered into the agreement, and those advances were the means of preserving M. the benefit of his railway contract. In 1856 H. assigned to the plaintiff his share and interest under the agreement, in trust to secure the payment of debts, and of the residue, if any, to himself. On a bill by the plaintiff:—Held, that H. was not entitled to an equitable lien on the profits of the contract for the sums advanced by him. Twynam v. Hudson, 31 L. J., Ch. 577; 8 Jur. (N.S.)1685; 10 W. R. 653—L. JJ.

—— Evidence.]—What possession, and what agreement as to the possession, of title-deeds, shall constitute an equitable lien, quære. Robarts v. Jefferys, 8 L. J., Ch. 136.

An equitable lien on title deeds, relating to an estate in China, was created by verbal representations leading the party in possession of such title deeds to consider that he held them, not only as security for a portion of the purchase-money of the estate still unpaid, but also for the general balance of accounts which were then due or might become due to him from a large mercantile firm in London:—Held, that such representations being acted upon were equivalent to a written contract. Watson v. Chapman, 18 L. T. 705.

—— By Deposit.]—An equitable mortgagee by deposit entered into an arrangement to secure an annuity by vesting his interest under the mortgage in himself and the annuitant in trust to secure the growing payments. He then raised money on the deposit of the deeds, and became bankrupt:—Held, that the last deposit created a good lien to the extent of his interest in the premises. Smith, Ex parte, 2 Mont. D. & D. 587; 6 Jur. 610.

A person who advances money bonâ fide on the deposit of title deeds, made by one who has no right to them or the estate to which they relate, will be protected in equity as a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice, and may retain the deeds, though the person making the deposit was not in possession of the property, if it be an incorporeal hereditament. Joyce v. De Moleyns, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 215; 2 Jo. & Lat. 374.

A., by deed, mortgaged freeholds to B. At the same time the title deeds not only of the freeholds but of leaseholds belonging to A. were delivered to B.:—Held, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that B. had no lien on the leaseholds for the money advanced. Wardle v. Oakley, 36 Beav. 27.

Security, Extent of.]—A person can only give a lien on deeds as against himself, and to the extent of his own interest. Turner v. Letts, 20 Beav. 185; 24 L. J., Ch. 638; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1057.

The purchaser of an equity of redemption in premises subject to a mortgage term, deposits the purchase deed as a security. He afterwards pays off the mortgage, and takes a surrender of the term, retaining the deed of surrender in his own possession, and becomes bankrupt:—Held, that the lien created by the deposit extended to the whole estate freed from the incumbrance. Bisdee, Ex parte, Baker, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 333.

Other deeds, deposited at the same time and forming part of the same security, related to an undivided share belonging to the bankrupt in other property. Between the times of the deposit and the bankruptcy the entirety of a certain portion of the property was conveyed to the bankrupt in lieu of his undivided share, he paying 100*l.* for equality of partition:—Held, that the lien affected the portion conveyed to the bankrupt, and that the assignees had no claim in respect of the 100*l.* Ib.

The bankrupt deposited the leases of two houses with the petitioner, for securing 600*l.*, accompanied with an agreement in writing; and on the same day he signed another agreement, engaging to pay 85*l.* per annum, being the improved rental of the premises, "the leases of which are deposited" with the petitioner, viz. 45*l.* being the improved rental of a house in the occupation of J. H.; 20*l.* being the improved rental of the adjoining premises let to J. H., as tenant at will; and 20*l.* being the improved rental of premises in the occupation of A. B.; "the said 85*l.* to be collected by me, and paid over" to the petitioner. The lease of the premises let to J. H., as tenant at will, had not been, in fact, deposited with the petitioner; but only the lease of the other premises in the occupation of J. H., and the lease to A. B.:—Held, nevertheless, that the petitioner had a lien, as equitable mortgagee, upon the premises comprised in all the three leases. Edwards, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 611.

M., a solicitor, having in his hands 2,000*l.* belonging to the estate of J., of which he and A. were trustees, and 600*l.* belonging to the estate of R., of which A. and B. were trustees, and being pressed by A. to give security for the two sums, in A.'s presence placed a parcel, which he represented to contain deeds of his own, worth 4,000*l.* in a box belonging to the estate of J., and a parcel, which he represented to contain other deeds of his own, sufficient to secure 600*l.*, in a box belonging to the estate of R., both boxes being in his custody as solicitor to the respective trusts. At the death of M. it was found that both parcels had been removed from the boxes; and thereupon M.'s widow, who afterwards took out administration with the will annexed, to his estate, deposited with A. deeds belonging to M.'s estate as a security for the 2,000*l.* due to the estate of J.:—Held, first, that the deposit of deeds by M. in the box belonging to the estate of R. was a sufficient change of possession to give A. and B. a lien on the deeds deposited; and that, as these deeds had been taken away, and could not be identified, A. and B. were entitled to a lien for the 600*l.* on all deeds belonging to M. at the time of the deposit. Mason v. Morley, 34 L. J., Ch. 422; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 459; 12 L. T. 414; 13 W. R. 669.

Held, secondly, that the deposit by M.'s widow gave to A. a lien for the 2,000*l.* on the deeds deposited by her; and that these deeds were exempted from the lien of A. and B. for the 600*l.* Ib.

Held, thirdly, that A., by accepting the deposit from the widow, abandoned his right to a general lien for the 2,000*l.* on all the deeds belonging to M. at the time of the original deposit. Ib.

Charge, Extent of.]—Where deeds are deposited for the purpose of obtaining credit, the person with whom they are deposited has no lien upon them for what is due to him in respect of moneys previously advanced. Mountford v. Scott, Turn. & R. 274.

A debtor deposited his title deeds with his creditor until such time as his account should not reach 100*l.*, at which time they were to be restored to him. The debtor died indebted to the creditor in 274*l.*:—Held, that the creditor's lien extended to the whole 274*l.* Ashton v. Dalton, 2 Coll. C. C. 565; 10 Jur. 451.

A. borrows 4,000*l.* from B., and deposits title deeds as a security for that sum. He afterwards obtains further advances, and, after an act of bankruptcy, signs an agreement subjecting the deposit to such further advances. B. declared to be entitled to a lien of the whole amount. Langston, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 26.

b. How Lost.

By Parting with Deeds.]—D. deposited deeds with A. as a security for advances. A. afterwards parted with the custody of the deeds to N., who undertook by letter, in pursuance of an authority received from D., to return the deeds to A. on payment of certain debts due by D. to N.:—Held, that A., by parting with the deeds, had lost his lien. Driscoll, In re, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 285.

Assignee in bankruptcy having purchased an estate of the bankrupt under the commission, held a trustee of the estate upon a resale; in the first instance, for an equitable mortgagee by possession of the deeds; who, having delivered them up on receiving the produce of the first sale, was held, under the circumstances, not to have lost his lien for the deficiency. Morgan, Ex parte, 12 Ves. 6; 8 R. R. 272.

By Depositing as Security.]—A party having a lien on deeds for money advanced in exoneration of the property, held to have lost that lien by depositing those deeds as a security with another party. Baine, Ex parte, Boden, In re, 1 Mont. D. & D. 492; 10 L. J., Bk. 16; 5 Jur. 105.

7. Of Colonial Estates.

a. West Indies.

Validity — Mortgage of Slaves.]—By the laws of Antigua slaves were declared to be inheritance and affixed to the freehold; and by 59 Geo. 3, c. 120, s. 9, no deed or instrument conveying any interest in slaves was valid unless the registered names and descriptions of the slaves were set forth in the instrument, or in some schedule thereof. The bankrupts deposited with R. & Co., as security for a loan of money, a deed of conveyance to the bankrupts of a plantation and slaves in Antigua, with a written memorandum accompanying the deposit. The deed contained a schedule of the registered names and descriptions of the slaves, but they were wholly omitted in the memorandum of the deposit:—Held, first, that this was nevertheless a good equitable mortgage of the slaves; and, being real property in the island of Antigua, could not be considered as within the order and disposition of the bankrupts at the time of their bankruptcy. Rucker, Ex parte and In re, 3 Deac. & C. 704; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 481.

Covenant—Benefit of—Consignment.]—Merchants in London agreeing to become sureties for a West India planter, on being secured by a conveyance of his plantation in trust, with a covenant that they should be continued as consignees till the expiration of five years after reimbursement of what they might advance:—Held, entitled to the benefit of this covenant. Banbury v. Winter, 1 J. & W. 255.

Quære, whether a covenant to continue a mortgagee as consignee after payment of the debt is valid. Ib.

Principle on which mortgagee of a West Indian estate is allowed to stipulate for the consignment. Id. 261.

A covenant in a mortgage of property in the West Indies, on the part of the mortgagor, to consign the produce of the estate to the mortgagee, to be sold on commission for the mortgagor, and to take all such plantation stores as may be wanted for the use of the estate from the mortgagee, is not usurious. A mortgagee is entitled to the benefit of such a covenant, and to charge a commission on the sale of the produce consigned to him. On the assignment by a mortgagee, the cost of supplies and contingencies furnished to the plantation previous to the assignment, but paid for subsequently by the assignee, may be added to the mortgage debt, and charged against the estate. Sayers v. Whitfield, 1 Knapp, 133.

Commission.]—A mortgagee in possession of a West India estate is not entitled to charge the mortgagor with commission on the amount of bills paid on the value of the consignments, or on the costs and insurance of supplies shipped for the use of the estate; but stands precisely in the same situation as a mortgagee in possession of an estate in England. Principles on which the expense of the home management of such estates is to be calculated. Leith v. Irvine, 1 Myl. & K. 277.

Priority.]—Messrs. L., West India planters, being indebted in a large sum to D., mortgaged to him certain estates in the island of Tobago as security for the debt. By the mortgage deed Messrs. L. also agreed to consign to D. fifty hogsheads of sugar annually. These consignments were never made. Messrs. L. afterwards, by deed, agreed to consign, for the space of five years, or longer if the first mortgages should continue, to C. (who had also made advances), two-thirds of the produce of the estates which had been before mortgaged to D. These consignments were made to C. An order having been made by the court of commissioners for the sale of the estates on the petition of the mortgagee, C. claimed a priority as incumbrancer over D., on the ground that, as consignee, he had a general lien upon the estate:—Held, that this was not a case of lien, as C. was not an ordinary consignee, but only a second mortgagee, and as such not entitled to priority over D. Chambers v. Davidson, 36 L. J., P. C. 17; L. R. 1 P. C. 296; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 967; 15 W. R. 534. S. C., sub. nom. Leith, In re, 4 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 158.

A. mortgaged a West India estate to B., the consignee thereof, agreeing also to take all his supplies from him, and that the produce should be applied first in payment of the supplies, and then in payment of the mortgage debt, for which the produce was to be the only security; and it was further agreed that he should not sell or incumber the estate without the consent of B. A. afterwards, with such consent, sold the estate to C., who took upon himself the mortgage debt and the covenants from A. to B., and afterwards made a mortgage to B., agreeing to pay the money then due to him, and to perform the covenants, except as to the taking of supplies, which he was to be at liberty to procure elsewhere. C. had before mortgaged the estate to A. as a security for the purchase money, which was unpaid. C. continued to take the supplies of the estate from B.:—Held, that the money due for such supplies, as well as the mortgage debt due to B., had priority over the mortgage to A. Brown v. Anderson, 2 Moore, P. C. 249.

Receiver.]—A receiver, when appointed by the court, is entitled to receive rent then in arrear; but it was held that, a receiver of a West India estate, appointed at the suit of a mortgagee, was not entitled to the produce of crops severed and shipped to the consignees or the mortgagor before the date of the receiver's appointment. Codrington v. Johnstone, 1 Beav. 520; 8 L. J., Ch. 282; 3 Jur. 528.

Receiver of a West India estate applied for by one of the parties entitled to a charge thereon against the trustee, refused, notwithstanding the estate was depreciated in value, and incumbrances thereon were increasing, the management of the trustee not appearing to be improper. Barkley v. Reay (Lord), 2 Hare, 308.

Consignee.]—Though a mortgagee shall not be deprived of possession while anything remains due, where he refused to swear that anything was due a consignee (the estate lying in the West Indies) was appointed. Quarrell v. Beckford, 13 Ves. 377.

A., a second incumbrancer on an estate in Jamaica, filed a bill to have the produce of the estate applied in satisfaction of the incumbrance. A receiver was appointed, who was ordered to pay to B., the first incumbrancer, the interest on her charge out of the first proceeds, and to consign the produce to R. for sale. On making a consignment, the bill of lading was sent to be delivered to R., on his paying B.'s interest. Afterwards, by order of R., the consignments were made to other merchants, who paid B. her interest for several years, but then ceased to do so. Upon a bill by her for an account of the consignments, and payment of her interest, charging collusion between the receiver and consignees, a demurrer for want of equity was overruled. Fitzgerald v. Stewart, 2 Sim. 333.

Account.]—Mode of taking accounts, as against mortgagees and consignees, of the produce of a West India estate. Faulkner v. Daniel, 3 Hare, 219.

Under a conveyance of a West India estate, in effect a mortgage, though expressed as a trust, an assignee was held liable to account as a mortgagee, and not entitled to charge as trustee or agent; therefore the accounts settled with the executors of the mortgagor, since his death in 1791, were declared not to be considered settled; the prior accounts to stand, with liberty to surcharge and falsify, but no further back than 1725. Chambers v. Goldwin, 5 Ves. 834.

Sale or Foreclosure.]—The practice of the chancery courts in Jamaica is to decree a sale instead of a foreclosure. Gordon v. Horsfall, 5 Moore, P. C. 393; 11 Jur. 569.

Costs of Appeal.]—The costs of a successful appeal to the privy council by a mortgagee of West India property, in a suit for a foreclosure, will be added to the mortgage debt. Henry v. Ryan, 1 Knapp, 388.

b. British Guiana.

Priority—Construction, "Holland Currency"—Variable Rate of Interest.]—A., resident in Amsterdam, being the owner in possession of a plantation in British Guiana, by an instrument executed on her behalf by her attorney in London in the year 1817, sold the plantation, cum annexis, to B., for 100,000 guilders, "Holland currency," and 30,000*l.* sterling, taking, as part of the consideration-money, a first mortgage on the plantation for the 100,000 guilders. By the terms of this mortgage it was stipulated that the 100,000 guilders were not to be paid during the lifetime of A., but upon her death to her lawful descendants (if she had any), and, if not, to the nephews and nieces of J. B.; and it was specially provided that, if at any time the interest, at the rate of 5*l.* per cent., should not be punctually paid every year at Amsterdam, and if by such default A. should be obliged to appoint an attorney to demand the same in the colony, the interest in that case should be at the rate of 6*l.* per cent., and a further charge of 10*l.* per cent. for commission. A. intermarried with E., and, the interest on the mortgage not having been paid as stipulated, an attorney was appointed at British Guiana to recover the arrears. In 1828 A. died without issue or lawful descendants, leaving E., her husband, surviving; at which time the interest on the mortgage was still in arrear. In the year 1836 C. & Co. purchased the first mortgage, and all the interest therein which the parties claiming title under the limitation in the mortgage deed to the nephews and nieces of J. B. had. The consideration-money paid by C. & Co. was considerably less than the amount of the first mortgage and interest thereon. Upon the passing of the act for the abolition of slavery, C. & Co. received from the compensation commissioners, in respect of this mortgage, a sum more than sufficient to repay them what they had paid for the mortgage, but much less than was due upon the mortgage for principal and interest. The plantation was sold, in 1838, at the suit of B., and all creditors having claims were summoned to render their claims; and upon C. & Co. claiming priority, under the first mortgage, the supreme court of Demerara and Essequibo held that the defendant, who was a second mortgagee, was preferent over the first, as under the Anastasian law, which they declared prevailed in British Guiana, an assignee for a valuable consideration of a debt, or chose in action secured by debt, could not recover more than the amount of the consideration-money actually paid to the assignor, with legal interest from the time of payment, and that the sum received by C. & Co. from the compensation commissioners was more than sufficient to pay off, and must be held to extinguish, the whole debt upon the first mortgage. Upon appeal:—Held, by the judicial committee of the privy council, reversing the decree: first, that in the absence of any fraud by C. & Co. in the purchase of the first mortgage, and of any authority to shew that the lex Anastasiana prevailed in British Guiana, or could be applied to a case so circumstanced, the amount of the consideration-money given by C. & Co. was not to enter into question between them and the second mortgagee; secondly, that the term in the mortgage deed, "Holland currency," coupled with the fact of Amsterdam being the place mentioned for payment, meant Dutch currency and not colonial currency; thirdly, that the clause for varying the interest from 5*l.* to 6*l.* was not confined in its operation to the lifetime of A., but that circumstances might have rendered it inequitable to increase the rate of interest after A.'s death or during some portion of the time after that event. Macrae v. Goodman, 5 Moore, P. C. 316; 10 Jur. 555.

c. Canada.

Form—Sale or Mortgage.]—B., the owner of land in West Canada, under a contract of sale from the chancellor and scholars of King's College, being indebted to T. & Co., induced P. to assume the debt, and to secure him from any loss in consequence of such assumption, by deed poll indorsed on his original contract of sale, absolutely assigned the land to P. Up to the time of this assignment, B. himself had never been in the actual possession of the land, his father having managed the same as his agent. P. afterwards, in satisfaction of debts due by him, assigned the land conveyed to him by B., with other property, to G. This assignment was also indorsed on the original contract of sale. Prior to the execution of this assignment G. made inquiries about the ownership of the property, but it did not appear that he received any information that B. was the owner. In a suit by B. against P. and G. for redemption:—Held, upon appeal (affirming the decree of the court of error and appeal in Canada), first, that, under the circumstances, the transaction between B. and P., although in form an absolute assignment and sale, was in effect a mortgage only. Barnhart v. Greenshields, 9 Moore, P. C. 18.

A. contracted for the grant of certain lots of land from the government in Upper Canada, and paid part of the purchase-money; and, being indebted to B., he assigned by deed his interest in the plot to B., in consideration of 100*l.* B. took possession of the lots, and afterwards obtained a grant of them, by letters patent from the crown, in fee, with the privity of A. A. subsequently became bankrupt, and B. was appointed assignee to his estate. No mention was made of any claim on the part of A. for right to redeem, or interest in the lots, in his affidavit of debts and assets, nor was any claim made by him or his creditors. B. remained in possession until his death; and, the property having greatly increased in value, A. procured the appointment of a new assignee of his estate, who filed a bill against the devisee of B. for redemption, upon the ground that the original transaction was one of mortgage, and not of absolute sale. The original deed of assignment was lost, and no evidence of its contents could be produced, except a memorandum of account between the parties, made by the solicitor who acted for A. and B., upon which the arrangement in the deed was based. Parol evidence was admitted to prove the nature and terms of the transaction; but the court of error and appeal in Upper Canada dismissed the bill; and such decision was affirmed, on appeal, by the judicial committee. Holmes v. Mathews, 9 Moore, P. C. 413.

d. Australia.

Sale—Purchaser's Interest—Registration.]—Where the mortgagor is a registered owner of leasehold in Victoria (under Transfer of Land Statute), and the mortgage is made and registered under s. 83 and following sections, so that the only way in which the mortgagee can extinguish the rights of the mortgagor is by foreclosure under 31 Vict. No. 317, or sale under ss. 84, 85 & 87 of the Transfer of Land Statute, then, whether a sale of such leasehold estate is made by the mortgagee under the statutory power of sale, or as absolute owner, no interest therein passes to the purchaser until registration (see ss. 42 & 87). National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c. Co., 4 App. Cas. 391; 40 L. T. 697; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

8. Default—Waiver—See LOAN FOR A PERIOD, ante, B, 2, col. 1449.

1. WHEN PAYABLE.

Without express Words.]—It is not necessary that there should be express words directing payment of interest; if the intention of the party creating the charge, to give interest, be sufficiently apparent, the court will award it. Purcell v. Purcell, 2 Dr. & War. 217; 1 Con. & L. 371; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 558.

A mortgage deed made no provision for interest, and the mortgagee thereby agreed, upon payment of the principal, to reconvey:—Held, that the mortgage carried no interest. Thompson v. Drew, 20 Beav. 49.

—— Under Deposit.]—If deeds are deposited by way of equitable mortgage to secure a simple contract debt, the debt bears interest from the date of the deposit, and by reason of it, though there is no express contract that the demand should bear interest. Carey v. Doyne, 5 Ir. Ch. R. 104.

When a simple contract debt has been secured by a deposit of title-deeds unaccompanied by any stipulation as to interest, or by any memorandum from the terms of which the exclusion of a right to recover interest can be inferred, the mortgagee is entitled to interest on the debt, but only at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. Kerr, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 331.

In Bankruptcy.]—A mortgage upon a bankrupt's estate being deficient, the mortgagee, proving the remainder of his debt under the commission, cannot charge interest beyond the date of the commission. Badger, Ex parte, 4 Ves. 165.

On tacking Judgment.]—Where a mortgagee has tacked a judgment to his mortgage, he shall not be confined to the penalty of his judgment, but he is entitled to interest upon his judgment debt, though it should exceed the penalty. Godfrey v. Watson, 3 Atk. 518.

On Renewal of Leaseholds.]—Where the mortgagor of a leasehold estate has not covenanted that he will procure the lives to be filled up, the mortgagee may do it, and, on adding the expense of renewal to the principal, it shall carry interest. Lacon v. Mertins, 3 Atk. 4. And see Manlove v. Bale, 2 Vern. 84.

On Disbursements by Mortgagee.]—Money disbursed by mortgagee shall carry the same interest as the original sum. Woolley v. Drage, 2 Anst. 551; 3 R. R. 628.

On Mortgagee's Costs.]—When a mortgagee's costs are ordered to be added to his security, and to be a charge on the mortgaged estate, the amount so charged carries interest. It makes no difference that the mortgage is by grant of a redeemable annuity. Interest in such a case was allowed at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. Lippard v. Ricketts, 41 L. J., Ch. 595; L. R. 14 Eq. 291; 20 W. R. 898.

—— Solicitor-Mortgagee.]—A mortgage of Irish land given by a client to a solicitor to secure the payment of a sum of money due for untaxed costs does not, as against the assignee of the equity of redemption, carry any interest. O'Connor, In re, 17 W. R. 1143.

Proviso for Redemption, and Covenant for Payment, extending to Principal only.]—A mortgage deed recited an agreement to secure the money with interest, but the proviso for redemption on a day certain, and the covenant to pay the trusts of the produce of a sale, were restricted to the principal only:—Held, that interest was payable. Ashwell v. Staunton, 30 Beav. 52.

Under Redemption Decree.]—A., being entitled to certain lands as issue in tail, conveyed them in fee in 1749 to secure 800*l.*, and levied a fine. In 1762 he borrowed 450*l.*, and charged it upon the same lands by deed poll. He died in 1764, leaving the charge of the aggregate sum of 1,250*l.* upon the lands, with an arrear of interest, and devised all his lands to his wife. Two years afterwards the wife married B., and they, after reciting the mortgage, and that B. had paid the interest, granted and confirmed the mortgaged lands to the mortgagee, reserving the equity of redemption to B., and his heirs, &c. By deed in 1789, 300*l.* arrear of interest was added to the principal, and the aggregate sum of 1,550*l.* charged on the lands, subject to redemption as before. The wife died in 1794, leaving C., her son by A., her heir-at-law. In 1797 B. sold part of the mortgaged lands, and in consideration of 2,000*l.* principal and interest paid to the mortgagee, and 600*l.* to B., he and the mortgagee conveyed such part to D. The rest of the lands were conveyed by the mortgagee to B., who died in 1799. On a bill by C. to redeem, the court of exchequer decreed that he was entitled to redeem, on payment of the principal money due upon the mortgage, and interest from the death of B. On appeal to the lords, it was declared that C. was entitled, notwithstanding the proviso of redemption reserved to B., to redeem the lands on payment of the principal and interest due at the death of the wife on the aggregate sum of 1,250*l.*, such interest to be computed according to the proviso in the indenture of release and mortgage. Upon reference to the master to take the accounts, it appeared that B. and his wife, during her life, paid to the mortgagee 1,500*l.*; that the master, in his report, did not include this sum, but reported that there was due upon this account, for principal, 1,250*l.*, and for interest at the death of the wife, 286*l.* On this ground exceptions were taken to the report, which being in this respect confirmed, and a decree made upon further directions accordingly, a further appeal was presented to the lords, who affirmed the decree, as they considered that the former order, directing an account of interest due on the mortgage, meant interest actually due. Ruscombe v. Hare, 2 Bligh (N.S.) 192.

On improperly resisting Redemption.]—Where a mortgagee improperly resists redemption, and on taking the accounts a balance is found to be in his hands, the court has power to charge him with interest on such balance, though he has not been in possession of the mortgaged premises. Smith v. Pilkington, 1 De G. F. & J. 120; 29 L. J., Ch. 227.

Recovering as Damages.]—Interest is recoverable in an action on a mortgage deed, particularly where there is a covenant for interest in such deed, and which at all events would be given as damages for the detention of the debt. Verney v. Iddings, 2 Chit. 234. And see Eaton v. Bell, 5 B. & Ald. 34.

Interest due is not a part of the principal debt due on mortgage, but rather sounds in damages. Dickenson v. Harrison, 4 Price, 282.

Mistake.]—The defendant borrowed money of the plaintiff, and he gave his promissory note for the amount, with interest at 60*l.* per cent., together with an equitable charge on copyholds as a collateral security for the note. The plaintiff sued on the note, and by mistake he claimed and recovered interest at 5*l.* instead of 60*l.* per cent., which was paid:—Held, that the plaintiff could not afterwards sue upon the mortgage to recover the deficiency, and a bill in equity for that purpose was dismissed with costs. Darlow v. Cooper, 34 Beav. 281.

Where a mortgage deed had been mislaid for many years, and interest had been paid and received at a lower rate than that reserved by the deed, the payment having been made during a portion of the time under a decree in an administration suit on an erroneous affidavit as to the contents of the missing deed:—Held (the case not being one to which the statute of limitations applied), that a tenant for life of the interest on the mortgage debt, who was not shewn to have agreed to take less than the reserved interest, was entitled to payment of the difference since she became tenant for life. Gregory v. Pilkington, 8 De G. M. & G. 616; 26 L. J., Ch. 177; 5 W. R. 57.

Construction.]—Upon a mortgage from B. to A., the deed, dated the 13th February, 1834, recited that, as an inducement to A. to advance the money, B. had agreed to covenant for the payment of the interest. B. covenanted to pay the principal and interest for the same, after the rate of 5*l.* per cent., on the 13th February, 1835; and C. covenanted that B. and C., or one of them, would, during the continuance of the security, pay the interest to become due in respect of the principal, after the rate of 5*l.* per cent. per annum, by two even half-yearly payments, on the 13th August and the 13th February. The deed contained a power of sale, on six months' notice, in default of payment of principal and interest, with authority to A., out of the proceeds, to pay herself the principal and interest, or so much thereof as should be due:—Held, that C.'s covenant was not limited to the payment of the first two half-years' interest, but was a covenant for payment of the interest so long as the principal remained unpaid. King v. Greenhill, 6 Man. & G. 59; 6 Scott (N.R.), 869; 12 L. J., C. P. 333; 7 Jur. 604.

Remission.]—A., to whom his son-in-law had, by deed, mortgaged some property, declined to receive the interest, and afterwards, to induce his son-in-law not to sell and reside on the mortgaged property, he had promised to allow him to live there rent free. The son-in-law acted on the promise until A.'s death:—Held, that, in equity, no interest was payable until that time. Yeomans v. Williams, 35 Beav. 130; 35 L J., Ch. 283; L. R. 1 Eq. 184.

Repayment.]—A. mortgaged to B., and delivered to him the title deeds of, the estate. Some years afterwards, A. gave B. notice of his intention to pay off the mortgage at the end of six months, but did not pay the money until after that time, owing to B. not having offered him any indemnity that was satisfactory to him in respect of B. having lost some of the deeds. B. having brought an ejectment for the estate, A. filed a bill to redeem. Redemption decreed, and ordered that a sum, which A. had paid for interest accrued on the mortgage-money after the expiration of the six months, should be repaid to him. Midleton (Lord) v. Eliot, 15 Sim. 531; 11 Jur. 742.

2. After Tender.

Generally.]—If the mortgagor tenders the money to the mortgagee, and he refuses it, his interest shall cease from that time, and he ought not to keep the pledge. Manning v. Burgess, 1 Ch. Ca. 29.

One of several mortgagees compelled to pay the costs, and another refused his costs, of a suit to redeem the mortgage; and the interest on the mortgage-money declared to stop on the day of the tender. Cliff v. Wadsworth, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 598; 7 Jur. 1108.

On Notice.]—Interest on mortgage not stopped out on proper tender and notice. Not upon proposals to deduct upon open account on the other side. Garforth v. Bradley, 2 Ves. 678.

—— Place of.]—As to a tender of mortgage-money, there ought to be reasonable notice of paying it in; and, if the tender be insisted on, to stop interest, the money must be kept dead from that time, because the party is to be always ready. Six months' notice given to pay in the mortgage-money at H., though this be not the place mentioned in the proviso of the deed, yet, where money was lent in town, and no objection made to the notice, no reason for a personal tender, or to make a man carry a great sum to a person in the country. Gyles v. Hall, 2 P. Wms. 378.

3. Rate.

a. In General.

Where none agreed.]—When the rate of interest is not specified by the person creating the charge, the court will give interest at the rate allowed by the 106th general order, namely, 5 per cent., and not at the highest rate allowed by law, 6 per cent. Purcell v. Purcell, 2 Dr. & War. 217; 1 Con. & L. 371; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 558.

The court rate of interest, where no rate is fixed by the parties themselves, is in this country to be calculated at 5 per cent., pursuant to the 204th general order, which was held to apply to a legacy under a will made prior to the publication of the rule. Leslie v. Leslie, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 1.

204th General Order.]—The 204th general order, regulating the court rate of interest, held not to apply to a charge created under a family settlement, there having been a course of dealing for many years, which, with other circumstances, the court thought sufficient to enable it to imply a contract between the successive owners of the estate, on which the money was charged, and the party beneficially entitled to the charge. Ruttledge v. Ruttledge, 1 Dr. & Wal. 243.

Notwithstanding 204th Order.]—Estates were conveyed to trustees to raise a certain sum by sale or mortgage with interest at 6 per cent.; on the 25th of January, 1838, there was a decree declaring the plaintiffs entitled to the sum reported due for principal and interest:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to interest at the rate of 6 per cent. on the entire consolidated sum, notwithstanding the 204th new order (Irish). Grattan v. Donegal, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 313.

Repeal of Usury Laws.]—Though, since repeal of usury laws, a lender may demand any interest he likes, yet the court of chancery's jurisdiction over unconscionable bargains did not rest on those laws and is unaffected by their repeal. Chapple v. Mahon, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 225.

After day of Repayment.]—A mortgagor covenanted to pay the principal and interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per month on a fixed day, and charged a reversionary interest with payment of the principal and interest, "at the rate aforesaid," but there was no further covenant for payment of interest. In taking accounts in a mortgagee's action, the mortgagee was allowed interest after the fixed day at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum only. Wallington v. Cook, 47 L. J., Ch. 508.

By a mortgage deed reciting an agreement for an advance at 10*l.* per cent., the mortgagor covenanted for payment of the principal sum at the expiration of twelve months, and for the payment of interest in the meantime at the rate of 10*l.* per cent. per annum, but there was no covenant as to payment of interest in the event of the principal sum, or any part of it, remaining unpaid after the day named for the repayment. The money was not repaid on the day, but interest at 10*l.* per cent. was paid for several years. The mortgagor having died, and a decree having been made for administration of his estate, the mortgagee proved as a creditor for the principal sum and interest:—Held, that interest was recoverable only as damages, and ought to be limited to 5*l.* per cent. Roberts, In re, Goodchap v. Roberts, 14 Ch. D. 49; 42 L. T. 666; 28 W. R. 870.

—— Effect of Agreement.]—In April, 1879, A. deposited title deeds with B. to secure repayment of an advance of 1,000*l.*, and an agreement was at the same time executed that the deeds should be held as an equitable security for payment on the 15th July, 1879, of the 1,000*l.* and interest at 7½ per cent. per annum, and also that A. should execute to B. a legal mortgage of the property, with power of sale and such other powers as B. might require for further securing payment of the money, which should then be owing on the security of the agreement, "with interest for the same after the rate aforesaid." In January, 1881, B. took out a debtors' summons for 150*l.*, on the footing that interest continued to be paid at the rate of 7½ per cent. down to the date of demand, and not merely until the 15th of July, 1879 (in which case the debt would have been under 50*l.*):—Held, that the agreement amounted to a contract that, if the 1,000*l.* was not repaid in July, 1879, interest at 7½ per cent. should continue to be paid, and, accordingly, that there was a liquidated demand of sufficient amount within the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 6, to support the debtors' summons. Furber, Ex parte, King, In re, 17 Ch. D. 191; 44 L. T. 319; 29 W. R. 524.

Fiduciary Relation.]—The plaintiff had mortgaged her life interest in certain leasehold property to various persons. In the year 1880, the defendant, who was then acting as her solicitor, in order to release her from embarrassment, bought up several of the incumbrances with his own money, and took a transfer of them to himself:—Held, in an action for redemption brought by the plaintiff against the defendant, that the defendant must be allowed interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the moneys he had actually advanced. Macleod v. Jones, 53 L. J., Ch. 534; 50 L. T. 358; 32 W. R. 660.

Under Deposit without Memorandum.]—When a simple contract has been secured by a deposit of title deeds unaccompanied by any stipulation as to interest, or by any memorandum from the terms of which the exclusion of a right to recover interest can be inferred, the mortgagee is entitled to interest on the debt, but only at the rate of 4 per cent. Kerr, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 331.

In Excess of Agreement.]—If a mortgage be drawn for 5 per cent. and the mortgagee takes 6, it would be void on the word "take," in the 12 Anne, stat. 2, c. 16, s. 1. Adlington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 154.

In Diminution of Agreement.]—On a decree for the sale of an estate in mortgage, the master reported a stated sum due for principal and interest. Upon the confirmation of the report, it was decreed, that though the mortgage-money was lent at 5 per cent., yet, as there were other mortgages and creditors, interest shall be paid at the rate of 4 per cent. only, from the time the master's report was confirmed. Harris v. Harris, 3 Atk. 722.

On Surplus after satisfying Mortgage.] — When a party held securities for advances, with power of sale, which he exercised, and pending the settlement with creditors, who had instituted proceedings, retained the surplus, after satisfying his own claims, in his hands :—Held, not liable to more than 5 per cent. interest, and the accounts not to be taken with rests. Court v. Robarts, 6 Cl. & F. 65.

Set-off.]—A mortgagee of property to secure 2,000*l.* and interest at 5 per cent. became the purchaser of some of the mortgaged property and other property of the mortgagor for 2,700*l.*, paid a deposit of 270*l.*, and entered into possession of the property, not waiving objections to title. The conditions of sale provided that the balance of the purchase-money remaining unpaid should carry interest at 4 per cent. Ten years passed without either party claiming interest, and without the vendor showing a good title. The vice-chancellor held that the accounts should be taken upon the principle that the mortgage debt continued to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent., and the balance of the purchase-money at the rate of 4 per cent.; but :—Held, reversing that decision, that, under the circumstances, set-off was to be presumed. Wallis v. Bastard, 17 Jur. 1107 ; 2 Eq. R. 508 ; 2 W. R. 47—L.JJ.

Merger.]—By an indenture of mortgage A., a beneficed clergyman, assigned to B. certain policies of assurance subject to a proviso for redemption thereof on payment by A., on the 30th of January, 1865, to B. of the sum of 3,000*l.*, with interest at the rate of 7*l.* per cent. per annum, and A. thereby covenanted that he would pay to B. the said sum of 3,000*l.*, with interest at the rate aforesaid, on the day before mentioned, and that, in case the said sum of 3,000*l.* should not be paid on the day before mentioned, A. covenanted that he would, so long as the said sum of 3,000*l.* remained due on that security, pay to B. interest at the rate aforesaid. A. made default in payment, and B., after obtaining a judgment against A., issued a sequestration against his benefice. The sequestrator paid to B. the principal sum, together with interest thereon at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum. B. claimed the difference between the principal sum due on his security with interest at the rate of 7*l.* per cent. per annum, and the amount paid to him by the sequestrator. B. brought an action to recover that difference, and A. demurred, on the ground that the security of the mortgage deed was merged in the judgment :—Held, overruling the demurrer, that part of the security was extinguished and part remained ; that the debt due to B. in respect of the principal moneys was merged in the judgment, and therefore extinguished, but that the debt due to B. in respect of the interest was not merged in the judgment, and therefore remained. European Central Ry., In re (4 Ch. D. 33), distinguished. Popple v. Sylvester, 52 L. J., Ch. 54 ; 22 Ch. D. 98 ; 47 L. T. 329 ; 31 W. R. 116.

A mortgage deed contained a covenant by the mortgagor for payment of the principal sum on the expiration of six months next after a specified day, together with interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum for the six months. And there was a further covenant by the mortgagor that, if the principal sum, or any part thereof, should remain unpaid after the expiration of the six months, the mortgagor would, so long as the same sum or any part thereof should remain unpaid, pay to the mortgagee interest for the principal sum, or for so much thereof as should for the time being remain unpaid, at 5 per cent. per annum. After the expiration of the six months, the mortgagee recovered judgment against the mortgagor on the covenant for the principal sum and interest in arrear:—Held, that, the covenant being merged in the judgment, the mortgagee was, as from the date of the judgment, entitled only to interest on the judgment debt at the rate of 4 per cent., and was not entitled under the covenant to interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the principal sum. Popple v. Sylvester (22 Ch. D. 98) distinguished. Fewings, Ex parte, Sneyd, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 545 ; 25 Ch. D. 338 ; 50 L. T. 109 ; 32 W. R. 352—C. A.

For Counsel's Fees.]—The court will not suffer counsel, who happens to be a mortgagee, to insist on more than legal interest, under a pretence of a gratuity for business formerly done in the way of counsel. Thornhill v. Evans, 2 Atk. 330 ; 9 Mod. 331.

On Mortgagee's Costs.]—When a mortgagee's costs are ordered to be added to his security, and to be a charge on the mortgaged estate, the amount so charged carries interest. It makes no difference that the mortgage is by grant of a redeemable annuity. Interest in such a case was allowed at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum. Lippard v. Ricketts, 41 L. J., Ch. 595 ; 20 W. R. 898.

After Calling in.]—It was agreed by a settlement, that, until a sum of money should be "called in, and so long as it should be suffered to remain a charge upon certain lands, it should bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent.":—Held, that a party was not therefore entitled to interest at that rate, for the period elapsed after he had filed a bill to raise the charge. Lynch v. Flanagan, Hayes, 18.

In Case of Assignment as Security.]—There is no general rule as to the rate of interest the court will allow on repayment of consideration money expressed in an absolute assignment, which is treated only as a security for such consideration money ; and, in a case where the assignee of a reversionary interest in a trust fund was the solicitor to the trust estate, and there was evidence of the assignment having been at an under-value, the court allowed interest at 5 per cent. Unsworth, In re, 2 Dr. & Sm. 337; 13 W. R. 448.

b. Due Payment—Reduction.

Agreement for Reduction if duly Paid—Default.]—A mortgagee lends money at 6 per cent. and in the deed agrees to take 5 per cent., if it be paid within three months after it has become due. If the mortgagee fails to pay at the precise time, he must afterwards pay 6 per cent. Jory v. Cox, Pre. Ch. 160. S. P., Holles v. Wyse, 2 Vern. 289.

Deed of mortgage at 5 per cent. contained a proviso that, as often as the interest should be paid half-yearly, on the days appointed, or within three months next after each, so much should be deducted as would make the interest 3¾ per cent. By a separate agreement, mortgagee covenanted not to call in the money within five years, unless the interest be in arrear. The first half-year's interest not having been tendered till after the three months, but the second half-year's interest before:—Held, first, that mortgagee was only entitled to interest at 5 per cent. for the half-year which had been tendered after the time; and, secondly, that in consequence of the default he was entitled to call in his money. Stanhope v. Manners, 2 Eden, 197.

—— How far Default applies.]—Where there is the common proviso for reduction of the interest payable on a mortgage debt, in case of punctual payment, a failure in such punctual payment only affects the rate of interest payable for the half-year in which such condition was not fulfilled. Wayne v. Lewis, 3 Eq. Rep. 1021; 3 W. R. 600.

—— Mortgagee in Receipt of Rents as Agent of Mortgagor.]—Interest on mortgage debt at 10 per cent. reducible to 8 per cent. if paid within twenty-one days after it fell due. Mortgagees were appointed by mortgagor agents and receivers over the mortgaged lands, and, as such agents, acted so as to delay the payment of rents which, if punctually paid, would have been funds in their hands to pay the interest within twenty-one days:—Held, mortgagees could only claim interest at lower rate. Chapple v. Mahon, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 225.

Receipt of Reduced Rate after Default.]—A mortgagor, who was liable to pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent. unless paid within a certain time after it became due, when it was to be reduced to 4 per cent., frequently paid interest to the executor of the mortgagee at the rate of 4 per cent. after the time limited for the lesser rate of interest:—Held, that the executor was justified in receiving the lesser rate of interest, and that the accounts were not to be reopened. Booth v. Alington, 26 L. J., Ch. 138; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 49.

Relief.]—Mortgagor reserving 6 per cent. with proviso to take 5 per cent., if paid within three months after due; if a great arrear, court will not relieve; secus, if but a small slip of time. Brown v. Barkham, 1 P. Wms. 652.

Where a mortgage is at 4½ per cent., with a proviso that, if the interest be paid after each half-year, and before three quarters become due, the mortgagee will accept 4 per cent.; if the mortgagor fails in paying the interest at the appointed time, he cannot be relieved in equity. Nicholls v. Maynard, 3 Atk. 519.

Parol.]—A. lends money upon mortgage at certain rate of interest, and afterwards by parol agrees to reduce rate of interest. Agreement, though verbal, held binding, though fact is triable by issue. Milton v. Edgeworth, 5 Bro. P. C. 313.

Mortgagee in Possession.]—A proviso in a mortgage for a reduction of interest on punctual payment does not apply to the case of the mortgagee taking possession and receiving the rents, whether he does so by arrangement with the mortgagor or otherwise; and accordingly the mortgagee will be allowed, in his accounts as mortgagee in possession, the higher rate of interest, even though there was no interest in arrear at the time of taking possession. Bright v. Campbell, 41 Ch. D. 388; 60 L. T. 731; 37 W. R. 745.

—— Through Mortgagor's Default.]—Under a proviso in a mortgage deed for reduction of interest on punctual payment, a mortgagee in possession through the default of the mortgagor is entitled, on the accounts being taken, to charge the mortgagor with the higher rate of interest. Stains v. Banks (9 Jur. (N.S.) 1049; reversed on appeal, Reg. Lib. 7 B. 1863, 1761) considered. Union Bank of London v. Ingram, 50 L. J., Ch. 74; 16 Ch. D. 53; 43 L. T. 659; 29 W. R. 209.

c. Penal.

Relief against.]—Where a mortgage is made with reservation of 4 per cent., and a proviso that, upon nonpayment within a certain time, the mortgagor shall pay 5 per cent., lord chancellor held this a nomine pœnæ, and relievable in equity. Nicholls v. Maynard, 3 Atk. 520.

A mortgage is made, with interest at 5 per cent., provided that, if the interest be not paid within two months after due, then to pay 5½ per cent. This is in nature of a penalty, and the court will relieve against it; otherwise, if 5½ per cent. be reserved originally, and be lessened to 5 per cent. if duly paid within two months after due. Strode v. Parker, 2 Vern. 316.

Mortgage at 5 per cent., with covenant to pay 6, on default of paying the interest within sixty days after due. If the interest is behind sixty days, the mortgage shall carry interest at 6 per cent., and the court will not relieve against it. Halifax (Marquis) v. Higgins, 2 Vern. 134.

A. made mortgage to B. for 1,769*l.*, payable by five equal payments, within the space of five years, with interest at 5 per cent.; but mortgagor covenanted that, if the money should not be paid at those times, or within three months after, he would, for every sum so unpaid, pay 8 per cent. interest until actual payment. The money was not paid; and, on bill of foreclosure, court decreed an account of the principal money and interest at 5 per cent. only; but, on appeal, decree was reversed, and mortgagor ordered to be charged with 8 per cent. interest from the end of three months after each payment became due. Burton v. Slattery, 5 Bro. P. C. 233.

—— Arrears.]—Interest reserved at 5 per cent.; but, if not duly paid, then to answer interest at 6 per annum; great arrear of interest.

Mortgagor decreed to pay but 5 per cent., the reservation at 6 per cent. being only as nomine pœnæ. Holles v. Wyse, 2 Vern. 289.

Mortgagee in Possession.]—Where a mortgagee was in possession, and there was a stipulation in the mortgage deeds for the payment of interest, at 4*l.* 10*s.* per cent. if paid regularly, and 5*l.* per cent. if not, the court confirmed the chief clerk's decision, allowing 4*l.* 10*s.* per cent. Stains v. Banks, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1049. But see Union Bank of London v. Ingram, 50 L. J., Ch. 74; 16 Ch. D. 53; 43 L. T. 659; 29 W. R. 209.

4. Compound.

a. In General.

Generally.]—Rule as to accumulation of interest upon interest not broken through. Combe v. Acland, Dick. 436.

Agreement for.]—A correspondence took place between a mortgagee and a mortgagor, extending over a series of years, in which the mortgagee stated his intention, if the interest upon the mortgage debt was not paid, to add it to the principal, and to charge the same interest upon the amount as the mortgage bore. The mortgagor replied from time to time that he could not pay the interest, and that it must be added to the claim of the mortgagee:—Held, that it did not amount to an agreement to pay compound interest; and the claim of the mortgagee was not allowed. Tompson v. Leith, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1091.

—— Implied.]—Where interest has, for a length of time, been paid upon a consolidated sum of principal and interest, an agreement to that effect will be inferred, and decree made accordingly M'Carthy v. Llandaff (Lord), 1 Ball & B. 375.

—— Nature of.]—An agreement to turn interest upon a mortgage into principal must be done fairly, and on the advance of fresh money. Thornhill v. Evans, 2 Atk. 330; 9 Mod. 331.

—— Absence of.]—In the absence of special agreement, simple interest only can be charged in a mortgage account. Daniell v. Sinclair, 50 L. J., P. C. 50; 6 App. Cas. 181; 44 L. T. 257; 29 W. R. 569.

—— Limitation.]—A. and B., reversioners after a life interest in C., mortgaged their property and covenanted that interest in arrear should be capitalised, and bear interest after the same rate; and C. also assigned her life interest as a part of the security:—Held, that the covenant was good and valid; and that the mortgagee was not limited to six years' interest. Clarkson v. Henderson, 49 L. J., Ch. 289; 14 Ch. D. 348; 43 L. T. 29; 28 W. R. 907.

—— Void.]—Proviso in the deed, if future interest is not paid, that interest shall be paid on it, is void. Ossulston (Lord) v. Yarmouth (Lord), 2 Salk. 449. S. P., Broadway v. Moorcraft, Moseley, 247.

—— Usurious.]—Mortgagee cannot originally stipulate for a collateral advantage, as that, if interest is not paid at the end of the year, it shall be converted into principal, or that mortgagee shall be receiver, with a commission, as tending to usury; but he may stipulate for a receiver to be paid by mortgagee, and may appoint a bailiff, &c. Chambers v. Goldwin, 9 Ves. 271; 7 R. R. 181.

As against subsequent Incumbrancer.]—A prior incumbrancer not allowed to turn interest into principal by indorsement, as against a subsequent incumbrancer, of whom she had notice. Digby v. Craggs, 2 Eden, 200; Amb. 612.

Second Mortgage for.]—Mortgagor gives second mortgage for what is due for principal and interest on first mortgage, and also for interest upon interest due on first mortgage. Quære, if second mortgage void as founded on usury. Sackett v. Bassett, 4 Madd. 58.

Relief against.]—Where mortgagee, who is entitled to only 4½ per cent. interest, had compelled mortgagor to turn interest into principal at 5 per cent. at the end of every six months, and, at the time the mortgage was paid off, insisted on an advance of six months' interest over and above interest which was due: on bill for relief against mortgagee, and to set aside a grant to defendant of the place of steward to a manor of plaintiff's, as obtained by fraud, plaintiff was relieved both in respect to the transactions relating to mortgage, and also in regard to the grant of stewardship. Thornhill v. Evans, 2 Atk. 330; 9 Mod. 331.

Master directed to take an account only of what was due on the original sum at 4½ per cent., and plaintiff to pay same rate of interest for any fresh money that should appear due. Ib.

On Account stated.]—Compound interest on mortgage allowed on foot of an account stated. Chesterfield (Lord) v. Cromwell, 1 Eq. Abr. 287.

In Colonies.]—No larger sum can be recovered by way of interest on a mortgage in one of our colonies (Demerara), where the Dutch law is retained, than a sum equal to the principal. Shand v. Brereton, 1 Knapp, 160, n.

b. After Transfer.

In General.]—Mortgagee assigns his mortgage to J., who pays off the principal and the interest, which is considerably in arrear. Whether this interest shall be reckoned principal against the mortgagor, quære. Macclesfield (Lord) v. Fitton, 1 Vern. 168.

A mortgage made for 450*l.*, payable at the end of five years, with interest at 5 per cent. in the meantime. About two months before the end of the five years, the mortgagee assigned over the mortgage for 560*l.*, being the principal and interest then due. The 560*l.* shall carry interest, though the five years were not elapsed, the mortgage being forfeited by the nonpayment of the interest. Gladwin v. Hitchman, 2 Vern. 135.

With Privity of Mortgagor.]—Where a mortgage is assigned with the concurrence of the mortgagor, the interest paid to the mortgagee by the assignee shall be taken as principal, and carry interest; but otherwise, if assigned without the mortgagor's consent. Ashenhurst v. James, 3 Atk. 271.

If a considerable sum be due for interest, and the mortgagee assigns over the mortgage, in consideration of the amount of the principal and interest, (if such assignment be without the privity of the mortgagor,) then interest shall be carried on only on the principal; but, if the mortgagee had applied to the mortgagor before, and demanded his money, and required him to join in the assignment, and the mortgagor refused either to pay or join, the assignee shall have interest both on the principal and interest. Anon., Bunb. 41.

As between mortgagee and persons claiming under him, without the privity of the mortgagor, they cannot add to what is due, settle the account, or turn interest into principal. Mathews v. Wallwyn, 4 Ves. 118.

To avert Sale.]—The interest on a mortgage debt being in arrear, the mortgagee ordered the mortgaged estate to be put up for sale. To avert the sale the defendant was induced to agree to take a transfer of the mortgage, and, pending the negotiations for the transfer, he paid the amount due for arrears of interest. The deed of transfer did not contain any reference to the arrears of interest paid by him, but merely purported to transfer the principal debt and the interest due at the date of the transfer. By a contemporaneous deed, the owner of the equity of redemption (who was a trustee) purported to capitalise the arrears of interest which had been paid by the transferee, and to charge them with interest upon the mortgaged estate:—Held, that, although the deed purporting to charge the arrears of interest upon the mortgaged estate was inoperative inasmuch as the trustee had no power to create such a charge, yet the transferee was entitled to charge the amount paid by him for arrears of interest against the estate, as money paid by way of salvage to prevent the sale, but without interest thereon. Cottrell v. Finney, 43 L. J., Ch. 562; L. R. 9 Ch. 541; 30 L. T. 733.

c. After Report.

In General.]—In the case of a mortgage the whole sum liquidated by the report carries interest. Creuze v. Hunter, 2 Ves. J. 159; 4 Bro. C. C. 157; 2 R. R. 38.

Subsequent interest on a mortgage to be calculated upon the principal and interest reported due, but upon bonds or legacies on the principal only. Perkyns v. Baynton, 1 Bro. C. C. 574.

Rule as to.]—Rule as to the computation of subsequent interest, where the amount of the principal, interest and costs due upon a mortgage has been found by the master's report. Brewin v. Austin, 2 Keen, 211.

Where the amount of principal and interest due upon a mortgage has been found by the master's report, the rule now is to compute subsequent interest upon the principal only, and the time for payment of the money found due upon a mortgage is enlarged upon the terms of paying the interest and costs found due. Whatton v. Cradock, 1 Keen, 267; 6 L. J., Ch. 178.

Under Agreement with Mortgagor.]—Interest computed by the master's report shall carry interest. But where the mortgagor signed an account, whereby so much is admitted to be due for interest, this will not carry interest, unless the mortgagor by any letter or writing under his hand agrees to make it principal. Brown v. Barkham, 1 P. Wms. 653.

In Favour of other Creditors.]—A decree for sale of an estate in mortgage, the master reported a stated sum due for the principal and interest, and the report was confirmed. As the mortgage was at 5 per cent., and there was another mortgagee and creditors besides, from the confirmation of the master's report it shall only carry 4 per cent. Harris v. Harris, 3 Atk. 722.

5. Arrears.

Interest on.]—Though interest is in arrear when the mortgage is paid, a mortgagee shall not have interest for that interest. Thornhill v. Evans, 2 Atk. 330; 9 Mod. 331.

Where there was a great arrear of interest due on a mortgage, interest allowed for the interest reserved in the body of the deed. Howard v. Harris, 1 Vern. 194.

Bond for.]—A mortgagee takes a bond from the assignee of the devisee for the arrears of interest then due, and gives a receipt; the bond is still unpaid: the interest is still secured by the mortgage. Hardwick v. Mynd, 1 Anst. 111; 3 R. R. 562.

Whether mortgagee taking a bond for arrears of interest shall be at liberty, in case of a deficient fund, to abandon the bond and re-attach the interest to his prior charge against intervening creditors, quære. In the present case, the bond for arrears being taken by the guardian of an infant, he was not concluded; but lord chancellor doubted whether, if it was the spontaneous act of the creditor himself being competent, he would be at liberty to retract where the point of severing or not affected third persons. Kemmis v. Stepney, 2 Moll. 85.

As against Remainderman.]—Incumbrancer is entitled to arrears of interest against remainderman, though by laches he omitted to obtain it against tenant for life. Roe v. Pogson, 2 Madd. 457.

Where an equity of redemption is put in settlement, though the tenant for life is the party bound to pay the interest upon the mortgage, yet the mere laches of the mortgagee to demand such interest from the tenant for life will not prejudice his claim against those in remainder. Wrixon v. Vize, 2 Dr. & War. 192; 3 Id. 104; 1 Con. & L. 298; 2 Id. 138; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 463; 5 Id. 173.

As against Heir.]—The heir of a mortgagor, who has covenanted for himself and his heirs to pay the mortgage debt and interest, cannot redeem without paying arrears of interest to the extent of twenty years, the mortgagee being entitled to tack the arrears of interest to the debt as against the heir. Elvy v. Norwood, 5 De G. & Sm. 240; 21 L. J., Ch. 716; 16 Jur. 493.

As against Second Mortgagee.]—A. mortgages to B., and after to C.; then B. enters, and after suffers A., the mortgagor, to receive the profits for several years without requiring interest.

This interest shall not be charged on the lands to keep out C. Bentham v. Haincourt, Pre. Ch. 30.

On Reversionary Interest.]—A mortgagee of a reversionary interest in land is precluded from recovering more than six years' arrears of interest, although accruing whilst the property was reversionary. Smith v. Hill, 47 L. J., Ch. 788; 9 Ch. D. 143; 38 L. T. 638; 26 W. R. 878.

A testatrix, who had lent 3,000*l.* on a mortgage of freehold property, bequeathed the income of all her residuary estate in trust for three persons for their joint lives and the lives of the survivors and survivor, with an ultimate trust in favour of H. absolutely. H. mortgaged his reversionary interest in the 3,000*l.* to the plaintiff, and died insolvent several years before the death of the last tenant for life. No arrears of interest on the last-mentioned mortgage having been paid, the plaintiff, on the death of the last tenant for life, sought to recover the whole arrears of interest:—Held, that arrears of interest could not be recovered while the property was reversionary. Ib.

Held, also, that the mortgage of the reversionary interest was not a mortgage of an interest in land within s. 42 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, and that the plaintiff was, therefore, entitled to recover the whole arrears of interest. Ib.

See also LIMITATIONS, STATUTE OF.

6. AGAINST MORTGAGEE IN POSSESSION.

After Satisfaction of Debt.]—Mortgagee let into possession by mortgagor till he should be paid the sum lent and interest, overpaid in two years, and holding over thirty-two years longer, was charged with the balance and interest (from the date of the notice to pay the receipts to a prior mortgagee) at 4 per cent. only, though he had purchased two small shares of a prior mortgage, which had been paid off at 5 per cent. interest. Archdeacon v. Bowes, M'Cle. 149; 13 Price, 353; 28 R. R. 685.

There are, however, exceptions to this rule of interest. S. C., M'Clel. 166.

Mortgagee in possession charged with interest, on gales of rent received by him after debt satisfied. Trimleston v. Hamill, 1 Ball & B. 377; 12 R. R. 38.

Where the mortgagee in possession became overpaid during the suit to redeem:—Held, that he was liable to interest on the balance from the date of the report, and on the rents, &c., subsequently received, from the date of such receipts. Lloyd v. Jones, 12 Sim. 491.

Mortgagee in possession holding over after payment of his principal and interest, charged with the balance and interest. Quarrell v. Beckford, 1 Madd. 269; 16 R. R. 214.

7. IN LIEU OF NOTICE TO PAY OFF.

When Payable.]—The rule that, in case of default of payment by the mortgagor, six months' notice or interest must be given, applies when the mortgagee has required payment on a particular day and the money is not then paid. Bartlett v. Franklin, 36 L. J., Ch. 671; 17 L. T. 100; 15 W. R. 1077.

In Administration Suit.]—A son, in 1855, mortgaged a reversionary interest to which he was entitled under his father's will, and died in March, 1869, intestate, and there was no legal personal representative. The mortgagee, having filed a bill for the administration of the father's estate, was, on behalf of a surety of the mortgagor, paid the principal and interest due on the mortgage security and a sum for costs of suit. On motion to dismiss the bill:—Held, that he was not entitled to six months' interest in lieu of notice, but that he was entitled to the costs of the motion, as he had been paid off in a summary way. Letts v. Hutchins, L. R. 13 Eq. 176.

If in an administration suit a mortgagee consents to the sale of the mortgaged property, such consent amounts to an acceptance by him of notice to pay off; and, if the property is sold, he is not entitled to six months' interest in lieu of notice, but only interest for the period which intervenes between the actual payment off and the expiration of the six months from the time of such consent being given. Day v. Day, 31 Beav. 270; 31 L. J., Ch. 806; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1166; 7 L. T. 122; 10 W. R. 728.

—— Delay in Completion of Order.]—One of the beneficiaries under a will mortgaged her interest in the testator's estate. She gave the mortgagees six months' notice to pay off the mortgage on the 1st of July, 1885, and on the 20th of May, 1885, an order was made in an action to administer the estate, on the application of the beneficiaries and in the presence of the mortgagees, which directed (inter alia) payment to the mortgagees, out of funds in court standing to the credit of the mortgagor, of the mortgage debt, with interest up to the 1st of July, 1885. Owing to delay in the completion of the order the payment could not be made on the 1st of July, and on the 2nd of July the mortgagees took out a summons, claiming six months' additional interest in lieu of a fresh six months' notice to pay off the mortgage. On the 20th of July the order was completed, and on the 21st of July the mortgagees took the sum mentioned in the order out of court:—Held, that the mortgagees were only entitled to additional interest from the 1st to the 21st of July, on the ground that, by accepting the order, they assented to payment out of the fund in court subject to all the contingencies to which the completion of the order might be subject. Moss, In re, Levy v. Sewill, 55 L. J., Ch. 87; 31 Ch. D. 90; 54 L. T. 49; 34 W. R. 59.

—— Reversionary Interest—Death of Tenant for Life.]—In the year 1852, pursuant to an order made in a suit to administer the trusts of a will, a sum of 20,000*l.* consols was transferred into court to satisfy an annuity of 600*l.* bequeathed to A. by the will. B., who was, under the will, absolutely entitled to the fund in court, subject to A.'s life interest therein, mortgaged his reversionary interest to secure the repayment of 5,000*l.* and interest. A. died in June, 1891. Upon a petition by the trustee of B.'s marriage settlement for a transfer to him of the fund in court, after selling so much thereof as would pay the amount due on the mortgage:—Held, that, as the mortgagees had taken no steps to compel payment of their security, they were entitled to have six months' interest (from the date of the service of the petition on them) in lieu of notice in the usual way. Smith v. Smith, 60 L. J., Ch. 694; [1891] 3 Ch. 550; 65 L. T. 334; 40 W. R. 32.

Agreement for—Title Deed not Forthcoming.]—Mortgagor, desiring to redeem, agreed to pay three months' interest in lieu of notice. Mortgagee was unable to produce the title deed:—Held, that interest must stop at the end of the three months. James v. Rumsey, 48 L. J., Ch. 345; 11 Ch. D. 398; 27 W. R. 617.

Equitable Mortgagee.]— An equitable mortgagee, who had proved his debt before the master, was ordered to reconvey to the purchaser upon receiving his money without the usual notice. Matson v. Swift, 5 Jur. 645.

Where Mortgagee in Possession.]—A mortgagee who enters into possession of the mortgaged property, since he thereby does what amounts to taking proceedings to recover his mortgage-money, deprives himself of his equitable right to insist on six months' notice or interest in lieu of notice from a person seeking to redeem the mortgage. Borrill v. Endle, 65 L. J., Ch. 542; [1896] 1 Ch. 648; 44 W. R. 523.

In Compulsory Sale.]—In the case of the compulsory purchase, under the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, of land being subject to mortgage, interest is payable by the vendor to the mortgagee in lieu of notice. Spencer-Bell to L. & S. W. Ry., 33 W. R. 771.

Ship.]—The contract of mortgage of a ship provided that interest should be paid half-yearly in advance. The mortgagee sold the ship shortly before a half-yearly day for payment of interest, and received the balance of purchase-money (covering his principal debt) three days after that half-yearly day:—Held, that he was only entitled to interest in respect of the three days for that half-year. Banner v. Berridge, 50 L. J., Ch. 630; 18 Ch. D. 254; 44 L. T. 680; 29 W. R. 844; 4 Asp. M. C. 420.

D. ASSIGNMENT AND TRANSFER.

1. In General, 1483.
2. At Undervalue, 1485.
3. Title of Assignee, 1485.
4. Account, 1488.
5. Under Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, s. 4, 1490.
6. Under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 15, 1490.

1. In General.

Under Deposit.]—Where a debtor deposits a title deed with his creditor, as security for a debt, the interest which the creditor thereby acquires in the deed may be assigned by him to a third person. Hobson v. Mellond, 2 M. & Rob. 342.

—— By Parol.]—An equitable mortgagee by deposit of a deed cannot pass his interest in the property by a parol voluntary gift accompanied by delivery of the deed; and, as his interest in the deed is only incidental to his interest in the mortgage, the donee of the deed has no right to retain it. Richardson, In re, Shillito v. Hobson, 55 L. J., Ch. 741; 30 Ch. D. 396; 53 L. T. 746; 34 W. R. 286—C. A.

Notice.]—Notice to mortgagor of assignment not necessary to its validity. Jones v. Gibbons, 9 Ves. 411; 7 R. R. 247.

Assignee of a mortgage from persons not having notice of mortgagor's being only tenant for life, not bound to discover whether he himself had notice. Sweet v. Southcote, 2 Bro. C. C. 67; Dick. 670.

A party taking an equitable mortgage with notice of a prior equitable mortgage cannot, by assignment to another without notice, give him a better title. Ford v. White, 16 Beav. 120.

Where mortgagee assigns without notice, delivery of goods by mortgagor to mortgagee is a good discharge as to mortgagor against assignee. Norrish v. Marshall, 5 Madd. 475.

After an assignment of a mortgage, payments to the mortgagee, with notice, must be allowed by the assignee; the registry, the premises being in Middlesex, is not notice for this purpose. Tender, after the bill filed, of the balance, deducting the payments to the mortgagee, with costs, deprived the assignee of subsequent costs. Williams v. Sorrell, 4 Ves. 389.

Sub-Mortgage.]—A mortgagee assigns the mortgage debts, and executes a bond to the assignee for the amount, but by a memorandum of even date with the assignment he declares that he advanced to the assignor part of the debts only, and will stand possessed of the remainder (specifying the amount) in trust for the assignor. The security proving deficient:—Held, that the transaction was in substance a sub-mortgage, giving the assignee a priority as to the amount advanced by him. Berridge, Ex parte, Loosemore, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 464; 7 Jur. 1141.

Building Society.]—A building society is not precluded by the provisions of the Building Societies Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 42), from exercising the ordinary right of a mortgagee to transfer his mortgage, by way of assignment, to any third person. Ulster Permanent Building Society v. Glenton, 21 L. R., Ir. 124.

Mortgage of Two Estates, One Surety for Other—Sale of Mortgagee's Interest to Prior Mortgagee, after Offer to Owner of Surety Estate.]—A mortgagee upon two estates, one of which was not to be had recourse to unless the other proved insufficient, instituted a redemption suit against the prior mortgagees of the other property, setting up various doubtful claims against them. The prior mortgagees offered a small sum of money for the purchase of her interests. She applied to the owners of the surety estate, offering either to sell to them on the same terms or to allow them to continue the suit. They refused or neglected to do anything, and she then sold to the prior mortgagee:—Held, that under the circumstances the sale was binding on the owners of the surety estate. Acland v. Gravener, 1 N. R. 350. And see 31 Beav. 482; 32 L. J., Ch. 474.

Vesting, under Trustee Act, 1893.]—The exception of mortgages for securing trust money from the operation of s. 12 of the Trustee Act, 1893, explained. London and County Banking Co. v. Goddard, 66 L. J., Ch. 261; [1897] 1 Ch. 642; 76 L. T. 277; 45 W. R. 310.

Practice—Injunction.]—S., in consideration of a loan of 10,000*l.* from G., assigned to the latter two mortgages, which he held upon an estate belonging to N., and executed another mortgage of an estate of his own, by way of further security. Afterwards, on N.'s mortgage debts becoming due, S. brought an action against him on the covenants in his mortgage deeds, which G. filed a bill to restrain. On motion to discharge an injunction granted by the vice-chancellor :—Held, that it ought not to have been granted, except upon the term of the plaintiff reconveying S.'s mortgage, and releasing him from his mortgage debt ; and, the plaintiff now declining these terms, and S. undertaking that the sum to be recovered in the action should be paid to the plaintiff, the injunction was dissolved. Gurney v. Seppings, 2 Ph. 40 ; 1 Coop. t. Cott. 12 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 385.

2. At Undervalue.

Generally.]—A purchaser or mortgagee buying in an incumbrance for less than is due shall have the benefit of the whole money due thereon. Ascough v. Johnson, 2 Vern. 66.

Where a mortgagee buys in an incumbrance, he shall be allowed all that is due on it, though he bought it in for less ; otherwise, if an heir or trustee buys in an incumbrance. Darcy v. Hall, 1 Vern. 49.

A stranger gets an assignment of a mortgage for less than is due. The mortgagor or his heir shall not redeem without paying the whole that is due. Phillips v. Vaughan, 1 Vern. 336.

Mortgagee assigns his mortgage for less than is really due to him. The mortgagor shall not redeem without paying the whole money due on the mortgage. Williams v. Springfeild, 1 Vern. 476.

—— As against subsequent Incumbrancers.]—Where there are subsequent incumbrances or creditors, a man that buys in a prior incumbrance shall be allowed only what he really paid. But it is otherwise as between him and the mortgagor or his heir. Ib.

Heir.]—If an heir, or any other, buys in an incumbrance, he shall not be allowed as against a purchaser any more than he really paid for such incumbrance. Long v. Clopton, 1 Vern. 464.

The heir buying in an incumbrance on the estate, charged with the portions, allowed no more than what he really paid. Brathwaite v. Brathwaite, 1 Vern. 335.

Tenant for Life.]—Semble, a tenant for life buying up an incumbrance affecting the inheritance is not entitled to have credit against such inheritance for any greater amount than he actually paid. Hill v. Browne, Dr. 426 ; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 403.

3. Title of Assignee.

Generally.]—The assignee of a mortgagee cannot stand in any different character, or hold any different position, from that of the mortgagee himself, although the mortgagor may not have been a party to the assignment. Walker v. Jones, 35 L. J., P. C. 30 ; L. R. 1 P. C. 50 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 381 ; 14 L. T. 686 ; 14 W. R. 484.

Assignment after Deposit.]—M. & Co. deposit with S. & Co. the mortgage deeds of certain colonial property, for securing a floating balance due from M. & Co. to S. & Co., and afterwards execute an assignment of the mortgage debt, "in addition to the securities then already held by S. & Co.," but without making any actual assignment of the mortgage itself, or the mortgaged property :—Held, that S. & Co. continued, nevertheless, the equitable mortgagees of the mortgaged property. Smith, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 271.

Consideration—For Mortgage.]—A. obtained a mortgage of real and personal estate from B., without consideration. It was afterwards deposited with C. as a security, who had no notice of the circumstances under which it had been obtained :—Held, that C. could stand in no better position than A., and the deed, being void as against A., was equally void as against C. Parker v. Clarke, 30 Beav. 54 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1267 ; 9 W. R. 877.

On the 10th of February, 1879, the plaintiffs mortgaged to B. for 250*l.* their equitable interests in a sum of stock, and also certain policies of assurance. By the mortgaged deed they acknowledged the receipt of 250*l.*, and they also signed a receipt for that sum indorsed on the mortgage deed. On the 11th of March, 1879, B. transferred the mortgage to H., who gave full value for it as a mortgage for 250*l.*, and had no notice that the plaintiffs had not received that sum. The plaintiffs brought their action alleging that they had only received 91*l.* instead of 250*l.*, and asking redemption on payment with interest of what they had actually received. The court considered that the evidence would have been sufficient to entitle the plaintiffs to a judgment on that footing as against B., but :—Held, that as against H., who had no notice that the whole 250*l.* had not been advanced, the account must be taken on the footing of its having been advanced ; for that, in the absence of any circumstances to cause suspicion, he was entitled to rely on the acknowledgment in the mortgage deed and the indorsed receipt, and had a better equity than the plaintiffs, who, by leaving the documents in the hands of B., had enabled him to commit a fraud. Bickerton v. Walker, 55 L. J., Ch. 227 ; 31 Ch. D. 151 ; 53 L. T. 731 ; 34 W. R. 141—C. A.

—— For Assignment.]—A. mortgaged property to three trustees, B., C. and D. Some time after, B., who was a solicitor, having in his hands a sum belonging to a client, E., proposed to lay it out on a transfer of the mortgage. He prepared a transfer, which was executed by A., B. and C., but not by D., and a receipt for the money was signed by B. and C. alone. No money was ever paid, and it was lost by B.'s insolvency :—Held, that the transfer to E. was ineffectual, the consideration not having actually been paid, and that, in equity, the deed was inoperative both against the mortgagor and the three trustees. Griffin v. Clowes, 20 Beav. 61.

An action was brought by the transferor of a mortgage against the transferees, seeking for payment of the money which was the consideration of transfer, or to have his mortgage and other deeds back again. The plaintiff and the defendants employed in the matter of the transfer the same firm of solicitors, who were then in good credit. On the 20th October, 1888, the plaintiff executed the transfer, which expressed that the money was paid, and he handed the transfer and the title deeds to the solicitors, they undertaking either to return them or to pay the money. The plaintiff did not make any inquiry till the 5th February, 1889, the solicitors telling him so much notice was required. On the 22nd February the solicitors handed over the deeds and the transfer to the defendants. On the 15th March the solicitors filed their petition in bankruptcy. The defendants never paid the money in cash to the solicitors, but they set off in their books part of a sum owed by them to the defendants :—Held, that the defendants ought to have paid the solicitors in cash, and were not entitled to set off a debt due to them from the solicitors; that there had been no negligence on the part of the plaintiff, and that the deed was an escrow until the defendants had paid the money to the solicitors in cash. Coupe v. Collyer, 62 L. T. 927.

On the transfer of a mortgage for 10,000*l.*, with an additional advance of 4,000*l.*, it was proved that the 10,000*l.* was paid in bank notes by the transferee to the original mortgagee, and the 4,000*l.* by a cheque to the mortgagor, as to which there was no proof that it was honoured :—Held, that the payment of the 10,000*l.* was a sufficient consideration as against one claiming under a voluntary settlement. Doe d. Barnes v. Roe, 6 Scott, 525; 4 Bing. (N.C.) 737.

Lease Assigned but not Delivered.]—Where, under a lease from A. to B. for twenty-one years, at the rent of 50*l.*, B. by indenture assigned the lease to C., to secure money previously advanced to him by C., a great part of which was laid out by B. in repairing and improving the premises demised; and C. registered the assignment, but did not take the indenture of lease from B., who afterwards gave up the indenture to A., in consideration of receiving a further advance from him of 200*l.*, to be expended in further improvements; and A. granted him a new lease, at the increased rent of 70*l.* per year; and B. afterwards again gave up that lease, on having another advance made to him of 200*l.* more by A., and took a third lease from him at a rent of 90*l.* :—Held, that C. was not, under the circumstances, precluded, by the neglect to take from B. the indenture of lease, from availing himself of the assignment against A. Bailey v. Fermor, 9 Price, 262; 23 R. R. 666. But see Goodtitle d. Norris v. Morgan, 1 Term Rep. 755.

Fraud of Solicitor—Negligence of Transferor.]—G. and H. were mortgagees for 1,000*l.* on property of S. Their solicitors, D. and P., who had the deeds in their custody, applied to the defendant, who was also a client of theirs, saying that they believed he had 1,000*l.* to invest on mortgage, and that G. and H. wanted 1,000*l.* on a transfer of S.'s mortgage. The defendant inspected the property, and, being satisfied, he, on the 19th of June, 1878, sent the 1,000*l.* to D. and P., who gave him a receipt for it. In July D. and P. fraudulently induced G. and H. to execute a deed of transfer to the defendant with a receipt indorsed, which deed they stated to G. and H. to be a deed of reconveyance to S. on his paying off the mortgage. D. and P. shortly afterwards handed this deed with the title deeds to the defendant, and went on paying him interest as if they had received it from S., who was in fact paying his interest to the agents of G. and H.; G. and H. made no inquiry as to the mortgage, and this went on till 1883, when D. and P. became bankrupts, and the 1,000*l.* received from the defendant, which had never been handed over to G. and H., was lost. G. and H. then brought their action against the defendant asserting a right against the property in the nature of an unpaid vendor's lien :—Held, that, as the plaintiffs by the deed of transfer and receipt which they handed to D. and P. enabled them to represent to the defendant that the 1,000*l.* which he had previously handed to D. and P. had come to the hands of the plaintiffs, they had raised a counter equity which prevented their claiming a vendor's lien, though this would not have been the case if (D. and P. having no authority to receive money for the plaintiffs) the defendant had paid the 1,000*l.* to D. and P. at the time when the deeds were delivered to him, since he would then have known that the plaintiffs had not received the money. Swinbanks, Ex parte (11 Ch. D. 525), distinguished. Gordon v. James, 30 Ch. D. 249; 53 L. T. 641; 34 W. R. 217—C. A.

Quære, per Cotton, L.J., whether D. and P., assuming them to have authority to receive mortgage money on behalf of the plaintiffs, could be taken ever to have, in fact, received this 1,000*l.* on their behalf. Ib.

Notwithstanding Injunction against Assignor.]—A mortgagee who takes an assignment of property without notice of any defect in his assignor's title acquires a good title, notwithstanding that his assignor has in fact been restrained by injunction and the appointment of a receiver from dealing with such property. Wigram v. Buckley, 63 L. J., Ch. 689; [1894] 3 Ch. 483; 7 R. 469; 71 L. T. 287; 43 W. R. 147—C. A.

Assignment after Decree.]—After decree in a suit by a second mortgagee to redeem the first, and foreclose the subsequent mortgagees, one of the subsequent mortgagees assigned his interest in the premises to A.; A. then filed a bill against all the parties to the former suit, praying to be entitled to the benefit of that suit, and to redeem the mortgagees who were prior to himself, and to foreclose the others. The bill was dismissed as against all the defendants except the assignor, and A. was declared to be entitled to stand in his place, and to use his name in the further prosecution of the first suit. Booth v. Creswicke, 8 Sim. 352.

Equitable Mortgagee with Notice—Assignee without.]—A party taking an equitable mortgage with notice of prior equitable mortgage, cannot, by assignment to another without notice, give him a better title. Ford v. White, 16 Beav. 120.

Notice through Solicitor.—A transferee of a mortgage is not affected by the knowledge of the solicitor, acting for him in the matter of the transfer, of an incumbrance subsequent to the original mortgage, so as to prevent him from making further advances, such knowledge not being material to the business of the transfer Wyllie v. Pollen, 3 De G. J. & S. 596; 2 N. R. 500; 32 L. J., Ch. 782; 9 L. T. 71; 11 W. R. 1081.

4. Account.

Assignment—Without Privity of Mortgagor.]—As a mortgagee is a trustee, to answer the profits of his pledge, if he assigns his mortgage without the assent of the mortgagor, he is bound to account for them, both before and after the assignment, though assigned only for his own debt. Sed quære, if the mortgagor hides himself so that he cannot be served with a subpœna to foreclose, if the mortgagee may not assign, without being answerable for the profits after the assignment. Norfolk's (Duke) Case, 3 Ch. Ca. 3.

Assignment of a mortgage without the privity of the mortgagor; the assignee takes subject to the account between the mortgagor and mortgagee. Matthews v. Wallwyn, 4 Ves. 118. S. P., Chambers v. Goldwin, 9 Ves. 264; 7 R. R. 181.

Where assignee takes assignment of mortgage without requiring mortgagor to be a party thereto, he takes, though he has no notice, subject to the accounts subsisting at that time between the mortgagor and mortgagee. Bradwell v. Catchpole, 3 Swanst. 79, n.; 19 R. R. 180.

Although the transferee of a mortgage, without the mortgagor's concurrence, takes it subject to the equities affecting the account between the mortgagor and mortgagee, and can claim on his security no more than is justly due from the mortgagor, yet, if the transfer is for value and without notice of equitable grounds which render the security impeachable by the mortgagor as against the mortgagee, then, as between the mortgagor and transferee, the latter has the better equity, and is entitled to what is due to him on his security. Nant-y-glo and Blaina Ironworks Co. v. Tamplin, 35 L. T. 125. S. P., Judd v. Green, 45 L. J., Ch. 108; 33 L. T. 597.

—— Effect of, as to Money Due.]—Where mortgagee assigns his interest in mortgage, all the money then due shall be accounted principal. Anon., 3 Salk. 241.

If a mortgagee fairly assigns his mortgage, all the money bonâ fide paid by the assignee shall be accounted principal, but the mortgagor shall not be concluded thereby. Smith v. Pemberton, 1 Ch. Ca. 67; Gladman v. Heuchman, 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 287. S. C., nom. Gladwyn v. Hitchman, 2 Vern. 135. And in Anon., 1 Ch. Ca. 258, such was said to be the constant rule in equity, and that there was not one case contra, except Porter v. Hubbart or Hobart (2 Ch. Rep. 85; 3 Ch. Rep. 78), which was decided by the lords upon its own circumstances of peculiar hardship. See also Macclesfield (Lord) v. Fitton (1 Vern. 168), where the court thought it reasonable that the interest should carry interest with respect to an assignee.

Mortgagee assigns his mortgage to S., who pays off the principal and the interest, which is considerably in arrear. Whether this interest shall be reckoned principal against the mortgagor. Macclesfield (Lord) v. Fitton, 1 Vern. 168.

Property was conveyed to trustees to raise by mortgage 75,000*l.*, and pay off prior mortgagees, whose mortgage debts, including arrears of interest, amounted to that sum. The trustees did not raise the 75,000*l.*, but allowed A. to pay off the prior mortgagees, and to take transfers of their mortgages, and then, in consideration of such payments, executed a deed purporting to assign to A. the 75,000*l.* raisable under the trust, and to mortgage the property to A. for 75,000*l.*: —Held, that A. was not entitled to stand as a mortgagee for the principal of 75,000*l.*, but only for the principal and interest due on the transferred mortgages. Thompson v. Hudson, L. R. 2 Eq. 612.

—— Mortgage for Costs of.]—F. devised a real estate to trustees for a term of 2,000 years upon trust to raise money in aid of his personal estate, and subject thereto in strict settlement. Large sums of money were raised under this trust, and amongst others a sum of 10,000*l.* by a mortgage to M. In 1890 M. called in the mortgage. At this time the estate of the tenant for life under the will had been assigned to the L. Society; the tenant in tail in remainder was an infant. An order was then made on a summons taken out by the infant tenant in tail by his next friend, to which the trustee of the term was the only defendant, that the trustee should be at liberty to raise the sum of 10,000*l.* which M. had called in, by way of transfer of the hereditaments comprised in the said mortgage, except a small portion thereof, which should be released, and that the costs of all parties of the transfer should be raised by a mortgage of the part so released for the remainder of the term. The costs were accordingly raised by a mortgage of the excepted portion by the trustee, and the mortgagee now took out a summons for foreclosure, and a receiver. The L. Society opposed: —Held, that the trustee of the term had not discharged all his duties, as a sum of 1,600*l.* might still have to be raised under the trusts thereof, besides which he had a right to redeem the mortgage for 10,000*l.*, and had a duty to his cestui que trust under the term to preserve the equity of redemption, and therefore the mortgage to raise the costs of the transfer was binding on the tenant for life and his assignees, apart from the order, for the amount of the taxed costs of such transfer. Sewell v. Bishopp, 62 L. J., Ch. 985; 69 L. T. 68—C. A.

5. Under Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, s. 4.

Application of Act.]—The 4th section of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874, does not apply to a transfer of a mortgage, and therefore the legal personal representative of a mortgagee of a freehold estate cannot, on receiving payment of the mortgage debt, convey the estate to a transferee. Spradbery's Mortgage, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 623; 14 Ch. D. 514; 43 L. T. 82; 28 W. R. 822. S. P., White's Mortgage, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 856; 29 W. R. 820; and Brooke's Mortgage, In re, 46 L. J., Ch. 865.

Sect. 4 of the Vendor and Purchaser Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78), is confined to cases where the mortgage is paid off and the estate reconveyed. S. C., 25 W. R. 841.

6. Under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 15.

"Mortgagor entitled to Redeem."] — The "mortgagor entitled to redeem" in the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 15, means a mortgagor, or person claiming under the mortgagor, who has a right to require a reconveyance from the mortgagee; and no other person can take advantage of that section. Teeran v. Smith, 51 L. J., Ch. 621; 20 Ch. D. 724; 47 L. T. 208; 30 W. R. 716—C. A.

Consent of Puisne Mortgagee.]—If there are first and subsequent mortgagees of the same estate, the mortgagor cannot require the first mortgagee to assign the debt and property to a nominee of his own, under that section, without the consent of the puisne mortgagee. Ib.

Tenant for Life.]—A tenant for life of mortgaged premises who has failed to keep down the interest, and who has obtained the usual order permitting him to redeem the mortgage, is not of right entitled under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 15, to require the mortgagee to transfer the mortgage debt and premises to a third person. Alderson v. Elgey, 26 Ch. D. 567; 50 L. T. 505; 32 W. R. 632.

E. EFFECT OF, ON LIMITATIONS OF PROPERTY.

Intention.]—A mortgage of property does not alter the existing limitations affecting it, except for the purpose of the mortgage, unless an express intention be shown to resettle it. Hastings (Lord) v. Astley, 30 Beav. 260; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 225; 10 W. R. 73. S. P., Wood v. Wood, 7 Beav. 183.

Revocable Settlement.]—Mortgage in fee is a revocation pro tanto only of a settlement with power of revocation. Thorne v. Thorne, 1 Vern. 182.

Joint Tenancy.]—Mortgage severs the joint tenancy of the trust of a term. Yorke v. Stone, 1 Salk. 158.

1. GENERAL RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF MORTGAGEE.

Mortgagee—A Trustee.]—Distinction between the cases of mortgagees and trustees in the ordinary sense. Dobson v. Land, 8 Hare, 220; 4 De G. & Sm. 575; 19 L. J., Ch. 484; 14 Jur. 288.

The principle, upon which the court restrains persons filling a fiduciary character from having any dealings for their own benefit, does not necessarily apply to the case of mortgagor and mortgagee. Ib.

Acts done by a trustee or termor for years cannot have the effect of adverse possession. But the rule does not apply to the case of mortgagor and mortgagee. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 4 Bligh, 1.

The position that the mortgagee is a trustee for the mortgagor, to be received with considerable qualifications. S. C., 2 J. & W. 182; 22 R. R. 84.

A mortgagee is not, subject to his security, a trustee of the legal estate for the mortgagor—Per Lord Herschell. Taylor v. Russell, 61 L. J., Ch. 657; [1892] A. C. 244; 66 L. T. 565; 41 W. R. 43—H. L. (E.)

—— Must Preserve Mortgaged Estate.]—A mortgagee who holds property in pledge is responsible for it in its integrity. Hood v. Easton, 2 Giff. 692; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 729; 4 W. R. 575.

If a mortgagee so deals with the mortgaged estate as to render it impossible for him to restore it on full payment, a court of equity will prevent him suing at law to recover the mortgage money. Palmer v. Hendrie, 27 Beav. 349.

—— Must Discover Boundaries.]—Mortgagee of an estate, partly in settlement, must discover the boundaries. Strode v. Blackburne, 3 Ves. 225.

—— On a Sale.]—A mortgagee in exercising his power of sale is not (except as to the balance of the purchase-money after a sale) a trustee for the mortgagor, even if the mortgage is in the form of a trust for sale. Downes v. Grazebrook (3 Mer. 200) and Robertson v. Norris (1 Giff. 421) observed upon. Warner v. Jacob, 51 L. J., Ch. 642; 20 Ch. D. 220; 46 L. T. 656; 30 W. R. 721.

—— Under Power given to Mortgagor.]—Trustees having power, during the minorities of tenants for life or in tail, to superintend the management of an estate, cut timber, erect, pull down and repair houses, and do various other things of a more or less similar character, "and generally to deal with the premises as they or he might do if they or he were the absolute beneficial owners or owner, without being answerable for any loss or damage which might happen thereby," deposited with a bank the title deeds of the estate to secure an advance of money to be employed in the erection of buildings under the power:—Held, that the bank had no valid title under the power. Broom v. Sheffield and Rotherham Bank, 24 W. R. 948.

Under Apportionment Act.]—A mortgagee who is not in possession is not an assign of the mortgagor within the meaning of the Apportionment Act (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22), s. 2. Paget v. Anglesey (Marquis), 43 L. J., Ch. 437; L. R. 17 Eq. 283; 29 L. T. 721; 22 W. R. 507.

Need not take Possession.]—Mortgagee cannot be compelled to take possession, but may foreclose. Penrhyn (Lord) v. Hughes, 5 Ves. 106.

2. MORTGAGEE IN POSSESSION.

a. Who is, 1492.
b. Position of, 1496.

a. Who is.

How Determined.]—The fact that mortgagees are in receipt of the rents and profits of the mortgaged estate does not necessarily make them chargeable as mortgagees in possession. The question whether they are mortgagees in possession depends upon whether they have taken out of the mortgagor's hands the power and duty of managing the estate and dealing with the tenants. Noyes v. Pollock, 55 L. J., Ch. 513; 32 Ch. D. 53; 54 L. T. 473; 34 W. R. 383—C. A.

On Application for Rent.]—A mortgagee out of possession called on the tenant for his rent, who said he had laid it out in repairs. The mortgagee acquiesced in this; but there was no evidence of the tenant's accepting the mortgagee as his landlord or of anything like an attornment; —Held, that there was not an entering into possession or into the receipt of the rent by the mortgagee. Ward v. Carttar, 35 Beav. 171.

B. was the agent of a mortgagor, and received the rents of the estate for him, and applied them in payment of the interest to the mortgagees. The mortgagees wrote to B. inclosing notices to the tenants to pay the rents to them, which he was to serve on them if the mortgagor should attempt to interfere. B. replied promising to pay the rents to the mortgagees, and not to the mortgagor. The notices were not served on the tenants, but B. paid the rents as he received them to the mortgagees:—Held, that the mortgagees could not be charged as mortgagees in possession. Noyes v. Pollock, 55 L. J., Ch. 513; 32 Ch. D. 53; 54 L. T. 473; 34 W. R. 383.

The mortgagees of land, consisting of copses and of a farm which was let without the shooting or the timber, gave notice to the tenant of the farm to pay the rent to the mortgagees, and afterwards moved to restrain the mortgagors from cutting the timber:—Held, that though the mortgagees had become mortgagees in possession of the farm, they had not become mortgagees in possession of the shooting, the copses, or the timber, so as to be liable to account for default. Simmins v. Shirley, 46 L. J., Ch. 875; 6 Ch. D. 173; 37 L. T. 121; 26 W. R. 25.

On Entering as Tenant.]—B. mortgaged certain premises to L. The premises were required to be partly pulled down and rebuilt; P. undertook to perform the work, but required security for the payment. An agreement was entered into between B., L. and P., by which L. consented to become tenant of part of the premises when rebuilt, and to take a lease of them from P., to whom B. had assigned his interest for a term of years, and to pay P. 1,000*l.* for the lease, and 250*l.* a year for rent. The premises having been rebuilt, L. entered into possession, but, as no lease was granted by P., did not pay the 1,000*l.*, nor the 250*l.* a year rent. In a suit afterwards instituted by P., and to which both B. and L. were parties:—Held, that L. was a mere tenant, and not mortgagee in possession; the possession being in respect of the tenancy, and the agreement not having the effect of changing the relative situation of the parties in that respect. Page v. Linwood, 4 Cl. & F. 399.

When Right Accrues.]—A tenant for years of a house demised it, by a deed, dated March 24th, to the mortgagee, to hold thenceforth for the residue of the term (less one day), subject to a proviso; and he also sold and transferred the fixtures and chattels therein to the mortgagee, to hold for his own use and benefit, but subject to the same proviso. The deed contained a proviso for reconveyance, on payment of the mortgage money on the 24th June then next, and also a proviso that, on nonpayment on that day, it should be lawful for the mortgagee to enter upon and receive and take the rents and profits of the leasehold and other premises, and, if he should think proper, of his sole authority, to sell or underlet the premises, and to sell the fixtures and chattels:—Held, that the mortgagee's right to take possession did not attach until the 24th June, and that he could not maintain trespass for an entry, or for an asportation of the fixtures and chattels before that day by a stranger. Wheeler v. Montefiore, 1 G. & D. 493; 2 Q. B. 133; 11 L. J., Q. B. 34; 6 Jur. 299.

In trespass quare clausum fregit, the plaintiff made title under a mortgage deed of 6th March, 1840, by which the mortgagor demised premises to the plaintiff thenceforth for a term, subject to a proviso that the demise should cease and be void if the mortgagor paid the principal and interest by 6th March, 1841, and interest at stated periods in the meantime: and to another proviso empowering the plaintiff to sell (after three months' notice) if default should be made in payment of principal and interest at the times named. Then followed covenants by the mortgagor to the plaintiff for payment of principal and interest at the days appointed, and that, at any time after default made in such payment, it should be lawful for the plaintiff peaceably and quietly to enter upon the premises, and thenceforth, for the residue of the term, to hold the same and take the rents and profits without lawful interruption from the mortgagor or any other person. On pleadings, setting forth the deed, and shewing that the plaintiff had entered upon the mortgaged premises after the execution of the deed, but before 6th March, 1841, and before default in payment, and raising the question whether or not he had a right so to enter:—Held, that the deed gave power to the mortgagee to enter before default, and before the day named for any payment. Rogers v. Grazebrook, 8 Q. B. 895.

Under Supposed Purchase.]—A person, who, under a mortgagee, becomes possessed of a property, supposing himself to be its purchaser, if it afterwards appears that he is not validly clothed with that character, but only holds a lien on the property in virtue of the money advanced by him on the supposed purchase, cannot be so treated as to make him liable to render accounts as an ordinary mortgagee in possession. It is essential to the creation of such a liability that he should have known he was in possession as mortgagee. Parkinson v. Hanbury, 36 L. J., Ch. 292; L. R. 2 H. L. 1; 16 L. T. 243; 15 W. R. 642.

On Possession of Part.]—A mortgagee in possession of part, and allowing the mortgagor to retain possession of the rest, is not, at the suit of a subsequent incumbrancer, to be charged, constructively, as in possession of the whole. Soar v. Dalby, 15 Beav. 156.

Under Agreement.]—An agreement, that a mortgagee shall enter into the possession of lands of the mortgagor at a fair rent in discharge of the debt, will be supported in equity, not being against public policy, or working a private injury, and is an exception to the rule that a mortgagee in possession must account for the full value of lands. Morony v. O'Dea, 1 Ball & B. 117.

A mortgagee, who went into possession under a contract between himself and his mortgagor made subsequently to the mortgage, is liable to be charged as a mortgagee in possession. M'Kinley, In re, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 467. Parkinson v. Hanbury, supra, distinguished. Ib.

F. and three others, W. D., F. D. and J. D. purchased from J. a herd of cattle in the following shares:—F., one-third, W. D., F. D. and J. D., two-thirds between them. At the time of the purchase, F. and W. D. wrote a letter to W. & Co., which, after stating the purchase, and that they had given their promissory notes for the purchase-money at one and two years' date, proceeded thus:—"We request you to endorse these bills for the satisfaction of Mr. J., for which endorsement we will allow you the usual commission of 2*l.* 10*s.* per cent.; and will for your security place at your unreserved disposal the whole of the herd in question and its increase, trusting however that our recommendation of allowing such part of it to be disposed of as will cover the amount of your endorsements, and confiding to J. D., acting under your instructions from us, to remit you all the proceeds as they arise, will meet with your satisfaction." W. & Co. assented to this arrangement, endorsed the notes, and handed them over to J. At the same time F. and W. D. wrote a further letter to W. & Co. as follows:—"In consequence of your complying with our request to endorse our bills for the purchase of J.'s herd, we hereby make over the said herd to you, requesting you to give to J. D. instructions how to dispose of the herd, and remit you the proceeds, until by such remittances your endorsement is covered." W. & Co. in no way interfered with the sale of the cattle, nor was any part of the proceeds of the sale ever handed to them, and the herd was lost. Upon a bill filed by F. against W. & Co., seeking to make them liable as trustees for the loss:—Held, that under the above agreement W. & Co. could not be considered as having been in possession of the cattle as mortgagees or as equitable assignees, and that the letter operated only as a collateral security, and that they were not liable in equity to account for the loss. Flint v. Walker, 5 Moore, P. C. 180; 12 Jur. 1.

Assignees.]—Where a mortgagee of certain lands which were held under leases for lives renewable for ever had become bankrupt, and an ejectment for nonpayment of rent having been brought by the head landlord, and the premises redeemed by the assignees within the time allowed by the statute to mortgagees, who subsequently entered into possession by their agent:—Held, on a bill filed by an annuitant, claiming under a deed of settlement prior to the date of the mortgage, that the assignees were chargeable as mortgagees in possession, and were bound to appropriate the rents and profits of the lands which they had received, or without wilful default might have received, in discharge of the redemption-money in priority to that of their own mortgage. Sloane v. Mahon, 1 Dr. & Wal. 189.

Elegit Creditor.]—A prior elegit creditor, who gains precedence and executes his habere, shall be charged as if he were a mortgagee in possession from the day of the demise in his ejectment. Shaw v. Murtagh, Hayes, 586.

Husband and Wife.]—In a case where the wife was entitled to lands contracted to be sold before the marriage, and the husband completed the purchase and resold:—Held, that the husband, and the purchasers from him, ought, if they accepted the relief offered to them on eviction by the heir of the wife, by way of lien on the estate, to be treated as mortgagees in possession, and, in that character, to account for the rents and profits received by the husband and the purchasers, as well during the life of the wife as after her death. Neesom v. Clarkson, 4 Hare, 97; 9 Jur. 82.

As between Mortgagees.]—A prior mortgagee who has obtained leases subsequent to a puisne mortgagee, and who has entered into possession, will, as against the latter, be charged as mortgagee in possession. Gregg v. Arrott, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 246.

Acquiescence.]—Where the possession has been obtained under a forfeiture, and has been acquiesced in for seventeen years, a bill to charge the party, as mortgagee in possession, should not be entertained. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 125.

Relief against Forfeiture.]—Relief cannot be given against a forfeiture created by act of parliament. But a court of equity will see that the proceedings working the forfeiture have been regular. Id. 128.

Depriving of Possession.]—Mismanagement of the estates, and misapplication of the rents, and collusion with the mortgagor, are not grounds for a motion before answer, to take possession from first mortgagee. Berney v. Sewell, 1 J. & W. 647; 21 R. R. 265.

b. Position of.

Generally.]—Discussion of the powers of a mortgagee in possession. Robinson v. Maguire, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 269.

Cannot give up Possession.]—A legal mortgagee who has once gone into possession cannot afterwards go out of possession. Mason v. Westoby (32 Ch. D. 206) discussed. Prytherch, In re, Prytherch v. Williams, 59 L. J., Ch. 79; 42 Ch. D. 590; 61 L. T. 799; 38 W. R. 61.

Extent of Right of Possession.]—Mortgagee has a right to retain possession against all the world except him who, at his own cost, proves himself entitled to equity of redemption. James v. Biou, 3 Swanst. 237; 19 R. R. 200.

—— Till Paid.]—Mortgagee in possession is not compellable to quit to purchaser until fully paid. Davy v. Barker, 2 Atk. 2.

It is a rule in equity that a mortgagee in possession shall not by any suit of redemption be stripped of possession before payment. Brine v. Hartpole, 15 Vin. Abr. 467, pl. 15. Semble, S. C., 5 Bro. P. C. 197.

Right to Carry on Business.]—A mortgagee in possession of business premises is entitled to carry on business for a reasonable time so as to enable him to sell as a going concern, and for that purpose to use the name of the mortgagor's firm. Cook v. Thomas, 24 W. R. 427.

Must Act with Prudence.]—Where a mortgagee enters into possession of mortgaged property with a view to a sale of it, he is bound to act with the same care and prudence, and to use every effort which a prudent man should use, to have the sale conducted under circumstances of the greatest advantage. Marriott v. Anchor Reversionary Co., 2 Giff. 457. Affirmed, 3 De G. F. & J. 177; 30 L. J., Ch. 571; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 713; 4 L. T. 590; 9 W. R. 726.

If a mortgagee takes possession of mortgaged property, and uses it for the purposes of speculation or adventure, and the speculation or adventure results in a loss, the mortgagee must himself bear such loss. Ib.

Paying Produce to Mortgagor.]—Mortgagee in possession has no right to pay the produce of estate to mortgagor, after notice to pay it to a prior mortgagee. Archdeacon v. Bowes, M'Cle. 165 ; 28 R. R. 685.

After bill filed by second incumbrancer, first incumbrancer in possession cannot pay surplus rents to debtor. Parker v. Calcraft, 6 Madd. 11.

Bound by Agreement made by Mortgagor.]—An act of parliament authorised lessees of mines to make a railroad to a canal, through the intervening lands, on making compensation. The lessees entered into an agreement with a mortgagor in possession for making the railroad, and paying an annual rent. The mortgagee afterwards entered into possession and received the rent for some time :—Held, that the mortgagee and all claiming under him were bound by the agreement. Mold v. Wheatcroft, 27 Beav. 510 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 11 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 2 ; 1 L. T. 226.

Possession under Informal Judgment.]—First mortgagee having got possession by means of informal judgment, court will not restrain proceedings by mortgagor to recover possession, though he had disclaimed in foreclosure suit. No receiver appointed. Stevens v. Lord, 2 Jur. 92.

3. Account.

a. General Principles and Wilful Default.

For actual Receipts.]—Mortgagee shall not account for more than he actually receives, unless where he has been guilty of a wilful default ; as if he has turned out or refused a sufficient tenant. Anon., 1 Vern. 45.

Collusion.]—Mortgagee recovers judgment in ejectment, but, in combination with the tenant in possession, refuses to take out execution. He shall be compelled so to do, or answer for the profits, as in the case of wilful default. Bucks (Duke) v. Gayer, 1 Vern. 258.

Mortgagor becomes a bankrupt, and the mortgagee refuses to enter, and permits the bankrupt to continue in possession, and to fence against an ejectment brought by the assignees with this mortgage. Mortgagee shall be charged with the profits from the time of the ejectment. Chapman v. Tanner, 1 Vern. 267.

Transfer of Possession—Derogation of Mortgagor's Rights.]—A mortgagee is accountable, not merely for his actual receipts whilst in possession of the mortgaged property, but also for whatever is received by those to whom he transfers possession under an arrangement inoperative to transfer title and in derogation of the rights of the mortgagor. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c. Co., 4 App. Cas. 391 ; 40 L. T. 697 ; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

Mortgagee in Possession.]—If a mortgagee enters into possession by his own act, he makes himself accountable for what he receives in discharge of his principal and interest. Robinson v. Cumming, 2 Atk. 410.

A mortgagee in possession of a business is accountable not only for what he has received, but for what he might or ought to have received. Chaplin v. Young, 33 Beav. 330.

Where mortgagee enters, and thereby prevents subsequent incumbrancers from entering, and yet permits the mortgagor to receive the profits, he shall be charged with all the profits he had or might have received since his entry. Coppring v. Cooke, 1 Vern. 270.

On a bill for redemption of mortgaged property in the possession of the mortgagee, the latter will be made to account for all loss and damage occasioned by his gross negligence, in respect of bad cultivation and non-repair of the mortgaged premises. Wragg v. Denham, 2 Y. & C. 117 ; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 38.

The defendant, a solicitor-mortgagee, took from the mortgagor an authority to receive the rents of the property accruing due at the date of the mortgage, and in fact received the rents from that date : — Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to an account in the usual form as against a mortgagee who has entered into possession before there was any interest in arrear. Jones v. Jenkins, 44 L. T. 601.

—— As Mortgagor's Agent.]—Mortgagees, under a conveyance in trust to sell, to secure principal and interest, take possession, not as mortgagees, but as agents of the mortgagor :—Held, that in a suit for redemption the mortgagees will not be ordered to account on the footing of wilful default. Parkinson v. Hanbury, 13 W. R. 331.

Sale.]—A mortgagee in possession sold the property under his power of sale, a day being fixed for the completion of the sale and for letting the purchaser into possession. At the request of the purchaser the mortgagee let him into possession four months before the appointed day, but did not require him to pay any rent. In an action by the mortgagor for ascertaining the amount of the balance due to him, quære whether the mortgagee might be charged with wilful default in not requiring a rent from the purchaser. Shepard v. Jones, 21 Ch. D. 469 ; 47 L. T. 604 ; 31 W. R. 308.

In an action for account by a mortgagor against a mortgagee in possession who has sold, the mortgagor is entitled to an account of the proceeds of sale received by the mortgagee or by his order or for his use, "or which without his wilful default might have been so received" ; although wilful default may not have been charged in the pleadings and proved at the trial ; but such an account does not entitle the mortgagor to question the propriety of the sale or the adequacy of the amount for which the property has been sold. Mayer v. Murray, 47 L. J., Ch. 605 ; 8 Ch. D. 424 ; 26 W. R. 690.

Set-off.]—In taking the accounts between mortgagor and mortgagee, whether in a foreclosure or in a redemption suit, the mortgagor is entitled to the benefit of set-off. Anderson, Ex parte, Agra and Masterman's Bank, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 73 ; L. R. 3 Eq. 337 ; 15 W. R. 246.

Relief.]—Where a mortgagee takes an estate subject to a perpetual account, he will not be relieved from his own contract. Yates v. Hambly, 2 Atk. 362.

Re-opening — Mistake.]—Where a mortgage account had been settled on the footing of compound interest with half-yearly rests, both parties wrongly understanding the mortgage deed to require the same:—Held, that such settled account might be re-opened. Daniell v. Sinclair, 50 L. J., P. C. 50; 6 App. Cas. 181; 44 L. T. 257; 29 W. R. 569.

—— No Independent Advice.]—An account of costs in respect of several abortive sales, and of the sales finally carried out, which had been signed by the defendant without any independent advice, was ordered to be re-opened and taxed. Jones v. Linton, 44 L. T. 601.

Interest on Receipts.]—A mortgagee in possession is not chargeable with interest on his receipts, if, when he took possession, an arrear of interest was due to him, unless, by setting up a title adverse to the mortgagor, he has lost the immunities of an ordinary mortgagee. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c. Co., 4 App. Cas. 391; 40 L. T. 697; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

Practice.]—A defendant (bankrupt mortgagor) to a suit by his mortgagee, praying for a declaration of priority and for accounts, cannot by means of an answer and disclaimer avoid answering fully, for, though he may disclaim his interest in the subject-matter of the suit, he cannot disclaim his liability to account. Dobree v. Nicholson, 22 L. T. 774; 18 W. R. 965.

An estate was conveyed by A. to B. upon trust, for ten years, to apply the rents in payment to B. of the interest and capital of 1,000*l.*, lent by B. to A., and then to sell, pay off the residue of the 1,000*l.*, and hold the remainder in trust for the wife and children of A. The rents exceeded the interest. B. permitted A. to retain possession, and the interest was not applied as directed. Upon a bill by B. against A. and his wife and children for a sale:—Held, that B. could not, until he took possession, be made liable for what, without his wilful default, he might have received, except upon a cross bill raising that question. Beare v. Prior, 6 Beav. 183; 12 L. J., Ch. 262.

—— Onus Probandi.]—The proper mode of taking the account on a bill to redeem, does not cast upon the mortgagee the burden of proving that he made the most of the mortgaged premises whilst in possession. If he dealt with them as his own, he is only chargeable with the rent reserved, unless proof can be brought, which lies upon the opposite side, that he acted fraudulently, as in underhand dealing between him and the tenant to whom he let, or was guilty of wilful default, as by leaving the premises vacant, which would throw upon him the proof that no tenant offered, or could be had with reasonable diligence. If the mortgagor was a party to any act to prevent the letting, that would be an answer to wilful default. If he occupied, a fair occupation rent should be charged him. Metcalf v. Campion, 1 Moll. 238.

Costs.]—A mortgagee in possession who had neglected or refused to render an account upon the demand of the mortgagor, was refused his costs up to the hearing. Powell v. Trotter, 1 Dr. & Sm. 388; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 206; 4 L. T. 45.

b. When Ordered.

In Absence of Collusion.]—The mortgagor or his heirs only can sue the mortgagee for an account and redemption, unless it can be shown that there is collusion between them and the mortgagee. White v. Parnther, 1 Knapp, 179.

In favour of Subsequent Mortgagee.]—Subsequent mortgagee prays redemption of first mortgage on payment of what was due; and, pending suit, first mortgagee sets up another mortgage prior to all:—Decreed a trial of its validity at law, and an account of money paid, &c. Dowse v. Rue, 9 Mod. 38.

Against Annuitant.]—Annuitant in possession of lands demised to secure his annuity, decreed to account, although bill not filed to repurchase. Olicer v. Harrison, 1 Jur. 918.

Against Infants.]—A., seised in fee, mortgaged for a term of years, and afterwards devised the mortgaged premises and died. On a bill by the mortgagee against the devisees, some of whom were infants, for foreclosure:—Held, that the defendants, during the infancy of the devisees, were not entitled to take an account of what was done. Taylor v. Coates, 3 Hare, 263.

Practice.]—On a bill to redeem, an account decreed, and 240*l.* reported due, and exceptions to the report; pending which the defendant, the mortgagee, commits waste: court orders the mortgagee to deliver up the possession, on the plaintiff giving security to abide the event of the account. Hanson v. Derby, 2 Vern. 392.

—— Limitation.]—A decree for redemption and general account, &c., having been made in the original and revived cause, in favour of the supposed devisee, it cannot be restricted in the supplemental suit to an account to be taken as between the executors and mortgagees, &c., to the time of the death of the devisor, dismissing the bill as it regards the interest of the devisee; for the devisee is a necessary party to the account. Rylands v. Latouche, 2 Bligh, 567.

—— Exceptions—Parties.]—Exceptions were filed to the master's report, principally on the ground that the deeds of supposed mortgage were in fact deeds of trust, executed to secure the lands against the claims of adverse creditors; and also that there were unsatisfied judgments prior to the plaintiff's claim. By a decree upon further directions the exceptions were allowed, and the account directed to be taken, excluding the alleged mortgage; and, as against J. B., the heir of the mortgagor, the bill was dismissed. Upon appeal, this judgment was affirmed. Quære, whether J. B., against whom the bill was dismissed, ought not to have been brought before the house as a party to the appeal. Kelly v. Bateman, 1 Bligh (N.S.) 237.

—— Sums "properly" laid out by Plaintiff "as Mortgagee."]—In a foreclosure action by a first mortgagee, who was also third mortgagee, and the mortgagor, the plaintiff having entered into possession of the mortgaged property and laid out sums of money in lasting improvements, an account was directed of all the sums "properly" laid out by the plaintiff "as mortgagee" in lasting improvements upon the property. Houghton v. Sevenoaks Estate Co., 33 W. R. 341.

c. Rests.

In Case of Realty.]—The court directs annual rests in an account of the rents of real, but not of personal estate. Robinson v. Cumming, 2 Atk. 410.

In Case of Leaseholds.]—A mortgagee of leaseholds may take possession, even when there is no arrear of interest due, under circumstances which may not render him liable to account with annual rests, as when he enters in order to prevent a forfeiture for nonpayment of ground-rent or for non-assurance. Patch v. Wild, 30 Beav. 99; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1181; 5 L. T. 14; 9 W. R. 844.

Against Mortgagee in Possession.]—A mortgagee by entering into possession by his own act makes himself accountable, and in this case a direction for annual rests is given. Robinson v. Cumming, 2 Atk. 410.

It is the settled practice of this court, in taking accounts against mortgagees in possession, to make half-yearly rests, and not to charge against the mortgagee interest on payments exceeding the interest due to him, received at any intermediate periods, no matter how frequently the payments are made. Graham v. Walker, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 415.

Where the liability of a mortgagee in possession to account without annual rests once begins, it continues until changed by some further agreement come to between the mortgagor and mortgagee. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 32 Beav. 439.

It having been referred to a master to take an account between mortgagor and mortgagee, under a foreclosure, and the report being confirmed in 1736, Lord Hardwicke dismissed defendant's petition for a bill of review, as it appeared that his attorney, solicitor and agent had then attended the settling of the account before the master, by which defendant should be bound. When the sum is large, and the mortgagee is forced to enter on the estate, he subjects himself to an account, but the master is not obliged, for a small excess of interest, to apply it to sink the principal; nor is it an invariable rule, that in taking such accounts he must make annual rests. Gould v. Tancred, 2 Atk. 533. See Needler v. Deeble, 1 Ch. Ca. 299. S. P., Higgins v. York Buildings Co., 2 Atk. 107.

A. conveyed his estates to B., in trust to sell and to pay off a mortgage and other incumbrances on the estates, and to retain a debt due to B., and until the sale to apply the rents in keeping down the interest on the charges, and to pay the surplus to A. B. took a transfer of the mortgage, and entered into and remained in possession for twenty-four years, but did not sell the estates. For the first ten years the rents were less than the interest, but afterwards they exceeded it. A. filed a bill for an account of the rents received by B., with yearly rests, and for a reconveyance of the estates; but the court refused to direct the rests. Latter v. Dashwood, 6 Sim. 462; 3 L. J., Ch. 149.

—— Redemption.]—On a bill to redeem mortgagee in possession, annual rests will not be directed without a special case is shown for it. Scholefield v. Ingham, C. P. Cooper, 477.

A bill was filed by a mortgagor against a mortgagee in possession for redemption, and at the hearing the ordinary decree as against a mortgagee in possession was made. The mortgagor subsequently applied to take the accounts as against the mortgagee, with annual rests:—Held, that such a case was not within s. 54 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, or the 20th Order of the 16th October, 1852; and the application was refused. Nelson v. Booth, 3 De G. & J. 119; 27 L. J., Ch. 782; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 28; 6 W. R. 845.

Bill to redeem against mortgagee in possession; interest never having been in arrear, and annual rents having exceeded yearly interest on mortgage; rests in reduction of principal by such access directed in the accounts. Shepherd v. Elliot, 4 Madd. 254; 20 R. R. 296.

—— Where there are Arrears.]—It is the settled practice of the court not to take the account against a mortgagee in possession, with annual rests, where, at the time of his entering into possession, there is an arrear of interest. Nelson v. Booth, 3 De G. & J. 119; 27 L. J., Ch. 782; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 28; 6 W. R. 845.

Generally, annual rests are not directed against a mortgagee in possession, when the interest is in arrear at the time he takes possession, and, in the absence of special circumstances, a mortgagee is not liable to account with annual rests when he enters into possession; he does not become liable until the whole of the mortgage debt has been paid off. Where, however, a mortgagee in possession came to account with the mortgagor, whereby all the arrears of interest, &c., were converted into principal, leaving thereby no arrears, and he continued in possession, the rent being more than sufficient to keep down the interest, the court directed annual rests. Wilson v. Cluer, 3 Beav. 136; 9 L. J., Ch. 333; 4 Jur. 883.

Where at the time of a mortgagee taking possession, many years' arrears of interest were due, and he had been put to great costs in defending the mortgage from an unsuccessful attack, the court would not compel the account to be taken with rests, but allowed a sum in court, and rents in the receiver's hands before taking possession, to be in discharge pro tanto of the interest due at that time. Horlock v. Smith, 1 Coll. C. C. 287.

The mortgagor had, before the mortgagees entered into possession, indorsed to the mortgagees bills of exchange for the arrears of interest. The bills fell due after the possession was taken, and were dishonoured:—Held, that the interest was in arrear when possession was taken, so as to preclude the mortgagor from claiming to have the accounts of the receipts of the mortgagees taken with rests. Dobson v. Laud, 4 De G. & Sm. 575; 8 Hare, 216; 19 L. J., Ch. 484; 14 Jur. 288.

A mortgagee in possession brought a foreclosure action. In his statement of claim he did not allege that interest was in arrear when he took possession. The mortgagor, in his statement of defence, alleged that the rent received greatly exceeded the interest:—Held, that the accounts must be directed to be taken with annual rests. Carter v. James, 29 W. R. 437.

A mortgagee in possession, who sells part of the mortgaged property under a power of sale in the mortgage, must apply the proceeds of sale, first, in payment of interest and costs, and then either pay the balance to the mortgagor or apply it in reduction of the principal due on the mortgage; and in taking an account against the mortgagee, who has retained sale moneys beyond the interest and costs due, a rest must be made at the time of the receipt of the proceeds of sale, even although he may have entered into possession when the interest due to him was in arrear. The same rule applies where two distinct mortgages are held by the same person, who sells one of the mortgaged estates. Thompson v. Hudson, 40 L. J., Ch. 28: L. R. 10 Eq. 497; 23 L. T. 278; 18 W. R. 1081.

A. having agreed for the purchase of part of a property, subject to a mortgage, entered into possession without paying the purchase-money and afterwards took a transfer of the mortgage on the whole, upon which an arrear of interest, less than the unpaid purchase-money, was then due:—Held, that the rule applied, that an account will not be given with annual rests against the mortgagee where there was an arrear of interest at the time of his taking possession. Finch v. Brown, 3 Beav. 70.

Annual rests not directed in the account against a mortgagee in possession from the time when the arrear of interest was discharged by the rents, such direction being not of course, but under special circumstances only, and never for a broken period. Davis v. May, 19 Ves. 383.

Against Mortgagor.]—B. mortgaged certain premises to L. The premises were required to be partly pulled down and rebuilt. P. undertook to perform the work, but required security for the payment. An agreement was entered into between B., L. and P., by which L. consented to become tenant of part of the premises when rebuilt, and to take a lease of them from P., to whom B. had assigned his interest for a term of years, and to pay P. 1,000*l.* for the lease, and 250*l.* a year for rent. The premises having been rebuilt, L. entered into possession; but, as no lease was granted by P., did not pay the 1,000*l.*, nor the 250*l.* a year rent. In a suit afterwards instituted by P., and to which both B. and L. were parties:—Held, that the accounts of what was due to L. on the mortgage were not to be taken to with annual rests, as the accounts on the other side could not be taken in the same manner either as to the 1,000*l.* or the 250*l.* a year rent. Page v. Linwood, 4 Cl. & F. 399.

Occupation Rent.]—Annual rests are directed in an account of occupation rent as well as in an account of rents and profits received. Wilson v. Metcalfe, 1 Russ. 530.

Against Tenant for Life and Equitable Incumbrancer.]—In a suit by devisees of the reversion against a party deriving title under a tenant for life and equitable incumbrancer, the court under the circumstances directed accounts with annual rests. Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 177.

Husband and Wife.]—A husband who completes a sale of his wife's lands, which were contracted to be sold before marriage, will not, nor will the purchaser, be liable to account with annual rests in an action brought for eviction by the heir of the wife where no special case for that form of decree is made by the pleadings. Neeson v. Clarkson, 4 Hare, 97; 9 Jur. 82.

After Abandonment of Suit.]—In a suit by a mortgagor for redemption, a decree was made for an account with annual rests. The plaintiff died, and the suit was abandoned, after which the mortgagee instituted a suit for foreclosure:—Held, that the decree must be the same, and with annual rests. Morris v. Islip, 20 Beav. 654.

Possession under Contract of Purchase.]—A. agreed to become purchaser of leasehold property which was subject to mortgages. He entered into possession, and after the contract had been put an end to, he obtained a transfer of the mortgages, having all along continued in possession:—Held, that, although the circumstances would have justified the mortgagees in taking possession, still A. was not entitled to stand in the same position, and he was directed to account as mortgagee in possession with annual rests from the date of the transfer to him of the mortgagees. Patch v. Wild, 30 Beav. 99; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1181; 5 L. T. 14; 9 W. R. 844.

Usury.]—Where the interest due upon a mortgage had become in arrear, and in the mortgagee's account of arrears rests were made from time to time, on which interest was calculated, and ultimately a general account of all arrears, calculated on the footing of those rests, was signed by the mortgagor, and confirmed by a deed executed by him three years afterwards, for securing repayment of the balance to the mortgagee:—Held, that these transactions were not usurious, and that the mortgagor was liable for the balance. Blackburn v. Warwick, 2 Y. & C. 92; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 17.

Practice—When Decree Silent.]—On decree against mortgagee in possession to account, rests cannot be made by master, unless directed by decree. Webber v. Hunt, 1 Madd. 13.

After the time is ascertained at which the mortgage debt of a mortgagee in possession was paid off, annual rests from that date will be made in the accounts against him, though rests were not directed by the previous orders and decrees under which those accounts were taken. Wilson v. Metcalfe, 1 Russ. 530; 25 R. R. 128.

—— From what Date.]—In a redemption action against mortgagees in possession the plaintiffs, who claimed to represent the original mortgagor, alleged that the defendants had been overpaid. The defendants delivered a defence in which they denied the title of the plaintiffs to redeem; pleaded the Statute of Limitations; and asserted that a large amount was still due to them. At the trial the plaintiffs' title to redeem was not disputed, and the defence of the statute was overruled. The judgment directed the taking of the ordinary accounts in a redemption action against mortgagees in possession, including an account of what was due to the defendants for principal and interest, and their taxed costs of the action; and that, on payment by the plaintiffs within six months after the certificate of the balance (if any) which should be found due to the defendants, the defendants should re-convey the mortgaged property to the plaintiffs, and that, in default of payment, the action should be dismissed with costs. But, in case it should appear on taking the accounts that the defendants had been overpaid, the further consideration of the action was to be adjourned. The chief clerk found by his certificate that the mortgagees went into possession in May, 1857; that the mortgage debt was fully repaid in November, 1866; and that at the date of the certificate there was a balance of 618*l.* due from the defendants:—Held, that the account must be taken against the defendants with annual rests from the date at which the mortgage debt was fully paid, and that the defendants must pay the costs of the action. Wilson v. Metcalfe (1 Russ. 530; 25 R. R. 128) followed as to the annual rests, but distinguished as to the costs. Ashworth v. Lord, 57 L. J., Ch. 230; 36 Ch. D. 545; 58 L. T. 18; 36 W. R. 446.

—— When Rest to be Made.]—Where a decree ordered that in taking the accounts of a mortgagee in possession annual rests should be made, and that the rents and profits of the premises, as often as they exceeded the interest accrued due on the debt, should be applied in reduction of the principal, a rest ought to be made, at the date of the receipt, by the mortgagee, of a sum exceeding the interest, though occurring in the interval between the annual rests. From that date the subsequent annual rests ought to be computed. Binnington v. Harwood, Turn. & R. 477.

Costs.]—Costs given in a redemption suit against a mortgagee in possession, who upon an account taken with annual rests was found to have been overpaid. Wilson v. Cluer, 4 Beav. 214.

4. Growing Crops.

Mortgagor in Possession.]—The plaintiffs were mortgagees of a freehold farm, the mortgagor remaining in possession until his trustee in liquidation entered and managed the farm business. The mortgagees having demanded possession, to which they were entitled under their mortgage deed:—Held, that, from the date of their demand, possession of the mortgagor by his trustee was wrongful, and that, without either ejectment or foreclosure, the mortgagees were entitled to the property as it was at the time of their demand, and the trustee must accordingly be restrained by injunction from cutting and removing the growing crops. Bagnall v. Villar, 48 L. J., Ch. 695; 12 Ch. D. 812; 28 W. R. 242.

—— By Express Contract.]—Where the mortgagor in possession was by express contract tenant at will to the mortgagee:—Held, that the mortgagee was not entitled to the crops upon the mortgaged premises at the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, or at the time of the order for sale by the commissioners. Temple, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 216. See also Bignold, Ex parte, Postle, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 259; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 214; 4 L. J., Bk. 58. Bignold, Ex parte, Harvey, In re, 2 Glyn & J. 273. But see Alexander, Ex parte, 2 Glyn & J. 275.

Whether a mortgagee could, in an action for mesne profits, after judgment in ejectment against the mortgagor in possession of the mortgaged premises, recover the value of the crops severed and sold subsequent to the day of the demise laid in the declaration, but before the delivery of possession by the sheriff, quære. Ib.

After Notice from Mortgagee.]—A mortgagor presented a petition for liquidation of his estate, and the trustee appointed went into possession of the mortgaged lands and commenced cutting the growing crops. The mortgagee then put a man in possession and required the trustee to give up possession, which he declined to do. In an action against the trustee an injunction was granted restraining him from cutting crops and from removing the crops cut after the demand made by the mortgagee. Bagnall v. Villar, 48 L. J., Ch. 695; 12 Ch. D. 812; 28 W. R. 242.

Sale.]—An equitable mortgagee is entitled to the growing crops and rents from the date of the order of sale. Bignold, Ex parte, Keer, In re, 2 Deac. & C. 398; 1 L. J., Bk. 100.

—— Arrangement Prior to.]—A legal mortgagee obtained the usual order for sale of the property, previous to which it was arranged between himself and the assignees that he should be placed in the same situation as if he had given notice to the tenants:—Held, that the mortgagee was, under these circumstances, entitled to the crops growing on the estate at the time of the order of the sale. Barnes, Ex parte, Medley, In re, 3 Deac. 223; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 497; 7 L. J., Bk. 37; 2 Jur. 329.

And to the same rents due since the bankruptcy, and to the crops. Ib.

Quære, whether in the absence of any such arrangemenent the mortgagee is not entitled to have the estate sold in the same condition as it stands at the date of the order for sale. Ib.

5. Leases.

a. By Mortgagor.

Contract for, Specific Performance of.]—A contract for a lease by mortgagor cannot be enforced against the tenant without obtaining a reconveyance of the mortgage, or procuring the mortgagee to confirm same; tenant holding under such contract cannot compel landlord to pay off the mortgage to give effect to the contract. Costegan v. Hastlar, 2 Sch. & Lef. 166. See Howell v. George, 15 R. R. 207.

—— Against Tenant.]—C., the owner of a leasehold estate which was subject to a mortgage, entered, without the privity of the mortgagees, into an agreement with P. to grant him a lease for twenty-one years, and in 1875 P. took possession under this agreement. On the 25th of March, 1881, the mortgagees' solicitors wrote to P. stating that they, on behalf of the mortgagees, had withdrawn C.'s authority to receive the rents, and asking him to pay the rent due that day and all future rent to them. P. wrote to ask C. whether he ought to pay according to the notice, and C. replied that he would be correct in doing so. P. consulted his solicitors, who inspected the mortgage deed, and advised him that the mortgagees could claim rent from him. P. therefore paid the mortgagees the rent due on the 25th March, and on the 22nd of June gave them notice to determine his tenancy at Christmas. At the end of the year the mortgagees refused to accept possession, and in June, 1882, they and C. commenced this action to compel P. to take a lease according to the agreement:—Held, that the notice by the mortgagees to the tenant to pay rent to them and the payment accordingly did away with the agreement between C. and P., and made P. tenant from year to year to the mortgagees, and that specific performance of the agreement could not be decreed. Corbett v. Plowden, 54 L. J., Ch. 109; 25 Ch. D. 678; 50 L. T. 740; 32 W. R. 667.

—— Against Purchaser from Bankrupt Mortgagor.]—A. made an equitable mortgage of certain premises to B., and he afterwards entered into an agreement to grant a lease of the premises to C., who had notice of the prior charge. A. became bankrupt before the lease was executed, and on the petition of B. an order in bankruptcy was made, under which the premises were sold, and B. became the purchaser, and retained the amount of his equitable mortgage out of the purchase-money:—Held, on a bill filed by C. for specific performance of the agreement, that B. having become the purchaser, and thereby united his equitable mortgage with the equity of redemption, was bound to perform the agreement. Smith v. Phillips, 1 Keen, 694; 6 L. J., Ch. 253.

Mortgagee bound by.]—A mortgagor made a lease of part of the mortgaged premises; the mortgagee, with notice of the lease, took from the mortgagor a conveyance of the equity of redemption, in such a way as that, instead of being kept distinct, it became united with the interest in the mortgage:—Held, that the mortgagee was bound by the lease. O'Loughlin v. Fitzgerald, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 483.

Underlease—Effect.]—A mortgagor of leasehold premises granted an underlease. The original lease, by numerous mesne assignments, and by the assignment of the equity of redemption by the mortgagor, became absolutely vested in the plaintiff as the legal personal representative of the last assignee:—Held, first, that as the mortgagor had only the equity of redemption at the time of the grant, the underlease operated as a demise by estoppel only between the parties to it; and that, as the mortgagor never afterwards acquired any legal interest in the premises, he could not pass any legal interest in that contract. Doe d. Prior v. Ongley, 10 C. B. 25; 20 L. J., C. P. 26.

Held, secondly, that, although some of the mesne assignments were made subject to the underlease, yet any possible effect of this circumstance was confined to the parties to the deeds, and, inasmuch as neither the defendant nor any person through whom he claimed, or with whom he had any legal privity, was a party to such assignments, the plaintiff was in no respect bound or affected by the underlease. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that, though payment of rent had been made in accordance with the terms of the underlease, yet, by such payment and the other circumstances of the case, a tenancy from year to year only had been created, which was well determined by a regular notice to quit, served upon the attorney or the administratrix of the person who paid rent to the plaintiff, and under whom the defendant claimed. Ib.

After Bill Filed.]—A lease granted by a mortgagor to a party, without notice, nineteen days after a bill filed by an equitable mortgagee, set aside, as a purchase pendente lite. Perry v. Keane, 6 L. J., Ch. 67.

After Foreclosure.]—After a bill of foreclosure filed by mortgagee, and a receiver appointed, tenant for life of the mortgaged premises, with leasing power, makes leases; a bill is filed by a judgment creditor, who moves to let the premises pending the cause; ordered to let without prejudice to any right the tenants may have against their lessor, and they, as tenants from year to year to the receiver, being entitled to notice to quit. Mansfield (Lord) v. Hamilton, 2 Sch. & Lef. 28.

Sale subject to Lease.]—To a bill to raise a charge secured by a term, a subsequent mortgagee of the inheritance and a lessee who claimed under a lease made by the inheritor after he had executed the mortgage were made parties. The bill prayed that if necessary the lands should be sold discharged of the lease; there was a consent to sell the inheritance instead of the term. The mortgagee insisted by his answer that the lease had been made at a gross under-value, and that the lands should be sold discharged of it. The lessee insisted that the lease was made at the full value, and that the lands should be sold subject to it. The plaintiff amended his bill, but did not put in issue the case made by the mortgagee:—Held, that in this suit the mortgagee was not entitled to have the lands sold discharged of the lease; and the lands were directed to be sold subject to the lease without prejudice to the mortgagee filing a bill to have them sold discharged of it. Colthurst v. Colthurst, 2 Jones, 262.

Position of Tenant to Mortgagor.]—A., after mortgaging in fee to B., demised to C. for years from Lady-day, at a quarterly rent. A. afterwards sold the equity of redemption in parcel of the mortgaged premises to B.; B. in August gave notice of the mortgage, and required C. to pay to himself and not to A. rents then due, or thereafter to become due, from C. in respect of the mortgaged premises. B. then entered upon the parcel sold. In December C. tendered to B. three quarters' rent due, upon the lease at Michaelmas, which B. refused to accept:—Held, that this notice was sufficient to establish the affirmative of an issue taken upon an allegation, that B. demised to C. for one year from the date of the notice. Browne v. Storey, 1 Man. & G. 117; 1 Scott (N.R.) 9; 9 L. J., C. P. 225; 4 Jur. 319. See Doe d. Hughes v. Bucknell, 8 Car. & P. 567.

The tenant of a mortgagor, whose tenancy was created after the mortgage, and has never been recognised by the mortgagee, cannot maintain trespass against the mortgagee for entering and distraining on the lands under the powers of the mortgage. Gibbs v. Cruikshank, 42 L. J., C. P. 273; L. R. 8 C. P. 454; 28 L. T. 735; 21 W. R. 734.

Right to Maintain Possessory Action against Tenant of Mortgagor.]—A party having mortgaged his premises to the plaintiff in 1846, and being allowed to remain in possession, let them in 1848 to the defendant. In October, 1849, the plaintiff, without having been otherwise in possession, brought ejectment against the defendant, who gave his consent to a judge's order, dated the 31st October. The order directed proceedings to be stayed till the 15th of November then next, the tenant in possession undertaking on that day to give up possession to the plaintiff, and that in default the plaintiff should be at liberty to sign final judgment, and issue execution against the tenant for the costs of such judgment, execution, writ of possession, costs of levy, &c. On the 15th of November the plaintiff first entered into possession of the premises, and brought an action for mesne profits accrued between November, 1848, and the 15th of November, 1849:—Held, that the plaintiff, not having been in possession of the premises prior to the 15th of November, could not maintain the action, his entry on that day not having relation back to his title as mortgagee, and that the judge's order made no difference in the case. Litchfield v. Ready, 5 Ex. 939; 20 L. J., Ex. 51.

Trespass will not lie against the occupier of land by a mortgagee, who has never been in actual possession, or been seised of the land, and has not obtained judgment in ejectment, either by default or by verdict, and therefore he cannot waive the tort, and maintain an action of use and occupation. Turner v. Cameron's Coalbrook Steam Coal Co., 5 Ex. 932; 20 L. J., Ex. 71.

Lease before Mortgage—Position of Tenant.]—Tenants under leases granted by a mortgagor before the mortgage may safely continue to pay rent to the mortgagor until they get notice of the mortgage, and are requested to pay their rent to the mortgagee. Cook v. Moylan, 1 Ex. 67; 5 D. & L. 701. Trent v. Hunt, 9 Ex. 14; 22 L. J., Ex. 318; 17 Jur. 899; 1 W. R. 481.

Notice to Pay Rent to Mortgagee.]—A mortgagor let the mortgaged premises subsequently to the mortgage. During the quarter ending at Michaelmas the mortgagees gave a notice to the tenant informing him of the existence of the mortgage, and that the principal sum was still due and owing together with an arrear of interest, and requiring him to pay the rent thereafter to accrue due to them. The rent which became due at Michaelmas being still unpaid, an order was made in an action against the mortgagor appointing the plaintiff who had recovered judgment, receiver of the rents of the premises, "without prejudice to the rights of any prior incumbrancers who may think proper to take possession of the same by virtue of their respective securities." Subsequently the mortgagees threatened the tenant with legal proceedings unless he paid the rent to them, and the tenant thereupon paid them the quarter's rent due at Michaelmas. The receiver claimed payment of such rent from the tenant:—Held, that the tenant had not been guilty of any disobedience of the receivership order in paying rent to the mortgagees, they being prior incumbrancers whose rights were reserved by the order; that the tenant, having paid the rent to the mortgagees under compulsion of law and in consequence of his lessor's default, could set up such payment in answer to the claim for the rent by the receiver, who claimed through his lessor; and that consequently the claim of the receiver could not be maintained. Johnson v. Jones (9 A. & E. 809) approved and followed. Underhay v. Read, 57 L. J., Q. B. 129; 20 Q. B. D. 209; 58 L. T. 457; 36 W. R. 298—C. A.

The tenant of a mortgagor, by virtue of a lease subsequent to the mortgage, does not become tenant to the mortgagee, as soon as the latter gives him notice of the mortgage and that the money has not been paid according to the condition. Evans v. Elliott, 9 Ad. & E. 342; 8 L. J., Q. B. 51; 1 P. & D. 256.

Where a mortgagor is in possession, and after the mortgage makes a lease, notice by the mortgagee to the tenant to pay the rent to him will not of itself make him tenant to the mortgagee, but the old tenancy created by the mortgagor must be put an end to and a new tenancy created by the mortgagees receiving rent from the tenant. Partington v. Woodcock, 4 L. J., K. B. 239.

A mortgagor in possession let the mortgaged property without the concurrence of the mortgagees. The lease was one authorised by s. 18 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. The lessee then advanced certain moneys to the mortgagor upon the terms that the lessee should retain the rent as it became due until the moneys were repaid. Subsequently the mortgagees gave notice to the lessee informing him of the mortgage, and requiring him to pay them the rent thereafter to become due, and not to pay it to the mortgagor. The lessee having refused to comply with the notice, the mortgagees brought an action to recover possession under a condition of re-entry upon non-payment of rent contained in the lease:—Held, that, by the combined effect of ss. 10 and 18 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the mortgagees, after giving the above notice to the lessee, were entitled as reversioners to enforce the covenants and provisions in the lease, and were therefore entitled to recover possession of the property under the condition of re-entry; and, further, that the agreement between the mortgagor and lessee as to the retention of the rent was not binding upon the mortgagees. Municipal Permanent Building Society v. Smith, 58 L. J., Q. B. 61; 22 Q. B. D. 70; 37 W. R. 42—C. A.

Under Conveyancing Act, 1881.]—In a mortgage of land to be given in pursuance of an agreement made before the Conveyancing Act, 1881, the mortgagee is not entitled to a provision to expressly exclude the operation of s. 18 of the act, under which a mortgagor in possession has power to make leases of the mortgaged land. Nugent and Riley, In re, 49 L. T. 132.

The effect of a lease granted by a mortgagor in possession under the powers of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 18, is to bind the mortgagee and those claiming under him so as to prevent the interference with any easement to which the lessee is entitled as against the lessor and those claiming under him. Wilson v. Queen's Club, 60 L. J., Ch. 698; [1891] 3 Ch. 522; 65 L. T. 42; 40 W. R. 172.

Under Power.]—The doctrine that a tenant for life, with a power to sell or lease, may sell or lease to a trustee for himself is an established exception to the rule as to dealings by persons filling fiduciary positions. Under a mortgage, power was reserved to the mortgagor until entry by the mortgagee to grant building leases:—Held, that the case fell within the principle of the above exception, and that a lease to a trustee for the mortgagor was good. Bevan v. Habgood, 1 J. & H. 222; 30 L. J., Ch. 107; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 41; 8 W. R. 703.

Rights of Mortgagor's Assignees.]—A., having demised land to a tenant for years, mortgaged it, and afterwards assigned his equity of redemption to the defendant. The defendant paid off the incumbrance, but, before a transfer was executed, distrained in the name of the mortgagee for rent in arrear:—Held, that he had the same implied authority to do so as a mortgagor in possession. Snell v. Finch, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 651; 32 L. J., C. P. 117; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 333; 7 L. T. 747; 11 W. R. 341.

If a mortgagor of lands, who retains only an equity of redemption, leases by deed, and afterwards assigns his interest in the land by words large enough to convey a legal estate, the assignee may, as assignee of the reversion, sue the tenant for waste in breach of the covenant in the lease, for the tenant is estopped from denying that his lessor had a legal reversion capable of being assigned. Cuthbertson v. Irving, 4 H. & N. 742; 28 L. J., Ex. 306; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 740. Affirmed on appeal, 6 H. & N. 135; 29 L. J., Ex. 485; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1211; 3 L. T. 335; 8 W. R. 704—Ex. Ch.

The assignee of a mortgagor who has let a tenant into possession after the mortgage can sue such tenant for use and occupation, notwithstanding notice from the mortgagee to pay rent. Hickman v. Machin, 4 H. & N. 716; 28 L. J., Ex. 310; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 576.

b. By Mortgagee.

Before Foreclosure.]—Mortgagee cannot make a lease of a house in mortgage before foreclosure. Hungerford v. Clay, 9 Mod. 1.

Whether Tenancy created.]—Where, subsequently to a mortgage, the mortgagor creates new tenancies, and submits rental to mortgagee, who raises no objection, such tacit acquiescence does not suffice to create a new tenancy as against the mortgagee. The act of the solicitor having carriage, in approving the rental which sets out such tenancies, will not create a new tenancy. The act of the receiver, in accepting rent from such tenants, and paying interest thereout to the mortgagee, will not create a new tenancy. The solicitor having carriage and the receiver are officers of the court, but not agents for the parties. O'Rourke's Estate, In re, L. R. 23 Ir. 497.

Agreement for—Concurrence of Mortgagor.]—A mortgagee of leaseholds, without any leasing power, agreed in writing to grant a lease of the premises for the whole term, at a premium. It was not so expressed in the agreement, but it was understood by both parties that the lease was not to be granted without the concurrence of the mortgagor. The mortgagor refused to concur. A bill against the mortgagee alone, to compel him to grant a lease, the plaintiff being willing to take such a lease as the mortgagee alone could grant, was dismissed, but, under the circumstances, without costs, and without reserving liberty to bring an action. Franklinski v. Ball, 34 L. J., Ch. 153; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 606; 10 L. T. 446; 12 W. R. 845.

By Mortgagee in Possession—Registered Mortgage.]—The mortgagee while in possession made a lease; the mortgage was registered. The lessee set up a title as a purchaser without notice, and also relied on there being no acknowledgment to bind him:—Held, 1st, that the registration gave priority to the mortgagor's equitable title, which rendered notice immaterial; 2nd, that the acknowledgment by the mortgagee alone was sufficient against his lessee. Ball v. Riversdale (Lord), Beat. 550.

—— By Brewers—Public-house—Account.]—Mortgagees in possession, who were brewers, let the premises with a restriction that the tenant should take his supply of beer entirely from them:—Held, that the mortgagees must account for such additional rent as they would have made if the premises had been let without restrictions, but not for the profit which they made by the sale of beer to the tenant. White v. City of London Brewery, 58 L. J., Ch. 855; 42 Ch. D. 237; 61 L. T. 741; 38 W. R. 82—C. A.

—— Sub-lease — Account.]—The plaintiffs were mortgagees in possession of a colliery, and were also treated by the court as lessees of the same colliery under a lease for a fixed term of years at a rent and a certain royalty for all coal gotten. The lease contained covenants to leave pillars of coal to support the roof and not to work or remove the pillars. The mortgagees underlet the colliery, and gave their sub-lessees permission to work and remove the pillars, which they did:—Held, that in taking the accounts as against mortgagees in possession, the mortgagees having allowed their sub-lessees to take the coal, must be treated as having taken it themselves, and, having so taken it wrongfully in breach of the covenants in the lease, must be charged, not with the amount of the royalty reserved, but with the full value of the coal, subject to a deduction for the costs of bringing it to the surface, but not for the costs of severance; and the foreclosure, which had been made absolute before the appeal was heard, was reopened. Livingstone v. Rawyards Coal Co. (5 App. Cas. 25) distinguished. Taylor v. Mostyn, 55 L. J., Ch. 893; 33 Ch. D. 226; 55 L. T. 651—C. A.

c. By Mortgagor and Mortgagee Jointly.

Subsequent Bankruptcy of Mortgagor.]—Mortgagee of leaseholds held for a term of years joined with the mortgagor in leasing part of the property to A. B. for the residue of the term at a rent of 3*l.* per annum, payable to the mortgagor, his executors, administrators and assigns. The right of re-entry was reserved in the same terms. There was also a declaration that nothing therein contained should be construed to defeat, impeach, or determine the estate of the mortgagee under the mortgage deed so far as the same affected the entirety of the premises. After the execution of the deed the mortgagor became bankrupt:—Held, that A. B. was entitled to the benefit of this lease exempt from the mortgage, but that the mortgagee, and not the assignee of the bankrupt mortgagor, was entitled to the rent of 3*l.* per annum. Edwards v. Jones, 1 Coll. C. C. 247; 13 L. J., Ch. 371; 8 Jur. 416.

Right to Sue on Covenants.]—Where an estate pur autre vie is granted in mortgage, and mortgagor and mortgagee jointly make a lease of a portion of the mortgaged premises, reserving rent to both the lessors and to their heirs and assigns; and the lessee covenants for the payment of the rent accordingly; on the death of the mortgagee the mortgagor may maintain an action of covenant for non-payment of the rent, which accrues due in his own lifetime, the covenant being quoad the mortgagor a covenant in gross; but, semble, that the rent which accrues due subsequently to his death, goes to the heir-at-law of the mortgagee, who may sue upon the covenant notwithstanding the mortgagor having survived the mortgagee, for the court will mould such a covenant so as to make the rent go, on the death of the survivor of the lessors, to the party entitled to the reversion. Thwaites v. M'Donough, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 97.

Right of Re-entry—Breach of Conditions.]—A mortgagee and mortgagor demised leasehold premises to J. for a term of years, reserving to them, or either of them, a right of re-entry if J. should assign without consent of the mortgagor. After several assignments, made with the consent of the mortgagor before 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 1, an assignee in a deed (to which the mortgagor was a party for the purpose of assenting thereto) covenanted with the mortgagor not to assign without his consent, and a condition of re-entry was reserved to the mortgagor in case of such assignment. An ejectment was brought by the mortgagee and mortgagor to recover possession upon a breach of the condition:—Held, first that the mortgagee could not recover under the condition of re-entry in the original lease, as his right of re-entry was determined by the assignment with consent prior to the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35. Saunders v. Merryweather, 3 H. & C. 902; 35 L. J., Ex. 115; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 655; 13 W. R. 814.

Held, secondly, that the mortgagor could not recover upon the right of re-entry reserved in the assignment, because he had no legal interest in the reversion. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that, as from the recitals in the assignment it appeared that the mortgagor had no legal estate in the reversion, the assignee was not estopped from setting up such want of legal title in the mortgagor as a defence to the action. Ib.

d. Distress.

By Mortgagor in Possession.]—A mortgagor in possession has, in the absence of interference by the mortgagee, an implied authority from the mortgagee to distrain upon the tenant of the mortgaged property for the rent due in respect thereof; and, although it may be necessary for the mortgagor to justify the distress as bailiff of the mortgagee, it is not necessary that the distress should be made in the mortgagee's name. Reece v. Strousberg, 54 L. T. 133; 50 J. P. 292.

Where a lessor, having mortgaged his reversion, is permitted by the mortgagee to continue in the receipt of the rent incident to that reversion, he during such permission is præsumptione juris authorised, if it should become necessary, to realise the rent by distress, and to distrain for it in the mortgagee's name as his bailiff. Trent v. Hunt, 9 Ex. 14; 22 L. J., Ex. 318; 17 Jur. 899; 1 W. R. 481.

A mortgagor in possession distrained for rent accruing due after the mortgage, but the notice of the distress described the rent as due to himself:—Held, that he could make cognizance as the bailiff of the mortgagee. Ib.

—— After Receiver appointed by Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee appointed a receiver of the income of the mortgaged property under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, and gave notice of the appointment to the mortgagor. The mortgagor nevertheless distrained for rent becoming due after the appointment of the receiver. The mortgagor claimed to distrain for the protection of the property, alleging that the receiver had been negligent in collecting the rent:—Held, that an injunction must be granted to restrain the mortgagor from interfering with the receiver or receiving the rent. Bayly v. Went, 51 L. T. 764.

Semble, that even if the mortgagor had proved negligence on the part of the receiver, distraining for the rent was not the proper mode of protecting his interests. Ib.

By Mortgagee.]—A. agreed in writing to let a farm to B. The agreement reserved a rent payable at stated intervals, and provided that A. should put the premises in repair. B. alleged that, prior to the agreement being signed, A. promised verbally, that if B. would take the farm the buildings should be put into a thorough state of repair, and that no rent should be demanded till this was done, and that on the faith of this promise B. took the farm. A. afterwards mortgaged the premises to C., who gave to B. notice of the mortgage, and that the principal and interest were in arrear, and directed him to pay the rent to C. B. then set up the alleged collateral agreement, of which C. was previously unaware. C., after notice, distrained for the rent reserved by the written agreement, and due before and after the date of his mortgage. In an action by B. against C. for an injunction to restrain him for holding or selling the goods, and damages for improperly distraining, and against A. and C. for specific performance of the written agreement, and the alleged parol agreement, the vice-chancellor, on the motion of the plaintiff, and subject to certain terms, granted an interlocutory injunction restraining C. from remaining in possession and from selling for a certain time:—Held, that the injunction ought not to have been granted, for that, assuming that the parol agreement existed, the mortgagee of the reversion, without notice, was not bound by it. Carter v. Salmon, 43 L. T. 490.

Semble, that a court of equity will not interfere with the legal right of distraint by the owner of the reversion for the rent due to him on the contract of tenancy, even where the distraint is for more money than is due as rent. Ib.

—— Where Mortgagee Relets to Mortgagor.]—Mortgagees entering on the mortgaged premises, and reletting them to the mortgagor, as tenant, the mortgagor cannot maintain trespass against them for distraining. Dawson v. Johnson, 1 F. & F. 656.

—— In Possession—Account—Wilful Default.]—A mortgagee in possession of a livery stable-yard and premises let the same to a tenant. He afterwards distrained for rent, taking possession, under such distress, of the horses and carriages standing at livery on the premises. On being threatened with legal proceedings by the owners of the chattels at livery so seized, he restored them:—Held, that, in taking the accounts in a suit in equity by a second mortgagee to redeem the premises, the first mortgagee was not answerable, as for wilful neglect or default, in not realising the chattels which he had seized and afterwards restored to the owners. Cocks v. Gray, 1 Giff. 77; 26 L. J., Ch. 607; 3 Jur. 1115; 5 W. R. 749.

See also cases under DISTRESS.

e. Ejectment.

By Mortgagee in Possession after Satisfaction of Debt.]—A mortgagee in possession, who appears upon the pleadings to be paid off, and has given security for the payment of the rents into court, will be restrained by injunction from ejecting the tenants in occupation of the lands, although the answer claims a sum to be still due. Robinson v. Maguire, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 269.

Restraining Action of.]—The court will not stay an action of ejectment by a mortgagee against his tenants at the desire of an executor who has come in as a co-defendant, and seeks to restrain the action on the ground that a suit is pending to administer the estate of his testator of which the premises mortgaged formed part. Crowle v. Russell, 27 W. R. 84.

f. Action on Covenants.

By Mortgagor without joining Mortgagee.]—A mortgagor who has the control and management of the mortgaged property can maintain an action to restrain the breach of a restrictive covenant affecting the land by a tenant who has notice of the covenant, and the mortgagee need not be joined if his security is not likely to be affected. Fairclough v. Marshall, 39 L. T. 389; 27 W. R. 145.

6. Mines.

Opening by Mortgagor.]—A mine or quarry opened by the owner of the inheritance, while he was still in actual possession, even though after the date of the mortgage, will enure for the benefit of the mortgagee. Elias v. Snowdon Slate Quarries, 48 L. J., Ch. 811; 4 App. Cas. 454; 41 L. T. 289; 28 W. R. 54—H. L. (E.)

—— Waste.]—The opening of a quarry by a mortgagor in possession enures to the benefit of the mortgagee of a term, so as to render him dispunishable for waste if he work the quarry during the term. Ib.

—— Onus of Proof.]—Where it is proved that a quarry was worked, and that there was a lease which would authorise the workings, it will be presumed after a great lapse of time that the workings took place under the lease, and the burden of proof will lie on a party who seeks to show that they were unauthorised. Ib.

—— What is.]—Semble, sale of the produce is not a necessary criterion of the difference between a mine or quarry which is, and one which is not, to be considered open in a legal sense. Ib.

Where there is an open mine or quarry, the sinking of a new pit or the same vein, or breaking ground in a fresh place on the same rock, is not necessarily the opening of a new mine or quarry. Ib.

Working by Mortgagee in Possession.]—A mortgage was made of mines, and the mortgagee entered into possession. He expended large sums in working the mines, which by the terms of the deed he was entitled to work:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled, not only to the repayment of such sums but the interest for the same. Norton v. Cooper, 25 L. J., Ch. 121.

Mortgagee in possession of mines is not bound to expend more than a prudent owner. Rowe v. Wood, 2 J. & W. 553; 22 R. R. 208.

A mortgagee in possession, who had opened and worked mines on the mortgaged estate, charged with his receipts but disallowed his expenses Thorneycroft v. Crockett, 16 Sim. 445; 12 Jur. 1081.

—— If Security Insufficient.]—Where a mortgagee of freehold estates enters into possession, he may work mines under the estate, if the security is insufficient for the payment of his principal, interest and costs. Millett v. Davey, 31 Beav. 470; 32 L. J., Ch. 122; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 92; 7 L. T. 551; 11 W. R. 176.

Surcharge.]—A mortgagor was not allowed to surcharge a mortgagee with the value of minerals which he or his lessees had raised after entering into possession, when he knew that the mines were being worked for four years, and allowed the work to proceed without remonstrance or complaint. Ib.

Account.]—A mortgagee of lands containing underneath unopened coalfields, who allowed an owner of adjacent coal mines to explore and work the coal, on a bill by the mortgagor against him, and such coal-owners, held responsible, and, besides the common decree, the court directed an account of all coal worked by the defendants, or either of them, and of the proceeds thereof. Hood v. Easton, 2 Giff. 692; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 729; 4 W. R. 575.

The principle acted upon in Thorneycroft v. Crockett (16 Sim. 445) followed.

Where a trespass was committed on the plaintiff's mine, and an aircourse and level roads made through it underground to connect adjoining collieries in mortgage to the defendants, and large quantities of the defendants' coals were thereby fraudulently gotten and removed without their knowledge:—Held, first, that the mortgagees could not be made accountable for any portion removed by their mortgagor while they allowed him to remain in possession, notwithstanding the proceeds of the coal so wrongfully removed by him had found their way, week by week, but without notice of the fraud, into the mortgagees' hands, and notwithstanding they continued the use of the aircourse and roads after taking possession, and retained in their employment as manager of the collieries the person by whose agency the fraud had been perpetrated. Powell v. Allen, 4 K. & J. 343.

Held, secondly, that the court had no jurisdiction to give the plaintiff compensation in respect of consequential injury, by reason of large portions of their coal being rendered unworkable and useless to them. Ib.

But held, thirdly, that the mortgagees could not be allowed to retain the use of the aircourse or roads, although the continuance of that user might be no special injury to the plaintiffs. Ib.

Held, fourthly, that, not having themselves made such apertures, they could not be ordered to fill them up. Ib.

Held, fifthly, that all the proceeds having been traced to the mortgagees, and no portion retained by the agent, the latter could not in a court of equity be made personally chargeable for the value of the coal removed, notwithstanding his own fraudulent conduct in the transaction. Ib.

Form of order, under such circumstances, and of decree for an account against the mortgagor and mortgagees, and as to the allowance to be made to the defendants in respect of the coal for which they were held accountable. Ib.

7. Outlay and Expenditure.

a. In General.

Mortgagor's Lien for Outlay.]—As a general rule a mortgagor can have no lien on the property mortgaged for money expended in preserving the property; but money so expended enures for the benefit of the mortgagee. Norris v. Caledonian Insurance Co., 38 L. J., Ch. 721; L. R. 8 Eq. 127; 20 L. T. 939; 17 W. R. 954.

Expenses of Recovering Debt.]—A mortgagee is entitled to be allowed, in account against the mortgagor, all expenses properly incurred for the recovery of the mortgage money. Ellison v. Wright, 3 Russ. 458; 27 R. R. 108.

Allowance for Payments to Outgoing Tenant.]—After the amount due to a mortgagee had been ascertained and paid, the mortgagee was held entitled to some allowance for crops, manure, &c., for which he remained liable to pay to an outgoing tenant of the mortgaged property. Oxenham v. Ellis, 18 Beav. 593.

Mortgagee of a Newspaper—Account.]—N. was in 1838 appointed printer of a newspaper, and in 1840 he became the mortgagee of two fourth parts of the newspaper, with a power of sale, which power he in 1841 exercised, and he sold the two fourth parts to his brother, and at the same time N. became the manager of the paper. In 1846 N. ceased to be the printer and manager, and in 1848 he obtained an assignment of the two fourth parts from his brother. In 1850 he became the purchaser of the other two fourth parts, and he was then registered as the owner of the newspaper. In 1857 the court decreed that the sale of 1841 was invalid, and the mortgagor was declared entitled to redeem. An account was directed of all sums received by N., or which but for his wilful neglect and default he might have received, in respect of the proceeds of the newspaper from the sale in 1841; and in taking such account regard was to be had to any debt or debts (other than the mortgage debt) which should be found due from the mortgagor to N. In taking the account N. claimed to be allowed to charge credit prices, on the ground that, although he was in receipt of cash payments from 1841 to 1846, yet he was entitled to apply those payments, first in discharge of a debt due to him for printing, and then in payment of the expenses of the newspaper:—Held, that he was entitled to charge, not credit, but only cash prices in the account. Robertson v. Norris, 1 Giff. 428; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1238; 1 L. T. 123.

A balance of 2,201*l.* had been found due to N. in 1841 for printing up to that date. In 1847 N. entered into an agreement with one of the proprietors, to which the mortgagor was not a party, that he, N., would accept 400*l.* "in satisfaction of all claims upon the proprietary." In taking the account with the mortgagor, N. claimed to be allowed credit for 2,201*l.*, or for half of it, against the mortgagor; but the court disallowed the claim. Ib.

A person who enters into wrongful possession of property under an unjust bargain will be treated as a trespasser and wrong-doer, and be dealt with more severely than a mortgagee in possession. Ib.

Mortgagee in Possession of a Publication—Account.]—Reference to the master to take an account of sums properly expended by a mortgagee in possession of a publication, in printing, publishing and selling the work, with a direction to make just allowances:—Held, not to include the expenses of preparing the work for the press. Whellier v. Macdonald, 1 Jur. 510.

Management of Flats—Recouping Loss.]—A mortgage of a large block of buildings, let out in residential apartments, and containing a common kitchen and salle à manger for the use of the tenants, contained an assignment of the "rents and profits" and a power to the mortgagees to enter on the hereditaments on default of payment and "manage" and receive the rents and profits thereof. The deed contained no assignment of chattels, nor any reference to existing arrangements with tenants, but the mortgagor covenanted to pay moneys expended by the mortgagees for any of the purposes thereby authorised. At the date of the mortgage the apartments were let out to tenants under agreements, made by a former mortgagee (who had been paid off), by some of which the tenants stipulated for the supply by the landlord of attendance and cooked food, such food being generally supplied according to a tariff from time to time fixed by the manager. The mortgagees, having entered into possession, continued to supply all the tenants, whether they had contracted for the supply of attendance and food or not, with attendance and cooked food, and in so doing managed the premises at a loss:—Held, in an action by second mortgagees for an account, that the first mortgagees were entitled to be recouped the losses made by them in management, not only out of the rents of the property, but out of the surplus proceeds of sale thereof. Bompas v. King, 56 L. J., Ch. 202; 33 Ch. D. 279; 55 L. T. 190—C. A.

b. Insurance Premiums.

On Fire Policy — Payment by Mortgagee without Express Contract.]—If a mortgagee of houses, not entitled by express contract to insure the premises against fire, at the mortgagor's expense, nor entitled to require the mortgagor to insure them against fire, nevertheless does so insure them, without the privity of the mortgagor, he will not be allowed, as a matter of course, to add the premiums of the policies to his mortgage debt, and charge them against the mortgage premises. Dobson v. Land, 4 De G. & Sm. 575; 8 Hare, 216; 19 L. J., Ch. 484; 14 Jur. 288.

Mortgage deeds contained covenants on the part of the mortgagor to insure the mortgaged premises in the names of the mortgagor and mortgagees, not adding their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns. The mortgagees entered into possession, and, after the mortgagor's death, the persons entitled to the equity of redemption not having insured the premises, the mortgagees insured in their own names only as mortgagees:—Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to add the premiums to their mortgage debt. Semble, that if the rents and profits were insufficient to keep down the interest, and pay the premiums, the mortgagees would have been entitled to be allowed interest on the premiums so paid. Ib.

In the absence of an express contract authorising him so to do, a mortgagee cannot, (notwithstanding his mortgagor has covenanted to insure against fire, and neglected so to do,) as against a subsequent incumbrancer, himself insure the mortgaged premises, and add the sums so paid to his mortgage debt. Brooke v. Stone, 34 L. J., Ch. 251; 12 L. T. 114; 13 W. R. 401.

—— Mortgagee in Possession.]—A mortgagee in possession is not entitled, in the absence of express contract, to charge in account premiums on a fire policy on the mortgaged property. Bellamy v. Brickenden, 2 J. & H. 137.

A mortgagee in possession, without express powers authorising him to do so, incurred expenditure in insuring the mortgaged estates:—Held, that the sums expended for insurance would be allowed under the usual direction as to just allowances. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 33 L. J., Ch. 106; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1258; 8 L. T. 407; 11 W. R. 555.

On Life Policy—Contract for Mortgagee to pay on Mortgagor's Default.]—In a mortgage security, H. covenanted with C. & Co. to pay the principal sum (6,648*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.*) and interest thereon at 5 per cent., &c., and that he would pay during the life of R. the premiums on three policies of insurance, and that in case of default it should be lawful for C. & Co. to pay any sums requisite for keeping on foot or renewing the policies. And it was further agreed that the sums that should be so advanced should be charged upon the mortgaged premises, and carry interest at 5 per cent., and be raised in like manner as the other moneys thereby secured; provided that the total amount of the moneys secured, and to be ultimately recoverable by virtue of the mortgage security, exclusive of the sums of 3,000*l.* and 2,000*l.* secured by bonds (being part of the said principal sum), in respect whereof the proper ad valorem stamp duties had been already paid, should not exceed the sum of 3,000*l.*; the stamp impressed on the mortgage security covered only the sum of 8,000*l.*:—Held, that the master was correct in finding the amount due to the mortgagees to consist of the principal sum originally advanced, and a further sum, being the amount of moneys advanced in payment of certain only of the premiums due on the three policies of assurance, altogether amounting to the sum of 8,000*l.*, and also of the further sums of 3,417*l.* 17*s.* 7*d.* and 497*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*, being interest due respectively on the original principal sums of 6,648*l.* 3*s.* 4*d.* and 1,351*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.*, the amount paid in respect of such premiums. Richards v. Macclesfield, 10 L. J., Ch. 329.

—— Payment by Mortgagee of Premiums on Insurance of Life of Surety for Mortgagor.]—An insurance was effected on the life of a surety for a mortgagor; the premiums were paid by the mortgagee, who went into possession of the mortgaged premises, but it was not proved that the mortgagor had ever been charged with them. In a redemption suit:—Held, that the mortgagor was not entitled to credit for the amount received on the policy. Humphrey v. Arabin (Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 318) approved. Bell v. Ahearne, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 576.

—— By First Mortgagee, out of Rents, with Notice of Second Mortgage.]—A tenant for life of leaseholds under a settlement, who is also entitled to a share of a deceased child, mortgages her interest twice, and a suit being instituted to carry out the settlement, the leaseholds are sold and others held for three lives are purchased; two of the lives drop, and a large fine being demanded to renew, a bill is filed to compel a renewal. A policy having been effected on the last life, the first mortgagee, who is in possession, with notice of the second mortgage, pays two premiums, with the authority of the tenant for life, and then allows the policy to drop. Such premiums were paid by the first mortgagee out of the rents, he being a solicitor, and managing the estate and suit himself. Another bill was afterwards filed impeaching the settlement, but ultimately dismissed with costs, and in that suit the first mortgagee is a defendant. In taking the accounts in chambers, the chief clerk disallows the premiums, and allows only costs out of pocket to the first mortgagee. Upon exceptions to that certificate:—Held, that he was right in all the disallowances. Selater v. Cottam, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 630; 5 W. R. 744.

c. Repairs and Improvements.

Repair—Damage through Age.]—A mortgagee is not bound to keep up buildings in as good repair as he found them, if the length of time will account for their being worse. Russell v. Smithies, 1 Anst. 96.

—— Assent of Mortgagor.]—A mortgagee in possession will be allowed for repairs necessary for the support of the property, and for doing that which is essential for the protection of the title of the mortgagor, if he has got the consent of the mortgagor, or has given him notice in which he acquiesces. Sandon v. Hooper, 6 Beav. 246; 12 L. J., Ch. 309. S. C., 14 L. J., Ch. 120.

—— Pulling down Premises.]—A mortgagee in possession held liable for damage occasioned by his pulling down two cottages on the property. Ib.

Mortgagee of a copyhold may pull down ruinous houses and build better to prevent a forfeiture. Hardy v. Reeves, 4 Ves. 480.

Improvements.]—Mortgagee in possession may be allowed for money laid out in increasing the value of the property, but he is not justified in increasing the value of the estate by improvements so as to cripple the mortgagor's power of redemption. Sandon v. Hooper, 6 Beav. 246; 12 L. J., Ch. 309. S. C., 14 L. J., Ch. 120.

—— Permanent.]—In taking an account in an action between a mortgagor and a mortgagee in possession, allowance must be made for permanent improvements made by the latter while in possession, so far as the value of the premises is thereby enhanced. Henderson v. Astwood, [1894] A. C. 150; 6 R. 450—P. C.

—— Account.]—A mortgagee in possession is entitled to an account of moneys properly expended in improving the property. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 33 L. J., Ch. 106; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 738; 8 L. T. 409; 11 W. R. 555.

—— Repayment.]—If a mortgagee in possession, or a mortgagee selling under his power of sale, has reasonably expended money in permanent works on the property, he is entitled on primâ facie evidence to that effect to an inquiry whether the outlay has increased the value of the property, and if it has done so, he is entitled to be repaid his expenditure so far as it has increased such value. And in such case it is immaterial whether the mortgagor had notice of the expenditure. Notice to the mortgagor is only material when the expenditure is unreasonable, for the purpose of showing that he acquiesced in it. Sandon v. Hooper (6 Beav. 246; 14 L. J., Ch. 120) commented on. Shepard v. Jones, 21 Ch. D. 469; 47 L. T. 604; 31 W. R. 308.

—— By Second Mortgagee.]—A second mortgagee who is in possession of the mortgaged property and expends money in permanently improving or preserving it, is not entitled as against the first mortgagee to any charge on the property for the money so expended. Landowners' West of England, &c., Co. v. Ashford, 50 L. J., Ch. 276; 16 Ch. D. 411; 44 L. T. 20.

—— With Consent.]—On consent, in equity, mortgagee allowed to expend sums in improvements, and to add amount to his charge on premises. Smith, Ex parte, Cunnington, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 63; 2 Deac. 236.

—— Allowance for.]—A feme sole seised in fee, subject to a mortgage, married A. In ten years A. paid off the mortgage, and took an assignment to B. in trust for himself, and then made considerable improvements. A., having issue two daughters, by his will devised the lands to the youngest, and died; his wife survived, and enjoyed the lands for her life; on her death, the eldest daughter brought her bill against her sister to redeem, but the question was, upon what terms? Per cur., there shall be no allowance to A. for improvements before the assignment to B.; but from thence the devisee shall be allowed two-thirds of the lasting improvements, but no interest during the devisor's life, for a tenant for life is bound to keep down the interest during his estate. Newling v. Abbot, 1 Vin. Abr. 185, Ca. 8.

—— Under Decree.]—Where a decree directed the chief remembrancer to take an account of what the defendant, a mortgagee in possession, had received, or without wilful default might have received, out of the premises; and that in taking this account all parties were to have all just and fair allowances; he cannot make an allowance to the mortgagee for valuable and lasting improvements. Murphy v. Meade, 1 Jones, 620.

Practice.]—In taking the accounts under the decree in a redemption action against a mortgagee in possession, the mortgagee is entitled to necessary repairs, under the head of "just allowances"; but, to entitle him to permanent improvements, or substantial repairs, he must make out a case for them at the trial. Tipton Green Colliery Co. v. Tipton Moat Colliery Co., 47 L. J., Ch. 152; 7 Ch. D. 192; 26 W. R. 348.

—— Evidence.] — Mortgagee in possession claiming upon a bill for redemption to be allowed for substantial repairs and lasting improvements, but adducing no proof of any such expenditure, held not entitled to any inquiry on the subject. Sandon v. Hooper, 6 Beav. 246; 12 L. J., Ch. 309. Affirmed, 14 L. J., Ch. 120.

—— Objection by Mortgagor.] — Where a mortgagor filed a bill for redemption against a mortgagee in possession, who claimed allowances for repairs and improvements, which the mortgagor objected to, as being unnecessary and improper, such objection must be raised by the bill; otherwise the mortgagor will be only entitled to an ordinary decree allowing "necessary repairs and lasting improvements." Powell v. Trotter, 1 Dr. & Sm. 388; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 206; 4 L. T. 45.

d. Rents and Fines Disbursed.

Mortgagor's Rent Paid by Mortgagee.]—If a mortgagor of leasehold premises allows an arrear of rent to fall due, and an ejectment to be brought by the landlord, the mortgagee may pay the arrear and costs, and apply for a receiver. Kelly v. Staunton, 1 Hog. 393.

Advances for Preservation of Estate—Right to Sale or Receiver.]—Advances made by a mortgagee for the preservation of the estate (e.g. head rent paid by him) follow the nature of the mortgage security, and, if the mortgagee is not entitled to foreclose the mortgage until after the decease of mortgagor, neither is he entitled, during the life of the mortgagor, to a sale of the estate for payof such advances; but, if necessary, a receiver will be appointed to keep down the interest on the mortgage debt and advances. Burrowes v. Molloy, 2 Jo. & Lat. 521; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 482.

—— To Tenant for Life—Enforcement against Inheritance.] — If the assignee of a mortgage knowingly suffers a tenant for life of the equity of redemption, put in settlement since the mortgage, to remain in possession without paying head rents, and then advances him money to save the estate from eviction: semble, the sum advanced may be enforced notwithstanding, as salvage, against the inheritance. Hill v. Brown, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 403; Dr. 426.

Renewal Fines.]—Mortgagee of a leasehold interest paying renewal fines was reimbursed out of the estate. Hamilton v. Denny, 1 Ball & B. 202; 12 R. R. 14.

Where the mortgagor of a leasehold estate has not covenanted that he will procure the lives to be filled up, the mortgagee may do it, and, on adding the expenses of renewal to the principal, it shall carry interest. Lacon v. Mertins, 3 Atk. 4.

e. Commission and Receivership.

Commission—Stipulation for.]—A mortgagee cannot, at the time he advances money, stipulate for an advantage not strictly belonging to the contract of mortgage. Broad v. Selfe, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 885; 11 W. R. 1036.

A mortgagee stipulated with the mortgagor that he should sell the mortgaged premises and charge a commission upon the sale, in addition to his expenses in effecting the sale. The mortgagor revoked the authority to sell, and the mortgagee filed a bill for foreclosure, and on account of what was due for principal and interest, commission, and expenses:—Held, that the charge for commission was not covered by the security, but the mortgagee having incurred expenses in attempting to sell under the contract, an inquiry was directed in respect thereof. Ib.

A mortgagee deed contained a proviso for redemption on payment of the debt, which was a sum advanced to redeem the lands from eviction, and also contained a stipulation that the sum of 100*l.* a year was to be allowed to the mortgagee, who had an immediate right to go into possession, for his trouble in managing the lands of which he should be in possession; the mortgagee went into possession on the execution of the mortgage, and, in a redemption suit:—Held, that the stipulation for 100*l.* a year was void, and refused to allow the mortgagee credit for it in taking the account. Comyns v. Comyns, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 583.

Stipulations for commission on receipt of rents and conversion of arrears of interest into principal inserted by a solicitor mortgagee in a mortgage deed prepared by himself, and insisted upon by him as the condition of any further advance to his client, will not be allowed in taking the account between the solicitor, as mortgagee in possession, and his client in a foreclosure suit. Eyre v. Hughes, 45 L. J., Ch. 395; 2 Ch. D. 148; 34 L. T. 211; 24 W. R. 597.

If the contract between the parties entitles a mortgagee to any commission he may claim, either in taking the account of what is due on the mortgage, or under the head of just allowances. But where the only commission to which a mortgagee was entitled was upon any renewal of the mortgagor's promissory note which he might accept, and, though payment was not demanded upon its becoming due, the note was not in fact renewed:—Held, that the fact that the mortgagor had been placed in as beneficial a position as if the note had been renewed, did not make the commission payable. Bucknell v. Vickery, 64 L. T. 701—P. C.

Where advances have been made by a mortgagee to a mortgagor upon security of a speculative character, such as a building estate, the court will, in taking the account in a redemption action, allow to the mortgagee sums actually deducted by him for commission or bonus at the times of making the advances, provided the deductions were made as part of the mortgage contract, under a bargain deliberately entered into by the parties while on equal terms, and knowing perfectly well what they were doing, and without any improper pressure, unfair dealing, or undue influence on the part of the mortgagee; the court treating the transaction in each case as amounting in fact to the payment of the whole amount of the advance to the mortgagor and the return of a certain part of it to the mortgagee as a consideration for the accommodation. Potter v. Edwards (26 L. J., Ch. 468) followed. Broad v. Selfe (11 W. R. 1036), and James v. Kerr (40 Ch. D. 449) discussed. Mainland v. Upjohn, 58 L. J., Ch. 361; 41 Ch. D. 126; 60 L. T. 614; 37 W. R. 411.

—— Under Deed.]—A person lent money to a business firm on the security of a deed of trust for sale of the personal property of the firm (without any proviso for redemption or repayment), which deed gave him full power to manage the business, and authorised him to pay off various debts, and to retain the money due to himself. He assisted in the management of the business, and charged in account certain annual sum for his assistance, under the designation of bonuses:—Held, on a bill by a surviving partner of the firm, that the bonuses must be disallowed, and that the property must be reassigned, on payment of the sum which, exclusively of the bonuses, should be found due. Barrett v. Hartly, L. R. 2 Eq. 789; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 426; 14 L. T. 474; 14 W. R. 684.

—— For Personal Trouble.]—Where a party holding the control over an estate, and a power of selling it to secure the repayment of liabilities he had incurred on account of the owner, received the rents, sold the estate, and then received the purchase-money (for which, while he retained it, he was held liable to interest), he was not on account of the acts thus done by him entitled, without any previous stipulation, to claim commission for the trouble he had had in the matter. Court v. Roharts, 6 Cl. & F. 65.

A mortgagee being one of a firm of auctioneers, sold under the power of sale, and made charges for the expenses of the sale, as having been conducted by the firm:—Held, that the firm could not charge for personal trouble. Mathison v. Clarke, 3 Drew. 3; 24 L. J., Ch. 202; 18 Jur. 1020; 3 Eq. R. 127; 3 W. R. 2. And see Miller v. Beale, 27 W. R. 403.

—— Disallowance of.]—In taking the accounts of a mortgagee in possession, the chief clerk disallowed three claims for commission, at the rate of 5*l.* per cent., paid to agents for receiving the rents; and the disallowance was confirmed. Stains v. Banks, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1049.

A. executed a conveyance of all his estate and property to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. His lands were under mortgage, and the mortgagees were made assignees in trust under the deed, with the usual powers and provisions for the protection and in ease of the trustees. The mortgagees immediately after the execution of the creditors' deed, appointed W., one of their number, to be receiver, who paid in the amounts received by him to the bankers, to the account of the trustee mortgagees (by name), "as assignees in trust of A.":—Held, that such entry showed W. to have received the rents as their agent, not in their character of mortgagees, but in their character of trustees, and that they could not add to their mortgage money and interest, and costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred, the commission paid or allowed to W. upon the rents received by him. Nicholson v. Tutin, 3 K. & J. 159; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 235.

The defendants, who were mortgagees of two houses, went into possession as mortgagees, and appointed M., one of their directors, to collect the rents as their agent:—Held, that he could not be allowed any commission out of the rents. Kavanagh v. Workingman's Benefit Building Society, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 56—C. A.

Receivership — By Mortgagee himself.]—A mortgagee is not entitled to charge receiver's fees for himself. Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 301.

The court will not allow a mortgagee more than his principal and interest, notwithstanding the mortgagor has agreed he shall be paid for his trouble of receiving the rents. French v. Baron, 2 Atk. 120.

Mortgagee or trustee manages the estate himself; he is not to be allowed for his own care and pains: otherwise, if he employs a bailiff. Bonithon v. Hockmore, 1 Vern. 316.

—— By Agent for Mortgagee.]—It is a general rule that mortgagee shall not charge for receiving the rents personally, though he may have a receiver at the expense of the mortgagor. Liberty was therefore given to surcharge and falsify an account settled with an allowance; acquiescence having no effect, the mortgagee being attorney to mortgagor. Langstaffe v. Fenwick, 10 Ves. 405; 8 R. R. 8.

Mortgagee allowed expense of receiver, the property consisting of small houses at small rents, and mortgagee living at a distance. Davis v. Dendy, 3 Madd. 170; 18 R. R. 209.

Under a proviso in a mortgage deed for reduction of interest on punctual payment, a mortgagee in possession through the default of the mortgagor is entitled, on the accounts being taken, to charge the mortgagor, in a proper case, with the commission paid to a receiver for collecting the rents. Stains v. Banks, (9 Jur. (N.S.) 1049; reversed on appeal, Reg. Lib. 7 B. 1863, 1761), considered. Union Bank of London v. Ingram, 50 L. J., Ch. 74; 16 Ch. D. 53; 43 L. T. 659; 29 W. R. 209.

—— By Creditor.]—A creditor in possession of his debtor's estate, under a power of attorney, taking an assignment of a mortgage, directed to account as agent, and allowed receiver's fees, so long as the trusts imposed by the power required him to be in possession, after that to be charged as mortgagee in possession. Expenses incurred by mortgagee in possession for the protection of the estate, acquiesced in by mortgagor, allowed. After decree for redemption on payment, on principal, interest, and costs, mortgagee, though overpaid, entitled to costs. Trimleston v. Hamill, 1 Ball & B. 377; 12 R. R. 38.

Creditor going into possession as quasi mortgagee, not entitled to receiver's fees. Id. 384.

8. Rents and Profits.

a. Right of Mortgagee to take.

On Entry or Notice.]—A legal mortgagee is not entitled to the rents of the mortgaged premises until he makes an actual entry, or gives notice to the tenant to pay the rent to him: and the commissioner's order for the sale of the property is not equivalent for this purpose. Living, Ex parte, Tombs, In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 223; 1 Deac. 1.

A. was seised in fee of a house and two acres of land, which he had let to B. A. mortgaged this property to C. in fee, and it was arranged, between A., B. and C., that B. should pay the amount of the interest on the mortgage to C., and the residue of the rent to A. After this, C. gave notice to B. to pay the whole rent to him. B. did so:—Held, that by reason of the arrangement B. was not justified in so doing; but, if there had been no such arrangement, it would have been otherwise. Whitmore v. Walker, 2 Car. & K. 615.

A. was seised in fee of nine acres of land charged with legacies, for which there was a power of distraining. A. let the land to B., and the legatees assigned their legacies to C., who gave notice to B. to pay the rent to him:—Held, that B. was not justified in so doing upon a notice only, although he would have been under a threat of a distress. Ib.

Intention of Parties as to.]—The respondent mortgaged a sheep run to the appellant. The deed fixed no time for the repayment of the money, but only stipulated that, if the mortgagor should make default in payment of the amount on demand, the mortgagee should be at liberty to enter. It appeared from the covenants in the deed that it was the intention of the parties that the mortgagor should remain in possession until default was made; but there was no express stipulation to that effect. During the absence of the respondent the appellant sent an agent to the station with a demand in writing for repayment, which was served on the respondent's wife, and in default of payment the appellant's agent took immediate possession of the run and the sheep on it:—Held, that, as the respondent had no opportunity of inquiring into the truth of the agent's statement, there was no default which justified the appellant in entering into possession and seizing the property, and that the respondent was entitled to substantial damages. Moore v. Shelley, 52 L. J., P. C., 35; 8 App Cas. 285; 48 L. T. 918.

Rents—What are.]—Under a mortgage of wharves and wharehouses occupied by the mortgagors for their business of wharfingers and warehousemen:—Held, that the mortgagees going into possession were not entitled to receive debts due to the mortgagors for warehousing goods, though the charges out of which the debts arose were termed rents, and were by act of parliament recoverable (amongst other charges) by distraint and sale of the goods in respect of which they were incurred. Anderson v. Butler's Wharf Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 824.

Payments agreed to be made by the actual occupier of the soil, under a licence to dig earth and make bricks, are in the nature of rent, and, as such, a mortgagee of the premises is entitled, after notice, to all rent in arrear at the time of such notice, as well as all that may afterwards become due. Hankey, Ex parte, Mont. & M'Ar. 247.

—— Arrears of.]—Semble, a mortgagee going into possession is entitled to receive all unpaid rents properly so called. Anderson v. Butler's Wharf Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 824.

A mortgagee having given notice to the tenants holding the mortgaged premises, under leases granted by the mortgagor after the mortgage, is entitled to receive from those tenants the rents actually due at the time of the notice, as well as those which accrued due afterwards. Pope v. Biggs, 9 B. & C. 245; 4 Man. & Ry. 193; 7 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 246.

—— From what Time.]—In general an equitable mortgagee is not entitled to the rents, &c., prior to the date of the order for sale; but when prior to bankruptcy the mortgagor absconds, and the equitable mortgagee of part of the property takes possession of that part by an agent, and a fiat issues against the mortgagor, and then the solicitor to the commission, on behalf of the creditors, and the equitable mortgagee jointly appoint the same agent to manage the whole property, which agent is subsequently adopted by the assignees:—Held, the mortgagee, though he was also petitioning creditor, was entitled to the rents, &c., from the time of his first taking possession. Bignold, Ex parte, 4 Deac. & C. 259; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 16, 214; 4 L. J., Bk. 58.

—— Authority to take.]—The deposit of title-deeds is a sufficient authority to the mortgagee to receive rents. Garry v. Sharratt, 10 B. & C. 716; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 306.

Mortgagee taking Rent, bound by Mortgagor's Agreement.]—An act of parliament authorised lessees of mines to make a railroad to a canal, through the intervening lands, on making compensation. The lessees entered into an agreement with a mortgagor in possession for making the railroad, and paying an annual rent. The mortgagee afterwards entered into possession, and received the rent for some time:—Held, that the mortgagee and all claiming under him were bound by the agreement. Mold v. Wheatcroft, 27 Beav. 510.

As against Bankrupt Mortgagor's Assignee.]—The rule, that mortgagee of estate of bankrupt suffering the rents of the mortgaged premises to go into the hands of the assignee cannot recall them, such receipts becoming part of the effects distributable amongst creditors, does not apply where the receipt of the rents by the assignee was in pursuance of agreement to pay interest, in which case the mortgagee is entitled to receive back so much of the rent as his interest amounts to, the agreement governing that case, although entered into without consent of creditors. Calwell, Ex parte, 1 Moll. 259.

The mortgagee of property, which has been some time untenanted, consents that the assignee of the bankrupt mortgagor shall let the premises to such person as he may think proper, the mortgagee stipulating that his consent is not to be considered as assuming the possession of the premises as mortgagee. In pursuance of this arrangement, the assignee lets the property, and receives the rents for a period of seven years, when the property is sold, but the proceeds of the sale are not sufficient to pay off the whole of what is due upon the mortgage:—Held, that the assignee, and not the mortgagee, was entitled to these bygone rents. Carr, Ex parte, Wilckens, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 534; 6 Jur. 588.

As between Incumbrancers.]—After second incumbrancer's filing of bill, first incumbrancer in possession cannot pay surplus rents to debtor. Parker v. Calcraft, 6 Madd. 11.

—— Receiver.]—When a receiver appointed on the petition or in the suit of a puisne incumbrancer is afterwards extended to the matter or suit of a prior incumbrancer, the rents received before the extension of the receiver belong to the puisne incumbrancer. Abbott v. Stratten, 3 Jo. & Lat. 603; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 233.

But rents due at the date of the extending order, and not received until afterwards, belong to the prior incumbrancer. Ib.

And rents due at the date of the order appointing a receiver under the judgment acts, but received afterwards, belong to the judgment creditor, and not to the debtor. Ib.

An equitable mortgagee is entitled to priority over a subsequent creditor, by judgment affecting the legal estate, who is in possession by a receiver, though the judgment was obtained without notice of the mortgage. Ib.

A prior mortgagee instituted a foreclosure suit in chancery, and obtained a decree for a sale. A puisne mortgagee instituted a similar suit in the exchequer, in which the prior mortgagee was not a party, and obtained a receiver. The receiver having brought in a sum of money, being bygone rents of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the puisne mortgagee was not entitled to this sum as against the prior mortgagee, who had filed a bill in the exchequer to attach it. Lismore v. Chamley, Hayes, 329.

Receiver.]—A mortgagee of a life estate, over which a receiver had been appointed, having taken no steps to recover his debt and interest during the lifetime of the tenant for life, was held not to be entitled after his decease to a fund in court, which had been paid in by the receiver from time to time, after keeping down the interest on a prior mortgage affecting the fee, but the same was held to form part of the personal estate of the tenant for life, the mortgagor. Flight v. Camac, 25 L. J., Ch. 654; 4 W. R. 664—L. C.

A mortgagee has no title to the rents of the mortgaged premises which have been paid into court by a receiver appointed in a suit for establishing the will of the mortgagor, notwithstanding that after the appointment of a receiver he gave notice to the tenants to pay the rents to him. He ought to have followed up that notice by moving to discharge the receiver. Thomas v. Brigstocke, 4 Russ. 65; 28 R. R. 4.

Account—Right of Mortgagee to.]—A mortgagee of a term, created for raising portions and expired, is not entitled to an account of rents and profits in the hands of a receiver accrued before the expiration of the term. Gresley v. Adderley, 1 Swanst. 573; 18 R. R. 146.

A mortgagee of a term is not entitled to a retrospective account of rents and profits. Ib.

Mortgagee is not entitled to account of past rents from mortgagor. Wilson, Ex parte, 2 V. & B. 252; 1 Rose, 444; 13 R. R. 75.

Mortgagee cannot have a decree for an account of rents for any of the years back during the possession of the mortgagor. Higgins v. York Buildings Co., 2 Atk. 107.

A mortgagor in possession is not liable to account for the rent and profits to the mortgagee, for he ought to take the legal remedy to get into possession. Mead v. Orrery (Lord), 3 Atk. 244.

No account of bygone rents will be directed against a mortgagor in possession, nor against his agent, nor against a person claiming under his voluntary revocable deed. Hele v. Bexley (Lord), 20 Beav. 127.

Mortgagee cannot have an account of rents and profits received by the mortgagor, though the security being upon an estate for lives is become insufficient. Colman v. St. Albans (Duke), 3 Ves. 25.

Under Sequestration.]—Sequestrator took possession of certain mortgaged premises; mortgagees on petition obtained order to have rents and profits of mortgaged premises in hands of sequestrators applied towards payment of mortgage-money, &c., and possession of estates delivered up to them. Walker v. Bell, 2 Madd. 21; 17 R. R. 174.

J. P., in 1846, made an equitable mortgage of lands by deposit of title-deeds. In December, 1849, a sequestration in the suit, to which the mortgagees were not parties, and which did not relate to the mortgaged property, was issued against J. P.'s estate. The equitable mortgagees afterwards became the transferees of a legal mortgage for another debt, executed by J. P. after the filing of the bill, but before the sequestration, but they had never been in possession:—Held, on petition by the mortgagees praying to be let into possession, that the sequestration might be discharged as against them, and that they were entitled to the back rents in the hands of the sequestrator after payment of costs, and that the order as prayed must be made. Tatham v. Parker, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 992 ; 3 W. R. 347.

Apportionment Act—Effect of.]—The Apportionment Act does not disentitle a mortgagee entering into possession to back rents unrecovered. Anderson v. Butler's Wharf Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 824.

Statute of Limitations—Receipt a Payment.]—If an equitable mortgagee enters into the receipt of the rents of the mortgaged estate, such receipt is primâ facie a payment within the meaning of the provision of the statute of limitations. Brocklehurst v. Jessop, 7 Sim. 438.

Attornment.]—In an action for use and occupation by a mortgagee against a tenant, it appeared that, on the 24th of February, 1841, during a subsisting tenancy of the defendant, from year to year, the mortgage deed was executed ; subsequently, by an agreement between the mortgagor and the tenant, improvements were effected on the premises, for which the latter agreed to pay an increased rent. On the 13th of October, 1842, notice of the mortgage was given to the tenant by the mortgagee, with a demand of payment of all arrears and of all future rent ; in the action, both arrears and subsequently-accrued rents were sought to be recovered :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover such arrears, as well as subsequent rent, and also the amount of the improved rent ; for that the mortgage, and the subsequent notice of its execution, operated as an attornment within 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 9 ; and that the case was not affected by the circumstance of the defendant being a mere tenant from year to year, and not holding under a lease ; and that the relative position of the defendant and the mortgagee was not altered by the new agreement between the former and the mortgagor. Burrows v. Gradin, 1 D. & L. 213 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 333 ; 7 Jur. 942.

—— Avowry — Evidence.] — A mortgagee avowed for rent due to him from the plaintiff, by virtue of a demise to him for two years, ending on the 29th of September, 1842. The plaintiff was tenant of the mortgagor, and he, with other tenants subsequently to the mortgage, on the 14th of October, 1842, attorned to the mortgagee. Opposite the plaintiff's name in the instrument of attornment was entered, "Rent 55*l.* from Michaelmas, 1840":—Held, that the avowry was well supported. Gladman v. Plumer, 10 Q. B. 473 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 79 ; 10 Jur. 109.

Rents, how to be Applied.]—In 1812 a mortgage was executed by A. and B. to C.; in 1813 two judgments, and in 1815 a third judgment, were obtained by C. against A. C. entered into possession of the mortgaged lands in 1812, and continued in possession until 1855. In a redemption suit it was held that the judgments were not, so far as related to the question in this case, to be considered as incorporated in the mortgage so as to form one security, and therefore that the rents received or which might have been received by C., were to be applied, first, in payment of the interest and principal due on the mortgage ; secondly, in payment of the interest and principal due on the two judgments of 1813 ; thirdly, in payment of the interest and principal due on the judgment of 1815. Montgomery v. Donohoe, 5 Ir. Ch. R. 495.

Practice.]—Where the lessor of premises, at a rent payable quarterly, had given a written authority to a mortgagee to receive rent from the lessee, and the mortgagee had given notice to the lessee to pay such rent to no one but him, and the lessee had paid the mortgagee such rent from time to time, and there was still an arrear of interest due from the lessor on the mortgage :—Held, that these facts furnished no defence, under non tenuit and riens in arrear pleaded by the lessee, to an avowry of the lessor in respect of a quarter's rent, which the lessee had not paid to any one. Wheeler v. Branscombe, Dav. & M. 406 ; 5 Q. B. 373 ; 13 L. J., Q. B. 83.

Where a mortgage had been effected, and then a lease granted by the mortgagor in possession, upon which rent had become due, but before payment the mortgagee had given notice of the mortgage to the tenant in possession, and claimed the rent in arrear :—Held, in an action for use and occupation brought for such rent in arrear by the mortgagor against the tenant in possession, that an averment of such notice and claim by the mortgagee, without an accompanying averment of a consequent payment by the tenant, was no sufficient bar to the mortgagor's right of action. Wilton v. Dunn, 17 Q. B. 294 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 60 ; 15 Jur. 1104.

b. Account against Mortgagee for.

Liability—On giving Notice.]—Liability of a mortgagee who gives notice to the tenants to pay him their rents, but does not take possession, whereby a loss is occasioned. Heales v. M'Murray, 23 Beav. 401.

—— Entry but not as Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee who takes possession of the mortgaged estate is, on a bill for redemption, bound to render an account of rents and profits received, and is also liable for all which he might have received but for his wilful default ; but where persons, who though in fact mortgagees, enter into possession of the rents and profits in another character, they cannot be subjected to that special liability. Their receipt of the rents and profits in the particular character of mortgagees in possession must be distinctly established. Parkinson v. Hanbury, 36 L. J., Ch. 292 ; L. R. 2 H. L. 1 ; 16 L. T. 243 ; 15 W. R. 642.

—— For Default in, in not Letting.]—Where a mortgagee in possession of leaseholds, being resident at a distance, employed an agent, and the property was advertised and let at intervals, but vacant for a long period, the mortgagee acting on the agent's advice in not letting, such mortgagee is not chargeable under a decree for wilful default in non-receipt of rent. But where a tenant is suffered to remain for several years in possession, paying no rent, and none being demanded by the mortgagee, he is liable for wilful default as to such rent. Brandon v. Brandon, 10 W. R. 287.

—— Onus of Proof.]—The onus lies, primâ facie, on the party charging wilful default in not letting, to prove it ; but if he shows that the property can be let, or has been let, the onus is transferred to the other party to show that he has not been guilty of wilful default, but has been vigilant. Ib.

—— On Sale by Mortgagor and Mortgagee.]—A. mortgaged leaseholds to B., who entered into possession, received the rents, and sold a part under a power. A. afterwards mortgaged the equity of redemption to C., and A. and B. then assigned the premises and mortgage debt to D. In a foreclosure suit by C.:—Held, that B. might be called upon to account for the rents and purchase-moneys received by him. Hinde v. Blake, 11 L. J., Ch. 26.

—— On Transferring Security.]—Although a mortgagee in possession who voluntarily transfers his security is liable to account for the subsequent rents, he is subject to no such continuing liability when he transfers by the direction of the court in a redemption suit. Hall v. Heward, 55 L. J., Ch. 604; 32 Ch. D. 430; 54 L. T. 810; 34 W. R. 571—C. A.

—— Receipts by Agent—Liberty to Surcharge.]—The defendants had by the judgment in an action been held to be mortgagees in possession of certain mortgaged estates, and the usual accounts and inquiries as against mortgagees in possession were directed. The defendants brought in an account purporting to show their receipts in respect of the rents and profits of the mortgaged estates, but which in fact only showed certain lump sums received by them from one J. H. Blood, then deceased, their agent. On motion by the plaintiff for a further and better account:—Held, that the defendants were bound to render the further account, for that the receipts of Blood were as between the plaintiff and the defendants the receipts of the defendants; the defendants were bound to deliver an account showing not only what they had received from Blood, but what he had received from the tenants, and that it was a question not of technicality but of substance, for without the knowledge derived from such an account the plaintiff would be unable to proceed on the inquiry as to wilful default, which was a matter of surcharge, and that the death of the defendant's agent could not excuse the defendants from this liability. Noyes v. Pollock, 55 L. J., Ch. 54; 30 Ch. D. 336; 53 L. T. 430; 33 W. R. 787—C. A.

Possession—Under Arrangement with Mortgagor.]—Where mortgage is made in trust that mortgagee should continue in possession, till by perception of the rents and profits he should be satisfied the principal and interest; mortgagor may come into court of equity for an account of the profits received, as in an elegit the conusor has a right to see if the conusee on the extended value has received a satisfaction for his whole debt, and to have surplus paid to him. Yates v. Hambly, 2 Atk. 362.

—— Under Purchase.]—Mortgagee, having permitted the tenant for life to run in arrear for the interest, purchases the estate for life, and takes possession under that purchase; he is bound to apply the surplus rents and profits beyond the current interest in discharge of the arrear, and in the account under a bill of foreclosure was charged accordingly. Penrhyn (Lord) v. Hughes, 5 Ves. 99.

—— Under Conditional Agreement.]—A. conveys lands to B., who is put into possession, but under an agreement that, if A. pays the money in ten years, B. shall reconvey. The profits appearing to be much more than the interest, upon a bill by the heir to redeem, B. ordered to account for the profits, and not permitted to set the profits against the interest. Fulthorpe v. Foster, 1 Vern. 476.

—— Under Assignment of Lease.]—If a lease, household and shop-goods are assigned over to another, and he comes into possession, and carries on the trade, from that time they are to be considered as money received, and an account thereof taken accordingly. Clayton v. Luckin, Moseley, 252.

—— With Notice of Settlement.]—R. G., on the marriage of his daughter with R. T., by a settlement of 1815, conveyed certain premises held under a lease for three lives or forty-one years, upon trusts to raise 500*l.*, and to pay the interest thereof to R. T., during the joint lives of R. T. and wife, and after his decease to his wife as jointure, and after her decease to pay the principal to the issue of the marriage; and it was agreed that said sum of 500*l.* should remain a charge on said lands for six years, and then be raised out of the rents at the rate of 50*l.* per annum, with interest. R. G., having become indebted to O. K., on the 23rd of January, 1822, with the concurrence of R. T. and wife, granted to him a rent-charge of 50*l.* a year out of a part of the said premises until the debt should be paid off; and also, on the same day, with the like concurrence of R. T. and wife, demised to him the remainder of the said premises at a rent of 50*l.* a year, to be retained until he should be paid off; and, in 1823, in consideration of a further sum, mortgaged to O. K. the said last-mentioned premises:—Held, that the settlement of 1815 could not be viewed as a mortgage, and that O. K., having dealt with the estate with notice of that settlement, was accountable for the bygone rents from the period at which he entered into the possession. Turkington v. Kearnan, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 35.

Allowances.]—Where a mortgagee in possession pays rent to the ground landlord, he is to be allowed such rent in account, but not after he has purchased the reversion; but he will be allowed payments to a person for taking charge of the premises to save them from deterioration. Brandon v. Brandon, 10 W. R. 287.

—— For Speculating.]—Mortgagee in possession, though answerable beyond fraud for wilful default, is to take the fair rents and profits; not bound to engage in, and will not be allowed for, speculation and adventure. Hughes v. Williams, 12 Ves. 493; 8 R. R. 364.

Taking Rents after Account taken.]—When a mortgagee receives rents after the account has been taken, he must account on affidavit for the amount. Oxenham v. Ellis, 18 Beav. 593.

Opening, by Receipt between Certificate and Day of Payment.]—A mortgagee in possession who receives a sum by way of rent from the mortgaged property in the interval between the filing of the chief clerk's certificate and the day fixed for payment thereby opens the account and cannot get a final order without getting another certificate fixing another day for redemption. Allen v. Edwards, 42 L. J., Ch. 455; 21 W. R. 471.

Practice—Account after Settlement.]—Mortgagor and mortgagee settle an account before a master, and now a subsequent mortgagee sues for a new account without insisting upon particulars, but only alleging the former to be false, and made by consent:—Decreed, the second mortgagee should be bound if the collusion be answered. Needler v. Deeble, 1 Ch. Ca. 299. See Gould v. Tancred, 2 Atk. 533.

—— Surcharge.]—A mortgagee having notice of a judgment before his foreclosure and purchase of the equity of redemption, the judgment creditor may go before the master, and surcharge and falsify the mortgagee's account; but the mortgagee is not to account for the profits since the decree of foreclosure. Bird v. Gandy, 7 Vin. Abr. 45 pl. 20.

c. Occupation Rent.

Where Rent Unobtainable.]—A mortgagee of a house, having taken possession of it, will not be charged with an occupation rent for it during a time when it was in so ruinous a state that rent could not have been obtained for it. Marshall v. Cave, 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 57.

Where no actual Occupation.]—In a suit to redeem against a mortgagee in possession, the court will not direct the master to fix and charge the defendant with an occupation rent, unless the plaintiff alleges and shows not only that the defendant has been in possession of the mortgaged estate and in receipt of the rents and profits of it, but also that he has been in the actual occupation of it or of part of it, semble. Trulock v. Robey, 15 Sim. 265; 15 L. J., Ch. 343.

Where Value enhanced by Improvements.]—Where a first mortgagee in possession, after decree for redemption, has expended money on permament improvements on the mortgaged property, he is not to be charged with an increased occupation rent by reason of the value of the property having been increased by the improvements he has effected, unless the expenditure in improvements is allowed to him. Bright v. Campbell, 54 L. J., Ch. 1077; 53 L. T. 428—C. A.

Occupation before Sale by Arrangement.]—A mortgagee in possession sold the property under his power of sale, a day being fixed for the completion of the sale, and for letting the purchaser into possession. At the request of the purchaser the mortgagee let him into possession four months before the appointed day, but did not require him to pay any rent:—Held, in an action by the mortgagor for ascertaining the amount of the balance due to him, that the mortgagee could not be charged with an occupation rent for the interval during which the purchaser had been in possession before the appointed day. Shepard v. Jones, 21 Ch. D. 469; 47 L. T. 604; 31 W. R. 308.—C. A.

From what Date Payable.]—In a foreclosure action against a mortgagor in possession, an order having been made for the appointment of a receiver and for the tenants to attorn and pay their rents in arrear and growing rents to such receiver:—Held, that, the possession of the mortgagor being rightful, he was liable to pay an occupation rent from the date of demand by the receiver only, and not from the date of the order appointing the receiver. Yorkshire Banking Co. v. Mullan, 56 L. J., Ch. 562; 35 Ch. D. 125; 56 L. T. 399; 35 W. R. 593.

Giving up Possession.]—In a redemption suit by a puisne mortgagee, a prior mortgagee in possession of part of the mortgaged lands, and who had been charged under a decree to account with a high occupation rent, was permitted to give up the lands to the receiver in the cause, upon the expiration of the current year, commencing with the day upon which he first went into possession. Gregg v. Arrett, Sau. & Sc. 674.

9. Timber and Waste.

a. Rights of Mortgagee.

Timber.]—A mortgagee in fee may cut timber, &c., at law, but not in equity, unless his mortgage is defective. Withrington v. Cotesworth, Sel. Ch. Ca. 31.

If a mortgagee uses timber on the mortgaged premises, which has been furnished to the mortgagor, but not paid for, he will be liable, though he is afterwards evicted. Williams v. Shaw, 1 Esp. 93.

Waste.]—An injunction against committing waste will not be granted against a mortgagee, even though he make no affidavit denying the waste, if it appear by the affidavit of the actual occupier of the land that the alleged waste is not committed by the mortgagee, or by his authority. Anon., 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 119.

b. Rights of Mortgagor.

Timber.]—Mortgagor restrained from cutting down timber on mortgaged premises. Usborne v. Usborne, Dick. 75.

Injunction to restrain mortgagor from cutting timber not granted unless security without timber be insufficient or scanty. Hippesley v. Spencer, 5 Madd. 422. S. P., King v. Smith, 2 Hare, 239; 7 Jur. 694.

Quære, what proportion the value of the mortgaged property should bear to the mortgage debt, in order to be deemed a sufficient security within the rule under which the court acts in restraining waste by the mortgagor. Ib.

A mortgagee is entitled to an injunction to restrain a mortgagor in possession from cutting down timber, if the land without it is a scanty security. It may be extended to cutting down underwood contrary to the usual course of husbandry, but not to underwood generally, although the mortgagor is insolvent. Humphreys v. Harrison, 1 J. & W. 581; 21 R. R. 238.

On a motion by a mortgagee for an injunction to restrain the mortgagor from cutting timber standing upon the mortgaged land, it was admitted that the security was insufficient in its present state. The plaintiffs produced evidence that the land might at some time be used as building land, and for that purpose the timber would increase its value. On the other hand the mortgagor produced evidence that the chance of the land becoming building land was very remote, that the trees were ready to cut, and that if they were cut down the land could be let in allotments at a higher rent. He offered to pay the money received by the sale in reduction of the mortgage debt:—Held, that the mortgagee had a right to have the timber left standing on the land, and the injunction must be granted. Harper v. Aplin, 54 L. T. 383.

Waste.]—Mortgage of wood and underwood; it is not waste by the mortgagor in possession to cut underwood at seasonable time, and of proper growth; but, being a bankrupt, an injunction was granted on the right of the mortgagee to have the estate sold in the plight in which it was at the bankruptcy, and to prove the rest of his debt. Hampton v. Hodges, 8 Ves. 105.

—— Working open Quarries.]—The opening of a quarry by a mortgagor in possession enures to the benefit of the mortgagee of a term, so as to render him dispunishable for waste if he work the quarry during the term. Elias v. Snowdon Slate Quarries Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 811; 4 App. Cas. 454; 41 L. T. 289; 28 W. R. 54—H. L. (E.)

—— Injunction by Mortgagor in Possession.]—A mortgagor in receipt of the rents and profits has a sufficient interest to enable him to maintain an action for an injunction to restrain an injury done to the mortgaged property without joining the mortgagee. Fairclough v. Marshall, 48 L. J., Ex. 146; 4 Ex. D. 37; 39 L. T. 389; 27 W. R. 145—C. A.

—— Practice.]—After decree in a foreclosure suit, a mortgagor in possession began to commit waste. He was restrained by injunction, though no injunction was prayed by the bill. Goodman v. Kine, 8 Beav. 379.

1. Of Mortgagee in General.

a. To Prior Estates.

Under Mortgage in Fee by Tenant for Life.]—Bill by tenant in tail in possession under marriage settlement, for discovery and delivery of title deeds. Plea, mortgage by tenant for life allowing himself to be seised in fee, and in possession of premises and deeds as apparent owner, allowed, upon rule that equity gives no assistance against purchaser for valuable consideration without notice. Wallwyn v. Lee, 9 Ves. 24; 7. R. R. 142.

Averments necessary to plea of purchase for valuable consideration without notice, that vendor or mortgagor was owner or pretended owner, and that he was in possession, not that purchaser was. Id. 32.

Tenant for life makes mortgage in fee, pretending to be seised in fee; the mortgagee not having notice of the settlement is not bound. Putland v. Burrows, 5 Bro. P. C. 236.

Tenant for life, remainder over, mortgages and levies a fine, whereby estate is forfeited, and remainderman recovers in ejectment; yet mortgagee, having no notice of his being tenant for life only, and mortgagor having made affidavit that he was entitled absolutely as heir-at-law, and that there was no will:—Held, entitled for life of mortgagor. Willis v. Fineux, Pre. Ch. 108.

—— Forfeiture.]—The estate of a tenant for life was liable to forfeiture on his mortgaging it. He mortgaged it to A., unknown to the parties taking under the forfeiture:—Held, that A. was liable to account to them for the rents, at all events from the filing of the bill, and, beyond that, from the time he had notice of the trusts creating the forfeiture. Hennessey v. Bray, 33 Beav. 96.

By Purchase of Annuity having Priority over Claimants.]—In 1829 A. secured an annuity on trust funds, and in 1841 he, for valuable consideration, assigned his interest in the same funds, in trust to raise 1,100*l.* and redeem the annuity, and hold the residue on trusts for his family. The trustees accordingly raised the 1,100*l.* by mortgage and redeemed the annuity, and the trust funds were assigned to the mortgagees, but no transfer was made of the annuity. The mortgage deed stated the consideration to have been for the repurchase and extinction of the annuity. The annuity had originally priority over certain claimants, but the deed of 1841 had not:—Held, that, to the extent of the moneys paid for the repurchase of the annuity, the mortgagees had priority over these claimants. Irby v. Irby, 25 Beav. 632.

To Prior Equitable Right Undisclosed.]—Upon the treaty for a mortgage of an estate, a person who was entitled to be recouped out of the estate, in case a certain incumbrance was levied out of his own estate, was in communication with the mortgagee upon the subject of the mortgage, but did not inform him of his equitable claim:—Held, that he could not afterwards set up his claim against the mortgagee. Boyd v. Belton, 1 Jo. & Lat. 730.

Of Puisne Incumbrancers—Sale of Equity of Redemption—Bankruptcy of Mortgagor—Acquisition by Mortgagor of First Mortgage.]—A mortgagor of lands who had sold his equity of redemption therein, and has also been discharged by process of bankruptcy from all personal liability under the mortgages affecting the lands, if he purchase a first mortgage on the lands, will be regarded as a stranger to the estate, and the equities in favour of puisne incumbrancers which might otherwise have existed against him as such mortgagor will not be revived by a subsequent repurchase of the lands. Howard's Estate, In re, 29 L. R., Ir. 266—C. A.

Negligence—Money left in Hands of Solicitor for Investment—Representation that Money advanced on Mortgage.]—A client left moneys for investment in the hands of his solicitors. The solicitors represented that the sum of 11,000*l.*, part of these moneys, was invested on mortgage of freehold property at A., belonging to a firm, and the client made no further inquiry.

The solicitors were in fact the holders of a mortgage for 55,000*l.* upon property X. at A., belonging to the firm, and they repaid themselves 11,000*l.* of the 55,000*l.* with the client's money. The firm afterwards bought property Y. at A., and mortgaged it in fee to a bank. The solicitors released the firm from the mortgage debt of 55,000*l.* on property X., and took from them a mortgage for 50,000*l.* on properties X. and Y., subsequently, by arrangement with the firm, purchasing the equity of redemption in both properties, and selling them for shares to a limited company into which the firm was, through their instrumentality, converted. These transactions all took place without the knowledge of the client :—Held, first, that the solicitors must be treated as having become trustees for the client of 11,000*l.* out of the 55,000*l.* secured by mortgage on property X. ; and, having improperly, as against the client, given up that mortgage in exchange, the client had a right under the circumstances to claim a charge for 11,000*l.* and interest upon property Y. (in which the legal estate was outstanding) as well as upon property X. :—Held, secondly, that there had been under the circumstances no such negligence or want of prudence on the part of the client as to postpone him, and that he was entitled in priority to the limited company to a charge on property Y. in which the legal estate was outstanding. Waldron v. Sloper (1 Drew. 193) distinguished. Vernon, Ewens & Co., In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 12 ; 33 Ch. D. 402 ; 55 L. T. 416 ; 35 W. R. 225—C. A.

Mortgagee paying off Prior Incumbrances—Mesne Incumbrancers.]—In 1854 lands were conveyed to trustees, to raise 75,000*l.* for the discharge of incumbrances. The money was not raised, but in 1857 T. and S., having paid off and taken transfers of the incumbrances, took from the trustees of the deed of 1854, and the mortgagor, an assignment of the 75,000*l.*, and a mortgage of the property comprised in the trust deed for securing the 75,000*l.* and interest. In the meantime other incumbrances had been created : —Held, that T. and S. could only claim priority over the intervening incumbrances to the extent of the principal and interest secured by the transferred incumbrances ; but that, as against all incumbrances subsequent to their assignment and mortgage, they were entitled to priority in respect of the whole 75,000*l.* and interest. Thompson v. Hudson, 36 L. J., Ch. 388 ; L. R. 2 Ch. 255 ; 15 W. R. 697.

To Trusts of Will.]—T. being under a will trustee of 800*l.* for two persons, in moieties, leaves that sum outstanding on the promissory note of J. The note is payable to T. only, and not to T., or order. In 1839 T. becoming embarrassed, indorses the note to his banker M. (who is also the banker of J.), as a security for advances, M. having no notice of the trust ; in 1840 T. becomes beneficially entitled to one moiety of the 800*l.* ; in 1841 J. becomes a creditor of T. for goods sold and claims set off against the note. On the 7th April, 1842, J. has notice through his agent of the indorsement of the note of M. In July, 1842, T. becomes bankrupt :—Held, that, as to the moiety of the 800*l.* which is held by T. in trust, the trust must prevail against the banker's security ; secondly, that, as to the other moiety, the set-off of J. must prevail against the banker's security up to the 7th April, 1842. Moore v. Jervis, 2 Coll. C. C. 60.

To Trusts of Settlement.]—A settlement was made on the marriage of F. with his wife, then an infant. This deed contained a covenant by F. with the trustees that if the wife attained twenty-one he would then join and concur with her, if she would consent, and also would use his utmost endeavours to induce her to join and concur with him, in conveying certain real estate of the wife to the trustees, for the benefit of the husband and wife and the issue of the marriage. The wife attained twenty-one, and, no conveyance having been made to the trustees, she joined with her husband in mortgaging the property to S. to secure 200*l.* At the time when he advanced his money S. had no actual notice of the settlement. F. and his wife had been advised that, notwithstanding the settlement, they had power to deal with the property, and they informed C., who acted as the solicitor of S. in the transaction, of the settlement and of the advice which they had received as to its effect. C., however, told them that he should not inform S. of the settlement, as it might make him nervous about his security. The mortgage was executed in 1862, and duly acknowledged by the wife. By an accident the certificate of the acknowledgment was never filed with the officer of the Court of Common Pleas, and this omission was not supplied until 1867, when a new acknowledgment was made by the wife, and the certificate thereof filed. Meanwhile, in 1865, S. discovered the existence of the settlement, and, in 1866, filed a bill, praying for a declaration that he was entitled in respect of his mortgage to priority over the settlement :—Held, that S. was entitled to priority. Sharpe v. Foy, L. R. 4 Ch. 35 ; 17 W. R. 65.

R. on the marriage of his daughter with T., by a settlement of 1815 conveyed certain premises held under a lease for three lives or forty-one years, upon trust to raise 500*l.* and to pay the interest thereof to T. during the joint lives of T. and wife, and after his decease to his wife as jointure, and after her decease to pay the principal to the issue of the marriage ; and it was agreed that said sum of 500*l.* should remain a charge on said lands for six years, and then be raised out of the rents at the rate of 50*l.* per annum with interest. R. having become indebted to O. on the 23rd January, 1822, with the concurrence of T. and wife, granted to him a rent-charge of 50*l.* a year out of a part of the said premises until the debt should be paid off ; and also, on the same day, with the like concurrence of T. and wife, demised to him the remainder of the said premises at a rent of 50*l.* a year, to be retained until he should be paid off ; and in 1823, in consideration of a further sum, mortgaged to O. the said last-mentioned premises :—Held, that the settlement of 1815 could not be viewed as a mortgage, and that O., having dealt with the estate with notice of that settlement, was accountable for the bygone rents from the period at which he entered into the possession : —Held, also, that as the interest in the premises depended on one old life, there should be a decree for immediate payment. Turkington v. Kearnan, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 35.

A trust fund was settled upon S. for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder to their children. The trustees had power to invest the fund upon leaseholds for an unexpired term of 100 years. S. being possessed of a plot of ground, held for 500 years under a lease which contained a covenant to expend 2,000*l.* in building on the lands, the trustees applied the trust funds in erecting houses thereon, without obtaining an assignment of the lease or possession of the title deeds. One of the trustees, afterwards being advised that a breach of trust had been committed, commenced an action against his co-trustee and S., and obtained a judgment declaring that the trust fund was a lien upon the premises. Prior to this action S. had deposited the lease of the premises with a bank to secure his then present and future indebtedness. The court being of opinion, on the evidence, that the bank had no notice of the breach of trust, and that the trustees, though guilty of laches, were not parties to the fraudulent conduct of S.:—Held, that the bank, notwithstanding that they had not called for a legal mortgage, were entitled to priority over the claims of S.'s wife and children to the extent of advance made to S. on the foot of the equitable mortgage before service of the conditional order for a sale of the premises. Sloane's Estate, In re, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 146.

A trustee (a solicitor) used trust funds in purchasing an estate which was conveyed to his brother, and afterwards acted as solicitor for his brother, the mortgagor, in raising money on the estate by legal and afterwards by equitable mortgages:—Held, that the legal mortgagee had priority over the cestuis que trustent, for that the fraud of the solicitor ran through the whole transaction, and prevented the imputation of notice. Cave v. Cave, or Chaplin v. Cave, 49 L. J., Ch. 505; 15 Ch. D. 639; 42 L. T. 730; 28 W. R. 793.

Held, also, that the claim of the cestuis que trustent was an equitable estate of the same quality as the estates of the equitable mortgagees, and had priority over them as being prior in time. Ib.

The trustees of a settlement advanced the trust-money on the security of real property, which was conveyed to them by the mortgagor, the mortgage deed noticing the trust. The surviving trustee of the settlement afterwards reconveyed part of the property to the mortgagor on payment of part of the mortgage-money which he appropriated. The mortgagor then conveyed that part of the property to new mortgagees, concealing, with the connivance of the trustee, both the prior mortgage and the reconveyance. When the fraud was discovered, the cestuis que trustent under the settlement filed a bill against the new mortgagees claiming priority:—Held, that the court would not interfere to take away the legal estate which passed to the new mortgagees under the reconveyance. Pilcher v. Rawlins, 41 L. J., Ch. 485; L. R. 7 Ch. 259; 25 L. T. 921; 20 W. R. 281.

The trustees of a settlement advanced the trust-money on the security of real property which was conveyed to them by the mortgagor, the mortgage deed noticing the trust. The surviving trustee afterwards induced the mortgagor to execute a deed by which the mortgaged property purported to be conveyed to the trustee as on a purchase by him, though no money in fact passed. The trustee then, concealing the prior mortgage, and shewing title under the pretended purchase deed, conveyed the property to a mortgagee without notice:—Held, that the court would not interfere to take away the legal estate from the mortgagee. Ib.

Under a marriage settlement containing the usual powers of sale and exchange, with power to the trustees (of whom one was a minor), with the consent in writing of the wife, to lend the whole or part of the proceeds to the husband on his bond, the trustees, in order to make the loan, inconsiderately sold the estate under the power to the family solicitor, who, as owner thereof, raised a sum of money by way of mortgage, of which part was paid to the husband. The solicitor afterwards resold the estate, no money being paid, to the husband, who, for valuable consideration, mortgaged it to other persons, and soon after became insolvent. On a bill filed by the infants interested under the settlement, impeaching the sale:—Held, they were entitled to have the inheritance reconveyed, free from incumbrance, to the uses of the settlement. Robinson v. Briggs, 1 Sm. & G. 188; 1 W. R. 223.

The solicitor having funds in his hands, the property of another client, applied them in discharging the prior mortgage for raising the money lent to the husband, and, as owner of the estate, executed a mortgage to his client for the amount advanced:—Held, there being an infirmity in his own title, he could convey no valid equitable interest to his mortgagee. Ib.

Practice — Notice.]—The husband, as purchaser from the solicitor, being in treaty for a loan on mortgage of the estate, abstracts were delivered, which disclosed the marriage settlement, the conveyance to the solicitor as purchaser under the power, the covenant to repurchase by the husband, and the deed of confirmation by the infant trustee; the mortgage being completed:—Held, that the abstract disclosed what ought to have put the mortgagees on inquiry; and that they were affected with notice. Ib.

A defendant claiming as a mortgagee, and by his answer denying notice of the plaintiff's title, which was neither alleged by the bill, nor proved: an inquiry, for the purpose of affecting him with notice, was refused, first, upon a petition to vary the minutes; and again, upon a rehearing. An inquiry as to what sums he had advanced upon the security of the mortgage, and at what times respectively, was granted. Hardy v. Reeves, 5 Ves. 426.

b. To Debts and Charges.

Of Equitable Charge—To Garnishee Order.]—An equitable charge given before a garnishee order is obtained takes priority of the order, even in the absence of notice of the charge. Badeley v. Consolidated Bank, 57 L. J., Ch. 468; 38 Ch. D. 238; 59 L. T. 419; 36 W. R. 745—C. A.

—— To Judgment Creditor in Possession by Elegit.]—An equitable mortgagee of lands is entitled in equity to enforce his charge in priority to a creditor of the mortgagor, who, without notice of the equitable mortgage, has, subsequently thereto, recovered judgment against the mortgagor, and obtained actual possession of the lands by an elegit and an attornment of the tenants. Whitworth v. Gaugain, 1 Ph. 728; 15 L. J., Ch. 433; 10 Jur. 531.

Charging Order—Fund in Court.]—A judgment creditor cannot by obtaining a charging order upon money in court belonging to his debtor, obtain priority over a previous mortgagee. Bell, In re, Carter v. Stadden, 54 L. T. 370 ; 34 W. R. 363.

Registration of Lis Pendens.]—Registration of a petition for sale by the second mortgagee as a lis pendens has not the effect of notice to the first mortgagee, so as to affect the priority of further advances made by him in ignorance of such petition and registration. O'Byrne's Estate, In re, 15 L. R., Ir. 373—C. A.

Of Agreement for Mortgage, over Creditors.]—Agreement for a mortgage, specific lien against creditors. Burn v. Burn, 3 Ves. 582.

Of Mortgagee, over Bankrupt's Assignees.]—By a marriage settlement, a term of 500 years was vested in trustees, by demise, sale or mortgage, to raise a sum of money as portions for younger children. One of the children assigned his share in the sum, by way of mortgage, but no notice of the incumbrance was given to the trustees of the term. The mortgagor afterwards became bankrupt :—Held, that the mortgagee had not an interest in land, and that he was, therefore, not entitled to priority as against the assignees in bankruptcy. Hughes, In re, 33 L. J., Ch. 725 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 900 ; 12 W. R. 1025.

Pledge of a lease carried into effect against assignees of a bankrupt. Russel v. Russel, 1 Bro. C. C. 269.

—— Though Conveyance Defective.]—Mortgagee or purchaser, precedent, though by defective conveyance, shall be preferred before assignees of bankrupt. Taylor v. Wheeler, 2 Salk. 449.

To Bankrupt's Creditors.]—Mortgagee who has paid arrears of rent on bankrupt's estate, unless he has an order to stand in landlord's place, shall not be preferred to the creditors under the commission. Anon., 1 Atk. 103.

Purchase, by Mortgagor's Trustee in Bankruptcy, of First Mortgage.]—A trustee in bankruptcy does not by purchasing from the first mortgagee of the bankrupt extinguish the first mortgage and make the second mortgagee the first incumbrancer on the estate. Bell v. Sunderland Building Society, 53 L. J., Ch. 509 ; 24 Ch. D. 618 ; 49 L. T. 555.

Act of Bankruptcy.]—An equitable mortgage, with agreement for legal mortgage. Then an act of bankruptcy ; then a legal mortgage :—Held, legal mortgage invalid, but that equitable mortgage was not merged, but revived. Harvey, Ex parte, Emery, In re, Mont. & C. 261 ; 3 Deac. 547 ; 4 Deac. 52.

Of Mortgagee of Policy, over Purchaser from Trustee for Creditors.]—In 1850 C. and D. effected a policy for 2,000*l.* with a guarantee company, and mortgaged the same to H. & Co. The company disputing their liability upon the policy, H. & Co. commenced an action against them in the name of C. and D. The company then obtained the common injunction to stay proceedings in the action. The answer of C. and D. having, after some delay, been put in, the injunction was dissolved ; and in January, 1854, a verdict was obtained for the plaintiffs in an action for 2,250*l.* Prior to the action, H. & Co. had charged their interest in the policy in favour of the Royal Bank of Liverpool ; and, pending the proceedings in the action, application was made to the bank, by the attorneys conducting the legal proceedings, to make them some advances for carrying on the action. The bank neglecting to make such advances, H. & Co. in November, 1852, assigned their property, including their interest in the policy, to trustees for their creditors, and the trustees sold the policy to B., who made advances for costs of the litigation exceeding the costs recovered against the company in the action :—Held, that the omission of the bank to furnish funds to carry on the legal proceedings was not a ground for postponing their interest in the policy to that of B. ; but held by both judges, that the bank were bound to pay B. his advances for the purposes of the litigation, with interest. Myers v. United Guarantee and Life Assurance Co., 7 De G. M. & G. 112 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 833 ; 3 Eq. R. 579 ; 3 W. R. 440.

Of Debenture Stockholders, over Elegit Creditors.]—A scheme made under the Railway Companies Act, 1867, and confirmed by the Court of Chancery, provided that unpaid vendors of land and other mortgagees of a railway company should take debenture stock in satisfaction of their claims. Before the scheme was made a judgment creditor of the company, over whom the unpaid vendors and mortgagees had priority, had sued out a writ of elegit, and the sheriff had made a return that the company was possessed of the lands used for the purposes of the railway. The lands were in the possession of another company, by whom the railway was worked under an agreement :—Held, that the scheme did not operate, upon the principle of Mocatta v. Murgatroyd (1 P. Wms. 393), to give the elegit creditor priority over the holders of debenture stock who had taken such stock under the scheme in satisfaction of their mortgages, and that the elegit creditor, not being bound by the scheme, was entitled to no other rights than those which he had before the scheme was made. Stevens v. Mid-Hants Ry., 29 L. T. 318.

To Charge from which Estate Exonerated.]—An estate subject, in conjunction with another estate, to a charge of 10,000*l.*, is afterwards mortgaged, and is then devised to the party entitled to the first charge. By agreement made with the owner of the other estate, a certain portion of the 10,000*l.* was thrown upon that estate, and it was agreed that "the remainder of the estate subject to the charge should be exonerated from the residue of the sum" :—Held, that this charge could not be set up as to such residue against the mortgagee. Farrow v. Rees, 4 Beav. 18 ; 4 Jur. 1028.

To Lien of Company for Debts incurred by Shareholder subsequently to Mortgage of Shares.]—A member, who was also a customer, of a trading company formed under the Companies Act, 1862, deposited the certificates of his shares with the bank to secure an advance, and notice of the deposit was given to the company. One of the articles of association provided that the company should have "a first and permanent lien and charge" on every share for all debts due to them from the holder :—Held, first, that the notice was not rendered nugatory by s. 30 of the Companies Act, 1862, but affected the company in its trading capacity with knowledge of the appellants' interest ; secondly, that the article did not exclude the application of Hopkinson v. Rolt (9 H. L. Cas. 514), and that the company's lien for debts incurred to them by the member after the notice must be postponed to the bank's charge. Bradford Banking Co. v. Briggs, 56 L. J., Ch. 364; 12 App. Cas. 29; 56 L. T. 62; 35 W. R. 521—H. L. (E.)

To Costs of Suit.]—A. took a mortgage of part of the property devised by B. L.'s will. A suit was afterwards instituted by a party claiming under the will for administration of the testator's estate, to which A. was made a party for the sake of impeaching his security. A receiver was appointed, and A., who had not given the notice requisite to enable him to take possession, did not oppose. Before decree the parties entitled to the equity of redemption of the mortgaged property brought an action, with the sanction of the court, against parties asserting adverse rights, and in November, 1849, the action was, with the sanction of the court, compromised. A. was served with notice of the applications relating to these proceedings, but did not in any manner interfere. During these proceedings a decree for accounts and inquiries was made, and in November, 1849, A. was found to be first incumbrancer. In 1853 a decree on further directions was made, directing a sale, and obliging A. to concur. A. did not oppose, but shortly afterwards, having discovered that a sale would be prejudicial to him, he presented a petition for the discharge of the receiver, and to be let into possession. This was refused by the vice-chancellor, on the ground that A. was not entitled to take possession till the costs relating to the action and compromise had been paid:—Held, on appeal, that the mortgage had priority over the costs incurred in relation to the action, and over the general costs of suit, and that the prayer of the petition must be granted:—Held, also, that the decree on further directions must be varied by directing the sale to be subject to the mortgage if the mortgagee should not concur, and free from it if he did concur. Langton v. Langton, 8 De G. M. & G. 30; 24 L. J., Ch. 625; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1078; 3 Eq. R. 394; 3 W. R. 222.

Of Memorandum of Charge, over Post-nuptial Settlement.]—On the 14th June, 1858, L., being indebted to the plaintiff, signed a memorandum of agreement, whereby, "in consideration of the forbearance of the plaintiff in not requiring immediate repayment of the moneys he had advanced to or for him, L. agreed to give and execute to the plaintiff a charge on the interest to which he was entitled by right of marriage in the property settled on his wife, or to which she was entitled in respect of her former marriage, as a security "for the repayment of the moneys the plaintiff had advanced to or for him, L."; and L. pledged himself not to incumber his interests in such property, or any part of it. On the 18th June, L., with the knowledge, but without the consent of the plaintiff, executed a post-nuptial settlement, whereby he conveyed all his interest in right of his wife in the property settled on her on her first marriage, to trustees, for her for life, for himself for life, and after the decease of the survivor, for the children. Afterwards, on the 13th July, L. executed a deed, purporting to be in pursuance of the agreement of the 14th June, whereby he charged all the dividends, interest and annual proceeds of the trust funds which were settled at the time of his wife's first marriage, and also his share in the trust funds themselves, with payment to the plaintiff of 800*l.* and interest. He also, by the deed, assigned his share in the trust funds to the plaintiff by way of mortgage, with a proviso for redemption to L. on repayment by him of the 800*l.* and interest:—Held, that the post-nuptial settlement could not prevail against the rights of the plaintiff under the memorandum of the 14th June. Carew v. Arundell, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 71; 5 L. T. 498.

—— Account—Foreclosure.]—Held, also, that the deed of the 13th July, though constituting a mere equitable security and being entirely mistaken with regard to the form of the mortgage, and the reservation of the equity of redemption, yet operated as a recognition of the debt of 800*l.*, and that, coupled with the memorandum, it gave the plaintiff a right to an account and payment of what should be found due on both securities, and, in default of payment, a right of foreclosure against L. and his assignee in insolvency. Ib.

Of Covenantee under Marriage Articles, over Mortgagee of Devisee of Covenantor.]—A., upon his marriage, in 1808, executed marriage articles, whereby he covenanted with trustees to provide at his death 30,000*l.* for an eldest son of the marriage, and (in case there should be living at his death other issue of the marriage than a son and daughter) 20,000*l.* for the younger children. He died in 1821, seised of real and personal estate, and leaving an eldest son and two daughters, by whom a suit for the administration of his assets was instituted, in which suit a receiver was appointed. Pending the suit one of the daughters died, and the eldest son, soon after coming of age, having become indebted on his own personal account to B., and being entitled, as heir or devisee to his father's real estate, executed a mortgage to B. of the real estate, to secure the debt. The deed of mortgage recited the articles, the pendency of the suit, and the intention of the eldest son to pay off his sister:—Held, that the claim of the sister, under the articles of 1808, had priority, as against the real estate of A., over the mortgage executed by A.'s eldest son. Hynes v. Redington, 10 Ir. Ch. R. 206.

Of Portioners.]—J. being about to mortgage an estate, upon which his younger brothers and sisters had charges, got them to join in the conveyance, and acknowledge the receipt of their portions, giving them an undertaking that he would grant them a subsequent mortgage, and enter into prior security. He afterwards makes a subsequent mortgage to plaintiff, for money lent before on bond, and a fresh sum advanced. The claims of the younger children have priority in equity, and shall be preferred to plaintiff's mortgage. Beckett v. Cordley, 1 Bro. C. C. 353.

Of Mortgagee of Lease, over Lessor's Equity to reform the Lease.]—A. granted to B. a lease, in which, by error, the rental was stated to be 130*l.* instead of 230*l.* B. mortgaged it to C. without notice of the mistake, and D. afterwards paid off C., but the lease was reassigned to B. and not to D.:—Held, that D.'s claim in respect of the mortgage and sums advanced by him without notice had priority over A.'s equity to reform the lease. Garrard v. Frankel, 30 Beav. 445.

Power to create Jointure—Subsequent Mortgage, followed by Exercise of Power—Mortgage postponed to Jointure.] — A settlement executed on the settlor's first marriage, under which he was tenant for life, with remainder to his eldest son in fee, gave power to the settlor to create a jointure for any aftertaken wife. He joined with his eldest son in mortgaging the settled lands for an advance to the son. The mortgage-deed contained two separate witnessing parts—first, a demise for five hundred years to a trustee for the lender; and, secondly, a grant of the lands in fee to the lender. The second testatum was followed by a clause reserving to the father the powers reserved to him by the settlement, and it was provided that neither principal nor interest should be called in during his lifetime, and that neither his real nor personal estate should be answerable for the moneys secured. The settlor afterwards married a second time and exercised the jointuring power: —Held, after his death, that the jointure so created took priority over the mortgage. Evans' Estate, In re, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 410. Affirmed in C. A.

Mortgage by Tenant for Life—Power to raise Portions—Appointees postponed to Mortgage.] —A tenant for life of real estates, with a power to charge 20,000*l.* for the portions of younger children, mortgaged his life estate; he covenanted with some of the mortgagees that he would not execute the power without their consent. He subsequently exercised the power for the benefit of his children, and created a term of 1,000 years to secure payment of the 20,000*l.*, and, upon the marriage of one of his daughters, he appointed 5,000*l.* to her for a portion. The trustees, and also the appointees, had notice of the mortgages and of the covenant:—Held, that the appointees were not entitled to any priority, and that they must be postponed to the previous mortgage. Hurst v. Hurst, 16 Beav. 372; 22 L. J., Ch. 538; 1 W. R. 105.

Of Puisne Mortgagee.]—As to priority among several mortgagees. Anon., 1 Eq. Abr. 320.

—— Title by Adverse Possession.]—T. being the equitable owner of a moiety in lands, under the will of a testator who had, in 1806, purchased the entirety, in 1812 conveyed the moiety upon trust to pay an annuity, and subject thereto, for himself in fee. In 1823 he purchased the legal fee simple in the second moiety. By a settlement in 1825 he charged the two moieties with a sum to be raised at his death. In 1830 he again mortgaged the first moiety only, and he, or his solicitor (who was also a trustee of the settlement), deposited with the second mortgagee the purchase-deeds of 1806, and the deeds of charge of 1812. In 1832 the second mortgagee first had notice of the settlement, and in 1835 she bought in the annuity. The annuitant died in 1837. In 1851 the trustee of the settlement died. Since 1832 the second mortgagee had been in possession. T. died in 1866:—Held, that a title by adverse possession had not been acquired by the second mortgagee. Thorpe v. Holdsworth, 38 L. J., Ch. 194; L. R. 7 Eq. 139; 17 W. R. 394.

—— By Purchase of Annuity.]—Held, also, that the second mortgagee had not, by purchase of the annuity, acquired priority over the first mortgagee. Ib.

—— By taking Assignment of first Mortgage.] —Where B., an annuitant under a will, joined with A., one of the residuary legatees, in a mortgage of their respective interests to C.; and A. afterwards with D., another residuary legatee, joined in a similar mortgage to E.; F. paid off the debt to C., and took an assignment of his mortgage:—Held, that he did not thereby entitle himself to priority over E., but that the securities ranked according to the dates. Medley v. Horton, 14 Sim. 226; 8 Jur. 853, 949.

—— By Purchaser paying first Mortgagee's Debt.]—A. having a reversionary interest in personalty, which he had mortgaged first to B. and then to C., agreed to sell it to D., and, D. having at A.'s request paid off B. out of the purchase-money, A. agreed that, until the sale should be completed, D. should stand in the place of B. and have the benefit of B.'s security. In the memorandum in which the agreement was expressed, there was a recital that the payment had been made to B. out of the purchase-money, and in discharge of his debt:—Held, that B.'s debt was not extinguished, but that D. was entitled to the benefit of B.'s security. Watts v. Symes, 1 De G. M. & G. 240; 16 Jur. 114. Reversing 16 Sim. 640.

In the same case the mortgagor became bankrupt. Objection to his evidence in favour of the purchaser, on the ground of interest, overruled. S. C., 16 Sim. 640; 13 Jur. 245.

—— Buying in Incumbrance for less than Debt due on it—Account.]—Where a mortgagee buys in an incumbrance, he shall be allowed all that is due on it, though he bought it in for less; otherwise, if an heir or trustee buys in an incumbrance. Darcy v. Hall, 1 Vern. 49.

—— Equitable Interests — Legal Estate in Trustee.]—If a puisne incumbrancer buys in a prior mortgage, and the legal title be in a trustee, or in any third person, then the buying in such first mortgage will not avail; but, in all cases where the legal estate is standing out, the incumbrances must be paid according to their priority. Brace v. Marlborough (Duke), 2 P. Wms. 493; Moseley, 50. See also 9 Mod. 38.

First Mortgagee taking second Mortgage jointly.]—A., a creditor, having a security for his debt upon funds of the debtor, takes afterwards, either alone, but on behalf of himself and B., another creditor of the same debtor, or jointly with B., a security for both debts on the same funds which were the subject of A.'s separate security. A. does not thereby necessarily relinquish the separate security, or alter its precedence. Miln v. Walton, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 354; 7 Jur. 892.

Of statutory Mortgagees — Application of Mortgage-moneys in Payment of prior Mortgages.] — The corporation of Exeter, being owners of the Exeter Canal, obtained an act of parliament giving them powers to raise an unlimited sum upon mortgage of the canal for the purpose of carrying to completion certain improvements in the canal which the corporation had commenced some time prior to the passing of the act. The corporation raised a considerable sum under the powers given them by the act, a large portion of which they appplied in paying off certain mortgages, which prior to the passing of the act they had effected upon their corporate property other than the canal, and the money raised whereby had been expended by them in the improvements in the canal effected prior to the act. Upon a bill being filed by one of the mortgagees under the act, challenging such an application of the funds raised by means of the powers given by the act, it was held that, upon the true construction of the act of parliament, the corporate property, other than the canal, which had been relieved by means of the statutory funds from the mortgages created prior to the passing of the act, was the first fund for paying those mortgages, inasmuch as it was not within the powers of the corporation under the act to raise money for the payment of any mortgages previously existing; and it was declared that the moneys which had been so applied by the corporation ought to have been repaid to the statutory mortgagees rateably, and in proportion to the moneys advanced by them; and that the amount of such moneys constituted a debt due to the canal property, for which the mortgagees under the act had a lien upon the corporate property, other than the canal, comprised in the mortgages created prior to the act, so far as such property was remaining vested in the corporation. Trevilian v. Exeter Corporation, 18 Jur. 1019.

—— Agreement for Priority.]—A public company was formed to erect works, and borrowed money for the purpose, giving mortgages to secure repayment with interest. By several statutes the exchequer loan commissioners are authorised to advance money to assist in completing public works, and to take mortgages on the works and on the tolls and profits of such works, and priority is given to mortgages given to the commissioners, over mortgages made to private individuals, except bonâ fide creditors who at the time of the advances by the commissioners are entitled to repayment. The 57 Geo. 3, c. 34, provides that, where four-fifths in value of the creditors shall agree in writing that a priority over their claims shall be given to the commissioners, such consent shall be binding on all the creditors. The creditors of the company entered into an agreement, by which they consented to give the commissioners' mortgage priority over their own securities (in manner following), in the first place, that the commissioners should out of the annual rates and tolls be paid interest; in the next, they should then be paid interest; and, lastly, that the surplus should be applied in discharge of the principal sum advanced by the commissioners until that principal sum should be repaid in preference to all other claims:—Held, that an agreement giving this qualified priority to the commissioners was valid. S. E. Ry. v. Jortin, 6 H. L. Cas. 425; 27 L. J., Ch. 145; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 467. Reversing 6 De G. M. & G. 270.

—— Ejectment against Mortgagor—Estoppel.]—By an act for building a bridge, the commissioners were empowered to raise money by mortgage, and to convey, as a security, "the bridge and the toll-houses, and all the tolls, and all right, title and interest to the same," according to a form contained in the act, to hold till the money borrowed, with interest, should be paid and satisfied. The act contained no clause as to ejectment. To an ejectment brought against the clerk of the commissioners by one who was not the first mortgagee, to recover possession of the bridge, toll-houses and tolls:—Held, that the commissioners were estopped by their own deed from putting in a prior subsisting mortgage to defeat the ejectment, by shewing that all the legal estate had passed to the prior mortgagee; and this, notwithstanding that, as commissioners, they were not acting for their own benefit, but in a public capacity. Doe d. Levy v. Horne, 3 G. & D. 239; 3 Q. B. 757; 12 L. J., Q. B. 72; 7 Jur. 38.

Under Lands Improvement Acts.]—Where a part only of the land charged under the Lands Improvement Company's Acts, 1853 and 1855, is subject to a mortgage or other incumbrance, the charge executed under the authority of those acts has priority in respect of the whole amount of such charge over the mortgage or other incumbrance, until apportionment made by the inclosure commissioners, under the 70th section of the first-mentioned act, so as to enable the person entitled to such charge to exercise his remedies under those acts as if no such mortgage or incumbrance existed. Lands Improvement Co. v. Richmond, 17 C. B. 145; 25 L. J., C. P. 73; 4 W. R. 197.

To Creditors of Testator.]—A bill by a creditor of a testator alleged that the testator gave the residue of his estate to R. and M., charged with debts; that they, shortly after his death, mortgaged part of his estate, and the mortgage deed was framed as if the mortgagors were beneficial owners; that the mortgage-money was not applied in payment of debts; and prayed to have the mortgage postponed to the claims of the creditors. The mortgagees demurred:—Held, by Knight Bruce, L.J., that the allegations in the bill exhibited a case requiring an answer, and that it ought not to be disposed of upon demurrer; and affirming decision below, demurrer overruled. Collingwood v. Russell, 34 L. J., Ch. 22; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1062; 11 L. T. 322; 13 W. R. 63—L.JJ.

Per Turner, L.J., the allegations in the bill, shewing that the mortgagors dealt with the estate as beneficial owners, were not sufficient to disturb such a transaction. Ib.

An executor, who was also devisee, subject to a charge of debts, mortgaged, by one and the same deed, real estate of the testator, and property belonging to himself personally. Subsequently he again mortgaged part of the testator's property; and by a contemporaneous deed made between the same parties, and for the same sum, mortgaged property of his own:—Held, that these circumstances were not in themselves sufficient to rebut the ordinary presumption of law; that the executor must be taken to have been acting in the due discharge of his duty; and that therefore the mortgagees must be satisfied out of the mortgaged estates in priority to the creditors of the testator. Barrow v. Griffith, 13 W. R. 41.

Creditor's Administration Suit — Consenting to Sale.]—In a creditor's administration action, the ordinary rule is that a mortgagee does not lose his priority by consenting to a sale of the premises mortgaged to him by the deceased. Hilliard v. Moriarty, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 316.

To Debts and Legacies.]—Where an estate was devised subject to debts and legacies, and the devisee was also executor of the testator, and he mortgaged the estate with a covenant against all incumbrances except the legacies which were specified:—Held, that the mortgagee was not subject to the debts (which turned out to be unpaid), but to a charge of a sum equal in amount to the legacies. Eland v. Eland, 1 Beav. 235; 2 Jur. 852. Affirmed 4 Myl. & Cr. 420; 8 L. J., Ch. 289; 3 Jur. 474.

Testator devised his estates charged with debts and legacies. The devisee mortgaged the estate to A., subject expressly to the legacies. A. having called in his money, and the devisee requiring a further advance, they join in mortgaging the estate to B., but not expressly subject to the legacies, and B. is informed, falsely, by the devisee, that all the legacies had been paid:—Held, that B. took the estate subject to the legacies. Rogers v. Rogers, 6 Sim. 364.

Practice—Decree an Estoppel.]—A decree in a mortgagee's suit to have priorities declared, and to ascertain amounts due, is an estoppel to a party in the suit who seeks to invalidate the security of a prior incumbrancer. Forde v. Tynte, 10 L. T. 93.

—— Right of Prior Incumbrancer to Institute Suit.]—A mortgagee of a devisee filed a bill to enforce his security, and obtained a decree containing an inquiry as to the incumbrances on the estate. Immediately afterwards a legatee, whose legacy was charged on the estate, and had priority over the mortgage, filed a bill to have the legacy raised:—Held, that the decree in the other suit was no bar to his proceeding with his suit, for that a prior incumbrancer is not bound to go in under a decree obtained by a puisne incumbrancer, but is at liberty to institute a suit of his own. Arnold v. Bainbridge, 2 De G. F. & J. 92.

c. To Statutes Staple.

Of subsequent over prior Statute.]—A., seised in fee in right of his wife, joins in a fine, and declares the uses to B. by way of mortgage for securing 15,000*l.*, and subject thereto to the use of A. for life, the remainder to the wife in fee; then A. acknowledges a statute to C. for 500*l.*; then the wife dies, and A. sells his estate for 3,000*l.* to D., the son and heir-at-law of the wife, who had no notice of the statute, and the mortgage is assigned to a third person, who paid off the 15,000*l.*, and advanced the 3,000*l.*; then D. acknowledges a statute to E., who had no notice of C.'s statute, makes his will and devises these lands to A. and dies. As to the 3,000*l.*:—Held, clearly, that it should be preferred to C.'s statute. Held, also, that E.'s statute should be preferred to C.'s because the mortgagee was but in nature of trustee for the son. Blake v. Hungerford, Pre. Ch. 158.

Of subsequent Mortgagees.]—Act of parliament for sale of Lord S.'s estate, and that the moneys arising by sale should be first applied to pay off the mortgages, and afterwards for payment of statutes, judgments and recognizances, with a saving to all but the rights of the heirs of Lord S.:—Decreed, that subsequent mortgages shall be paid before precedent statutes. Ward v. Cecil, 2 Vern. 711.

Concealment.]—A counsel, having a statute from A., advises B. to lend A. 1,000*l.* on a mortgage, and draws the mortgage with a covenant against all incumbrances, and conceals his own statute. The statute shall be postponed to the mortgage. Draper v. Borlace, 2 Vern. 370.

d. To Crown Debts.

In General.]—A., by deed, assigned certain sums represented by a fund in court to B., in trust to apply the same in payment and discharge of money then due from A. to B., and in further payment of all and every the sums of money which B. might advance to A., and subject thereto in trust for A. A. died indebted to B. in the sum of 3,000*l.*, due at the date of the assignment, and also largely indebted to the Crown. A. was further indebted to a banking firm, of which B. was a partner, in a sum which was treated by the partnership as a bad debt, and in respect of which B.'s share of the loss amounted to 3,914*l.*, and a further sum of 2,313*l.* was paid after the death of B., by his executor, to the Crown, upon process being issued against the estate of B., who had been a surety to the Crown for A. The Crown claimed priority as to the whole fund in court, insisting that the property comprised in the deed consisted of choses in action, and that no notice had been given to the trustees of the fund:—Held, that the estate of B. was entitled to the benefit of the deed, in respect of the sum due at the date of it, and the sum paid by the executor, but not to the sum representing B.'s share of the loss in the partnership transaction. Foster v. Hargreaves, 1 Keen, 281.

Of Equitable Mortgagee.]—Where Crown had seized for its debt lands of simple contract debtor, affected with an equitable mortgage, the court ordered the money due to the mortgagee to be paid out of the proceeds of the sale before the Crown should be satisfied. Casberd v. Att.-Gen., 6 Price, 411; 20 R. R. 671.

—— By Deposit.]—Deposit of title deeds by simple contract debtor of the Crown, for securing part of purchase-money to be paid in consideration of other lands sold to him, is an equitable mortgage, and binds the Crown; and that, although purchaser have also given his bond to vendor for whole amount. Ib.

Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, by accountant of Crown, to one who has an opportunity of knowing mortgagor is or may become a debtor to Crown is not available against an extent. Broughton v. Davis, 1 Price, 216.

An agreement, on borrowing (by recital in a bond) money, on the part of the borrower, that certain real property (freehold and leasehold) should stand pledged for repayment of it, and a delivery of the title deeds, amounting in equity to a mortgage or a right to a mortgage, creates a lien, binding as against the prerogative lien of the Crown in respect of a debt accruing due to the king subsequently; and the equitable mortgagees are entitled to be first paid their principal and interest out of the produce of the sale of the premises, the property of the Crown debtor, seized under an extent in chief. Fector v. Philpott, 12 Price, 197; 26 R. R. 650.

See also N. 3, post, col. 1715.

e. Notice—Effect.

In General.]—One who lends money on a security which he is advised by a lawyer to be a good one, yet if it proves otherwise, and he has notice that another made title to it, he must deliver up all the writings relating to it, but not the mortgage deed, for there may be covenants in that for payment of the money. Opie v. Godolphin, Pre. Ch. 548.

Of Settlement.]—A mortgagee, with notice of the settlement, cannot protect himself as a purchaser, or be distinguished from the tenant for life, the mortgagor. Eyre v. Dolphin, 2 Ball & B. 290; 12 R. R. 94.

Mortgagee Accountable for Rent since Possession.]—G. on the marriage of his daughter with T., by a settlement of 1815, conveyed certain premises held under a lease for three lives or forty-one years, upon trust to raise 500*l.*, and to pay the interest thereof to T., during the joint lives of T. and wife, and after his decease to his wife as jointure, and after her decease to pay the principal to the issue of the marriage; and it was agreed that said sum of 500*l.* should remain a charge on said lands for six years, and then be raised out of the rents at the rate of 50*l.* per annum with interest. G. having become indebted to O., on the 23rd of January, 1822, with the concurrence of T. and wife, granted to him a rent charge of 50*l.* a year out of a part of the said premises until the debt should be paid off; and also, on the same day, with the like concurrence of T. and wife, demised to him the remainder of the said premises at a rent of 50*l.* a year, to be retained until he should be paid off: and in 1823, in consideration of a farther sum, mortgaged to O. the said last-mentioned premises:—Held, that the settlement of 1815 could not be viewed as a mortgage, and that O. having dealt with the estate with notice of that settlement, was accountable for the bygone rents from the period at which he entered into the possession. Held, also, that as the interest in the premises depended on one old life, there should be a decree for immediate payment. Turkington v. Kearman, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 35.

Mortgage ordered to be Assigned to Trustee.]—Mortgage by husband and wife of the wife's estate, to persons who had notice of a settlement made before the marriage during the wife's infancy, ordered to be assigned to the trustee in settlement; but interests, during the life of husband and wife, to be applied to the payment of the mortgages, without prejudice to her remedy against the husband. As to what the settlement made during the wife's infancy will bind her, quære. Durnford v. Lane, 1 Bro. C. C. 106.

Subsequent Mortgagee bound by Covenants.]—Where a father, being seised of the absolute interest in the lands of K. and M., and of an estate for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, in the lands of J., and being indebted by judgments which were charges upon all these lands, by settlement, executed on the marriage of his second son K., settles on his second son and the issue of the marriage, and, by a contemporaneous deed, conveys his life estate in F. and the reversion, subject to his life estate, in M. to his eldest son; and the eldest son thereby covenants generally to indemnify the lands settled on the second son against all the father's incumbrances:—Held, that a subsequent mortgagee of F. and M., with notice of this covenant, and of the incumbrances, was bound by them, and was not entitled to contribution as against the lands of K. Power v. Standish, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 526.

Of Covenant—Premises subject to Annuity, in Hands of Mortgagee.]—A father being seised of estates in tail and in fee, on his daughter's marriage covenanted with two trustees, one of whom was his son, to pay an annuity to his daughter out of the rents and income of his real and personal estates, and by deed or will to settle an estate of 200*l.* a year, or at his own election 4,000*l.* in lieu of it, on certain trusts, for the benefit of his daughter and her husband and their issue. By a subsequent deed, the father and son, no other person being a party, agreed to suffer a recovery of the entailed estates, and to sell them, and also the fee simple estates, and that out of the proceeds the father's debts (for some of which the son was surety) should be paid, and that certain sums should be taken by the father and son for their own use, and that 4,000*l.* should be paid, and provision made for the annuity pursuant to the covenant on the daughter's marriage. A recovery was accordingly suffered, and the estates were limited to the father and son in fee. The father and son afterwards agreed to abandon the last-mentioned agreement, and, in consideration of the son covenanting to pay the father's debts, the estates were conveyed by them to the son in fee. The son afterwards mortgaged the estates comprised in the recovery:—Held, that the covenant for payment of the annuity created a charge on the estates, and that, the mortgagee having had notice of that covenant, the premises were subject to the annuity, but that the covenant to settle the estate of 4,000*l.* in lieu of it created no lien or charge on any of the father's estates, and that the subsequent agreement between the father and son was merely voluntary, and was fairly abandoned by them. Ravenshaw v. Hollier, 7 Sim. 3. Affirmed, id. 16, n.; 4 L. J., Ch. 119.

Of Marriage Articles.]—By marriage articles, a husband covenanted, in consideration of his wife's portion, to settle an estate to his own use, and after his decease to the use of his heirs on the body of his intended wife, and for want of such issue, to his own right heirs for ever. The articles did not express any further intention of providing for the children of the marriage, and made a provision for the intended wife in lieu of dower. No settlement was executed; and the husband mortgaged the estate, and at the same time delivered the articles to the mortgagee:—Held, on his death, that under the articles he was entitled to a life estate only, and that the mortgagee took with notice, and could not therefore hold as against the issue of the marriage. Davies v. Davies, 4 Beav. 54.

Of Agreement between Parties.]—A mortgagee of leaseholds for 1,150*l.* entered into a parol agreement with the mortgagor to concur in a new mortgage for 750*l.*, to be paid to the original mortgagee in reduction of her debt, so that the new mortgage should be the first charge, but upon an express understanding that the mortgagor should execute to her a second mortgage for the balance. The new mortgage was executed accordingly; and it recited that the original mortgagee had agreed to accept 750*l.*, and to release the premises from the moneys secured by the original mortgage, and to make other arrangements with the mortgagor for payment of the residue of the 1,150*l.*; and the deed witnessed that, in pursuance of such agreement, and in consideration of 750*l.* paid to the original mortgagee, she and the mortgagor assigned the mortgage premises to the new mortgagee for 750*l.* discharged from the original mortgage. Afterwards the 750*l.* was paid off by another person, to whom the mortgagor applied for that purpose, on an agreement for an assignment; but all parties had notice of the agreement with the original mortgagee. On the original mortgagee filing a bill to be declared first incumbrancer or to redeem:—Held, that she might adduce parol evidence of the agreement with her, and was entitled to redeem on payment of the 750*l.* and interest, but had not a lien prior to that of the person who had last advanced that sum. Banks v. Whittall, 1 De G. & Sm. 536; 17 L. J., Ch. 14, 352.

Of Payment of Purchase Money.]—Where a solicitor took a mortgage in fee from his client, and entered into possession, he afterwards transferred the mortgage and handed over the title-deeds, but continued in possession as the visible owner, paying interest to the transferee, and, having obtained from the latter the deeds with a view to the sale, he received the purchase-money, and the purchaser entered into possession, without any notice of the transferee's charge, until the solicitor absconded, when he was first informed of it:—Held, that, if the transferee had no notice of the payment of the purchase-money until that time, there having been a delay in the completion of the purchase on the ground of an alleged defect in the title, he was not to be postponed to the purchaser. Stevens v. Sterens, 2 Coll. C. C. 20; 14 L. J., Ch. 252; 9 Jur. 984.

Of Charge for Payment of Debts.]—Mortgagees with notice of a specific charge for payment of debts upon devised estates, were held, notwithstanding releases of the executors to the devisees (such devisees being themselves two of the executors, and the releases not shewing that the charges had been raised and paid), to be bound to see to the application of the mortgage money. Braithwaite v. Britain, 1 Keen, 206.

Devise for payment of debts, the trustees convey to A. for the purpose of the trust; A. mortgages to several persons, who have notice of the trust; these mortgages are good. Hardwick v. Mynd, 1 Anst. 109; 3 R. R. 562.

By Witnessing Mortgage.]—Where a first mortgagee is a witness to the second mortgage, though no actual proof of his knowing the contents thereof, yet, since the presumption is that he might have known the same, this shall postpone him. Mocatta v. Murgatroyd, 1 P. Wms. 394. Sed quære, see Id. n.

By Mortgage being prepared by Mortgagor's Solicitor.]—A mortgage was given for a judgment debt; there was a prior equitable charge, of which the mortgagee had no direct notice, but no investigation of title or production of deeds was had; besides which, by arrangement, the mortgagor's solicitor prepared the deed for the mortgagee's solicitor. The court concluded that the arrangement was to give a mortgage subject to existing charges, and, also, that the mortgagee was affected by the notice possessed by the mortgagor's solicitor of the prior equitable title. Tweedale v. Tweedale, 23 Beav. 341.

Through Solicitor Acting for Two Parties.]—L. had an equitable security, dated in 1848. C. in 1850 took a legal mortgage in fee of the same estate without notice. In May, 1851, the estate was mortgaged to W. and A. for 3,000*l.*, and in August, 1851, to K., for 2,000*l.* In December, 1851, B. and B. lent 6,000*l.* on security of same estate, and on this transaction their solicitors received notice of L.'s security. In September, 1853, H. took a transfer of the mortgages to C., W., and A. and R., without any notice of L.'s security, but employed in the transaction the solicitors who had been employed by B. and B.:—Held, that the notice received by them as solicitors for B. and B., in 1851, could not be carried on so as to affect H., and that he was entitled to tack the 3,000*l.* and 2,000*l.* to his first mortgage. Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De G. & J. 614; 29 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1322.

Through Mortgagor being the only Solicitor employed.]—Where a mortgagor is a solicitor and prepares the mortgage deed, no other solicitor being employed in the transaction, the mortgagor will not be considered as the solicitor for the mortgagee, so as to affect the mortgagee with notice of facts within the mortgagor's knowledge, unless there be some consent on the part of the mortgagee to constitute the relation. Espin v. Pemberton, 2 De G. & J. 547; 28 L. J., Ch. 311; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 157; 7 W. R. 221. Affirming 4 Drew. 333.

Through Solicitor acting for all Parties.]—A solicitor took a mortgage of an equity of redemption and sub-mortgaged it. Soon afterwards he and the first mortgagee and the mortgagor joined in a new mortgage of part of the property, he acting as the solicitor for all the parties to the transaction, and suppressing all mention of the sub-mortgage:—Held, that the new mortgagee was affected by the solicitor's knowledge of the sub-mortgage (his fraud not excluding the effect of such notice), and took subject to it, except to the extent of the money paid by him in satisfaction of the first mortgage. Atterbury v. Wallis, 8 De G. M. & G. 454; 25 L. J., Ch. 792; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 117; 4 W. R. 734.

Through Solicitor party to a Fraud.]—The rule that notice of a trust through his solicitor is not imputed to a mortgagee where the solicitor is a party to a fraud, discussed. Cave v. Cave, or Chaplin v. Cave, 49 L. J., Ch. 505; 15 Ch. D. 639; 42 L. T. 730; 28 W. R. 793.

Constructive — Through Solicitor.]—A solicitor mortgaged property A. to a client, retaining the deeds in his own possession. He then fraudulently deposited the deeds by way of equitable mortgage with another person, and on the same day executed a demise of property B. by way of further securing the sum due to his client on property A. The demise was never communicated to the client, but remained in the solicitor's possession until his death. Some years after the execution of the demise the solicitor executed a legal mortgage in fee of property B. to a third set of mortgagees:—Held, that, even if the first mortgagee of property A. had (which it was held he had not) constructive notice of the demise by reason of the fact that the person making it was his solicitor, such notice would not alter the voluntary character of the demise, inasmuch as notice must be acted upon before consideration can arise out of it. Barker. In re, Jones v. Bygott, 44 L. J., Ch. 487; 23 W. R. 944.

—— Partnership.]—C. and B., tenants in common in fee, in equal shares, of a messuage and premises, entered into partnership, and it was agreed by the articles that this property should be partnership assets: and it became the place where the business of the firm was carried on. After this B. made a legal mortgagee in fee of one moiety to secure his private debt to a person who knew that the property was the place of business of the firm. Some years afterwards B. absconded, and C. was obliged to pay the debts of the firm, all of which had been contracted since the mortgage, and a large balance thus became due to him:—Held, that as the mortgagee, when he took his security, knew that the firm was in possession of the property, he had constructive notice of the title of the partnership, and that his claim must be postponed to that of C.; and that the circumstances of the debts paid by C. having been incurred since the mortgage did not affect the case. Cavander v. Bulteel, 43 L. J., Ch. 370; L. R. 9 Ch. 79; 29 L. T. 710; 22 W. R. 177.

—— Notice of Existence of Debenture not Notice of Contents.]—Actual notice by the solicitor of the mortgagees of the existence of certain debentures is not constructive notice of their contents and of the restrictive clause in such debentures, so as to affect the mortgagees with notice of such restrictive clause. English and Scottish Investment Co. v. Brunton, 62 L. J., Q. B. 136; [1892] 2 Q. B. 700; 4 R. 58; 67 L. T. 406; 41 W. R. 133—C. A.

Of Memorandum of Prior Charge drawn up by puisne Mortgagee.]—A solicitor drew up a memorandum of charge by A. in favour of the plaintiff. Afterwards the solicitor took a legal mortgage to himself from A. of the same property. The plaintiff brought an action claiming priority. There was a conflict of evidence at the trial whether the memorandum was signed at the time it was prepared, the solicitor deposing that it was not then signed, nor, to his knowledge, signed before the legal mortgage:—Held, without deciding the disputed point, that the solicitor had notice of the memorandum, which, therefore, had priority over the legal mortgage. Huggins v. Burchell, 60 L. T. 32.

Fund in Court — Mortgagor and Mortgagee parties to Suit, Notice through.]—After a mortgage of a reversionary interest in a share of personalty bequeathed by will, a suit was instituted for the administration of the testator's estate, to which the mortgagor and mortgagee were parties; and, after the master by his report had found the fact of the mortgage, the mortgagor made a further mortgage to the mortgagee. The latter, however, did not obtain a stop-order upon the fund in court representing the share. The mortgagor became insolvent, and the question was raised as to whether the fund (being still reversionary) passed to the assignee as being in the insolvent's order and disposition, or whether it belonged to the mortgagee, subject to the equity of redemption:—Held, that, although no stop-order had been obtained on the fund, yet, as the mortgagor and mortgagee were parties to the suit and the fund was in court, there was notice of the incumbrance, and hence, therefore, that the fund was not in the order and disposition of the insolvent, and nothing passed to the assignee but the equity of redemption. Grainge v. Warner, 12 L. T. 564; 13 W. R. 833.

Of Equitable Mortgage — Onus.] — An equitable mortgagee will not be preferred to a subsequent legal mortgagee, who had no notice of the equitable mortgage; and the onus lies upon the former, claiming a priority, to prove that the latter had such notice. Hardy, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 393.

—— Intention.] — A mortgage was made, "subject to prior incumbrances":—Held, under the circumstances, that a prior equitable charge was not included, it being unknown to the mortgagee, and it not appearing to have been the intention of the mortgagors to include it. Greenwood v. Churchill, 6 Beav. 314; 12 L. J., Ch. 400.

—— Deposit by Trustee with knowledge of Cestui que Trust.]—An owner of the legal estate in realty deposited the title deeds of it with the plaintiffs, to secure moneys advanced by them to him. He afterwards admitted that he was originally trustee of the legal estate in the property for A., to whom such legal estate was afterwards conveyed. It appeared, from the balance of the evidence in the case, that A. must have known of the deposit of the deeds with the plaintiffs:—Held, that they were entitled to a decree for the sale of the realty, and payment of what was due to them, with costs of suit, to be paid by A. Sharples v. Adams, 32 Beav. 213; 8 L. T. 138; 11 W. R. 450.

—— Avoiding Inquiry.]—The title deeds of an estate were deposited with the plaintiff as a security for his demand. The defendant fourteen years afterwards, upon the eve of the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, took a mortgage, antedated; he had notice of the deposit, but avoided inquiring the purposes for which it was made. The court decreed for the plaintiff. Birch v. Ellames, 2 Anst. 427; 3 R. R. 601.

Necessity for making Inquiry.]—A person who advances money on security of property, with notice that there are charges affecting it, cannot claim as purchaser without notice of those charges, because he believed that two charges of which he was cognizant, and which were sufficient to satisfy the words, were all the charges upon it. He is bound to inquire whether these are all the charges affecting the property. Jones v. Williams, 24 Beav. 47; 3 Jur. 1066.

A false answer, or a reasonable answer, given to an inquiry, may be sufficient to dispense with further inquiries; but a purchaser cannot excuse himself for not having made proper inquiries, on the ground that had he made them there would have been no satisfactory result. Ib.

Of Judgment—Undue Execution of Power.]—A married woman having a life estate, with power to dispose of the same in trust for such person or persons, for such estate or interests, or upon or subject to such powers, provisions, charges, and limitations, as she should at any time during her life, by deed attested by two or more subscribing witnesses, or by her last will, attested by three witnesses, direct, limit and appoint, joined her husband in executing a joint and several bond, attested by one witness only, upon which joint and several judgments were entered; and subsequently by deed, attested as prescribed by the power, she conveyed the lands to a mortgagee who had notice of the judgment:—Held, that as against the mortgagee the bond was not a due execution of the power, and that the judgments did not affect the lands in the hands of the mortgagee. O'Callaghan v. Comyn, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 484.

Of Money expended on Improvements.]—A. lent to B. 550*l.* on mortgage of premises, under circumstances disclosing an equitable claim to the premises on the part of C. A sum of 320*l.* was, with C.'s knowledge, laid out in the improvement of the premises:—Held, that the mortgage must stand good as a security for 320*l.* Hughes v. Seanor, 18 W. R. 108.

Of Mortgage by Administrator for Repairs.]—An administrator having no power to mortgage leaseholds of the intestate under leases not containing repairing covenants, in order to raise money for repairing the property, such a mortgage will be set aside as against a mortgagee who has notice of the purpose for which the money is raised. Ricketts v. Lewis, 51 L. J., Ch. 837; 20 Ch. D. 745; 46 L. T. 368; 30 W. R. 609.

a. Without Notice.

In General.]—Second mortgagee with notice of a former, but without notice of a trust charge antecedent to both, of which first mortgagee had notice, must take subject to that demand. Secus, if first mortgagee had not notice. Pomfret (Earl) v. Nelson (Lord), 2 Ves. 485.

—— With Possession of Deeds.]—It is not a general rule in equity that second mortgagee who has the title deeds, without notice of prior incumbrance, shall be preferred; negligence alone will not postpone the first; there must be fraud. Evans v. Bicknell, 6 Ves. 183; 5 R. R. 245.

—— Delivery up by Second to First Mortgagee.]—Where there is a subsequent mortgagee without notice who has possession of the title deeds, the first mortgagee shall not compel a delivery of the writings from him, without paying him his mortgage money. Head v. Egerton, 3 P. Wms. 280.

Grounds on which Legal Mortgage postponed to subsequent Equitable Security.]—The court will postpone a legal mortgage to a subsequent equitable security: (1) where the legal mortgagee has assisted in or connived at the fraud which led to the creation of the subsequent equitable estate, of which assistance or connivance the omission to use ordinary care in inquiring after or keeping the title deeds may be sufficient evidence where such conduct cannot otherwise be explained; or (2) where the legal mortgagee has made the mortgagor his agent with authority to raise money, and the security given for raising such money has by misconduct of the agent been represented as the first estate. But the court will not postpone a legal mortgagee to a subsequent equitable mortgagee on the ground of any mere carelessness or want of prudence on the part of the legal mortgagee. Northern Counties of England Fire Insurance Co. v. Whipp, 53 L. J., Ch. 629; 26 Ch. D. 482; 51 L. T. 806; 32 W. R. 626—C. A.

Neglect to perfect Security.]—Where a mortgagee who has obtained an order appointing a receiver and restraining the mortgagor from dealing with the property comprised in the mortgage takes no further steps, either by himself or by the receiver, to perfect his security, such neglect constitutes laches which will postpone him to a subsequent incumbrancer, who has taken without notice of any prior incumbrance, and has used due diligence. Wigram v. Buckley, 63 L. J., Ch. 689; [1894] 3 Ch. 483; 7 R. 469; 71 L. T. 287; 43 W. R. 147.

Trustee lending to Beneficiary.]—A trustee who has the legal estate, and takes from his cestui que trust an assignment of the equitable interest by way of security for money advanced to the cestui que trust, can avail himself of the legal estate as a protection against a prior incumbrance of which he had no notice. Newman v. Newman, 54 L. J., Ch. 598; 28 Ch. D. 674; 52 L. T. 422; 33 W. R. 505.

Mistake.]—The steward of a manor mortgaged his estate four times, but entered the admittance of the third mortgage in a wrong book, contrary to the custom of the manor. Per curiam, when there is a second mortgage of part of the lands that were before in mortgage, he shall not redeem part of the first mortgage, and so put the first mortgagee to seek what is due to him out of the residue of the lands where he has a precedent title to the whole; but, paying all that is due, he shall redeem the whole:—Ordered, that the second mortgagee shall redeem what was contained in his own mortgage, and the master to settle what proportion he shall pay to the first:—Decreed also, that the fourth mortgagee, being without notice of the third, which was entered in a wrong book, the third shall be postponed until after the fourth is satisfied. Welman v. Warren, 2 Eq. Abr. 595.

Fraud.]—In 1873 D., in order to carry out a fraudulent scheme, obtained a transfer to himself of mortgages of freehold property, and after various dealings with it the legal estate was, in September, 1875, conveyed by a mortgagee to H. in trust for M., and in March, 1876, by H. to M. M. was alleged to have been an accomplice of and trustee for D. In August, 1874, in pursuance of this scheme, T., claiming to be entitled to this property under a fictitious lease for ninety-eight years, purporting to have been granted to him in March, 1870, by a merely fictitious freeholder (an agent and accomplice of D.), demised the property by way of mortgage to A. In November, 1874, M. claiming to be entitled to the same property, under a fictitious lease for ninety-nine years, also dated March, 1870, and purporting to be granted to him by T., demised the property by way of mortgage to B., the mortgage deed being executed by M. only. In January, 1877, M. (to whom the legal estate had been conveyed in March, 1876,) deposited the genuine title deeds of the property with C., upon a memorandum charging his estate and interest in the lands comprised in the deeds and a statutory declaration of title; and further advances were made to M. and D., who came forward and stated that M. was merely a trustee for him of the property. In 1878 D., M., and T. were convicted and sentenced to penal servitude for forgery and fraud in connection with this property, and C. as equitable mortgagee entered into possession. In an action by A. to settle the priorities of himself, B. and C. as incumbrancers on the property:—Held (1), that, assuming T. to have been the agent of D., so that his representations to A. of having a good title were binding on D., such representations, followed by the acquisition of the property beneficially by D., did not bind the estate so as to give A. a prior equitable charge as against subsequent purchasers for value without notice; (2) that the like representations of M. to B., followed by the acquisition, first, of the equitable, and afterwards of the legal estate by M., did not put B. in any better position, and that the doctrine of estoppel did not apply so as to convert the fictitious title acquired by B. from M. in November, 1874, into a valid legal title ab initio upon the conveyance of the legal estate to M. in March, 1876; (3) that, as purchaser for value without notice by deposit of the genuine title deeds, C., though subsequent in date, was entitled in priority over A. and B. Keate v. Phillips, 50 L. J., Ch. 664; 18 Ch. D. 560; 44 L. T. 731; 29 W. R. 710.

—— Mortgagee allows Mortgagor to have Lease — Mortgagor deposits with Bank.]—A mortgagee of leasehold property lent the lease to the mortgagor for the purpose of raising money upon it, but at the same time told the mortgagor to inform the person from whom he proposed to borrow the money that he had a prior charge. The mortgagor borrowed money from his bankers upon the security of a deposit of the lease, without giving them notice of the mortgage:—Held, that the mortgage must be postponed to that of the bankers. Briggs v. Jones, L. R. 10 Eq. 92; 22 L. T. 212.

—— Of Mortgagor having Custody of Deeds.]—C., the manager of a joint stock company, executed a legal mortgage to the company of his own freehold estate, and handed over the title deeds to them. The deeds were placed in a safe of the company, which had only one lock having duplicate keys, one of which was intrusted to C., as manager. Some time afterwards C. took out of the safe the deeds, except the mortgage, and handed them to W., to whom at the same time he executed a mortgage for money advanced to him by her, without notice of the company's security:—Held, that the mortgage of the company had priority over the mortgage to W. Northern Counties of England Fire Insurance Co. v. Whipp, 53 L. J., Ch. 629; 26 Ch. D. 482; 51 L. T. 806; 32 W. R. 626—C. A. See also Garnham v. Skipper, 55 L. J., Ch. 263; 53 L. T. 940; 34 W. R. 135.

—— Of Solicitor-Trustee.]—W., the acting trustee of a marriage settlement, advanced 2,000*l.*, part of the trust funds, upon mortgage of real estate, of which he took a conveyance to himself and his co-trustee, and obtained possession of the title deeds. C., the mortgagor, was a client of W., who was a solicitor. Afterwards W. fraudulently handed over all the deeds to C. C. suppressed the mortgage deeds, and deposited the rest, in March, 1865, with a bank to secure his current account. The manager of the bank requiring a certificate of title, C. referred him to W., who signed a certificate, in the manager's handwriting, at the foot of the memorandum of deposit: "I hereby certify that Mr. C. has a good title to the above properties," for which the bank paid him a fee. In 1868 W. became bankrupt, whereupon the fact of the deposit with the bank was discovered by the co-trustee and the beneficiaries; and the bank were informed of the trustee's claim. In 1869 C. died, and the mortgage deeds could not be found. In 1873 W. died. On a bill by the beneficiaries and surviving trustee of the settlement against the bank, praying for a declaration that they were first mortgagees, and for delivery up of the title deeds:—Held, that by reason of the fraud of W. notice of the first mortgage could not be imputed through him to the bank, and that the bank was a mortgagee for value without notice of the prior mortgage. Waldy v. Gray, 44 L. J., Ch. 394; L. R. 20 Eq. 238; 32 L. T. 531; 23 W. R. 676.

Decree against the bank for foreclosure simply, without any order for delivery up of the title deeds. Ib.

—— Mortgage taken by Solicitor in his own Name—Deposit of Deeds by Solicitor with Bank without Notice—Priority—Negligence.]—R., a solicitor, in 1883 received money from a client for the purpose of investment, and represented to him that he had invested it upon the security of a particular mortgage. The mortgage, however, was one which R. had previously taken in his own name, and it was never transferred to the client. He afterwards deposited the title deeds of the mortgaged property with his bankers to secure his overdrawn account, and paid interest on the mortgage to the client down to the death of the latter in 1885, and subsequently to his executors. R. died in 1888, his account being overdrawn to an extent exceeding the value of the mortgaged property, and the bank immediately gave notice of their claim to the mortgagors. The bank had no notice of the client's claim at the date of the deposit, and their notice to the mortgagors was prior to any notice given by the client's executors:—Held, (1) that R. was a trustee of the mortgage for his client, and that neither the client nor his executors had been guilty of negligence so as to deprive them of their priority; and (2) that the principle of Dearle v. Hall (3 Russ. 1) did not apply, and therefore the bank were not entitled to priority by virtue of having given notice to the mortgagors before the executors. Richards, In re, Humber v. Richards, 59 L. J., Ch. 728; 45 Ch. D. 589; 63 L. T. 451; 39 W. R. 186.

Practice.]—A. lends money to B. on mortgage, but, before he does so, sends C. to inquire of D., who had a prior mortgage, whether he had any incumbrance on B.'s estate, who denied he had any. This was proved by C. D., by answer, confessed C. inquired of him what money B. owed him; but denied C. told him that A. was about to lend B. any money:—Decreed, the estate should stand charged, in the first place, with A.'s debts; but upon an appeal, issue directed to try whether C. told D. that A. was about to lend money on B.'s estate. Ibbotson v. Rhodes, 2 Vern. 554.

b. By giving Notice.

By third to first Mortgagee.]—Where a third mortgagee, without notice of the second mortgage, gave notice of his incumbrance to the first mortgagee, and caused a notice to the same effect to be endorsed upon the settlement in possession of the first mortgagee, under which the mortgagor claimed title:—Held, that the third mortgagee did not thereby gain priority over the second. It appeared that the second mortgagee had no notice of the first mortgage. Jones v. Jones, 8 Sim. 633; 7 L. J., Ch. 164; 2 Jur. 589.

A first mortgage of real estate was made to A. in fee. A second mortgage was then made to B. of the same estate, together with other real estate, by a release and conveyance of the respective premises to C. as a trustee for B., with power of sale. B. afterwards advanced a further sum to the mortgagor on the security of the same estates, but gave no notice of the advance to A. or C. Subsequently C. (after inquiry of A. whether he had notice of any incumbrance other than his own, and that of which C. was a trustee for B.) advanced a further sum to the mortgagor on the same security, and gave notice of his mortgage to A.:—Held, that the several mortgages took effect with regard to the different estates according to the order of time at which they were respectively created, and that their priorities were not affected by the giving, or the omitting to give, notice to the party in whom the legal estate was vested. Wilmot v. Pike, 5 Hare, 14; 9 Jur. 839.

First mortgage to W., with power of sale, and declaration of trust of residue of moneys arising from the sale, for the persons entitled to the equity of redemption. Second mortgage to R. Third mortgage, without notice of the second, to H., who was W.'s solicitor, and as such had possession of the deeds. Afterwards, other incumbrances. Then W. died, having devised mortgage and trust estates to H., and appointed him and another executors. H. sold under the power, and conveyed the mortgaged estate, paid off W.'s mortgage out of the purchase-money, and retained the balance; subsequently H. for the first time had notice of R.'s mortgage:—Held, first, that R.'s omission to give notice did not give priority either to H. or to a subsequent incumbrancer, who gave notice before R.; the estate, though subsequently converted, being real estate when the securities were executed, and to real estate the rule, as to notice giving priority, does not apply. Rooper v. Harrison, 2 K. & J. 86.

Held, secondly, that, since R. was not bound to give notice, his motives for abstaining from giving notice were, in the absence of fraud, immaterial; the rule being that an equitable incumbrancer on real estate is not postponed by any absence of activity in asserting his rights, except such as amounts to participating in fraud, or to constructive fraud. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that, if before the sale H. had the legal estate in the premises (and as to part, semble, that he had), still, having since parted with it, his opportunity of using it as a tabula in naufragio, to protect his own charge, was gone, and that H., having as devisee of W. paid off W.'s mortgage, held the surplus upon trust for the persons entitled to the equity of redemption; and though he might, before notice of R.'s mortgage, have paid the surplus to other subsequent incumbrancers, he could not be heard to say he had appropriated it to himself. Ib.

The incumbrances were declared to have priority according to the dates of the instruments. Ib.

Investigation of the doctrine as to the protection afforded to an incumbrancer by means of the legal estate. Ib.

Neglect to take Protection.]—A second incumbrancer, who takes a protection against a subsequent incumbrancer, has a better equity than a first incumbrancer who has neglected to take such a protection, and is consequently entitled to priority. Foster v. Cockerell, 9 Bligh (N.S.) 333; 3 Cl. & F. 456. Affirming 1 Myl. & K. 297; 2 L. J., Ch. 84. And see Ryall v. Rowles, 9 Bligh (N.S.) 377, n.

To Trustees.]—Upon this principle, a prior incumbrancer, who had not given notice of his security to trustees, was postponed to a subsequent incumbrancer, who had given such notice; for the notice was an effectual protection against any subsequent dealing on the part of the trustees. Ib.

—— Equitable and Legal Rights.]—But a difference in the form of the instruments under which a prior and a subsequent incumbrancer claimed, that of the prior incumbrancer giving only an equitable right, and that of the subsequent incumbrancer giving a legal right, to come upon the estates charged, does not affect the equities of the parties so as to postpone the prior incumbrancer. Ib.

—— Perfecting Title — Notice to one of Several.]—Where a prior incumbrancer on a fund in the hands of a trustee, by omitting to give notice, has not perfected his title, a subsequent incumbrancer by notice will obtain priority; but notice to one of several trustees will be sufficient whilst such party continues in the trust; and, where actual knowledge is shown, the character in which the party obtains it is immaterial. So, inquiry by the subsequent incumbrancer is immaterial where none of the trustees are cognisant of the prior incumbrance, and the result of inquiry would not therefore affect the conduct of the subsequent incumbrancer. Meux v. Bell, 1 Hare, 73; 11 L. J., Ch. 77; 6 Jur. 123.

—— Money and Land.]—The doctrine that incumbrancers of real estate take rank by the date of their incumbrances, and not by date of notice to the trustee, applies to the case of stock or of money which is in equity real estate. Carew, In re, 16 W. R. 1077.

—— Equitable Interest in Realty.]—A subsequent mortgagee of an equitable interest in a share of residuary real estate without notice of the prior mortgage does not obtain priority over the former mortgagee, by first giving notice of his security to the trustee in whom the legal estate is vested; notwithstanding that, by a deed of arrangement made previously to the mortgages, between the mortgagor and the other persons interested in the real estate, their interests were treated as personal estate. Lee v. Howlett, 2 K. & J. 531; 4 W. R. 406.

trustee by a devise to him, in trust to sell and to divide the proceeds among several persons, of whom the mortgagor is one, and the mortgages are of the mortgagor's share in such proceeds; because then, although the mortgages may have been made before any sale took place, the subject of them could only, as regarded the mortgagor's interest therein, be considered a chose in action. Ib.

—— Formal and Accidental Notice—Effect.]—Although formal notice, to the trustee of the proceeds of real estate devised in trust for sale or of a chose in action, of an incumbrance thereupon does not give priority over an earlier incumbrance of which the trustee may have obtained accidental notice, the converse proposition, that incumbrances are to rank not in the order of notices given by the incumbrancers but of accidental knowledge obtained by the trustees, does not hold good. Arden v. Arden, 54 L. J., Ch. 655; 29 Ch. D. 702; 52 L. T. 610; 33 W. R. 593.

In order to give priority to an equitable assignment of a trust fund, it must be shewn that the trustee has such knowledge, however acquired, of the transaction, as an ordinary man of business would act upon, but it is not necessary that formal notice should be given. Lloyd v. Banks, 37 L. J., Ch. 881; L. R. 3 Ch. 488; 16 W. R. 988.

A trustee, who saw in a newspaper an advertisement relating to a petition by his cestui que trust as an insolvent debtor, believed (correctly) that the cestui que trust was insolvent, and treated such insolvency as a fact in a transaction independent of the trust. The cestui que trust two years afterwards made an equitable assignment of his interest in the trust fund by way of mortgage, of which the mortgagee gave formal notice to the trustee. Subsequently to such notice the assignees in insolvency for the first time gave formal notice of the insolvency to the trustee. On a question of priority between the mortgagee and the assignees in insolvency:—Held, that the assignees in insolvency were entitled to priority. Ib.

Formal notice to the trustee of a fund in which an insolvent is interested is necessary to give the assignee in insolvency priority over subsequent incumbrancers who have given notice. Therefore, knowledge of the insolvency acquired aliunde by the solicitor of the trustees is insufficient to give priority to the assignee. Brown, In re, 37 L. J., Ch. 171; L. R. 5 Eq. 88.

A person, having become insolvent, obtained his discharge under the Insolvent Debtors Act, and subsequently borrowed money of two persons successively on a reversionary interest in a fund to which he was entitled in right of his wife, the mortgagees giving formal notice to the trustees of the fund. The assignees in insolvency gave no notice of the insolvency, but it happened that the solicitor of the trustees was aware of the insolvency:—Held, that the assignees for value who gave actual notice were entitled to priority over the assignees in insolvency. Ib.

—— Not Invalidated by Erroneous Date.]—A mortgagee of a reversionary estate gave a formal notice to the trustees of the estate whereby he referred to his mortgage deed by an erroneous date, but otherwise correctly described it:—Held, that the notice was sufficient, and entitled the mortgage to priority after a prior incumbrance of which subsequent notice had been given. Whittingstall v. King, 46 L. T. 520.

—— Annuity.]—Testator bequeathed a leasehold estate to trustees upon trust as therein mentioned; and first, he charged the estate with the payment of an annuity to his daughter during all his interest in the estate. The daughter afterwards mortgaged her annuity first to A. and afterwards to B.; but B. gave the trustees notice of his mortgage before A. did:—Held, that the annuity was not a chose in action, but a chattel interest; and that B. had not gained any priority over A. Wiltshire v. Rabbits, 14 Sim. 76; 13 L. J., Ch. 284; 8 Jur. 769.

Where an annuity was secured by a charge on certain stocks standing in the names of trustees, and an assignment of the dividends of the stock, but the grantee omitted to give notice of the annuity to the trustees, the grantee of an annuity subsequently granted was preferred to the grantee of the first annuity. Hulton v. Sandys, Younge, 602.

In a suit to carry into execution the trusts of a will, it was ordered that the receiver should, out of the rents, pay to H., a feme covert, and the devisee of the real estates, the annual sum of 400*l.*, for her separate use, and on her own receipt, by way of maintenance. By a deed subsequently executed, to which H. and her husband were parties, the estates, subject to certain charges, were conveyed in fee to such uses as H. should by deed appoint:—Held, that the 400*l.* a year was not a chose in action, but a portion of the estate of H. in the lands, and that a puisne assignee thereof could not, by giving an earlier notice of the assignment to him to the trustees in whom the estates were vested, obtain priority over a prior assignee who had omitted to give such notice, and that the memorial of first mortgage was sufficient memorial of assignment of the 400*l.* a year. Rochard v. Fulton, 1 Jo. & Lat. 413; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 131.

—— Reversionary Share.]—The plaintiffs took a mortgage of a reversionary share in a testator's estate, and gave notice of the incumbrance to a firm of solicitors who were acting for the trustees and executors in a chancery suit to which the testator had been a party, and were employed by them in all matters relating to the testator's estate in which professional assistance was required. The solicitors wrote accepting the notice on behalf of the trustees. A member of the firm deposed that at the close of a meeting held at his office two months afterwards, with reference to the winding-up of the chancery suit, and lasting above three hours, the notice was read to the trustees. Two of the trustees positively denied this, and the third denied all recollection of it. There was no further proof of their having received notice of it until after notices of other incumbrances had been duly given to them:—Held, that the plaintiffs must be postponed to the subsequent incumbrancers. Saffron Walden Second Benefit Building Society v. Rayner, 49 L. J., Ch. 465; 14 Ch. D. 406; 43 L. T. 3; 28 W. R. 681—C. A.

—— Mortgagor entitled to two Properties.]—A mortgagor was entitled to a reversionary interest in the residuary estate of a testator, and was also entitled to a life interest in certain sums of money under his own marriage settlement. Before 1872 he mortgaged both his reversionary and life interests to divers persons. Notice of all these mortgages was given to the trustees of both funds before any notice of the next-mentioned mortgage had been given. In 1872 he mortgaged his reversionary interest alone to the defendant, who gave notice to the trustees of that fund. In 1876 and subsequent years the mortgagor made five subsequent mortgages of his life interest to the plaintiffs, of which notice was given to the trustees of that fund. The plaintiffs in 1880 took a transfer of the securities prior to the defendant's mortgage of 1872. The defendant took two further charges on the reversionary interest, of neither of which did he give notice to the trustees thereof. An action having been brought by the plaintiffs for foreclosure of the reversionary and life interest:—Held (reversing the decision of Pearson, J.), that the defendant, on paying off the plaintiffs' mortgages which were prior to his mortgage of 1872, was entitled to an assignment of both properties, although his mortgage included only one:—Held, that, as regards the defendant's two further charges on the reversionary property, and the plaintiffs' five mortgages on the life interests, they must be redeemed in order of date respectively, notwithstanding the plaintiffs' notices as to the life interests:—Held, also, that the plaintiffs thus becoming the last mortgagees as well as the first must pay the costs of the suit if they did not redeem. Mutual Life Assurance Society v. Langley, 32 Ch. D. 460; 54 L. T. 326—C. A. Affirming 53 L. J., Ch. 996; 32 W. R. 791.

—— Knowledge of Solicitor — Conveyancing Act, 1882, s. 3.]—In June, 1875, A. mortgaged his share of trust property to E. by deed, which did not disclose any prior charge, and contained the usual covenant by A. that he was entitled to assign free from incumbrances. Notice of this mortgage and of a further charge created in May, 1877, was served on behalf of E. on the trustees of the property in November, 1881. A.'s share was subject to a prior mortgage to B., a solicitor, who was paid off in 1873, when a fresh mortgage was executed to C., which in July, 1874, was transferred by C. to D. (with a further charge in February, 1881). B. was solicitor for the trustees and A. the mortgagor, and had acted as solicitor for C. and D. in the mortgage transactions of 1873 and 1874, and also as solicitor for E. in the mortgage transaction of June, 1875. The trustees had not received notice of any charge before receiving notice of E.'s mortgage in November, 1881:—Held, having regard to s. 3, sub-s. 1, cl. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1882, that E.'s charge, of which notice was first given, was entitled to priority, as his mortgage deed shewed a title in A. free from incumbrances; and that, as the court declined to infer that B. had any recollection, or that inquiries made by him when acting as solicitor for E. in the transaction would have elicited from A. the existence of any prior incumbrance, it could not be said that, although B. had acted as solicitor for the parties in the previous mortgage transactions, notice of any prior charge affecting the property had come to his knowledge as the solicitor of E. in the mortgage transaction of June, 1875. Cousin's Trusts, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 662; 31 Ch. D. 671; 54 L. T. 376; 34 W. R. 393.

—— Before Assent by Executor.]—A testatrix entitled, upon the decease of a tenant for life, to a sum of stock standing in the names of D. and L., as trustees, bequeathed such stock to P., and appointed D. her sole executor. In 1834, after the death of the testatrix, P. assigned all his estate and effects to L. and H. upon trust for his creditors. In 1838 P. assigned his interest in the stock to the plaintiff by way of mortgage, and the plaintiff thereupon gave D. notice of the incumbrance. No notice of the assignment of 1834 was given to D. until 1843:—Held, that until D., the executor, had assented to the legacy to P., the notice to L. of the deed of 1834 was insufficient to exclude a subsequent incumbrancer from obtaining priority, and that the notice of the incumbrance of 1838 given to D. by the plaintiff entitled the plaintiff to the prior charge on the fund. Holt v. Dewell, 4 Hare, 446.

3. By Getting in Outstanding Legal Estate.

a. In General.

Review of Authorities.] — Review of the principal authorities on the protection afforded to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice of a prior incumbrance, where he has got in the legal estate or obtained possession of the title deeds. Carter v. Carter, 3 K. & J. 617.

The authorities establish that a purchaser from a person in possession, purchasing without notice of any prior charge or trust, and obtaining a conveyance of the legal estate from a trustee of a satisfied term, or a mortgagee whose mortgage is satisfied, will be protected against a prior incumbrancer or cestui que trust, provided the party so conveying the legal estate have no notice of the prior trust or incumbrance. Ib.

But it has never yet been decided that, where the party so conveying has notice of an express prior trust or incumbrance, the purchaser can protect himself therefrom by means of the legal estate. And, semble, such a decision would be contrary to principle. Ib.

Mortgage by Devisee under Revoked Will.]—A., B., C., and D., supposing themselves to be entitled under a will each to one undivided eighth part of copyhold hereditaments, conveyed the same, by way of mortgage, to X. for valuable consideration, and appointed an attorney to surrender their several one-eighth shares. The attorney, exceeding his authority, surrendered the four-eighths on behalf of each and all of the mortgagors, and the mortgagee was upon such surrender admitted to all the four-eighths. It afterwards appeared that the supposed last will had been revoked by a subsequent will, which in effect devised the entirety of the copyholds to A. alone in fee, upon trust for himself and others. None of the parties to the mortgage had at the time any notice of the latter will:—Held, that X. could not avail himself of the legal estate vested in him by virtue of the surrender by A. and the devise in the subsequent will, so as to protect himself against the trusts of the same will. But held, however, that the mortgage bound all the beneficial interest which A. took under the subsequent will. S. C., 3 K. & J. 618; 27 L. J., Ch. 74; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 63.

Without Notice.]—T. mortgaged his property first to a friendly society and then to a bank.

Afterwards T. applied to a building society for an advance. The building society, without notice of the second mortgage, paid off the first mortgage and made a further advance to T. The friendly society reconveyed the property to T. by means of a regular conveyance, and on the same day T. executed a mortgage to the building society:—Held, that the building society was entitled to the legal estate and to priority over the bank for the whole advance. Pease v. Jackson (L. R. 3 Ch. 576) and Robinson v. Trevor (12 Q. B. D. 423) distinguished. Carlisle City and District Banking Co. v. Thompson, 33 W. R. 119.

—— Getting Possession of Deed.]—A subsequent incumbrancer, without notice, protected by getting possession of the deed, creating an outstanding term. Knott, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 613; 8 R. R. 254.

Right to call for Legal Estate.]—The question of priority between incumbrancers, if the legal estate has not been got in, depends upon the better right to call for it, and the prior incumbrancer, if he has the right, is, in equity, in the same state as if he had an assignment. S. C., 11 Ves. 618; 8 R. R. 254.

Outstanding Term.]—Rule between incumbrancers, that a subsequent incumbrancer, without notice, and having as good a right, getting in the legal estate by assignment of term or possessing himself of the deed creating it, is protected. Maundrell v. Maundrell, 10 Ves. 260; 7 R. R. 393.

Satisfied Term.]—Subsequent incumbrancer cannot protect himself by a satisfied term against a prior incumbrance, unless in some sense got in either by an assignment, or making the trustee a party to the instrument, or taking possession of the deed creating the term; nor if he has notice before he pay his money; distinction upon that as to the dowress, upon no principle, but established by practice. S. C., 10 Ves. 271; 37 R. R. 393.

Difference between Trusts of Mortgage and of Outstanding Term.]—The trustee of a mortgage holds same in trust, to the extent of the mortgage, for the mortgagee, subject thereto for the mortgagors, and he cannot do anything to prejudice the mortgagors. The trust of a mortgage, as between mortgagor and mortgagee, differs from that of an outstanding term in a third person, unconnected with either of the parties seeking the legal estate, the only question there being which has the better equity to call for the legal estate. Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 Ball & B. 133.

By one of successive Incumbrancers from Trustee for all.]—The priorities of successive incumbrancers are not altered by one of them getting in the legal estate from one who is a trustee for them all. Sharples v. Adams, 32 Beav. 213; 8 L. T. 138; 11 W. R. 450.

If an owner of the legal estate in realty creates successive equitable incumbrancers upon it, he cannot alter the equities of those incumbrancers by afterwards transferring the legal estate to any one of them; but, if the legal estate is outstanding in a third person who has no privity with the several incumbrancers, the incumbrancer who obtains a conveyance of it to himself, or a trustee for him, will secure a priority over the others. Ib.

By equitable Incumbrancer from bare Trustee.]—The owner of a copyhold, which was subject to a mortgage by conditional surrender for 350*l.*, made by a former owner, instructed S., his solicitor, to procure him, on the security of the property, a loan of 550*l.*, out of which the old mortgage was to be paid off. S., in July, 1876, obtained the money from the plaintiff, who was also his client. In July, 1877, S. took a security for 700*l.* on the property in his own name, the mortgagee assigning the old mortgage debt, and the mortgagor covenanting to surrender. The old mortgagee was paid by a cheque drawn by S. on B. & Co., his bankers. S.'s account was already overdrawn, but on the same day he applied to them for leave further to overdraw, which was granted on his depositing with them the security for 700*l.*, and the cheque when presented was honoured. B. & Co. had no notice of the plaintiff's claim. Some time after this S. put his account in credit, but it shortly afterwards became again overdrawn. S. handed over some of the other muniments of title to the plaintiff. The plaintiff commenced his action to establish his right to rank as incumbrancer for 550*l.* in priority to B. & Co. After this, B. & Co. procured the old mortgagee to be admitted under the old conditional surrender, and to surrender to them:—Held, that B. & Co. did not acquire priority by having got the legal estate, for that an equitable incumbrancer cannot, after receiving notice of a prior incumbrance, obtain priority over it by getting in a legal estate from a bare trustee. Harpham v. Shacklock, 19 Ch. D. 207; 45 L. T. 569; 30 W. R. 49—C. A.

Where Mortgagor a Trustee for Mortgagee—Effect of Trustee Act, 1893, s. 12.]—A declaration in an equitable mortgage, that the mortgagor, in whom the legal estate is vested, will hold all his estate and interest in trust for the equitable mortgagee, followed by an authority to the equitable mortgagee to remove the mortgagor from being a trustee, appoint new trustees, and vest all the mortgagor's estate and interest in them by declaration, enables the equitable mortgagee, by virtue of s. 12 of the Trustee Act, 1893, to divest the legal estate out of a subsequent legal mortgagee with notice of the trust, and to set it up against a prior incumbrancer of whose charge the equitable mortgagee has only received notice since the date of his own equitable mortgage. London and County Banking Co. v. Goddard, 66 L. J., Ch. 261; [1897] 1 Ch. 642; 76 L. T. 277; 45 W. R. 310.

Mortgage of Term by Underlease—Subsequent Mortgage by Assignment of Term.]—P., having a term of years in a house, made a mortgage thereof to M. by way of underlease, retaining in himself a reversion of two days. He subsequently made an equitable mortgage by way of written memorandum to P. He again made a third mortgage to S., and assigned to S. the original term, including the reversion of two days. S. had no notice of the equitable mortgage to P., and the vice-chancellor held that, the equities being equal, S. had a legal estate by virtue of the assignment to him of the original term and the reversion of two days, which entitled him to priority over P. On appeal, the lords justices expressed themselves not prepared to affirm this view, and therefore desired a further question of fact to be argued; but the case was compromised before any judgment was given. Russell Road Purchase Moneys, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 673; L. R. 12 Eq. 78; 23 L. T. 839; 24 L. T. 139; 19 W. R. 520, 706.

Warrant of Attorney—Subsequent Sequestration.]—J. B., the incumbent of B. and M. H., on the 24th January, 1851, gave to the plaintiffs a warrant of attorney to secure 300*l.* and interest. On the same day J. B. entered into an agreement with the plaintiffs, by which, in consideration of the 300*l.* then lent to him he agreed, upon request, to assign, by way of mortgage, eight acres of underwood in the parish of M. H., and all the rent-charge of the parishes of B. and M. H., for the repayment of that sum and interest. The plaintiffs on the following day entered up judgment on the warrant of attorney, and registered the same. On the 15th November, 1851, J. B., by indenture, after reciting that he had requested the plaintiffs to allow him to receive the rent-charge of B. and M. H. for his own use, which they agreed to do upon having the security thereinafter contained, in consideration of the sum of money lent to him in January, assigned to the plaintiffs the eight acres of underwood, and all his furniture and other effects belonging to the house in his occupation in the parish of B. In December, 1851, A. D. entered up and registered a judgment against J. B. for 8,000*l.* and costs, and sued out, in 1852, a writ of sequestrari facias, upon which he was nominated by the bishop sequestrator, and put in possession of the rent-charge of B. and M. H. The plaintiffs, not being paid the 300*l.* at the time appointed, in February, 1852, by virtue of a power of sale, sold the underwood, and the furniture and effects, and with the proceeds paid off a portion of their debt. On motion for a receiver to collect the rent-charge of B. and M. H., and for an injunction to restrain A. D. from proceeding with the writ of sequestrari facias, and from receiving the rent-charge under it:—Held, that the motion must be refused, first, on the ground that, where there were several equitable incumbrancers, one of whom, by greater diligence, though later in date, got, in aid of his equitable incumbrance, a legal right, the court would not disturb him in his possession; and secondly, on the ground that by the contract entered into by the indenture of the 15th November, 1851, the plaintiffs were estopped and concluded from getting possession of the rent-charge. Bates v. Brothers, 23 L. J., Ch. 150; 17 Jur. 1174; 3 Eq. R. 321; 2 W. R. 116.

Two Equitable Mortgages—Agreement for Legal Mortgage.]—The owner of the A. and B. property deposited with K. some of the earlier title deeds of the A. property as a security for 300*l.*, promising to execute a legal mortgage. He subsequently executed a legal mortgage of both properties to the plaintiff, who took without notice of K.'s charge, as security for an immediate loan; but the mortgage was stated to be subject to a charge in favour of J., with whom the title deeds were said to be deposited. J.'s charge was only over the B. property, though she had possession of the title deeds relating to both properties, except such of the earlier title deeds of the A. property as were in K.'s possession:—Held, that the mortgage to the plaintiff must take priority over K.'s charge, although the plaintiff had not obtained possession of the title deeds or made active inquiry about them, and although the mortgagor, before executing the mortgage to the plaintiff, had agreed to give K. a legal mortgage. Garnham v. Skipper, 55 L. J., Ch. 263; 53 L. T. 940; 34 W. R. 135.

Although a mortgagor cannot give the second of two equitable mortgagees priority over the first by voluntarily conveying to him the legal estate after the transaction is completed, a person who advances money on an agreement for a legal mortgage will not, when the legal mortgage is executed, be postponed to a prior equitable mortgagee of whom he had no notice, merely because the mortgagor had contracted to execute a legal mortgage to such prior equitable mortgagee. Maxfield v. Burton (L. R. 17 Eq. 15) distinguished. Ib.

—— Getting in after Notice—Fraud of Mortgagor.]—The trustees of a will executed a legal mortgage of land of their testator, but failed to hand over to the mortgagees the title deeds of a portion of the mortgaged property. This portion the surviving trustee and tenant for life conveyed to a purchaser, and the trustee, forgetting that the property was comprised in the former mortgage, entered into a covenant that he had not encumbered. The purchaser then forged a deed which purported to be a conveyance of the property by other persons to himself, and, alleging title under the forged deed, executed a mortgage of the property, handing over the forged deed to the mortgagee, who thus became the first equitable mortgagee. He subsequently executed a mortgage of the same property to a second mortgagee, alleging title under the genuine deed of conveyance to himself. The purchaser absconded, and, his fraud becoming known, such second mortgagee thereupon induced the original mortgagees, in whom was vested the legal estate, to release to their mortgagors the land subject to his charge, on condition that they should convey, and they did convey, the legal estate to him:—Held, that the second equitable mortgagee was not precluded from availing himself of the benefit of the legal estate so as to obtain priority over the first equitable mortgagee. Taylor v. Russell, 61 L. J., Ch. 657; [1892] A. C. 244; 66 L. T. 565; 41 W. R. 43—H. L. (E.)

A mortgagee is not, subject to his security, a trustee of the legal estate for the mortgagor. By Lord Herschell. Ib.

An equitable mortgagee, who has advanced his money without notice of a prior equitable mortgage, may gain priority by getting in the legal estate, unless the circumstances are such as to make it inequitable for him to do so—as would be the case, for example, if the legal estate were held upon express trusts, or, according to recent authorities, if it were vested in a satisfied mortgagee. The mere fact that the subsequent incumbrancer has notice of the prior incumbrance when he gets in the legal estate counts for nothing. By Lord Macnaghten. Ib.

—— Constructive Notice.]—Doctrine as to constructive notice in Ware v. Egmont (4 De G. M. & G. 460) approved. The doctrine that where equities are equal the legal title prevails is not confined to tacking mortgages, but applies in favour of all equitable owners or incumbrancers for value without notice of prior equitable interests, who get in the legal estate from persons who commit no breach of trust in parting with it to them. Brace v. Marlborough (Duchess) (2 P. Wms. 491) followed. Bailey v. Barnes, 63 L. J., Ch. 73; [1894] 1 Ch. 25; 7 R. 9; 69 L. T. 542; 42 W. R. 66—C. A.

—— Equity in favour of Third Person.]—Where a question arises as to priority between two equitable mortgagees, one of whom has afterwards got in the legal estate, a trust or equity to affect the conscience of him who has got in the legal estate must be a trust or equity not in favour of some third person who may have no care or desire to insist upon it, but a trust or equity in favour of the person against whom the legal estate is set up. Certain trustees having obtained the legal estate of some mortgaged property on express condition to convey it to the defendant:—Held, that they were bound to convey it to the defendant, though the plaintiff had a better right to it. Taylor v. Russell, 60 L. J., Ch. 1; [1891] 1 Ch. 8; 63 L. T. 593; 39 W. R. 81—C. A. S. C. in H. L., col. 1570.

b. After Notice.

In General.]—If a subsequent purchaser or a mortgagee has notice of a former purchase or incumbrance, he shall not avail himself of an assignment of an old outstanding term prior to both, in order to get a preference. Willoughby v. Willoughby, 1 Term Rep. 763; 1 R. R. 397.

But if he had no notice of such prior purchase or incumbrance, and, having the first and best right to call for the legal estate, gets an assignment of it, a court of equity will not deprive him of his advantage. Ib.

Deposit of Deeds with Misrepresentation.]—The title deeds of plot A. were deposited with the plaintiff as a security for advances. A parcel of deeds relating to plots B. and C., which adjoined A., was afterwards deposited with the defendant, with the representation that they related to plots A., B. and C. A legal mortgage was subsequently executed to the defendant, in which the general words were extensive enough to comprise the whole of the plots. The defendant paid off a charge affecting plots A. and B., and got in the legal estate:—Held, that he could not be treated as purchaser of plot A. without notice of the plaintiff's incumbrances, so as to entitle him to priority over the plaintiff. Jones v. Williams, 24 Beav. 47; 3 Jur. 1066.

Where Mortgagor a Trustee for Owner of Prior Equity.]—When money is lent on an equitable mortgage without notice of a prior equitable agreement, the lender gains no priority over the owner of the prior equitable interest by getting in the legal estate after he has had notice that his mortgagor has made himself a trustee for the owner of the prior equity. Mumford v. Stohwasser, 43 L. J., Ch. 694; L. R. 18 Eq. 556; 30 L. T. 859; 22 W. R. 833.

A builder entered into a building agreement under which leases of plots of land were to be granted on completion of houses on them. He built a house on one plot, and verbally agreed on getting his lease to grant an underlease to M., who gave valuable consideration for the underlease, and entered into possession. Subsequently the builder, without the knowledge of M., obtained a lease of the house, and deposited it with the defendant to secure an advance made without notice of M.'s title. After this the builder, as agent for the plaintiff (who claimed under M.'s will), let the house to a tenant. Subsequently the builder granted to the defendant a legal mortgage to secure the previous advance. The suit was instituted for specific performance of the agreement for an underlease:—Held, that the tenancy gave the defendant constructive notice, at the time of taking the legal mortgage, that the builder was a trustee for M., and that the legal estate was no protection to the defendant against the prior equity; and a decree was made for specific performance, but, having regard to the negligence of M., without costs. Ib.

Prior Trust fraudulently Concealed by Mortgagor.]—Where two or more successive mortgagees advance their money upon the security of real property, without notice of a prior trust fraudulently concealed by the mortgagor, the first mortgagee taking a mortgage of the legal estate, the last mortgagee is at liberty, after notice of the trust, and pending a suit by the cestui que trust for redemption of the first mortgage, to pay off all the prior mortgages, and, upon getting in the legal estate, to hold it until all the moneys advanced by him have been paid in full. Bates v. Johnson, 1 Johns. 304; 28 L. J., Ch. 509; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 842; 7 W. R. 512.

The first mortgagee, having received notice of the trusts of the settlement, was at liberty to transfer the legal estate to any person who would pay off his incumbrance, being in a different position from a dry trustee or a satisfied mortgagee. Ib.

Getting in by Second Mortgagee by Deposit.]—Four trustees sell out stock, under an agreement that the proceeds shall be lent to two of them upon equitable mortgage, by deposit of the documents of title of a copyhold estate which belonged to such two trustees in undivided moieties. The money was lent and the documents deposited, but afterwards, by some unexplained means, they came into the hands of one of the two trustees who had borrowed the fund, and that trustee made a second equitable mortgage on his moiety of the estate by depositing the documents with a third person, who took them without notice of the first mortgage. The trustee afterwards became bankrupt, and the second equitable mortgagee purchased and obtained from the assignees of the bankrupt a surrender, and was admitted tenant of the bankrupt's undivided moiety, having, at the time of such purchase of the legal estate, received constructive notice of the first mortgage. In a suit of one of the trustees (the lender of the trust fund, the other having become bankrupt), for foreclosure:—Held, that the second equitable mortgagee, who had taken the legal estate with notice of the obligations of the mortgagor to third parties, could only hold that estate subject to such obligations, notwithstanding that he had originally taken his mortgage security without notice. Allen v. Knight, 5 Hare, 272. Affirmed, 16 L. J., Ch. 370; 11 Jur. 527.

Keeping Mortgage on Foot.]—If third incumbrancer, having constructive notice of second mortgage, fails to keep on foot the first security for his protection, he is not entitled to stand in place of first mortgagee against second. Parry

v. Wright, 1 Sim. & S. 369 ; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 174 ; 24 R. R. 191. Affirmed, 5 Russ. 142. And see Parry v. Parry, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 161.

4. Of Equitable Mortgagee by Deposit.

Generally.]—Equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds, preferred to a purchase with notice. Hiern v. Mill, 13 Ves. 114 ; 9 R. R. 149.

Mortgage by Crown Debtor.] — Equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds by accountant of crown, to one who has an opportunity of knowing mortgagor is or may become a debtor to crown, is not available against an extent. Broughton v. Davies, 1 Price, 216.

Over Subsequent Registered Deed.] — An equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds, unaccompanied by any memorandum in writing, takes priority over a purchaser for value claiming under a subsequent registered deed, without notice of such deposit. Burke's Estate, In re, 9 L. R. Ir. 24—C. A.

As against Creditor of Testator.]—An equitable deposit with memorandum of charge by a devisee is an alienation which pro tanto prevents a creditor of the testator from subsequently obtaining a charge on the estate as assets under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104. British Mutual Investment Co. v. Smart, 44 L. J., Ch. 695 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 567 ; 32 L. T. 849 ; 23 W. R. 800.

Semble, that an equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds made by an heir-at-law, or a devisee of a legal estate, would be good as against creditors of the ancestor or testator who had not obtained any judgment or decree binding the land before the mortgage was made. Ib.

Fraud—Of Mortgagor.] — The owner of a public-house agreed to grant a lease of it, at a premium. The intended lessee deposited the agreement with M. & Co., brewers, to secure repayment of an advance. The lease was executed, and was deposited by the lessee with the landlord's solicitor, to secure the premium. The lessee obtained it from them for the purpose, as he alleged, of producing it to the magistrates, to enable him to procure a licence. He undertook to return it forthwith ; but, instead of doing so he instructed an auctioneer to obtain an advance upon it from other brewers, R. & Co. The auctioneer produced to R. & Co.'s agent an order from the lessee for the delivery of the lease to R. & Co., noticing that the advance was for the purpose of enabling the lessee to pay M. & Co. The agent objected to recognise this memorandum, and inquired whether the lessee owed anything to M. & Co. ; he was informed by the lessee's agent that there was nothing due to M. & Co., except for goods supplied. He had previously obtained from the lessee himself an order for the delivery of the lease, not mentioning M. & Co. at all ; and he obtained the lease on delivering the order. R. & Co. advanced money on the deposit :—Held, that their security must be postponed to those of the landlord, and of M. & Co. Reid, Ex parte, 1 De G. 600 ; 17 L. J., Bk. 19 ; 12 Jur. 533.

—— Negligence of First Depositee.]—A lady lent money to her solicitor upon a deposit of title deeds, with a written memorandum. The deeds thus deposited did not comprise the latter title deeds, and so did not show that the depositor had any interest in the estate. The solicitor afterwards deposited the remaining deeds with his bankers to secure the balance of his account :—Held, that the lady had not, in omitting to call for the other deeds, been guilty of such gross negligence as to postpone her security to that of the bankers. Roberts v. Croft, 2 De G. & J. 1 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 220 ; 6 W. R. 144.

—— Of Mortgagee—Deposit by.]—A depositee for value without notice of a mortgage deed which had been obtained by the original mortgagee by fraud, and without consideration, held to stand in no better situation than the original mortgagee ; and the deed was ordered to be delivered up to be cancelled. Parker v. Clarke, 30 Beav. 54 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1267 ; 9 W. R. 877.

—— Deposit by Trustee.]—A trustee sold out trust stock, and subsequently advanced money to one of his cestuis que trustent for the purchase of an estate, which was when purchased mortgaged to the trustee for the advance. He afterwards deposited the deeds with his brokers to secure a debt due from himself. Certain of the cestuis que trustent instituted a suit for the delivery up of the deeds, on the ground that the money advanced on mortgage was trust money ; and the trustee, by his answer in the suit, admitted a promise by himself to execute a declaration of trust of the mortgage in favour of his cestuis que trust :—Held, that the admission by the trustee, that the money advanced by him for the purchase of the estate was trust money, was not evidence as against the bankers ; and, being of opinion on the evidence that the estate had not been shown to have been purchased with trust money, the court on this ground reversed the decree of the M. R., granting the relief prayed by the bill. Newton v. Newton, 38 L. J., Ch. 145 ; L. R. 4 Ch. 143 ; 19 L. T. 588 ; 17 W. R. 238.

—— Of Solicitor—Authority to raise Money.]—The plaintiff executed a mortgage to his solicitor, believing the document to be an authority to raise money on the property. The solicitor deposited the deeds with S. & Co. to secure a present advance and appropriated the money :—Held, that S. & Co.'s equity was prior to that of the plaintiff. French v. Hope, 56 L. J., Ch. 363 ; 56 L. T. 57.

—— Trust Money.]—Plaintiffs were trustees of a settlement, under which H. was tenant for life. P. was their solicitor. P., having trust funds in hand, arranged with H. that a certain sum should be invested on a mortgage. P. advanced the money in his own name, but entered it in his firm's book as a loan on behalf of the trust, and treated it as such in correspondence with H. The plaintiffs were not told of the investment. P. fraudulently deposited the mortgage with the defendants to secure a debt of his firm, the defendants taking bonâ fide :—Held, that, though the plaintiffs could not delegate their trust so as to constitute H. their agent to authorise the investment, and although P. did not hold the fund in trust for investment on any specific security, the plaintiffs were entitled to priority over the defendants. Hartopp v. Huskisson, 55 L. T. 773.

Mortgage by Trustee of Prior Incumbrancer.]—S., a solicitor, was instructed by his client, P., the owner of a copyhold property subject to a mortgage thereof to K. (who had not been admitted) for 350*l.*, to raise 550*l.* on the property, and thereout to pay off K. S. obtained the money from another client, H., telling him it should be invested in this manner; but, in fact, paid the money into his bankers, B. D. & Co., to his own current account. S. subsequently, by cheques drawn on B. D. & Co., paid off K., and advanced 350*l.* to P., taking in his own name a transfer of K.'s charge, and a fresh mortgage of the property from P. to him to secure the whole 700*l.* The account of S. with B. D. & Co. was already overdrawn, but these cheques were nevertheless honoured upon his depositing with them as security the deed of transfer and mortgage from K. and P., with other documents relating to the property. S. also, to quiet H., handed to him some of the muniments of P.'s title to the property, and from time to time made payments to him (H.) in respect of interest upon 550*l.* B. D. & Co. afterwards got admitted on the court rolls through K.:—Held, that S. and K. were only trustees for H., and that his equitable mortgage must rank prior to that of B. D. & Co. under S.'s deposit with them of the transfer to him of K.'s incumbrance. Harpham v. Shacklock. 19 Ch. D. 207; 45 L. T. 569; 30 W. R. 49.

Of Admission to Copyhold—Notice.]—A. mortgaged copyhold to B. by a deposit of a copy of his admission; A. died, and his heir mortgaged them to C. by deposit of a copy of his own admission: C. afterwards sold and conveyed the estate to D.; D. had notice of B.'s security:—Held, that it was unnecessary to determine whether C. took with notice of B.'s incumbrance, as by the deposit he could take only such interest as the heir could give, namely, his interest subject to the equitable charge of his ancestor; and secondly, that the conveyance to D. was void as against B. Tylee v. Webb, 6 Beav. 552.

Of Officer's Commission, over Creditors.]—An officer deposited his commission as a security for a loan of money, and further covenanted with the depositary, B., to sell the commission, and to repay the loan out of the proceeds of the sale; a sale having been effected subsequently, and the regulation price having been paid to the retiring officer's agents, he transmitted to them a written order, directing them to discharge, out of the money in their hands, certain specified debts due from him to certain specified individuals, which individuals had no notice of his contract with B.:—Held, that these creditors were entitled to a priority over B. After the institution of the suit, the officer took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act:—Held, that B. had not any title preferable to that of the general body of the insolvent's creditors to the surplus which remained after the debts specified in the written order were satisfied. Collyer v. Fallon, Turn. & R. 459; 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 23.

Forfeiture.]—When an equitable mortgagee, by deposit of title deeds, took a bond to secure the same debt, and entered up judgment thereon, which he afterwards registered as a mortgage against the lands:—Held, that he did not thereby forfeit his security by equitable mortgage, or defeat his priority. Jennings' Estate, In re, 15 L. R. Ir. 277.

Trustee for Sale parting with Conveyance without receiving Purchase-money—Priority of Mortgagee by Deposit over Cestui que trust.]—The receipt for consideration-money in the body of a deed being, by s. 55 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, conclusive in favour of a purchaser, the fact that the vendor, who was trustee for sale of an equity of redemption, committed a breach of trust in executing and parting with the deed of conveyance without receiving the purchase-money, will not prevent a subsequent mortgagee by deposit without notice from obtaining priority over the cestui que trust, inasmuch as the trustee had authority to sell the trust property. Shropshire Union Railways and Canal Co. v. Reg. (45 L. J., Q. B. 31; L. R. 7 H. L. 496) distinguished. Lloyds Bank v. Bullock, 65 L. J., Ch. 680; [1896] 2 Ch. 192; 74 L. T. 687; 44 W. R. 633.

Banker and Customer—Equitable Mortgage Deposit—Priority of Subsequent Incumbrancer after Service of Notice to lodge Deeds.]—An owner deposited title deeds with his bankers, by way of equitable mortgage, to secure past and future advances. A petition for sale having been presented by a subsequent incumbrancer, notice to lodge deeds was served by the petitioner at the bank:—Held, that the petitioner was entitled to priority over any advances made after service of the notice. Keogh's Estate, In re, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 201.

—— Negligence of Trustee of Settlement.]—In November, 1875, a husband deposited with his bankers the title deeds of some leasehold houses, together with a memorandum of deposit as a continuing security to the bankers for any overdraft of his wife's current account with them. In November, 1876, he died, having bequeathed all his property to his wife, and appointed her his executrix. After his death the deeds remained with the bankers, and the widow was allowed on the security of them to overdraw her account. In May, 1877, she married again. Prior to the marriage the houses were assigned by her to a trustee on trust for herself for life, and after her death on trust for an infant son of her first marriage absolutely. Power was given to the trustee to sell the houses during the life of the wife at her request, and after her death at the discretion of the trustee. The trustee made no inquiry about the title deeds, and no notice of the settlement was given to the bankers. In June, 1877, the husband and wife gave notice to the bankers of their marriage, and at their request a balance, which then stood to the credit of the wife's current account, was transferred to a new current account opened by the bankers with the husband. The deeds remained with the bankers, but no notice of the settlement was given to them. In November, 1877, at the request of the bankers, the probate of the first husband's will was sent to them, and at their request, a new memorandum of deposit was, in January, 1878, signed by the husband and wife, making the deeds a continuing security to the bankers for any overdraft of the husband's current account. In April, 1878, the wife died. The deeds were still with the bankers, and at that time the husband's current account was in credit. In 1883 the trustee made some inquiries, and then discovered that the deeds, which he had believed to be in the custody of the solicitor who had prepared the settlement, were with the bankers. He then gave the bankers notice of the settlement, and claimed the deeds. This was the first notice that the bankers had had of the settlement:—Held, that the omission of the trustee to inquire for the title deeds was negligence of such a character as prevented him from availing himself of the legal estate to give him priority over the equitable charge of the bankers, and that the cestui que trust stood in no better position. Held also, that the bankers were entitled to priority in respect of the amount due to them on their security at the time when they received notice of the settlement. Lloyd's Banking Co. v. Jones, 54 L. J., Ch. 931; 29 Ch. D. 221; 52 L. T. 469; 33 W. R. 781.

—— Priority as against Trusts of Settlement.]—M., being entitled to the lessee's interest in certain lands at C., in 1868 deposited, inter alia, the title deeds with a bank, to secure any balance due or to become due, accompanied by a letter of deposit. On the 21st November, 1870, he wrote to the manager of the bank, O., asking for the title deeds of C. in exchange for other securities, and stating that he had agreed to put C. in settlement on his marriage; and at the same time he deposited other securities with O. on behalf of the bank. O. thereupon drew two lines through the memorandum of 1868 in the deposit book; and wrote at foot of the entry, "Annexed list cancelled, and new ones substituted." The bank, however, refused to give up the deeds of C. On the occasion of his marriage, M. executed a settlement, dated the 24th November, 1870, and registered on the 8th February, 1871, charging C. with a sum of 3,000*l*., which, subject to life interests for himself and his wife, was settled in trust for the children of the marriage. M., who was a solicitor, drew the settlement, and was the only solicitor in the transaction. Subsequently, in 1871, M. gave the bank a further letter of deposit in which the title deeds of C. were included. None of the letters of deposit were registered. After the settlement M. paid in, to the credit of his current account with the bank, sums of money exceeding the amount due from him at the date of the settlement. In a paper, pinned to the letter of deposit of 1870, O. made a memorandum stating that it was cancelled by the letter of deposit of 1871, which was taken, fearing any irregularity in the former transaction. O. deposed that he did not intend to give up the security of the deposit of 1868; that he had a general authority to substitute one security for another, but not to give up a security altogether. M. and his wife afterwards died, leaving one child, issue of the marriage; M. being at the time of his death indebted to the bank, who claimed priority over the charge created by the settlement:—Held, 1. That the deposit of 1868 was not cancelled, but was still a subsisting security in favour of the bank. 2. That the bank had notice of the settlement of the 24th November, 1870; and consequently all subsequent advances made by them were postponed to the charge of 3,000*l*. 3. That the issue of the marriage was not affected with notice of the equitable mortgage to the bank. Macnamara's Estate, 13 L. R. Ir. 158.

—— Priority of Bank over Subsequent Settlement.]—The owner of real estate deposited the title deeds with his bankers to secure the balance of his account current, and executed a memorandum whereby he agreed, at their request, to execute any deed or deeds necessary for legally carrying out the security. Afterwards, being about to be married, he agreed to settle the property. Articles of settlement were prepared and executed. After the marriage, the husband conveyed the property to the trustee of the articles upon the trusts therein contained, being for the benefit of the wife and issue of the marriage. A suit was afterwards instituted by the bankers for foreclosure; and the wife claimed to be a purchaser for value without notice:—Held, that the husband, having contracted to execute a legal mortgage to his bankers, could not deprive them of priority by conveying the property to a party with whom he had entered into a subsequent contract for value, even although such party was a purchaser without notice. Maxfield v. Burton, 43 L. J., Ch. 46; L. R. 17 Eq. 15; 29 L. T. 571; 22 W. R. 148.

—— Deposit of Part of Deeds—Memorandum not Registered — Subsequent Mortgage by Deposit of Rest of Deeds—Negligence of First Depositee.] — L. was entitled under the will of R. to premises held under three leases for terms of years and assigned to R. by deed of the 31st July, 1846. In 1877 L. deposited this deed with a bank by way of equitable mortgage, accompanied by a memorandum in writing, which the bank did not register. In 1879 the bank having pressed L. for payment, they were informed that L. was about to raise money out of which they would be paid a sum on account of what was due to them, and B., who had investigated the title and searched the registry, immediately afterwards made an advance, upon the deposit of a number of title deeds of the premises, including the original leases and the probate of R.'s will. B. was at the time informed by L.'s solicitor (both of them being ignorant of the deposit with the bank) that all the title deeds were delivered to him; but a comparison of the schedule of deeds delivered with the abstract of title which had been furnished would have shown that a material title deed was absent. The greater part of the money so advanced by B. was paid over by L. to the bank:—Held, that B. had the better equity, and that the bank, by not registering their memorandum of deposit, and by allowing L. to retain all the title deeds but one, and thereby enabling him to raise further sums on the property, without notice of their charge, were guilty of negligence so as to deprive them of their priority. Lambert's Estate, In re, 13 L. R. Ir. 234.

5. Registration—Effect.

With Notice.]—A registered deed, with notice of an unregistered one, shall not prevail against it. Blades v. Blades, 1 Eq. Abr. 358.

Notice of an unregistered mortgage:—Held, to affect subsequent mortgagees, who had registered. Sheldon v. Cox, 2 Eden, 224.

Without Notice.]—The registry of a mortgage will not by itself affect a subsequent incumbrance without notice. Cator v. Cooley, 1 Cox, 182.

—— Defective Memorial—Registration after Notice.]—A subsequent incumbrancer, who at the time of taking his security has no notice of the prior incumbrance, may, by properly memorialising his security, though after notice, obtain priority over the prior incumbrancer, if the memorial of the security of the latter be defective. Essex v. Baugh, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 620; 11 L. J., Ch. 374; 6 Jur. 1030.

—— Demise for Term—Subsequent Mortgage by Deposit.]—Mortgage by demise for a term of years; the mortgagor does not deliver to the mortgagee the purchase deed conveying the freehold to the mortgagor, but keeps it back, and subsequently deposits it with another person as a security for a loan. The conveyances to the mortgagor and the mortgagee were executed within a day of each other, and were both registered on the same day. The deposit was not made for a considerable time afterwards; but, no notice by the subsequent incumbrancer of the mortgage being proved, and being denied by his answer, it was held that he was entitled to the benefit of the deposit, as against the mortgagee, and was not bound to deliver up to him the conveyance. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R. 765.

As against Lessee.]—The mortgagee while in possession made a lease; the mortgage was registered. The lessee set up a title as a purchaser without notice, and also relied on there being no acknowledgment to bind him:—Held, first, that the registration gave priority to the mortgagor's equitable title, which rendered notice immaterial; and secondly, that the acknowledgment by the mortgagee alone was sufficient against his lessee. Ball v. Riversdale (Lord), Beat. 500.

Deed Founded on Unregistered Deed.] — Deed of appointment of lands in a register county, pursuant to a power in a former deed which was not registered, postponed to a mortgage made subsequent to it, and registered before it. Scrafton v. Quincey, 2 Ves. 413.

—— Settlement—Subsequent Registered Mortgage.]—A. and B. were equal partners in certain mills and concerns, of which A. was the lessee. In November, 1810, they took in C. as a partner for 8,500*l*. In January, 1811, B. proposed to A. and C. to sell them his share for 8,500*l*., and to let his name continue in the firm for five years, they paying interest at 8 per cent. on his money remaining in their hands; this was accepted, and thenceforward A. had two-thirds, and C. one-third of the profits. In July, 1812, A. conveyed to C. the legal estate in one-third of the mills and concerns, by a deed which was never registered. In August, 1812, C., by his marriage settlement, conveyed his one-third to A. and D. as trustees for himself for life, with remainder for plaintiff as tenants in common; this deed was registered in 1814. In 1819 B. withdrew his name from the firm, and furnished A. and C. with an account current, shewing a balance due to him of about 24,000*l*. This was made up of the 8,500*l*., and interest at 8 per cent., and of advances made to the firm since 1814 on the credit of B. A mortgage of the mills was then executed by A. and C. to B., to secure this 24,000*l*. It was soon after registered. C. died in 1820, and A. in 1823. In 1826 B. procured from the representatives of A. an assignment of the equity of redemption, and entered into possession of the mills. The bill charged that, before the execution of the mortgage, B. was informed by A. and C. of the previous settlement. It prayed for an account and partition, and allotment of one-third. The only evidence of notice was by E., who swore that he had apprised B. of the settlement:—Held, that the registry of the mortgage of 1819 did not give it precedence of the settlement of 1812, although this latter deed was founded on the unregistered deed of July, 1812; that the settlement, having been registered before the mortgage, thereby prevailed over it, even though no actual notice had been given to the defendant, and that the defendant had no claim as a creditor against the plaintiff's one-third of the partnership assets. Stuart v. Ferguson, Hayes, 452.

Fraud.]—The registry of a deed of separation and maintenance being fraudulently prevented by the agent of the husband, who afterwards negotiated a registered mortgage:—Held, that the mortgagee was fixed with notice of the deed of separation through the agent of the mortgagor, who acted for both parties, and his security was postponed to the unregistered deed. Nixon v. Hamilton, 2 Dr. & Wal. 364; 1 Ir. Eq. R. 46.

Further Advances without Notice, after Registration.] — A registered deed of mortgage to secure moneys due and further advances is, as regards a puisne mortgage, a valid security for such further advances, if made bonâ fide, and without notice of the subsequent mortgage, though after its registration. O'Byrne's Estate, In re, 15 L. R. Ir. 373—C. A.

Extent of Security.]—An unregistered deed of mortgage was held entitled to priority over a subsequent deed which was registered, on the ground that the latter deed only operated upon what the mortgagor could honestly charge. Punchard v. Tomkins, 31 W. R. 286.

Registry Act—Sale under Decree.]—Where premises had been sold under a decree:—Held, that the lien of an incumbrancer was not transferred to the purchase-money, so as to be out of the Registry Act, and he was, therefore, postponed to subsequent incumbrancers. Hennand v. Moore, 1 Eden, 327.

—— 6 Anne, c. 2—Tacking.]—A mortgagee is prevented by the operation of the Registry Act, 6 Anne, c. 2, from tacking so as to gain a priority against mesne registered incumbrances. Latouche v. Dunsany (Lord), 1 Sch. & Lef. 137.

—— Judgments.]—The 5th section of the act applies not to judgments generally. Judgment creditors have no priority by the Registry Act, except where priority between deeds is to be adjusted. Id. 160. But as to this latter position, see D'Arcy v. Chambers, 1 Sch. & Lef. App. 467.

—— Annuity Deed—18 & 19 Vict. c. 15.] — A landowner, by deed in February, 1872, charged his land with two life annuities. He subsequently made several mortgages of the property by deeds, some of which recited the annuity deed. The annuity deed had not been registered as required by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 12:—Held, that, as the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 15, s. 12, was in similar terms to the clauses in the registry acts, which had been decided not to make an unregistered conveyance void as against a subsequent purchaser who had notice of it, the legislature must be taken to have used the words in the later act in the sense given to them by those decisions, and that the annuities therefore were valid as against all the subsequent incumbrancers who took with notice of them, and against the trustee in bankruptcy of the grantor. Greaves v. Tofield, 50 L. J., Ch. 118; 14 Ch. D. 563; 43 L. T. 100; 28 W. R. 840.

Registration Acts—Policy and Effect.]—The policy of the registration acts is to free a purchaser from the imputation of constructive notice. In the absence of actual notice, therefore, to the principal or his agent, and of fraud, a later registered deed will have priority over a prior unregistered charge, notwithstanding that the purchaser knew that the title deeds were not in the possession of the vendor, but were in the hands of certain other persons, and abstained from inquiry. Lee v. Clutton, 46 L. J., Ch. 48; 35 L. T. 84; 24 W. R. 942—C. A.

—— 7 Anne, c. 20.]—The statute 7 Anne, c. 20, was intended to prevent fraud by secret conveyances, and, consequently, if there has been notice, a subsequent incumbrancer who is first to register does not gain priority. Punchard v. Tomkins, 31 W. R. 286.

Middlesex—Constructive Notice Insufficient.]—A firm of solicitors took an equitable charge, by a memorandum and deposit of title deeds, from their client, A., upon premises in Middlesex, which they omitted to register. A. subsequently sold the premises to the defendant, who duly registered the conveyance. The solicitors filed a bill claiming priority for their charge, alleging that the defendant, when he took his conveyance, knew that the deeds were in their hands, and made no inquiry:—Held, that the facts alleged amounted only to constructive notice, and that, in order that an unregistered charge should have priority over a subsequent registered conveyance, it must be shown that the purchaser or his agent had actual notice of the prior charge. Lee v. Clutton, 46 L. J., Ch. 48; 35 L. T. 84; 24 W. R. 942—C. A.

—— Constructive Notice Sufficient.]—Constructive notice of a prior unregistered incumbrance affecting lands in Middlesex is as effectual as actual notice. Wormald v. Maitland, 35 L. J., Ch. 69; 12 L. T. 535; 13 W. R. 832.

A registered marriage settlement of leaseholds in Middlesex was postponed to an equitable mortgage of the same property by deposit prior in date, but registered subsequently to the settlement, the trustees of the settlement being held to have had constructive notice of the equitable mortgage, in consequence of not having inquired for the title deeds when the abstract was delivered to them. Ib.

—— Tacking.]—The equitable mortgagee held entitled to tack to his security advances made subsequently to the date and registration of the settlement of which he had no notice at the time of such advances. Ib.

—— Notice through one Solicitor acting for both Mortgagees.]—A solicitor induced a client to advance money for A., on mortgage of lands in Middlesex, and soon afterwards induced a second client to advance money on mortgage of the same lands without informing him of the existence of the first mortgage. The solicitor afterwards left the country, and the holder of the second mortgage registered it before the first mortgage was registered:—Held, that the holder of the second mortgage must be taken to have had, through the solicitor, notice of the first mortgage, and could not by the prior registration obtain priority. Rolland v. Hart, 40 L. J., Ch. 701; L. R. 6 Ch. 678; 25 L. T. 191; 19 W. R. 962.

The plaintiff had lent money to a solicitor on the security of the deposit of title deeds of land in Middlesex, with a letter charging the land, the legal estate in which was outstanding. The solicitor afterwards, by way of security for money due to a client, made a mortgage of the land to the client, which mortgage was registered:—Held, that the client must be presumed to have had notice of the plaintiff's charge, which, therefore, though unregistered, retained priority. Bradley v. Riches, 47 L. J., Ch. 811; 9 Ch. D. 189; 38 L. T. 810; 26 W. R. 910.

—— Agreement to Mortgage—7 Anne, c. 20.]—An agreement to mortgage a Middlesex property does not come within the 7 Anne, c. 20, and, therefore, where an owner of property in Middlesex had first mortgaged to A., and then agreed to mortgage to B., and had subsequently mortgaged to C., and C. had registered, and B. had not:—Held, that C. had not obtained priority over B. Wright v. Stansfield, 27 Beav. 8; 28 L. J., Ch. 183; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 5.

—— Deposit with Memorandum.]—A memorandum not under seal, accompanying a deposit by way of equitable mortgage of deeds relating to lands in Middlesex, requires registration, under 7 Anne, c. 20. Neve v. Pennell, Hunt v. Neve, 2 H. & M. 170; 33 L. J., Ch. 19; 9 L. T. 285; 11 W. R. 986.

—— Registration of Two Mortgages same Day.]—According to the memorandum of registration indorsed on two mortgaged securities of different dates brought to the Middlesex registry, they were both registered on the same day and at the same hour; but one was numbered 764, the other 768:—Held, that the security numbered 764 must be regarded as having been registered first. Ib.

—— Unregistered Memorandum of further Charge.]—A second mortgagee, who registers his mortgage in Middlesex, under 7 Anne, c. 20, is entitled to priority over a memorandum of further charge of prior date given by the mortgagor to the first mortgagee, who omitted to register the same in Middlesex. Moore v. Culverhouse, 27 Beav. 639; 29 L. J., Ch. 419; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 115.

—— Equitable Interests—Assignment.]—Property in Middlesex was mortgaged to A., and afterwards to B., and subsequently to C., with notice of B.'s incumbrance. C. registered before B. and afterwards assigned to D., who had no notice of B.'s mortgage:—Held, that, the interests being equitable, D. had no priority over B. Ford v. White, 16 Beav. 120.

—— Evidence.]—Registration, in Middlesex, of an equitable mortgage, is not presumptive notice of itself to a subsequent legal mortgagee, so as to take from him his legal advantage. Morecock v. Dickens, Amb. 678.

—— Real Estate—Share in Proceeds of Sale of.]—The local registry acts are intended to apply only to dealings at law or in equity with the land itself. Accordingly an incumbrancer upon a share in the proceeds of real estate in Middlesex, devised in trust for sale, obtains no priority over other incumbrancers on such share by registering his mortgage deed, and the priorities of such incumbrancers rank according to the dates of their respective notices to the trustees. Malcolm v. Charlesworth (1 Keen, 63) approved. Arden v. Arden, 54 L. J., Ch. 655; 29 Ch. D. 702; 52 L. T. 610; 33 W. R. 593.

Yorkshire—Memorandum of Further Charge needs Registration.]—A memorandum of further charge in favour of the first mortgagee of lands in Yorkshire requires registration as much as the original mortgage, and in the absence of registration will be postponed to a second registered mortgage without notice of such further charge, nor will the first mortgagee be entitled to tack his further charge if the second mortgagee has given him notice of his charge. Credland v. Potter, 44 L. J., Ch. 169; L. R. 10 Ch. 8; 31 L. T. 522; 23 W. R. 36.

—— Unregistered Memorandum Postponed.]—A. executed a legal mortgage of property in Yorkshire to B. for 700*l.*; at the same time he borrowed 100*l.* from C., and signed a memorandum agreeing to give C. a second mortgage on the property to secure that amount. A. subsequently executed another mortgage of the property for 500*l.* to D. The first and third mortgages were registered at Wakefield, but not the second:—Held, that the third mortgage had priority over the second. Wight or Wright's Mortgage Trusts, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 66; L. R. 16 Eq. 41; 28 L. T. 491; 21 W. R. 667.

—— Registration of Will Necessary.]—The East Riding Registration Act (6 Anne, c. 35) is imperative, and, unless a will of lands in that riding is registered within six months after the testator's death, or a memorial of the impediment which disables the devisee from doing so registered in the manner pointed out by s. 15, the will is void as against subsequent purchasers and mortgagees. Chadwick v. Turner, 34 Beav. 634. Affirmed, 35 L. J., Ch. 349; L. R. 1 Ch. 310; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 339; 14 L. T. 86; 14 W. R. 491.

—— Notice.]—To defeat the title of a registered purchaser from the heir-at-law, there must be clear and distinct notice, amounting to fraud. Ib.

—— No Memorandum Registered—Subsequent Registered Mortgage—"Lien or Charge"—"Actual Fraud."]—The Yorkshire Registries Act, 1884, deprives equitable mortgages by deposit of title deeds of the priority they previously enjoyed over subsequent registered mortgages, unless a memorandum such as is described in s. 7 of the act has been registered, and the priorities given by the act are not to be altered except in the case of "actual" fraud, by which expression in s. 14 is meant fraud in the ordinary popular acceptation of the term, and not "legal" or "constructive" fraud or "fraud in the eye of a court of law or of equity." Battison v. Hobson, 65 L. J., Ch. 695; [1896] 2 Ch. 403; 74 L. T. 689; 44 W. R. 615.

A solicitor who is aware that a security in which his client is interested is not perfected by registration, and who, with such knowledge, takes and registers a subsequent mortgage of the same property in his own favour and claims priority for his own mortgage over the security of his client, is guilty of "actual fraud" within the meaning of s. 14. Ib.

Practice.]—The plaintiff is not bound to notice assignments of prior incumbrances, although the assignments are registered, and may proceed as if there had been no assignment by the original incumbrancer, unless the inheritor will point out the proper parties. Webb v. Blessington (Lord), 1 Moll. 74.

As to Registration Generally.]—See REGISTRATION; DEED AND BOND.

6. By Possession of Deeds.

a. Negligence or Possession.

Losing Priority through Fraud or Negligence—Nonpossession of Deed by First Mortgagee.]—A first mortgagee having the legal title is not to be postponed to a second, merely because he has not possessed himself of the title deeds of the estate; he can only be postponed where he has been guilty of fraud or gross negligence. Colyer v. Finch, 5 H. L. Cas. 905; 26 L. J., Ch. 65; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 25.

A. became mortgagee of a portion of lands charged under a will with debts and legacies. The mortgagor was devisee of the lands, and likewise one of the executors of the will. The same person acted as solicitor for the mortgagor and mortgagee. The latter received the mortgage, and some (but not all the material) title deeds of the mortgaged estate came into his possession. The mortgagor afterwards mortgaged this and the other portion of the lands to B., and finally sold the first portion of the lands to pay the legacies which were charged on the whole. B. became the purchaser. Both A. and B. acted in ignorance of each other's rights:—Held, that the first mortgagee, as against the mortgagor, was in equity entitled to throw on the other portion of the estate the debts and legacies, and that the purchaser, not having attained the legal estate in the property, was affected by this equity. Ib.

A legal mortgagee cannot be postponed on the ground of nonpossession of the title deeds of the mortgaged property, unless there has been fraud or wilful negligence on his part in not obtaining them. Hunt v. Elmes, 2 De G. F. & J. 578; 30 L. J., Ch. 255; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 200; 3 L. T. 796; 9 W. R. 362.

A solicitor borrowed money from a client upon a mortgage of two properties, A. and B., and handed over to him a quantity of title deeds in a parcel bearing a label stating it to contain the deeds relating to both properties. It, in fact, contained only the deeds relating to property A., but the client, relying on the solicitor, never opened it. Shortly afterwards the solicitor sold property B. to the defendant, who completed his purchase without any notice of the mortgage, and, upon completion, the title deeds were handed over to him. Several years afterwards the solicitor absconded, and the mortgagee, for the first time, discovered that the deeds had not been delivered to him, and that the purchaser claimed a title to the property:—Held, that the mortgagee had not been guilty of such negligence as to postpone his title to that of the purchaser, and that the mortgagee was entitled to a decree for foreclosure or payment, and might add his costs to his security. Ib.

—— First Mortgagee parting with Deeds.]—A first mortgagee parting with the title deeds will not on that account be postponed to a subsequent incumbrancer, with whom the deeds have been deposited, without notice of the prior charge, unless either in the act of parting with the deeds, or in his subsequent conduct, there appears to be such negligence as in the view of a court of equity amounts to fraud. Dowle v. Saunders, 2 H. & M. 242; 34 L. J., Ch. 87; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 901; 10 L. T. 840; 12 W. R. 1074.

A firm of solicitor's acted for both mortgagor and mortgagee in the matter of an equitable mortgage, and the title deeds of the property, the legal estate in which was outstanding, were deposited with them for the mortgagee. One of the solicitors afterwards, without consulting his partner or the mortgagee, allowed the mortgagor to take the deeds, upon a representation that they were wanted for the purpose of inspection by a railway company. The mortgagor immediately deposited the deeds, by way of equitable mortgage, with a third person, who had no notice of the previous transaction. Shortly afterwards the mortgagor died. There was no satisfactory evidence that, up to the time of his death or for five years afterwards, the solicitor had taken any steps to ascertain what had become of the deeds, but they unsuccessfully attempted to sell some other property included in their client's security, and ultimately took a transfer of the security to themselves:—Held, that their conduct was such as to disentitle them to priority over the second mortgagee. Ib.

—— Not obtaining Deeds—Onus of Proof.]—In order to postpone an incumbrancer prior in point of date by a subsequent incumbrancer, who has got the title deeds, the latter must show not only his own possession, but that the former was guilty of gross negligence in not having obtained them, and the onus is on the subsequent mortgagee to shew this. Carter v. Carter, 3 K. & J. 617; 27 L. J., Ch. 74; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 67.

—— Gross Negligence, what.]—To allow title deeds to remain with a party, who, besides having a beneficial interest in the property, is also a trustee to others, is not gross negligence; for, quâ trustee, he is the right person to hold them. Ib.

—— Making no Inquiry.]—Making no inquiry concerning title deeds is gross negligence. But, where a party took a mortgage of an undivided share, it is not gross negligence in the mortgagee to suffer the deeds to remain in the hands of the mortgagor as the agent for the other tenants in common. Ib.

Priority depending on Right to Possession of Deeds.]—Where trustees to raise money grant annuity as a security, and, retaining the title deeds, mortgage the premises, without notice, as a further security, the mere retaining the deeds does not postpone the annuitant to the mortgagee. It depends on whether or not the first incumbrancer ought to have, and was remiss in not having, the deeds in his possession. Harper v. Faulder, 4 Madd. 129; 20 R. R. 279.

Mortgagee's Right to Deeds—Solicitor's Lien.]—A mortgagee is entitled to the possession of the title deeds of the mortgaged estate, and the mortgagor cannot, by depositing the deeds with his solicitor, with a view of creating a lien, thereby defeat the right of the mortgagee. Smith v. Chichester, 2 Dr. & War. 393; 1 Con. & L. 486; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 580.

—— Negligently Leaving Deeds.]—An incumbrancer negligently leaving title deeds in grantor's possession, a lien may be obtained on them by grantor delivering them to a solicitor. Bernard v. Drought, 1 Moll. 38.

Retention of Deed by Mortgagor—Subsequent Deposit.]—Mortgage by demise for term of years. The mortgagor does not deliver to the mortgagee the purchase deed conveying the freehold to the mortgagor, but keeps it back, and subsequently deposits it with another person as a security for a loan. The conveyance to the mortgagor and the mortgage were executed within a day of each other, and were both registered on the same day, and deposit was not made for a considerable time afterwards; but, no notice by the subsequent incumbrancer of the mortgage being proved, and being denied by his answer, it was held that he was entitled to the benefit of the deposit as against the mortgagee, and was not bound to deliver up to him the conveyance. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R. 765.

—— Omission by Mortgagee.]—A party entitled to an estate, subject to terms vested in trustees for securing a jointure and portions, mortgaged it, but retained the title deeds in his possession:—Held, that this omission on the part of the mortgagee was not sufficient to postpone him in favour of a subsequent purchaser for valuable consideration. Farrow v. Rees, 4 Beav. 18; 4 Jur. 1028.

—— Subsequent Mortgages—First Mortgagee Postponed.]—P. mortgaged estates to M., and was allowed to retain possession of the title deeds. He subsequently mortgaged one of the estates to A. B., who obtained possession of the deeds, and all the estates to C., who advanced his moneys after ascertaining the position of the deeds, and upon the faith that A. B. was the only prior mortgagee:—Held, that M., by not obtaining possession of the deeds, enabled P. to deal with his estates as an unincumbered owner; that A. B. having been diligent in obtaining the deeds acquired priority; and that, C. also having been diligent in ascertaining that A. B. had the deeds, apparently as first mortgagee, the same principle extended to him, and he also had priority over M. Perry-Herrick v. Attwood (25 Beav. 205; 2 De G. & J. 21) explained and followed. Clarke v. Palmer, Palmer, In re, 51 L. J., Ch. 634; 21 Ch. D. 124; 48 L. T. 857.

—— Leaving Deeds in Hands of Mortgagor.]—To postpone the first mortgagee on the ground of leaving the title deeds in the possession of the mortgagor, the case must amount to fraud. Barnett v. Weston, 12 Ves. 130.

If a person taking a legal mortgage chooses to leave the deeds with the mortgagor, not through negligence or fraud, but intentionally, to enable him to raise a sum of 15,000*l.*, which should take precedence, the mortgagee cannot complain if, instead of 15,000*l.*, he raised 50,000*l.*, because he puts it in his power to raise any sum of money he pleases. Perry-Herrick v. Attwood, 2 De G. & J. 21; 27 L. J., Ch. 121; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 101; 6 W. R. 204.

Mortgagee by devise postponed for allowing the mortgagor to retain the title deeds. Ib.

—— Mortgagee leaving Deeds is Accessory to Second Mortgage.]—The first mortgagee permits the mortgagor to keep the title deeds, and the mortgagor, showing a fair title, mortgages the premises to a second mortgagee, to whom he delivers the deeds; the first mortgagee is accessory to the drawing in of the second. Head v. Egerton, 3 P. Wms. 281.

—— Deeds asked for.]—A legal mortgagee had asked for the deeds which the mortgagor, who was his solicitor, made excuses for not giving to him. The mortgagor afterwards deposited the deeds with another mortgagee as security for money advanced without notice of the legal mortgage:—Held, in an action by the legal mortgagee for foreclosure, that he had not been guilty of fraud or negligence amounting to fraud, and that he could not be postponed to the mortgagee by deposit by reason of any negligence short of that. Held also, that the legal mortgagee was entitled to recover the deeds from the mortgagee by deposit, notwithstanding he was a purchaser for value without notice; and that s. 25, sub-s. 11, of the Judicature Act, 1873, did not alter the rule of law on the subject. Manners v. Mew, 54 L. J., Ch. 909; 29 Ch. D. 725; 53 L. T. 84.

—— Estoppel by Conduct.]—The plaintiff, mortgagee of a policy of life insurance, handed it to the mortgagor for a particular purpose. On the plaintiff demanding it back from time to time, the mortgagor made excuses for not doing so; and the plaintiff then forgot that it had not been returned. Afterwards the mortgagor deposited the policy with the defendants to secure an advance. The plaintiff gave notice of his interest to the insurance company before the defendants:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the policy as against the defendants, and that the conduct of the plaintiff had not been such as to estop him from asserting his claim against the defendants. Hall v. West End Advance Co., 1 Cab. & E. 161.

Retention of Deed by Solicitor—Fraud—Priority of Transferee.]—A. executed a mortgage to B. for 1,000*l.* This was not acted on, but A. afterwards executed another mortgage for 2,000*l.* to B. The solicitor employed retained the first deed, and afterwards fraudulently induced B., without consideration, to sign a memorandum, undertaking to transfer the first mortgage to C., and he executed such transfer. C. on the faith of B.'s acts, advanced 1,000*l.*, which was received by the solicitor and misapplied:—Held, that B. must be postponed to C. Hiorns v. Holtom, 16 Beav. 259; 16 Jur. 1077.

Fraud of Solicitor—Negligent Mortgagee Postponed to Subsequent Depositee.]—A second mortgagee, with a power of sale, was fraudulently induced by his confidential solicitor to join with the first mortgagee in executing a conveyance upon a pretended sale to the solicitor, and to sign a receipt for the purchase-money; but no money was paid to him, the solicitor representing that it was a mere matter of form, and that the mortgages would remain as before. The solicitor afterwards deposited the deeds with C. by way of equitable mortgage:—Held, that, the second mortgagee having by his negligence enabled the solicitor to commit the fraud, C.'s. equitable mortgage was entitled to priority. Hunter v. Walters, 41 L. J., Ch. 175; L. R. 7 Ch. 75; 25 L. T. 765; 20 W. R. 218.

Purchaser leaving Deeds with Vendor—Subsequent Mortgagee by Deposit without Notice.]—A purchaser, between whom and his vendor there were unsettled accounts, agreed to purchase Blackacre, and paid part of the purchase-money but made no appropriation of the balance due to him by way of satisfaction of the residue, and allowed the vendor to retain the title deeds, who deposited them by way of equitable mortgage without notice, and afterwards became bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to priority to the extent of the unpaid purchase-money. Rayne v. Baker, 1 Giff. 241; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 366.

—— Purchaser not calling for Deeds, affected with Notice of Prior Deposit.]—A purchaser of a leasehold, having paid part of the price without calling for the title deeds, held fastened with notice of a mortgage by deposit which was concealed by the vendor, but not with notice of an equitable mortgage which the vendor had fraudulently effected on the security of a spurious lease of the same property; and the purchaser, having obtained an assignment of the valid mortgage, was declared entitled to hold the property as security for the mortgage debt, and for all moneys paid by him on the purchase, and for subsequent improvements. Hipkins v. Amery, 2 Giff. 292; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1047; 8 W. R. 360.

Omission to Require Production of Deed.]—A solicitor took a mortgage of an equity of redemption and sub-mortgaged it. Soon after he and the first mortgagee and the mortgagor joined in a new mortgage of part of the property, he acting as solicitor for all the parties to the transaction, and suppressing all mention of the sub-mortgage:—Semble, that, even if the second mortgagee had not been the solicitor of the new mortgagee, the omission on the part of the new mortgagee to require production of the second mortgage deed was such negligence as to postpone him. Atterbury v. Wallis, 8 De G. M. & G. 454; 25 L. J., Ch. 792; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 117; 4 W. R. 734.

—— Notice—Purchaser Postponed to Equitable Mortgagee.]—Upon an assignment of a lease to a purchaser, the absence of the counterpart of an underlease of a portion of the property comprised in the lease is notice to the purchaser of the title of a person holding such counterpart by way of equitable mortgage, and, if the purchaser does not inquire, or obtain possession of such counterpart, he will be guilty of gross negligence, and will, therefore, be postponed to the equitable mortgagee. Franklin v. Howes, 24 L. T. 348; 19 W. R. 581.

—— Mortgagee of Leaseholds by Deposit preferred to Sub-demisee.]—Where B. deposited with C., to secure advances, the title deeds relating to leasehold property in Middlesex, together with a memorandum of deposit (which was never registered), and afterwards sub-demised the property to D. and M., by an indenture, which was duly registered, but D. and M., on taking such demise, neglected to inquire after or require the production of the title deeds:—Held, that they were bound by constructive notice of the deposit of the deeds with C., who had, therefore, priority over their claim. Wormald v. Maitland, 12 L. T. 535; 13 W. R. 832.

—— Constructive or Actual Notice.]—In such a case there is no difference in effect between actual notice and constructive notice. Ib.

—— Prior Mortgagee omitting to Call for Deed not Postponed.]—A., to secure a loan, deposited with B. title deeds relating to an estate, but not the deed of conveyance to himself, and signed a memorandum of deposit, which represented that these were all the deeds. A. afterwards deposited with C., who had no notice of B.'s claim, the conveyance to himself, and duplicates of some of the earlier deeds, and also signed a memorandum of deposit as to this loan:—Held, that B. was entitled to priority, the omission to call for the other deeds not amounting to such gross negligence as to postpone her. Roberts v. Croft, 2 De G. & J. 1; 27 L. J., Ch. 220; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1069; 6 W. R. 144.

—— Solicitor acting for both Parties—Misrepresentation—Subsequent Purchaser.]—S., the the owner of an estate subject to an outstanding term, mortgaged it to F. H., who acted as the solicitor of both parties, handed over certain documents to F., which he represented to be, and which F. on his representations believed to be, the title deeds of the property. S. subsequently sold the estate, unknown to F., to C., without notice of the prior incumbrance:—Held, in a foreclosure suit by F. against S. and C., that F. was not guilty of laches in respect to the possession of the deeds, so as to deprive him of his security; also that C. could not avail himself of the defence of purchaser without notice. Finch v. Shaw, 18 Jur. 935; 2 W. R. 655.

—— Contemporaneous Mortgages—Fraud of Solicitor.]—The plaintiff having agreed with E. to advance him money on mortgage, the plaintiff's solicitor sent the mortgage deed to W., the solicitor of E., to obtain its execution. W., who was also the solicitor of K., sent by his clerk the plaintiff's mortgage deed, and also a mortgage of the same property from E. to K., for execution by E. E. signed the plaintiff's deed before K.'s, and gave both at once to the clerk, saying, "That is my delivery." The title deeds were handed to the plaintiff when he advanced his money, having no notice of the transaction with K.:—Held, by the vice-chancellor, that the delivery of the two mortgage deeds was contemporaneous; that they took effect at the same instant; that the plaintiff and K. were tenants in common, or joint tenants, of the legal estate; and that their mortgages were payable pari passu:—Held, on appeal, that, assuming this decision to be correct as to the legal estate, still K. must be postponed to the plaintiff, because the title deeds had been delivered to the plaintiff without any notice of K.'s title, and without K.'s asking after the deeds, or making any claim to them; and that, assuming her, by reason of W.'s committing a fraud, not to be affected with notice of the plaintiff's title through W.'s knowledge of it, she still must be affected by his negligence in not asking for the deeds. Hopgood v. Ernest, 3 De G. J. & S. 116; 13 W. R. 1004.

Prior Equitable Mortgage — Omission to Inquire.]—A legal mortgagee is not to be postponed to a prior equitable one on the ground of not having got in the title deeds, unless there has been fraud or gross and wilful negligence on his part; and the court will not impute such fraud or negligence to the mortgagee if there has been a bonâ fide inquiry after the deeds, and a reasonable excuse given for the non-delivery of them; but the court will impute such fraud or negligence to the mortgagee if he has omitted all inquiry as the deeds. Hewitt v. Loosemore, 9 Hare, 449; 21 L. J., Ch. 69; 15 Jur. 1097.

Where in a mortgage transaction, the mortgagor is himself a solicitor, and prepares the mortgage deed, the mortgagee employing no other solicitor, the mortgagor is considered as the agent or solicitor of the mortgagee in the transaction, and it makes no difference that the mortgagor is not paid by the mortgagee. Ib.

—— Assignment without producing Deeds to Assignee.]—Where an assignee of a lease upon the occasion of the assignment, made bonâ fide inquiries for the deeds, and a reasonable excuse was given for their not being produced, he was held to be entitled to the benefit of the assignment, free from a previous equitable charge which had been made by the assignor by deposit of the deeds. Hewitt v. Loosemore (21 L. J., Ch. 69) observed upon. Espin v. Pemberton, 3 De G. & J. 547; 28 L. J., Ch. 311; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 157; 7 W. R. 221. Affirming 4 Drew. 333.

—— Lease — Surrender — Prior Equitable Mortgage—Negligence—Notice.]—A lessee who had deposited his lease by way of equitable mortgage with B. afterwards by deed surrendered the term to the lessor. The surrenderee at the time of surrender had asked the lessee to deliver up the instrument of lease, and was falsely informed by the lessee that he had left it with a friend, but that he (the lessee) had neither assigned nor charged his interest nor pledged the instrument of lease. The surrenderee had no actual notice that the lease had been deposited by way of mortgage with B.:—Held, that the surrenderee had not, under these circumstances, been guilty of gross or wilful negligence, and was consequently entitled, as the holder of the legal estate, to priority over B., the prior equitable mortgagee. Hewitt v. Loosemore (9 Hare, 449) and Espin v. Pemberton (3 De G. & J. 547) followed. Brown v. Stedman, 44 W. R. 458.

—— Reasonable Excuse for Non-production of Deeds.]—When the owner of an estate in Ireland had already created an equitable mortgage upon it by depositing the title deeds with a creditor (which equitable mortgage was not registered), and afterwards, on being asked for them by a solicitor who was about to prepare for another creditor a legal mortgage of the same estate, gave an excuse for their non-production, which, under the circumstances, appeared quite satisfactory, and also supplied in his own handwriting a summary statement of their contents, and the solicitor, in total ignorance of the equitable mortgage, and of all that had been previously done, prepared the legal mortgage, which was duly registered:—Held, that the legal mortgage had priority over the equitable mortgage, and was not assailable on the ground that the solicitor had improperly acted in preparing it without insisting on the production of the deeds. Agra Bank v. Barry, L. R. 7 H. L. 135.

Evidence of Negligence or Fraud.] —The non-production, in Ireland, of title deeds to the solicitor instructed to prepare a mortgage upon an estate there, will not of itself be deemed a proof that the solicitor has acted fraudulently, or even negligently, so as to effect the interests of his client. The construction to be put upon his conduct does not depend on an inflexible rule of law, but upon the circumstances of the case. Ib.

Delivery of Part of Deeds.]—P. purchased, in 1814, three roods twenty-three perches of land by the description of "about one acre," and in 1815 thirty perches of land immediately adjoining, all which he threw into one piece, and built a house. In 1819 he mortgaged the whole of the premises to W. for 5,000*l.*, by a description sufficient to pass the whole, and delivered up the title deeds relating to the purchase of 1814. In 1820 he mortgaged the whole of the premises to L. for 2,000*l.*, by the same description as in 1819, and delivered up to L. the title deeds of 1815. He acted on this occasion as L.'s solicitor. There was also a subsequent incumbrancer, H. In 1823 P. died, having devised all his property to trustees for sale. In 1829 the trustees for sale contracted to sell to G., who was at that time a yearly tenant. G. sent in requisitions on the title, paid about one-third of the purchase-money, and continued in unmolested enjoyment of the whole of the premises up to the time of the filing of the bill. W., L. and H. had all assented to the contract with G. :—Held, on a bill by the persons beneficially interested in the first mortgage to have the contract carried out and the sales moneys applied, that they were entitled in priority to full satisfaction out of the sales moneys, or as far as they would extend. Wallis v. Woodyear, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 179.

—— Legal Mortgagee with some, prior Equitable Mortgagee with rest — Right to Delivery.]—A., being indebted to B., delivered to him, by way of further security, a parcel purporting to contain the title deeds to lands, and also executed a legal mortgage to him of the same lands. It being afterwards discovered that the deeds relating to part of the mortgaged lands were in the possession of C., with whom they had been deposited by way of equitable mortgage previous to the mortgage to A. :—Held, that A. had no equity as against C. to have the deeds delivered up to him. Barnard v. Bywater, 17 W. R. 71.

—— Negligence.]—An equitable mortgagee, with whom some of the title deeds of the mortgaged property, including the conveyance to the mortgagor, were deposited, filed a bill to establish his priority over a subsequent legal mortgagee, whose solicitor had omitted to examine a parcel which was given to him, previously to the execution of the mortgage deed, and purported to contain all the title deeds, but contained only the earlier deeds : —Held, that there was not such wilful negligence on the part of the solicitor as to fix the legal mortgagee with constructive notice of the prior charge, so as to entitle the equitable mortgagee to enforce in equity his priority over the legal mortgagee. Ratcliffe v. Barnard, 40 L. J., Ch. 777 ; L. R. 6 Ch. 652 ; 19 W. R. 764. Affirming 24 L. T. 215.

Mortgagee innocently Parting with Deeds.]—Where a mortgagee has, without fraud or gross neglect, parted with the possession of title deeds, which are deposited with another person equally innocent, whether the court will take the possession from him, quære. Cawthorne, Ex parte, 1 Glyn & J. 240.

—— Fraud of Mortgagor.]—A. deposited a lease of a public-house with B. by way of security for a debt, and subsequently obtained it from B. on a representation that it was required to be produced before the justices for the purposes of obtaining a licence, and signing an undertaking to restore it. A. then deposited this lease with C. as a security for money advanced by C. :—Held, that B.'s equity was prior to that of C. Reid, Ex parte, Buckland, In re, 17 L. J., Bk. 19 ; 12 Jur. 533.

—— Subsequent Purchaser for Value — Notice.]—A mortgagee of a leasehold house gave up the indenture of lease to his mortgagor, in order that it might be shown to an intending purchaser who wished to see what the covenants in it were ; the mortgagor concealed from the purchaser the fact of the existence of an incumbrance on the property, and produced the lease to him, and left it in his possession. Within a week afterwards, the purchaser accepted a conveyance, paid his purchase-money, and took possession of the house, without any notice of the existence of the mortgage ; but the solicitor of the mortgagee deposed that, in an interview which he had before the completion of the purchase with the solicitor of the purchaser, he had informed the latter that a client of his was to receive a considerable sum out of the purchase-money, and had requested to have notice of the time when the money was to be paid ; and, though the solicitor of the purchaser denied that any such interview had taken place before the completion of the purchase, a jury gave a verdict in favour of the statement made on that point by the solicitor of the mortgagee :—Held, that the mortgagee was not to be postponed to the purchaser. Martinez v. Cooper, 2 Russ. 198 ; 26 R. R. 49.

Mortgagee redelivering Deeds to Mortgagor —Accessory to Fraud.]—A. having a mortgage of a leasehold estate, the mortgagor borrows the original lease of A., with an intention to borrow more money on the premises. If A. was privy to the mortgagor's intention of taking up more money on the premises, A.'s mortgage shall be postponed to the subsequent mortgage, as being accessory to the fraud ; otherwise, if A. was not privy to the subsequent loan, but innocently lent the lease to the mortgagor. Peter v. Russell, 2 Vern. 726 ; Gilb. Eq. Rep. 122.

—— Fraud or Negligence, what.]—A mortgagee of leasehold property died, having by his will appointed his widow and his son executrix and executor, and he left all his estate to his widow for her life, with remainder to his son, and also gave to them, as joint tenants, his trust and mortgage estates. The widow and son duly proved the will. The widow took possession of the title deeds, and on the representations of the mortgagor handed them over to him; he never returned them. The widow died, and shortly afterwards the mortgagor also died. The son found the deeds missing; and it then appeared that the mortgagor had, in the lifetime of the widow, but without giving any notice of the existing mortgage, mortgaged the leasehold property to a bank, and had deposited the title deeds with them. The son, who had no knowledge of the deeds having been sent to the mortgagor, claimed to be entitled to his security in priority to the bank:—Held, that, whatever might have been the rights of the bank as against the widow, the son had not been guilty of fraud or of any such negligence as would postpone him to the bank; that he was entitled to priority, and that the deeds should be delivered to him. Ingham, In re, Jones v. Ingham, 62 L. J., Ch. 100; [1893] 1 Ch. 352; 3 R. 126; 68 L. T. 152; 41 W. R. 235.

—— Laches.]—S. in 1833 mortgaged certain real estate to R. with a power of sale, under which the property was sold, in 1842, to a purchaser, who transferred his contract to R. There was a balance after paying off S.; and, there being accounts between S. and M., this balance was placed, under a deed of 25th June, 1842, in the hands of trustees, to be dealt with by arbitration between S. and M. In 1834 S. had made an equitable mortgage of the property to M. In January, 1840, M. deposited these deeds with W., the plaintiff, by way of equitable mortgage. In April, 1842, M. applied to the plaintiff for the loan of the deeds, telling him he wanted them to enable the purchase to be completed, and promising to return them forthwith. He did not return them forthwith, and the plaintiff never applied to have the deeds back for more than four years. In May, 1843, M. deposited the deeds by way of mortgage with P., who now held them. In 1846 M. became bankrupt. W. filed his claim to be treated as first incumbrancer, and to have the balance in the hands of the trustees of the deeds of 1842 paid to him:—Held, that, as between W., the plaintiff, and P., the plaintiff had by his laches enabled M. to commit a fraud, and had no equity against the defendant, P. Waldron v. Sloper, 1 Drew. 193.

—— Conversion into Personalty—Notice.]—Semble, the real estate being converted into personalty before the bankruptcy, the right of M. was merely a right to receive a certain sum of money; and that, no notice having been given by the plaintiff or the holder of the deeds to the trustees, the right to receive the money remained in the order and disposition of M. and passed to his assignees. Ib.

Puisne Mortgagee.]—T. being the equitable owner of a moiety in lands, under the will of a testator who had, in 1806, purchased the entirety, in 1812 conveyed the moiety upon trust to pay an annuity, and, subject thereto, for himself in fee. In 1823 he purchased the legal fee simple in the second moiety. By a settlement in 1825, he charged the two moieties with a sum to be raised at his death. In 1830 he again mortgaged the first moiety only, and he, or his solicitor (who was also a trustee of the settlement), deposited with the second mortgagee the purchase deeds of 1806, and the deeds of charge of 1812. In 1832 the second mortgagee first had notice of the settlement, and in 1835 she bought in the annuity. The annuitant died in 1837. In 1851 the trustee of the settlement died. Since 1832, the second mortgagee had been in possession. T. died in 1866:—Held, that possession of the title deeds did not give the second mortgagee priority. Thorpe v. Holdsworth, 38 L. J., Ch. 194; L. R. 7 Eq. 139; 17 W. R. 394.

Held, also, that the second mortgagee could not be deprived of the custody of the deeds; but, upon a sale being decreed, the deeds were ordered to be produced, at the instance of the parties interested in the second moiety, who would be at liberty to take attested copies. Ib.

—— Getting Possession of Deed.]—A subsequent incumbrancer, without notice, protected by getting possession of the deed creating an outstanding term. Knott, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 613; 8 R. R. 254.

Deposit by Trustee—Beneficiary Preferred.]—A fund, the property of A., was, together with moneys the property of a third party, lent to X., who secured the same by a legal mortgage to B. as A.'s trustee. B.'s trusteeship not appearing on the face of the mortgage, he, by a separate instrument, declared the trusts of A.'s fund in favour of A. B. afterwards wrongfully deposited the mortgage deeds with C. to secure an advance to himself. The fund being paid into court by arrangement on paying off the mortgage:—Held, that A. was entitled to receive his portion to the exclusion of C.'s right as depositee. Stackhouse v. Jersey (Countess), 1 J. & H. 721; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 359; 4 L. T. 204; 9 W. R. 453.

—— Mere Possession.]—The mere possession of the deeds by C. gave him no advantage which he could actively assert. Ib.

Transfer of Mortgage by Trustee in Breach of Trust—Cestui que Trust Preferred to Transferee without Notice and with Deed.]—A sum of 135,000*l.* was advanced to B., on mortgage, in the name of S., who at the same time executed three declarations or trust by which he declared that he held the mortgage on trust as to 105,000*l.* for E., as to 5,000*l.* for W., and as to 10,000*l.* for N., the rest of the money belonging to himself. N. was the solicitor both of E. and S., and was intrusted by E. with the investment of the 105,000*l.* E. appeared to have trusted to N., and to have made no inquiries as to the precise mode of investment, and it did not appear that he knew of the existence of the declaration of trust in his favour. He denied having known that the security was not taken in his own name, and it was not shown that he had any actual notice that it was not. S. afterwards transferred the mortgage for value to C., who had no notice of the trust, and delivered the deed to him. The legal estate in the property was during the whole of the transactions outstanding:—Held, that E., assuming him to have known S. to be his trustee, was not bound to make any inquiry into the acts or conduct of S. with regard to the security, and that his trusting N., and omitting to make any inquiry as to the person in whom the mortgage was vested, or in whose possession it was, were not sufficient grounds for depriving him, as against C., of the benefit of the prior equitable title obtained by the declaration of trust, and that C.'s possession of the mortgage deed being obtained through a breach of an express trust on the part of S. did not alter the case, and that, in the absence of evidence that E. had notice of the dealings of S. with the security, E. was entitled to priority over C. Cory v. Eyre, 1 De G. J. & S. 149.

Second Mortgagee of Leaseholds, receiving Lease, Preferred to First Mortgagee.]—S., in 1841, executed a legal mortgage of leasehold property to J. to secure 300*l.* and interest. In 1865 he purported to execute another legal mortgage of the property to R. to secure 121*l.* 16*s.* and interest. R. had no notice of the first mortgage, and the lease of the property was given up to him:—Held, that R.'s mortgage was entitled to priority, inasmuch as no explanation was given of the fact of S. being in possession of the lease. Jones v. Rhind, 17 W. R. 1091.

Deeds of a Term, with Declaration of Trust.]—The custody of the deeds creating a term, accompanied by a declaration of the trust of it in favour of a second incumbrancer without notice of the prior mortgage, held to give him an advantage over the first incumbrancer, which a court of equity would not deprive him of. Stanhope v. Verney (Earl), 2 Eden, 81.

Priority of Possession, how Lost.]—The person claiming under such second incumbrancer, upon purchasing the equity of redemption from the mortgagor, was held not to have relinquished such advantages by having covenanted to retain part of the purchase-money to redeem the prior mortgage, as it was also agreed that he might use the money adversely, in case he could not adjust the matter amicably. Ib.

Priority of Subsequent Mortgagee over Vendor's Lien for unpaid Purchase-money.]—A vendor conveyed without receiving his purchase-money; the receipt of it was indorsed on the deed, and the title deeds delivered to the purchaser. The purchaser then made a mortgage by deposit, and absconded:—Held, as between the vendor's lien for his unpaid purchase-money and the right of the mortgagee, that the possession of the title deeds and the fact of the indorsement of the receipt on the deed gave the mortgagee the better equity. Rice v. Rice, 2 Drew. 73; 2 Eq. R. 341; 23 L. J., Ch. 289; 2 W. R. 139.

Purchase of Equity of Redemption in Name of Trustee—Fraudulent Charge by Trustee—Negligence, what.]—The plaintiff purchased an equity of redemption in leaseholds, and for his own convenience took the assignment in the name of C. as trustee, who executed a declaration of trust in favour of the plaintiff. C. fraudulently borrowed money of the defendants, representing himself as the absolute owner, executed an equitable charge by demise of the equity of redemption to the defendants, deposited with them the deed of assignment, and absconded. C. was a confidential clerk, whose duty it was to put away in the safe the plaintiff's securities. In an action by the plaintiff for a declaration that the defendants had no interest or claim in the leaseholds, and for delivery up of the deed of assignment:—Held, that the fact that the plaintiff had under the circumstances allowed C. to have the custody of the deed of assignment was not negligence sufficient to deprive him of the benefit of his prior equitable title. Carritt v. Real and Personal Advance Co., 58 L. J., Ch. 688; 42 Ch. D. 263; 61 L. T. 163; 37 W. R. 677.

Mortgagee not Postponed, in absence of Fraud or gross Negligence.]—Mortgagee of a reversion not having the title deeds shall not be postponed to another mortgagee, whose mortgage was made after mortgagor came into possession, who has the title deeds; there being neither fraud nor gross negligence. Tourle v. Rand, 2 Bro. C. C. 650.

Neglect of Transferee of Equitable Mortgage to give Notice to Mortgagor—Giving up Title Deed.]—A. deposited deeds with his confidential solicitor, with a memorandum of deposit by way of equitable mortgage to secure the repayment of 3,000*l.* The solicitor handed the deeds and memorandum to B. as security for 2,000*l.*, together with a memorandum signed by himself that the 2,000*l.*, part of the annexed 3,000*l.* security, then belonged to B., with interest at 5 per cent The solicitor afterwards obtained a return of the deeds from B., upon an assurance that in lieu thereof others of equal value should be deposited. Other deeds were subsequently deposited, which proved to be worthless. The mortgage of 3,000*l.* was paid off by A.'s representatives, and the genuine deeds were given up to them by the solicitor without the memorandum of deposit. No notice of B.'s security had been given to A. B. then claimed payment of the 2,000*l.* against the estate of A., upon the ground of constructive notice to A., through his confidential solicitor:—Held, that B., by neglecting to give notice to A. of the transfer of the mortgage, and by giving up the documents originally deposited with him, had lost any right he might have had against A.'s estate. Southampton's (Lord) Estate, In re, Allen v. Southampton (Lord), Banfather's Claim, 50 L. J., Ch. 218; 16 Ch. D. 178; 43 L. T. 687; 29 W. R. 231.

Contract to Mortgage on Completion of Purchase—Negligence of Mortgagee—Deposit by Mortgagor with Third Party.]—A mortgagor, who had contracted for the purchase of an advowson, covenanted with A., in consideration of money advanced, to complete the purchase and execute a legal mortgage of the advowson to him. A. gave no notice to the vendor of the advowson and took no steps to perfect his security. Two years afterwards, upon the completion of the purchase, the mortgagor took possession of the title deeds and deposited them with B. as security for money advanced, at the same time covenanting to execute a legal mortgage of the advowson to B. B. had no notice of A.'s charge:—Held, upon a bill by A. for foreclosure, that B., being in possession of the title deeds, was entitled to priority over A. Layard v. Maud, 36 L. J., Ch. 669; L. R. 4 Eq. 397; 16 L. T., 618; 15 W. R. 897.

Mortgage of Building Agreement—Leases granted under it—No Notice to Landlord.]—A company obtained a building agreement of a certain piece of land, by which they covenanted to erect houses thereon, and as they erected houses a separate lease of each house was to be granted to them. They then executed a mortgage deed by which they gave to the mortgagees an equitable mortgage of their interest under the building agreement, and covenanted to give them legal mortgages by demise of the houses when the leases had been granted. The mortgagees did not give notice of their mortgage to the freeholder. Afterwards the company obtained leases of certain houses which they had erected, and deposited them with their bankers by way of equitable security:—Held, that it was not necessary for the first mortgagees to give notice of their mortgage to the landlord in order to complete their security, and that their omission to give such notice was not such negligence as would postpone them to the subsequent equitable mortgagees. Mumford v. Stohwasser (L. R. 18 Eq. 556) considered. Layard v. Maud (L. R. 4 Eq. 397) distinguished. Union Bank v. Kent, 57 L. J., Ch. 1022; 39 Ch. D. 238; 59 L. T. 714; 37 W. R. 364—C. A.

Prior Equitable Mortgagee—When Postponed.]—The cases where a prior equitable mortgagee has been postponed on the ground of negligence are cases where he has taken no steps although he knew that the mortgagor had made default in performing his obligations, and his omission to take such steps has enabled the mortgagor to commit a fraud; but no case decides that he is to be postponed because he has not taken precautions against a future default by a mortgagor who has not yet, to the knowledge of the mortgagee, been guilty of default—Per Fry, L.J. Ib.

Prior Equitable Mortgage—Subsequent Mortgagee with Title Deeds and Legal Estate without Notice.]—A. voluntarily gave to his sisters, in 1848, a mortgage for a term of 200 years, to secure an antecedent debt. The sisters allowed him to retain the title deeds, that he might give security on the estate for another debt, for which he was being sued by L. Shortly afterwards, A. agreed, in writing, to give L. a mortgage on the estate for the debt, and the deeds, in pursuance of this agreement, were deposited with P. & B., the London agents of A.'s solicitor, and who shortly afterwards became his solicitors, to be held by them for the purpose of giving effect to the security. A., in 1851, made a mortgage in fee to C., who had no notice of the prior incumbrances, and P. & B. handed over to C. the title deeds. In 1855 the sisters made a submortgage of the term by assignment:—Held, that the mortgage of 1848 was void under 27 Eliz. c. 4, as against C., who therefore took the legal fee discharged of the term; that C., having no notice, was not affected by the fraud committed by P. & B. in parting with the title deeds; and that, having the title deeds, and having acquired the legal estate for value without notice, he was entitled to priority over the sisters and their assignee, and over the equitable security of L. Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De G. & J. 614; 29 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1322.

—— Fraud of Mortgagor.]—C., an equitable mortgagee (1851) of property, with notice of a prior legal mortgage of it to A. and B. (as the executors of their brother), filed a bill for redemption or foreclosure against A., B., and the mortgagor. The bill stated that A., who was also an unsecured creditor of the mortgagor, proposed to him to make a transfer of the joint mortgage, to secure the last-mentioned debt. The mortgagor, without expressly assenting to that offer, wrote to A., telling him he thought of selling some part of the mortgage security, and, if he did so, he would give A. another security for his debt; but that he (A.) could hold the "legal assignment," as executor of his brother, until he was paid off or received the substituted security. The joint mortgage was paid off and A. and B. prepared and executed a reassignment to A. of the mortgage security, ready for execution by the mortgagee, but did not deliver it to him. The mortgagor subsequently mortgaged the equity of redemption in the property of D., when all the deeds relating to it (including the reassignment executed by A. and B.) were deposited with D. The mortgagor then (1858) absconded without having repaid or given A. the substituted security for his unsecured debt, when also A. and B. first expressly heard of the equitable mortgage to C. A. and B. then (1859) conveyed all their interest in the mortgage property to D.:—Held, on appeal, that the plaintiff was entitled to priority; that D. having advanced his money without notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, and having received the title deeds, ought not to be deprived of them, or required to produce them without payment of what was due to him. Fagg v. James, 8 L. T. 5—L. C.

Agreement to Mortgage—Mortgagee in Possession of Deeds before Mortgage — Interim Mortgage.]—A. agreed to sell an estate to B. for 1,400*l.*, on which 400*l.* was to be paid on the execution of the conveyance, and 1,000*l.* was to be secured on mortgage of the estate. B. paid A. the 400*l.*, and A. conveyed the estate to him, but kept possession of the conveyance and of the title deeds. Some time afterwards B. mortgaged the estate to A. for the 1,000*l.* but, in the interim, he had, unknown to A., mortgaged the estate to C., but C. did not investigate the title to the estate, or make any inquiry relative to the title deeds:—Held, that A. was entitled to priority over C. Worthington v. Morgan, 16 Sim. 547; 18 L. J., Ch. 233; 13 Jur. 316.

Equitable Mortgagees.]—The rule that the court will not postpone a legal mortgagee to a subsequent equitable mortgagee on the ground of any mere carelessness or want of prudence does not apply as between two equitable claims. National Provincial Bank of England v. Jackson, 33 Ch. D. 1; 55 L. T. 458; 34 W. R. 597—C. A.

In order to postpone an equitable mortgagee to another equitable mortgagee whose security is of later date, it is not necessary, as it would be in order to deprive a legal mortgagee of the advantage of the legal estate, to show that the first mortgagee has been guilty of negligence amounting to, or which is evidence of, fraud. Negligence, such as omission to obtain possession of or to make inquiries about the title deeds, may be sufficient. Northern Counties Fire Insurance Co. v. Whipp (26 Ch. D. 482) distinguished. Farrand v. Yorkshire Banking Co., 58 L. J., Ch. 238; 40 Ch. D. 182; 60 L. T. 669; 37 W. R. 318.

—— Negligence.]—In the case of two innocent persons taking equitable mortgages from a fraudulent mortgagor, mere carelessness or want of prudence on the part of the first mortgagee in taking his security is not sufficient to postpone him to the second; for that purpose the negligence must be "gross"; that is, so great as to make the first mortgagee responsible for the fraud committed on the second mortgagee; and, semble, the amount of negligence necessary to postpone a first mortgagee is the same whether his mortgage is legal or equitable. Taylor v. Russell, 59 L. J., Ch. 756; [1891] 1 Ch. 8; 62 L. T. 922; 38 W. R. 663. S. C. in C. A., col. 1571, and H. L., col. 1570.

—— Negligence, what.]—The owner of a farm deposited deeds dated 1774 as security for money due, writing at the same time that the deeds were the title deeds of the farm and were to be a security. He afterwards deposited later title deeds with his bankers by way of security; the bankers had no notice of the prior charge:—Held, that the owner of the prior charge had not been guilty of negligence so as to lose her priority. Dixon v. Muckleston, 42 L. J., Ch. 210; L. R. 8 Ch. 155; 27 L. T. 804; 21 W. R. 178.

b. Recitals, Notice by.

Effect of general Recital.]—A general recital in a deed that there were mortgages on the estate, held to affect parties claiming under the deed with notice of a mortgage not specified therein. Farrow v. Rees, 4 Beav. 18; 4 Jur. 1028.

False Recital, Effect of.]—P. being indebted to B. makes a mortgage of an equity of redemption of real estate to B. for the purpose of securing the debt, and by the indenture of mortgage it was falsely recited that the mortgaged estate was subject to an equitable charge for moneys due to J., secured by the deposit of a deed. P. retained the deed in his own possession, and subsequently deposited it with J., as a security for money partly lent to P. by J. before and partly after the mortgage of the estate to B. J. at the time of the deposit had no notice of the prior mortgage to B.:—Held, that, inasmuch as an actual prior charge on the estate, if afterwards paid off by P. or otherwise avoided, would have left B. in the position of the first mortgagee of the equity of redemption, the recital of a charge, which had in fact, no existence, could not have the effect of postponing B.; that the interest acquired by J., by the subsequent mortgage by way of deposit, could not be enlarged by the effect of the false recital, and was only an interest in the equity of redemption subject to the mortgage to B.; and that B., in a suit for that purpose, was entitled, as against J., to the ordinary decree for payment, or for foreclosure and delivery up of the deed on default. Frazer v. Jones, 5 Hare, 475. Affirmed, on appeal, but with some variations in form, S. C. 17 L. J., Ch. 353; 12 Jur. 443.

Quære, as to delivery up of deed if J. had not had notice of the mortgage. Ib.

W., a solicitor, purchased an estate, subject to a mortgage, taking the conveyance in the name of G., who by it covenanted to pay the mortgage-money. The solicitor, being afterwards indebted to E., and pressed for the money, offered E. the security of the estate, and a mortgage deed was accordingly executed between W. and E. in the usual form, as if W. had borrowed the money of E. W. paid the interest for some time, and then E. sued W. on his covenant to pay principal and interest contained in the mortgage deed, and G. filed a bill to restrain him:—Held, that, though the recitals in the deed were not true, that did not give the mortgagee any notice of fraud, or prevent him from suing on the covenants. Greenfield v. Edwardes, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 419; 12 L. T. 411; 13 W. R. 668.

—— Surety—Fraud of Principal.]—Held, also that, considering G. as a surety, he would not be discharged by the fraud of his principal, of which E., the mortgagee, had no notice. Ib.

Security notwithstanding Recital.]—Mortgagee held, notwithstanding a recital in the declaration of trusts, to have obtained a security to the extent of the interest of mortgagor in the premises. Sheldon v. Cox, 2 Eden, 224.

Recital working Estoppel—Deed void under 27 Eliz. c. 4.]—In 1872 T. mortgaged property to the plaintiffs, which they wished to foreclose. At that time they had notice only of a prior mortgage to the reversionary society. In 1874 T. filed a petition for the liquidation of his affairs by arrangement, and his stepdaughter P. then produced, for the first time, a mortgage of the same property dated the 15th August, 1871, to secure a sum of money lent by her to T. in 1864. She proved her debt in the liquidation, and handed her security to the trustee, who claimed to have it paid off. The deed contained a recital that T. had agreed to give her a mortgage as a security for the money:—Held, that the deed had not been communicated to P., that it was voluntary and void against the plaintiffs under 27 Eliz. c. 4, and that, though the recital would have worked an estoppel against the mortgagor and persons simply claiming under him, it had no such effect against the plaintiffs, who obtained their title under the statute. Cracknell v. Janson, 11 Ch. D. 1; 40 L. T. 640; 27 W. R. 851—C. A. Affirming 48 L. J., Ch. 168.

Negligence of Mortgagee—In not Inquiring.]—A mortgage given by B. in 1832 to an insurance company, from which he had obtained a loan of money, recited a previous deed, dated in 1823, executed by A. and B., for the settlement of certain family estates, and for the payment of some of A.'s debts, and recited that in that deed a sum of 3,200*l.* was due to D., as trustee for an infirmary, on a judgment against A. and B.; that that money, with interest, had been paid off; and that it was intended to enter satisfaction on that and all other judgments affecting the mortgaged lands. There were separate judgments, at the suit of D., against A. and against B., dated in 1810 and 1812; but a warrant of attorney, given by D. in 1819, authorised satisfaction to be entered on the roll as to them. There was no judgment against them jointly for the sum stated in the mortgage. The mortgagee caused satisfaction to be entered on the roll as to the separate judgments of 1810 and 1812, but made no farther inquiries:—Held, that, as the mortgage itself had recited a joint judgment for a specific sum, the mortgagee had been guilty of negligence in not looking farther into the matter, and must therefore be taken to have had a proper notice of the unsatisfied claim under the deed of 1823. Montefiore v. Browne, 7 H. L. Cas. 241; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1201.

—— In not Verifying Recital.]—A testator gave his real estate for a term of 800 years to A.,

his son, and B., a stranger, to secure payment of so much of his debts and legacies as his personal estate should be insufficient to pay. Subject thereto he gave his residuary real estate to A. and C., another son. A. and C. were his executors; they paid his debts and legacies except two legacies of 1,500*l.* each. At the testator's death, his personal estate was sufficient to pay the two 1,500*l.* legacies; but the executors wasted it, and the two legacies of 1,500*l.* each were not paid. A. and C. (B. being dead) made two mortgages; one to persons who knew, or had the means of knowing, that the advance was for the personal use of A. and C., but the money was paid into the hands of A. alone, the surviving trustee of the term; the other mortgage was to a person without notice of any improper application of the money; and the deed recited truly that the debts were paid, but untruly that the two legacies not paid were provided for, and the trusts satisfied:—Held, that the second mortgagee was liable to be postponed, by his own neglect in verifying the recital of the deed. Howard v. Chaffers, 2 Dr. & Sm. 236; 32 L. J., Ch. 686; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 767; 9 L. T. 243; 11 W. R. 1057.

Held, secondly, that the payment of the money by the first mortgagee to the trustee of the term alone did not prevent the effect of the mortgage, knowing it was not advanced on the trust. Ib.

In Lease.]—Mortgagee of a lease which recited the surrender of a former lease which was in consideration of the surrender of a former lease, in which plaintiff's title appeared:—Held, to have notice of the title. Coppin v. Fernyhough, 2 Bro. C. C. 291.

In Deed of Assignment of Equity of Redemption.]—A., first mortgagee, after an order for foreclosure against the mortgagor, purchased from C., the trustee in bankruptcy of his mortgagor, the equity of redemption in the mortgaged premises. N. was a second mortgagee of the same, besides other property. The deed of assignment contained recitals that C. had agreed to sell to A., subject to the claim of N., at the price of 1,400*l.*, and that 1,380*l.*, the first mortgage debt, should be retained by A. out of the purchase-money, and it was thereby witnessed that, in consideration of the sum of 1,380*l.* so retained in full satisfaction of the mortgage debt of 1,380*l.*, which sum A. did thereby declare to be fully satisfied, and also in consideration of 20*l.* paid to C. by A., the receipt whereof making, with the 1,380*l.* so retained, the purchase-money of 1,400*l.*, he, C., did grant, bargain, &c., all those hereditaments, . . . subject to the claim of N.:—Held, that upon the deed itself there was no intention shewn on the part of the first mortgagee to postpone his own mortgage debt. Adams v. Angell, 25 W. R. 139. Affirmed, 46 L. J., Ch. 352; 5 Ch. D. 634; 36 L. T. 334—C. A.

In Deeds Deposited—Constructive Notice.]—Among title deeds deposited by way of equitable mortgage was a deed which formed an essential link in the mortgagor's title; this deed stated that the mortgagor was a widow, and contained recitals of proceedings in chancery, and an award of arbitrators, in pursuance of which she became entitled to premises, the subject of an intended mortgage. The proceedings and award, if referred to, would have shewn that the mortgagor was entitled as administratrix:—Held, that the mortgagees had constructive notice of the mortgagor's representative character, and that the mortgage could not prevail against the right of those beneficially entitled; and this on the supposition that a statement had been made to the mortgagee that the mortgagor was entitled absolutely. Stein v. Stein, 16 W. R. 69.

7. MORTGAGES OF PERSONALTY—NOTICE TO LEGAL OWNER.

Notice to Trustee—Charge of Mortgage Debt by First Mortgagee—Subsequent Mortgage—Notice by sub-Mortgagee.]—Several persons were incumbrancers upon a fund due to E. in the hands of W. By agreement between E. and the incumbrancers it was arranged that the money should be paid over to C., to be distributed between himself and the other incumbrancers according to their priorities. Prior to this arrangement, M., who was the first incumbrancer for 1,300*l.*, charged that sum with 400*l.* in favour of C. No notice of the charge was given to W., neither was it mentioned in the agreement. M. afterwards assigned to N. the whole of the 1,300*l.* as a security for a loan. N. had no notice of C.'s charge. He gave notice both to W. and to C.:—Held, that N.'s charge was entitled to priority. Public Works Commissioners v. Harby, 23 Beav. 508; 26 L. J., Ch. 472; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 478; 5 W. R. 400.

—— By Second Mortgagee — Subsequent Judgment Creditor.]—By his will a testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate to two trustees to sell the same, and, after paying an annuity, to divide the proceeds among a certain class, of which F. P. D. was one. A suit was instituted for the administration of the testator's estate. F. P. D., by deed, dated in 1837, assigned his share to B. D. (one of the trustees), to secure advances. By deed, dated in 1844, he assigned his share to S. S., to secure advances, and notice of that deed was given by S. S. to the trustees. By an order in the cause, dated in 1845, the real estates of the testator were directed to be sold, and the produce to be paid into court and invested, and the stock representing the purchase-money stood to the credit of the cause. In 1846 C. J. obtained and registered a judgment against F. P. D., and by a judge's order, under the statutes 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 82, it was ordered, that the stock should stand charged with the amount for which the judgment was obtained; and the judge's order was filed in November, 1848, in the office of the accountant-general. B. D., the first assignee, took no steps beyond his deed, nor did S. S. obtain any stop-order:—Held, under these circumstances, that C. J. did not obtain any priority over S. S. Bearcliffe v. Dorrington, 19 L. J., Ch. 331; 14 Jur. 1101.

—— Prior Annuitant—Subsequent Mortgagee, Claiming through Notice given by Another.]—By indenture of the 21st of January, 1820, executed upon the marriage of D. C. M., two sums, of 2,000*l.* and 3,000*l.*, secured by the several bonds and warrants collateral of Lord K. and his son, were vested in trustees, upon trust for D. C. M. for life, with an ultimate remainder to him absolutely, in case there should be no children of the marriage. Judgments were subsequently entered upon these bonds. In May, 1825, the trustees transferred to D. C. M. the bond for 2,000*l.* and the warrant collateral, but did not assign the judgment; and in the following month D. C. M. assigned this bond and warrant to W. S. as a security for 1,998*l.* 17*s.* advanced by W. S. to D. C. M.; and subsequently W. S. pledged these same securities with his bankers, by whom, in 1833, for the first time, notice was given to one of the trustees of the settlement of 1820. Payments were, from time to time, made by D. C. M. to W. S., and in the year 1837 200*l.* only remained due to W. S., which having been then paid off, the securities were got up by W. S. from his bankers, and reassigned to a trustee for D. C. M.; and within a few days afterwards that trustee and D. C. M. assigned the same securities to the plaintiff in the second cause, in consideration of a pre-existing debt and moneys then advanced. Previously to this, in the month of November, 1829, D. C. M. had granted to the plaintiff in the first cause an annuity charged upon his life-estate. It appeared, in evidence, that in the year 1831, and even prior thereto, application had been addressed by the plaintiff in the first cause to Lord K., one of the obligors, and to his agent, and that payments had been made by the latter to the plaintiff in respect of the annuity, and, further, that in the year 1833 a suit had been instituted in the court of exchequer, by the same plaintiff, for enforcing payment of the annuity, in which suit the trustees of the settlement of 1820 were made defendants. A question of priority having arisen between the plaintiffs in the first and second causes:—Held, that the plaintiff in the second cause could not be regarded as a party claiming through or under W. S., and therefore that the notice given on the part of W. S., in 1833, could not be considered as operating for his benefit, and consequently that his claim was to be postponed. M'Carthy v. Kingston (Earl), Dr. 439.

—— Sole Surviving Trustee alleging no Notice.]—By a marriage settlement, executed in 1834, trust funds were vested in three trustees, for the wife for her life, without power of anticipation, and (in the event which happened) as she should by deed or will appoint. In 1843 the husband joined with his wife in appointing part of the trust funds to secure a debt due from him to D., and notice of that appointment was given to the two then surviving trustees of the settlement. In 1848 the then surviving trustee of it was released from the trusts and three new trustees appointed. The two survivors of those trustees, and afterwards the sole survivor of them, joined with the wife in various dealings with the trust funds. In 1867 the wife appointed a portion of the funds to the sole surviving trustee of the settlement by way of indemnity to him, and the estate of the other trustee who had dealt with the funds at her request. There were other subsequent dealings with the funds. Bills were filed to administer the trusts of the settlement, and ascertain the priorities of the various incumbrancers. The sole surviving trustee of the settlement alleged that he had had no notice of the appointment of 1843:—Held, that the appointees under that deed were entitled in priority to all other incumbrancers on the funds. Phipps v. Lovegrove, 42 L. J., Ch. 892; L. R. 16 Eq. 80; 28 L. T. 584; 21 W. R. 590.

Notice to Executor.]—G., by will, gave to his wife the use of all his household goods so long as she continued his widow; he also gave the rents arising from his freehold and leasehold houses to her so long as she lived and continued to be his widow, for the maintenance of his children; and he also gave the rents arising from another house to his wife so long as she lived and continued to be his widow; and, if at the death or marriage of his wife his youngest child should have attained twenty-one, then he ordained that his executrixes, or the survivor of them, and the executor or administrator of such survivor, should sell all his freehold and leasehold property and household furniture, and the moneys arising therefrom he gave amongst his children and R., the son of his wife, equally; but, if any should die leaving no lawful issue, before the death or marriage of his wife, then the whole of the money was to be divided equally amongst the surviving children and R. The testator appointed his wife and his three sisters executrixes, two of whom died some time after, leaving the widow and one sister of the testator (who subsequently married L.) surviving. The widow had not married again. In June, 1855, R. assigned to the plaintiff all his share, to which he was or might become entitled under the will, in the real and personal estate, and the proceeds thereof, and the rents of the same, to secure the payment to the plaintiff of money lent by them; and in July following the plaintiff gave notice to the two executrixes surviving of the indenture of June. D. alleged that R., by an indenture dated in March, 1854, assigned his reversionary interest under the will to him to secure the payment of money lent; but in May, 1855, one of the executrixes wrote to the plaintiff, stating that R. had not, to her knowledge, made any assignment or mortgage. The question, on a bill to redeem or foreclose, was whether the plaintiff, whose assignment was later in date, but of which notice had been given, was entitled to priority over D., who had neglected to give notice to the executrixes: and the court held that the plaintiff was entitled to priority. Consolidated Investment and Insurance Co. v. Riley, 1 Giff. 371; 29 L. J., Ch. 123; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1283; 8 W. R. 102.

—— Grant of Annuity out of Legacy—Covenant by Third Person to answer Annuity—Subsequent Mortgage of Legacy.]—A testatrix bequeathed a sum of 1,000*l.* to trustees in trust to invest the same, and to pay the annual produce during the life of M. F. H. into her proper hands, or to her order, for her separate use. The testatrix died in 1838, and by deed dated the 24th of October, 1840, M. F. H., in consideration of 300*l.*, granted an annuity of 30*l.* to J. H., payable half-yearly during M. F. H.'s lifetime, out of the dividends and interest to accrue on the legacy of 1,000*l.* or the securities for the same. This annuity was afterwards assigned to trustees for J. H. By another deed of like date, and made between C. H. and the several parties to the other deed, C. H. covenanted with J. H. to pay to her the annuity of 30*l.* as often as default should be made in payment thereof by M. F. H., until the legacy should be invested by the testatrix's executor, and it was by the same deed agreed that C. H. should stand in the place of J. H., as regarded the interest and dividends to accrue due to the extent of any sums that might be paid by him to J. H. previously to the investment of the legacy. C. H. paid divers sums to J. H. under his covenant, and in November, 1840, the executor received notice of J. H.'s security, and in 1846 he received notice of a subsequent mortgage executed by M. F. H. of her interest in the same dividends and interest to S., but no express notice was given to the executor of the deed to which C. H. was a party until May, 1848. In July, 1848, the legacy of 1,000*l.*, less the duty, and the interest thereon amounting to 339*l.* 10*s.*, were paid into court by the executor under the statute 10 & 11 Vict. c. 96, to an account intituled "The account of M. F. H. and her incumbrancers" :—Held, that C. H. was entitled to priority over S. to the extent of the payments made by him to J. H. Cawthorne, In re, 12 Beav. 56 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 116.

Notice of Deed not Notice of Contents.]—Notice of an assignment upon the purchase of a part of a fund, to which the vendor was contingently entitled, is not notice of a covenant by the vendor in the same deed to pay the premiums for keeping up a policy of assurance, or of a declaration that any payment which may be made by the purchaser shall be a charge upon the entire fund. Bright's Trusts, In re, 21 Beav. 430 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 449 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 300 ; 4 W. R. 381.

The vendor of part of a fund, to which he was contingently entitled, covenanted in the deed of assignment to insure his life against that of the tenant for life, and to keep the policy on foot ; but it was declared that, in case of default, the purchaser might pay the premiums, and that such payments should be a charge on the entire fund. The purchaser gave notice to the trustees of the assignment made to him, but he omitted all notice of the policy or the possibility of his having to pay the premiums. The vendor afterwards mortgaged the remainder of his interest in the fund to other persons. The mortgagees gave notice of their securities, and, after the death of the tenant for life, the purchaser gave notice of his claim, including in it the sums he had paid for premiums upon the policy :—Held, that the first notice was insufficient to give the purchaser a priority for the premiums paid, and that, so far, he must be postponed to the mortgagees. Ib.

Priority depending on Notice to Trustees of original Settlement.]—The priority of assignments of the equitable interest in personal estate settled upon such trusts as A. shall appoint, and appointed by A. to trustees for the assignor, depends upon priority of notice to the trustees of the original settlement, so long as the trust estate is under their control ; consequently, a mortgagee of such interest, who gave notice of his mortgage to the trustees under the appointment, but not to the trustees of the original settlement, was postponed to a subsequent mortgagee without notice of the prior mortgage, who gave notice to both sets of trustees. Bridge v. Beadon, L. R. 3 Eq. 664 ; 15 W. R. 527.

Notice before Fund comes into Possession.]—Notice of a charge on a fund given to one before the fund comes into his possession is wholly ineffectual. Somerset v. Cox, 33 Beav. 634.

Notice of an equitable assignment having been given to the trustees before the fund actually reached their hands :—Held, to give priority over a subsequent assignment, of which earlier notice was given. Buller v. Plunkett, 30 L. J., Ch. 641 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 873 ; 9 W. R. 190.

1. SUCCESSIVE MORTGAGES.

Generally.] — As to taking securities, see Morret v. Paske, 2 Atk. 52.

Third mortgagee buying up first, becomes prior to second. Hasket v. Strong, 2 Str. 689.

Equitable Mortgagees.] — Where several mortgagees have all equal equity, and the legal estate is obtained by none of them, but remains in trustees throughout, the incumbrances are available according to their several dates only, and there can be no preference inter se :— Held, therefore, first mortgagee being also third cannot tack the two securities, so as to exclude the mesne one. Frere v. Moore, 8 Price, 475 ; 22 R. R. 759.

Against Creditors.] — Tacking securities against creditors or assignees for valuable consideration. Adams v. Claxton, 6 Ves. 226 ; 5 R. R. 263.

Notice.]—Purchaser of an equity of redemption cannot set up a prior mortgage of his own, or which he has got in, against subsequent incumbrances of which he had notice. Toulmin v. Steere, 3 Mer. 210 ; 17 R. R. 67.

Without Notice.]—It is an established rule, in equity, that a third mortgagee without notice of second, may, by paying off first incumbrance, and taking an assignment of his interest to himself, hold the estate against the second mortgagee, until he shall be paid what is due to him on both mortgages. Belchier v. Renforth, 5 Bro. P. C. 292.

An owner mortgaged first to A., secondly to B., and he then conveyed to C. "in trust" to sell and pay A., and a debt due to D., and another due to C., and the residue to the owner. C. had no notice of B.'s mortgage ; afterwards got a transfer of A.'s mortgage, and with it the legal estate :—Held, that C. was entitled to tack the third charge to the first mortgage, and exclude B. Spencer v. Pearson, 24 Beav. 266.

—— Against Writ of Elegit.]—A mortgagee, although without notice of any writ of elegit having been issued, is not entitled to tack a subsequent charge to his first mortgage on redemption by the tenant by elegit. Champneys v. Burland, 23 L. T. 584 ; 19 W. R. 148.

—— Through Solicitor.]—A., having previously mortgaged property to B., entered into an agreement with his bankers for a second mortgage to secure an overdrawn balance. The original mortgage, after several transfers, became vested in C. C. transferred to D., who at the same time advanced a further sum. C.'s son acted as his solicitor in the transfer to C., and as the solicitor of C. and D. in the transfer to D. At the time of the transfer to C. notice was given to his son of the second mortgage:—Held, that, inasmuch as he did not acquire his knowledge while acting as D.'s solicitor, D. was not bound by notice, and was entitled to tack his further charge to his first mortgage. Bulpett v. Sturges, 22 L. T. 739; 18 W. R. 796.

Extent of Principle.]—The doctrine of tacking is applicable only in the case of an existing debt. Kirkwood, In re, 1 L. R., Ir. 108.

A mortgagee cannot tack to his debt another mortgage debt, the property mortgaged to secure which has ceased to exist. Banner v. Berridge, 50 L. J., Ch. 630; 18 Ch. D. 254; 44 L. T. 680; 29 W. R. 844; 4 Asp. M. C. 420.

The right to tack in equity not affected by the relation to the act of bankruptcy. Knott, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 619.

—— Foreclosure — Trusts for Sale.]—The rules as to tacking one mortgage to another apply to foreclosure as well as to redemption suits, and to mortgages of equitable personalty, by way of trusts for sale, as well as to ordinary mortgages of real estate. Watts v. Symes, 1 De G. M. & G. 240; 16 Jur. 114.

—— On Petition for Sale.]—A mortgagee is entitled to tack one mortgage to another on his petition for a sale, if the assignees decline an offer made by him to abandon all right of proof on their releasing the equity of redemption in both mortgages; and semble, that he would be so entitled whether such offer were made or not, and that the right of tacking is the same whether the party seeking relief is the mortgagor or the mortgagee. Berridge, Ex parte, Loosemore, In re, 3 Mont. D. & D. 464; 7 Jur. 1141.

—— Equity of Redemption coming to First Mortgagee as Executor.]—The right of the first mortgagee with the legal estate to take as against mesne mortgagee does not cover a mortgage of the equity of redemption coming to him as executor. Barnett v. Weston, 12 Ves. 130; 8 R. R. 319.

Equity of Redemption in different Persons.]—The principle upon which a court of equity allows the tacking of mortgages does not apply to a case where the equity of redemption belongs to different persons at the time when the mortgagee's title to both estates accrues. White v. Hillacre, 3 Y. & C. C. C. 597; 4 Jur. 102. See S. P., Marcon v. Bloxam, 11 Ex. 586; 25 L. J., Ex. 193.

Rights of Transferee.]—Two estates subject to distinct first mortgages vested in different mortgagees were both again mortgaged to the same second mortgagees; afterwards the two first mortgages were transferred to one person, with notice of the second mortgagee:—Held, that the transferee was, in a foreclosure suit by him instituted against the second mortgagee, entitled to tack the two first mortgages together. Vint v. Padgett, 2 De G. & J. 611; 28 L. J., Ch. 21; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1122; 6 W. R. 641.

After Bill brought.]—After a bill brought by a second mortgagee against the first and third mortgagees to discover incumbrances, the last mortgagee may get in the first incumbrance, and protect himself against the second. Hawkins v. Taylor, 2 Vern. 29.

Pending Bill.]—Third mortgagee buys in the first, though pending a bill brought by the second mortgagee to redeem the first, yet the third mortgagee shall tack the first mortgage to his third mortgage. Brace v. Marlborough (Duke), 2 P. Wms. 491; Moseley, 50. See also 9 Mod. 38.

Pendente lite.]—Third mortgagee, buying in the first mortgage pendente lite, shall exclude the second. Robinson v. Davison, 1 Bro. C. C. 63.

Third mortgagee having pendente lite, and after the first mortgagee had by his answer submitted (on payment of the money due to him) to assign to the plaintiff, the second mortgagee, obtained an assignment of the first mortgage, decreed to be entitled to hold the estate against the second mortgagee, till he should be paid what was due to him upon both, he having had no notice of the second mortgage when he advanced his money. Belchier v. Butler, 1 Eden, 522.

A subsequent incumbrancer, though pendente lite, may buy in a prior mortgage, which, though satisfied, shall not be taken from him until all the money due to him on the subsequent incumbrance be paid him. Turner v. Richmond, 2 Vern. 81.

After Decree.]—A third mortgagee cannot take in a prior security, to displace a second mortgagee, after a decree to account, and before the master has made his report. Wortley v. Birkhead, 3 Atk. 811.

Tacking allowed up to a decree to settle priorities, not afterwards. Knott, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 619; 8 R. R. 254.

Commission of Bankruptcy.]—A. makes a mortgage, and afterwards a commission of bankruptcy is taken out against him, and commissioners make an assignment of his estate, and then B. lends 200*l.* to the bankrupt on a second mortgage, having notice of the bankruptcy, and afterwards he gets in the first mortgage: this prior mortgage shall not protect the mortgage subsequent to the bankruptcy. Hitchcock v. Sedgwick, 2 Vern. 157.

The claim to tack by a third mortgagee, having taken in the first mortgage of the inheritance, but subject to a term outstanding, given up as against a mesne incumbrancer; as against the assignees under the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, quære; the commission being subsequent to the last mortgage; whether the act of bankruptcy was previous, doubtful. No objection that the consideration for the last mortgage was a debt originally by simple contract. Knott, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 609; 8 R. R. 254.

Distinction as to tacking between a commission of bankruptcy, and a decree to settle priorities. Ib. 619.

Mortgagee not permitted to tack as against the assignees in bankruptcy a mortgage subsequent to an act of bankruptcy, though without notice, and previous to the commission, and though he had the legal estate. Herbert, Ex parte, 13 Ves. 183.

Second Legal Mortgagee Paying off Equitable Mortgage—Effect on Prior Legal Mortgage.]—W. was owner in fee of certain property, and prior to the 1st May, 1879, mortgaged it by deposit of title deeds to secure an advance by G. On the 1st May, 1879, W. gave a legal mortgage of the same property to B. to secure a debt owed by him. B. at the time of the execution of the mortgage did not know of the equitable mortgage to G. In June, 1879, W. applied to the defendant to make an advance to pay off the charge held by G. The defendant advanced the money; G. handed the deeds back to W., who handed them to H., who was acting for all parties; and H. in his turn handed them to the defendant. W. on or about the same date executed a legal mortgage of the same premises to the defendant to secure his advance. This deed did not recite the mortgage of the 1st May to B., nor was the defendant aware of its existence. B. subsequently became insolvent, and his trustee in liquidation claimed priority for the mortgage to B. of the 1st May, over that of June, 1879, to the defendant:—Held, that, as from the nature of the transaction between the parties it was intended that the defendant should stand in the place of the equitable mortgagee, he was entitled to priority over the first legal mortgagee to the extent of the amount of the equitable mortgage. Mason v. Rhodes, 53 L. T. 322.

Mortgagor, Fraud of—Deeds left with—Negligence—Priority.]—By two separate mortgage deeds, dated the 7th August, 1877, N., who was S.'s solicitor, mortgaged to W. and S. two separate estates, A. and B., to secure 1,250*l.* on each estate. The B. estate comprised five separate properties, which were separately described and numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. S. asked N., as it was a trust matter, to send him the deeds, and N. sent a parcel, which S. sent on to his bankers without examination. It was afterwards found to contain only the two mortgage deeds. On the 20th October, 1880, N. deposited the title-deeds relating to 5 with L. to secure 300*l.* On the 18th May, 1881, he deposited the deeds relating to 1, 2, 3, and 4, to secure an overdraft of 3,000*l.* with his bankers, the plaintiffs. The deed relating to the A. estate had been previously deposited with the plaintiffs to secure his overdraft. Neither L. nor the plaintiffs had at the time of their advances any notice of the first mortgage, nor had the plaintiffs any notice of the advance to L. In June, 1882, N. became bankrupt. In July, 1882, the plaintiffs took a transfer of the mortgages to W. and S. They then brought this action for foreclosure, claiming to tack the sum due on their equitable mortgage to that due on the first mortgage of B., so as to gain priority over L.:—Held (1), that S. had not been guilty of such negligence as to postpone his legal mortgage to the subsequent equitable incumbrances; (2), that the general rule as to tacking applied, though the third mortgage did not include that part of the property in the first which was comprised in the second, and that the plaintiffs had a right to recover the whole of their debt in priority to L. out of all the B. estate. Atherley v. Burnett, 52 L. T. 736; 33 W. R. 779.

Trustee for Mortgagor getting in Legal Estate.]—The trustee of a mortgagor is not entitled to avail himself of the legal estate for the purpose of altering the priorities of the mortgagees. Ledbrook v. Passman, 57 L. J., Ch. 855; 59 L. T. 306.

The owner of a farm mortgaged it in succession to three persons, the third mortgagee having no notice of the second mortgage. By a deed made between the mortgagor and P., in order (as was recited to stop) a forced sale by the mortgagees, the equity of redemption was conveyed to P. upon trust for sale, with power to postpone the sale and raise money by mortgage or otherwise to pay off the mortgagees, and the proceeds were to be held by P. upon trust to pay his costs and expenses, and, after payment of the same and the mortgages, to pay the residue to the mortgagor. P., having notice of the second mortgage, paid off the first and third out of his own moneys and took a transfer of the benefit of them, and he subsequently got in the legal estate. Upon an action by the second mortgagee for redemption:—Held, that P. acted as trustee for the mortgagor, and that he was not entitled to tack to the prejudice of the second mortgagee, but that he was entitled to add his costs to his security. Ib.

Buying in Satisfied Mortgage, or Statute.]—If A. mortgages land to B., and then makes another mortgage of it to C. without notice, and C. purchases a precedent mortgage outstanding at law, though nothing be due upon it, or a statute whereon money is due which he extends, he shall hold the land until he is satisfied, though he had notice of B.'s mortgage before his second purchase of the prior security; for, as he lent his money innocently at first, he may do what he can to secure it, and it is of no consequence that money is not due on the first incumbrance, since the legal title is bought up. March v. Lee, 1 Ch. Ca. 162, 163, 166; 2 Vent. 337. Churchill v. Grove, 1 Ch. Ca. 36. Edmunds v. Povey, 1 Vern. 187. Higgon v. Syddal, 1 Ch. Ca. 149. Hacket v. Wakefield, Hardr. 172. Bovey v. Skipwith, 1 Ch. Ca. 201.

When a purchaser buys in an old estate or mortgage, though nothing is due upon it, yet in equity he shall defend himself by it. Hitchcock v. Sedgwick, 2 Vern. 159.

—— By Undue Means.]—So he shall though he got in this prior incumbrance by undue means. Ib.

Mortgage after Release of Equity of Redemption.]—A man makes a first mortgage and afterwards for a further consideration absolutely releases the equity of redemption, and then makes a second mortgage: the second mortgagee shall protect himself under an old statute. Hitchcock v. Sedgwick, 2 Vern. 160.

Protection by Old Statute.]—One articles to sell lands to A., and afterwards articles to sell the same lands to B. B. pays the money and gets a conveyance, and A. assigns his articles to C., who gets in an old statute: he shall defend himself by it. Ib.

Legal Mortgagee Tacking Subsequent Equitable Interest.]—A legal mortgagee, acquiring a subsequent equitable interest, is entitled to tack the subsequent equitable interest to the legal mortgage, so as to exclude an intermediate equitable charge, if he had not notice of that intermediate equitable charge. Lloyd v. Attwood, 3 De G. & J. 614; 29 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1322.

By Mortgagee of Contract of Sale as against Purchaser of Estate.]—A., having mortgaged an estate to B. and C. in succession, agreed to sell it to D. free from incumbrances; part of the purchase-money was to be paid down, and the rest on the completion of the purchase. During the investigation of the title, A. induced D., who was ignorant of the mortgages, to make further payments on account of the purchase-money, and, having also raised a further sum from E. on the security of his contract without giving him notice of C.'s mortgage, became insolvent and absconded. D. thereupon, with notice of all that had happened, paid off C.'s mortgage out of the balance of the purchase-money remaining due, and E., to secure himself, took an assignment of B.'s mortgage. But the balance of the purchase-money not being sufficient to pay both E.'s charge and what E. had paid to B.:—Held, that E. was not entitled to tack his security to B.'s mortgage, first, because his security was not a security on the estate, but only on the purchase-money; and secondly, because, although E., at the time he advanced his money, had no notice of any particular incumbrance on the estate except B.'s, he knew that he was dealing for a supposed balance, out of which D., having contracted for the estate free from incumbrances, would be entitled to pay off any incumbrances to which the estate might be found to be subject, and therefore the equities of D. and E. were not equal. Lacey v. Ingle, 2 Ph. 413.

Priority, how Lost.]—If third incumbrancer, having constructive notice of second mortgage, fails to keep on foot first security for his protection, he is not entitled to stand in place of first mortgagee against second. Parry v. Wright, 1 Sim. & S. 369; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 174; 24 R. R. 191. Affirmed, 5 Russ. 142. And see Parry v. Parry and Parry v. Maddocks, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 161.

A subsequent title which is both legal and equitable destroys a prior title in equity only. Hagshaw v. Yates, 1 Str. 240.

Proof of Loan.]—Third mortgagee buys in the first, and brings bill to foreclose the second. He need not prove the money actually lent on the third mortgage, the producing an acquittance being sufficient. Holt v. Mill, 2 Vern. 279.

2. Further Advances.

As against Judgment.]—A. mortgaged to B., which was registered, then A. borrowed from C. on a judgment also registered. B. lent farther sum without express notice of C.'s registry, &c.:—Held, B. was entitled to foreclosure, unless both debts paid. Wrightson v. Hudson, 2 Eq. Abr. 498. S. P., Bedford v. Backhouse, id. 615.

—— After Notice.]—Mortgagee, having notice of a judgment, cannot tack against the judgment creditor sums advanced after such notice on security of the mortgaged premises. Sish v. Hopkins, Amb. 793.

As against Mesne Judgment.]—A. mortgages to B., then confesses a judgment to C., and afterwards B., without notice of the judgment, advances a further sum of money to A., who executes to him a further mortgage of the same lands for the old debt and the further advance. C. cannot redeem the first mortgage without also redeeming the second. Tenison v. Sweeny, 1 Jo. & Lat. 710; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 511.

A judgment obtained against a mortgagor subsequent to the mortgage, but prior to a further loan advanced by the mortgagee under a borrowing clause not noticed in the memorial of registry of the mortgage, will be postponed to such subsequent loan. Purdon v. Gumbleton, Wall. Lyn. 249.

—— After Notice.]—An estate was mortgaged to A. for a sum, and further advances. Afterwards, B. obtained a charge on the estate, by means of a judgment:—Held, that further advances made to the mortgagor by A., after notice of the judgment, had no priority over B.'s claim. Shaw v. Neale, 20 Beav. 157; 24 L. J., Ch. 563; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 666; 3 W. R. 350.

The doctrine of the case of Gordon v. Graham (2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 598) doubted. Ib.

As against Jointure.]—If a tenant in tail mortgages his land for a term, and on his marriage suffers a recovery, and settles a jointure in consideration of the marriage portion, and then borrows more money of the mortgagee, and appoints the term as a security, the recovery enures to make good the term, and if the mortgagee had no notice of the jointure, he shall be allowed the second money lent, as well as the first. Goddard v. Complin, 1 Ch. Ca. 119.

As against Charge for Younger Children.]—An attorney, having obtained a conveyance from his client of real estate, out of which his wife was dowable, to secure a debt and further advances, afterwards became party to a deed whereby the wife (ignorant of the previous deed) relinquished her dower in consideration of a jointure and a charge on the lands for the younger children:—Held, that further advances made by the solicitor were not entitled to priority over the charge for younger children. Brown v. Lynch, 2 Jones, 706.

As against Rights of Younger Children.]—A testator in 1832 devised his copyhold estate, which was subject to a mortgage, to his wife for life, and then to his children. The will was never proved, and no notice of it was entered on the court rolls. The widow emigrated in 1845, leaving his eldest son in possession of the estate as her agent. In 1851 the son, falsely representing himself to be in possession as heir of his father, procured a further advance upon mortgage of the estate, and the original mortgage being transferred to the second mortgagee, he claimed a right to tack his further advance. The widow died in 1860:—Held, that the mortgagee, having the legal estate, and having no notice of any adverse title, was entitled to be protected against the rights of the children, and to tack his further advance. Young v. Young, L. R. 3 Eq. 801.

As against Surety.]—A. made a mortgage to B., and by the same deed A. and C., his sureties, covenanted for payment of the mortgage money. B. recovered the amount from C., previously to which he lent a further sum to A. and took a further charge for it on the mortgaged property:—Held, that C. could not compel B. to assign the mortgage to him, unless he paid off the further sum. Williams v. Owen, 13 Sim. 597; 13 L. J., Ch. 105; 7 Jur. 1147.

A. mortgaged his freehold and copyhold estates and some drainage bonds, and, by the same deed, his daughters mortgaged their freehold and copyhold estates, to B., to secure 6,000*l.* lent by B. to A., and the deed declared that, without prejudice to any of the rights or remedies of B., his heirs, executors, &c., as between A., his heirs, executors, &c., on the one hand, and the daughters and their heirs, executors, &c., on the other hand, A., his heirs, executors, &c., should be primarily liable to the payment of the 6,000*l.*, and that his freehold and copyhold estates therein comprised should be primarily liable to answer and make good the 6,000*l.* Six years afterwards, A. mortgaged his freehold and copyhold estates comprised in the prior mortgage, and also the drainage bonds, to B., to secure 700*l.* lent to him by B.:—Held, that B. was not entitled, as against A.'s daughters, to tack his second mortgage to the first, but that the daughters were entitled to redeem the first mortgage on payment of the 6,000*l.* Bowker v. Bull, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 29; 20 L. J., Ch. 47; 15 Jur. 4.

As against Mesne Mortgagee.]—A. mortgaged to B., to secure present and future advances, and afterwards executed a similar mortgage of the same property to C. B. and C. had mutually notice of each other's deeds. B. made advances after the date of C.'s mortgage:—Held (affirming 4 Jur. (N.S.) 919), that C. was, in respect of his advances, entitled to priority over B., on account of such subsequent advances made by him. Rolt v. Hopkinson, 3 De G. & J. 177. Affirmed, 9 H. L. Cas. 514; 34 L. J., Ch. 468; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1209; 9 W. R. 900.

Second Mortgage—Notice to first Mortgagee.]—A. mortgages an estate to B. to secure future advances. He then mortgages the same property to C., who gives notice of his security to B. Quære, whether the rights of B. under his mortgage security are affected by the transaction between A. and C. Johnson v. Bourne, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 268.

Advances after Notice of Mesne Mortgage.]—Quære, how far a person having a mortgage for a running account is entitled to charge against a second mortgagee advances made subsequent to notice of his mortgage. Ib.

As against Mesne Mortgagee—Notice, Effect of.]—A. made a mortgage for years to B., to secure a sum already lent, and all sums thereafter to be lent, by B. to A. A. made a second mortgage to C., with notice of the first, and then B., with notice of C.'s mortgage, lent more money. Per cur. The second mortgagee having notice, shall not redeem without paying the whole due to B. Gordon v. Graham, 7 Vin. Abr. 52, pl. 3; 2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 598.

—— Forgiveness of old Debt — Creation of new Debt.]—S., who had a mortgage for 4,000*l.*, forgave the mortgagor 800*l.*, and three years afterwards lent him 800*l.* again; during the intervening time, a mortgage was made to J. for 2,000*l.* on the same estate:—Held, that the loan of 800*l.* cannot be considered as a continuance of the old mortgage, and in respect of an intervening incumbrance is a new one, admitting S. to have notice. Shepherd v. Titley, 2 Atk. 350.

Advances between Agreement for, and Actual, Mortgage.]—A mortgage in fee, made in compliance with an agreement to charge a sum of money upon an estate, the deeds of which were deposited with the equitable mortgagee at the date of the agreement, will give him and all persons taking an assignment of his debt, and the securities a right to tack to his mortgage in fee all sums advanced to the mortgagor between the date of the agreement and the conveyance in fee, if they are made bonâ fide, and without notice of advances made by other persons. Cooke v. Wilton, 29 Beav. 100; 30 L. J., Ch. 467; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 280; 9 W. R. 220.

Priority over Judgment Creditor.]—A legal mortgage so made will relate back to the date of the equitable mortgage, and give priority over a judgment creditor to the mortgagee, who had no notice of the judgment. Ib.

As against Creditors under Trust to pay Debts.]—Where mortgagee is creditor of trustee under will of estate to pay debts, and advances further moneys to trustee for payment of them, and takes mortgage of estate, knowing trust, he cannot have a sale of the estate in prejudice of other creditors of testator. Turner, Ex parte, 9 Mod. 418.

Advances Referable to Borrowing Clause in Mortgage.]—Where in an indenture of mortgage there was contained a borrowing clause, and subsequently small sums were advanced by the mortgagee to the mortgagor:—Held, that the mortgagee was justified in referring these payments to the borrowing clause. Cairncross v. Bradley, 2 Dr. & Wal. 482.

Notice, What Sufficient.]—A., having previously mortgaged property to B., entered into an agreement with his bankers for a second mortgage to secure an overdrawn balance. The original mortgage, after several transfers, became vested in C. C. transferred to D., who at the same time advanced a further sum. C.'s son acted as his solicitor in the transfer to C., and as the solicitor of C. and D. in the transfer to D. At the time of the transfer to C. notice was given to his son of the second mortgage:—Held, that, inasmuch as he did not acquire his knowledge while acting as D.'s solicitor, D. was not bound by notice and was entitled to tack his further charge to his first mortgage. Bulpett v. Sturges, 22 L. T. 739; 18 W. R. 796.

Practice.]—Where a bill states a mortgage to the defendant, then a mortgage to the plaintiff (with notice to each party), and claims for the second mortgage priority over any sums advanced by the first mortgagee after he had notice of the second mortgage, if the first mortgagee means to set up a distinct understanding between all the parties to the first mortgage (of whom the plaintiff was one). that the first mortgage should be a continuing guarantee for any sums advanced to the mortgagor at any subsequent time, such defence must be distinctly averred and proved. Rolt v. Hopkinson, 3 De G. & J. 177. Affirmed, 9 H. L. Cas. 514; 34 L. J., Ch. 468; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1209; 9 W. R. 900.

3. JUDGMENTS.

By First Mortgagee against Second.]—It is a settled rule that a prior mortgagee may tack a judgment to his mortgage, though subsequent in time to a second mortgagee, provided he has no notice of the second, for qui prior est in tempore potior est in jure. Shepherd v. Titley, 2 Atk. 350.

—— By Judgment Creditor.]—Mortgagee may tack a subsequent judgment, but a mere judgment creditor cannot tack; not contracting for an interest in the land, though he has a lien. Knott, Ex parte, 11 Ves. 617 ; 8 R. R. 254.

A prior mortgagee may tack a subsequent judgment, but a prior judgment creditor for obtaining a subsequent mortgage cannot. Anon., 2 Ves. 662.

Whether a judgment creditor may as well secure himself by buying in a prior incumbrance as a third mortgagee may by taking an assignment of the first mortgage. Wright v. Pilling, Pre. Ch. 494 ; Gilb. Exch. Rep. 150.

After Assignment of Equity of Redemption.]—A. mortgaged leasehold property to B. in 1839. In 1841 A. assigned his equity of redemption to C., which assignment was registered on the 23rd September, but no actual notice of that assignment was given to B. until the 11th December, 1841 ; at which time B. had obtained a judgment against A. in Michaelmas Term, 1841, which judgment was signed but not registered on the 10th December :—Held, that B. was not entitled to tack his judgment as against C. Simmons v. Pettit, 8 Jur. 209.

Assignee of equity of redemption shall not be affected by judgment after confessed by the mortgagor, though the judgment creditor purchase in the mortgage ; but shall redeem upon payment of the first mortgage money only. Brereton v. Jones, 1 Eq. Abr. 325.

So also if first mortgagee buys up a judgment. Ib.

By Puisne Mortgagee.]—If a puisne mortgagee buys in a judgment or statute, being the first incumbrance, he shall hold till by law he can be evicted. Brace v. Marlborough (Duke), 2 P. Wms. 493 ; Moseley, 50. See also 9 Mod. 38.

—— Elegit.]—So if a puisne mortgagee buys in a prior judgment, extended on an elegit at an undervalue, he shall hold the extent till evicted. Ib.

—— Further Advance.]—So where the first mortgagee lends a further sum to the mortgagor, upon a statute or judgment, he shall retain against mesne mortgagees till the statute or judgment is paid. Ib.

—— Notice.]—But in all these cases there must not be notice of the mesne incumbrances when the money is lent. Ib.

—— Satisfied Judgment.]—Third mortgagee, without notice at the time of his mortgage, buys in the first incumbrance, being a satisfied judgment ; he shall have the benefit of it. Edmunds v. Povey, 1 Vern. 187.

Judgment Obtained after Satisfaction of Mortgage.]—Two sums were due to A. from B., one on mortgage of lands, and the other by covenant. A. having brought an action for both sums, B. paid the amount due on the mortgage into court. A. took this sum out of court, and he proceeded in the action and recovered judgment on the covenant :—Held, that the mortgage having been satisfied before the judgment had been obtained, A. had no right to tack his judgment. Brecon Corporation v. Seymour, 26 Beav. 548 ; 28 L. J., Ch. 606 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1069 ; 7 W. R. 380.

Interest on Judgment Debt.]—Where a mortgagee has tacked a judgment to his mortgage, he shall not be confined to the penalty of his judgment, but he is entitled to interest upon his judgment debt, though it should exceed the penalty. Godfrey v. Watson, 3 Atk. 518.

Bankruptcy.]—First and second mortgagees, the mortgagor a bankrupt ; the first mortgagee entitled to tack a subsequent judgment, docketed, though no execution had issued at the time of the bankruptcy. Baker v. Harris, 16 Ves. 397.

A mortgagee by demise enters up judgment against the mortgagor on another debt, and dies. His executors take from the mortgagor a memorandum empowering them to hold the title deeds of the mortgaged property as a security for a part of the judgment debt, in addition to the original mortgage debt :—Held, on the mortgagor becoming bankrupt, that the executors might, as against a second mortgagee, tack the whole of the judgment debt to the mortgage. Cox, Ex parte, Squibb, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 486.

Copyhold.]—A mortgagee of a copyhold cannot tack a judgment to his mortgage, because no judgment can affect that estate. Cannon v. Pack, 6 Vin. Abr. 222, pl. 6.

Practice.]—When a first incumbrancer, by judgment, has likewise a mortgage ; though there is another judgment prior to the mortgage, yet, if the mortgagee had no notice of it, the court will not direct a sale in favour of the second judgment creditor, unless he will pay off the first incumbrancer. Smithson v. Thompson, 1 Atk. 520.

A registered judgment creditor, without having sued out an elegit, and within a year from the entering up of the judgment, filed a bill to redeem a prior mortgage, and to foreclose. The plaintiff afterwards redeemed the mortgage, and amended his bill, seeking to tack the two debts : —Held, that the suit, as originally framed, could not be sustained ; and that the case was not bettered by the amendment. Godfrey v. Tucker, 33 Beav. 280 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 559 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1188 ; 9 L. T. 359 ; 12 W. R. 33.

Held, also, that the defendant should have demurred, and he was accordingly not allowed the extra costs occasioned by his not doing so. Ib.

4. Bonds.

Against Mortgagor.]—Where bond is tacked to mortgage, mortgagor cannot redeem without paying the whole, though exceeding the penalty. Peers v. Baldwyn, 2 Eq. Abr. 611.

Second sum of money lent to mortgagor on bond, he cannot redeem one loan without the other. Anon., 3 Salk. 84.

Against Heir or Devisee but not Mortgagor.]—A mortgagor who borrows more money from the mortgagee on his bond shall redeem without paying the bond debt ; but his heir cannot ; neither can the devisee of the equity of redemption, since the statute against fraudulent devises. Challis v. Casborn, Pre. Ch. 407 ; Gilb. 96.

Not against Assignee of Equity of Redemption.]—A prior mortgagee cannot tack a bond debt against the mortgagor, his assignee of the equity of redemption, or creditors ; though he may, as against the mortgagor's heir, to prevent a circuity. Anon., 2 Ves. 662.

As against Heir or Devisee.]—Mortgagee may tack a bond debt as against heir or devisee. Price v. Fastnedge, Amb. 685.

Against Heir.]—If a mortgagor borrows more money of the mortgagee on bond, and dies, the heir shall not redeem without paying both debts: for the mortgagee's interest is become absolute by breach of the condition. Secus, if the mortgagee brings a bill to foreclose, and the heir tenders the principal, interest and costs, for the bond originally was not a lien on the land. Anon., 1 Ch. Ca. 164; Taylor v. Beversham, 2 Ch. Ca. 194; Windam v. Jennings, 2 Ch. Rep. 247.

Mortgagee lends more money to the mortgagor on bond, his heir shall not redeem without paying off the bond as well as the mortgage, in case the heir is bound. Where a man has two mortgages and one is defective, if the heir will redeem he shall take both. Shuttleworth v. Laycock, 1 Vern. 245. S. P., Baxter v. Manning, id. 244.

—— Covenant to pay Mortgage Debt.]—Where there is a mortgage of land, and a covenant by the mortgagor, for himself and his heirs, to pay the mortgage money and interest, the mortgagee may tack the personal liability on the covenant as against the heir. Elvy v. Norwood, 5 De G. & Sm. 240; 21 L. J., Ch. 716; 16 Jur. 493.

Secus, if the suit were by the mortgagor, semble. Ib.

Not against Alienee of Heir.]—A man mortgages lands and after borrows more money of the mortgagee on bond; the alienee of the heir of the mortgagor is not obliged to pay both the mortgage money and the bond debt. Coleman v. Wince, Pre. Ch. 511; 1 P. Wms. 775.

Not against Purchaser from Heir.]—Where mortgagor borrows more money on bond, the purchaser from the heir of the mortgagor may redeem without paying bond debt. Bayly v. Robson, Pre. Ch. 89.

Not against Creditors.]—Bond not to be tacked to a mortgage against creditors. Hamerton v. Rogers, 1 Ves. J. 513.

By Executor—Against Heir or Devisee, but not Creditors.]—Executor of a mortgagee lends a further sum on bond; he may tack against the heir or devisee of mortgagor, but not against other creditors, if the estate be charged with or devised for payment of debts. Price v. Fastnedge, Amb. 685.

Against Heir but not Specialty Creditors.]—Mortgagee, having also bond, cannot tack it against other specialty creditors, though he may against the heir. Lowthian v. Hasel, 3 Bro. C. C. 162.

Against Executor.]—Lessee for years mortgages his term, and afterwards borrows more money of the mortgagee on bond and dies; his executor shall not redeem without paying the bond as well as the mortgage. Anon., 2 Vern. 177.

An executor shall not redeem mortgaged term without paying a debt contracted after. Eccles v. Thawill, Pre. Ch. 18.

Against Mesne Judgment Creditors.]—Upon lending a sum of money on mortgage, the mortgagee procured, as an additional security, an assignment of a judgment on a bond in a penalty, which had been obtained against the mortgagor prior to the mortgage, and in payment of which part of the money advanced by the mortgagee had been applied. The principal sum only was due at the period of its assignment:—Held, that the mortgagee is entitled as against judgment creditors of the mortgagor, intervening between his judgment and his mortgage, to levy under his judgment the full amount of principal, and all interest thereon (the same not exceeding the sum due on foot of the mortgage), although he has been paid the interest which accrued due on the mortgage. Kirby v. O'Shee, 1 Jones, 565.

Equitable Assets.]—A mortgagor died, having made his real estate equitable assets. Defendants, who were both mortgagees and bond creditors, were held not entitled to tack. Irby v. Irby, 22 Beav. 217.

5. Simple Contract Debts.

Since 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104.]—It is very doubtful whether a mortgagee can, even since the passing of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, tack a simple contract debt to his mortgage. Uppington v. Bullen, 1 Con. & L. 291; 2 Dr. & War. 184.

A mortgagee or his transferee, under the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, may tack his simple contract debt to his security against an heir or a devisee. Rolfe v. Chester, 20 Beav. 610; 25 L. J., Ch. 244.

Since the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, a mortgagee of freeholds may tack his simple contract debts as against the heir. Thomas v. Thomas, 22 Beav. 341; 25 L. J., Ch. 391; 4 W. R. 345.

—— Copyhold.]—Since the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 104, a mortgagee of copyholds may tack a simple contract debt to his mortgage debt, as against the customary heir or devisee, but not as against specialty creditors. Rolfe v. Chester, 20 Beav. 610; 25 L. J., Ch. 244.

Where Personal Estate Unadministered.]—A simple contract creditor, though a mortgagee, has no right as against an heir or a devisee, to tack his simple contract debt to his mortgage where there is personal estate unadministered. Ib.

Where Equity of Redemption is Assets for Payment of Debts.]—Semble, a mortgagee may tack a simple contract debt to his mortgage debt as against the heir, devisee or executor whenever the equity of redemption is assets in their hands for payment of simple contract debts. Ib.

A mortgagee may tack simple contract debts to his mortgage as against the heir where the property descended is assets in his hands for payment of simple contract debts. Thomas v. Thomas, 22 Beav. 341; 25 L. J., Ch. 391; 4 W. R. 345.

Not against Creditors.]—The owner of freehold property mortgaged it and died insolvent, having devised his real and personal estate to trustees for payment of debts. In a suit for the administration of his estate the mortgagee consented to an order directing the property to be sold and the proceeds to be carried to a separate account, the order being expressly without prejudice to his right to have simple contract debts due to him from the mortgagor satisfied out of the proceeds:—Held, that he had no right to tack simple contract debts to the prejudice of other creditors, and that the proceeds were not to be regarded as sale moneys in his hands so as to give him a right of retainer in respect of such debts; and, consequently, that the balance left after payment of the mortgage debt must be carried to the account of the general estate. Pile v. Pile, 23 W. R. 440.

Against Mesne Incumbrancer.]—M. gave plaintiff at different times three notes to secure different sums of money, and expressed in each "to be secured on his Stoke Hall estate," which was mortgaged to defendant; plaintiff took in a prior mortgage, to protect the money lent on the notes:—Held, that the plaintiff, the noteholder, on his having notice of the second mortgage to defendant, and paying off the first incumbrance, shall protect himself against defendant's mortgage, and shall be paid, not only the money due on the first mortgage, but the money due on the notes also. Matthews v. Cartwright, 2 Atk. 347.

6. IRELAND AND IRISH REGISTRY ACT.

Tacking, how far Applicable.]—The doctrine of tacking securities applies in Ireland as well as in England, except where in Ireland it has been excluded by the operation of the Registry Act. Tenison v. Sweeny, 1 Jo. & Lat. 710; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 511.

——6 Anne, c. 2.]—A mortgagee is prevented by the operation of the Registry Act (6 Anne, c. 2), from tacking so as to gain priority against mesne registered incumbrances; and, for the purpose of adjusting the priorities between deeds under this act, judgments also obtain priorities, although not generally within the contemplation of the act. Latouche v. Dunsany (Lord), 1 Sch. & Lef. 137.

The Registry Act in Ireland does not permit tacking. Id. 157.

I. CONSOLIDATION.

Restriction on.]—By 44 & 45 Vict. c. 41, s. 17, (1.) A mortgagor seeking to redeem any one mortgage shall, by virtue of this act, be entitled to do so, without paying any money due under any separate mortgage made by him, or by any person through whom he claims, on property other than that comprised in the mortgage which he seeks to redeem.

(2.) This section applies only if, and as far as, a contrary intention is not expressed in the mortgage deeds or one of them.

(3.) This section applies only where the mortgages or one of them are or is made after the commencement of this act.

Extent of Principle.]—The right of a mortgagee, to unite two securities from the same mortgagor, exists equally in foreclosure and redemption suits. Selby v. Pomfret, 1 J. & H. 336; 30 L. J., Ch. 770. Affirmed, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 835; 4 L. T. 314; 9 W. R. 583.

Where there are two or more mortgages, the court of chancery will not compel a redemption of one without the rest. Roe d. Kaye v. Soley, 2 Wm. Bl. 726.

The owner of the equity of redemption of one of two estates comprised in the same mortgage cannot insist on redeeming that estate separately. Hall v. Heward, 55 L. J., Ch. 604; 32 Ch. D. 430; 54 L. T. 810; 34 W. R. 571—C. A.

One makes two mortgages of several estates for several sums, and one of the mortgages is deficient in value. If the mortgagor brings his bill to redeem one, he must redeem both. Pope v. Onslow, 2 Vern. 286.

Two separate mortgages of different estates to the same person: purchaser of the equity of redemption of one of them cannot redeem that mortgage only, but must redeem both. Carter, Ex parte, Amb. 733.

Where two mortgages of different estates were assigned to one mortgagee as a security for one gross sum:—Held, that the purchaser of the equity of redemption of both estates could not redeem one without redeeming both. Vint v. Padgett, 1 Giff. 446. Affirmed, 2 De G. & J. 611; 28 L. J., Ch. 21; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1122; 6 W. R. 641—L.JJ.

If A. make two several mortgages, and die, and one of the mortgages is of an entailed estate, or is deficient in value, the heir of the mortgagee shall not be admitted to redeem one without redeeming the other. Margrave v. Le Hooke, 2 Vern. 207.

A mortgagee, having a number of mortgages over different properties, all created by the same mortgagor, is entitled, as against a puisne mortgagee of one of these properties, to consolidate all his mortgages. And this right is not affected by the circumstance that such puisne mortgagee is really prior in point of date, and merely postponed by the operation of the Registry Act; nor by the circumstance that the mortgage, in respect whereof the right to consolidate is claimed, is equitable merely, and that the puisne mortgagee had no notice thereof. Neve v. Pennell, 2 H. & M. 170; 33 L. J., Ch. 19; 9 L. T. 285; 11 W. R. 986.

A mortgagee of two estates, A. and B., of which A. was subject to a first mortgage, in exercise of a power of sale in his mortgage, sold the estate A. The first mortgagee, to whom another debt was due upon an equitable deposit of a policy of assurance and other documents by the mortgagor, refused to join in the conveyance to the purchaser, unless he received out of the purchase-money the amount due to him on both his mortgages. That amount was paid to him accordingly, and the documents comprised in the equitable deposit were delivered to the second mortgagee. The balance of the proceeds of sale was insufficient to discharge what was due to the second mortgagee:—Held, reversing the court below, that, as the equitable mortgage was paid with money which, had the first mortgagee not claimed the right to consolidate, would have belonged to the second mortgagee, it was in fact paid by the second mortgagee, who by the fact of such payment became equitable transferee, and was entitled to consolidate that mortgage with his mortgage on estate B. Cracknell v. Janson, 48 L. J., Ch. 168; 11 Ch. D. 1; 40 L. T. 640; 27 W. R. 851.

Quære, whether a second mortgagee, who upon payment of the first mortgage gets in the legal estate, can tack this mortgage to another mortgage previously executed to him by the same mortgagor of a different property. Grugeon v. Gerrard, 4 Y. & C. C. C. 119.

Bill of Sale.]—The doctrine of consolidation of mortgages does not enable the grantee by a registered bill of sale of goods seized under a fi. fa. to take a prior mortgage of other property of the grantor, and claim that the surplus proceeds of the goods, after discharging the sum secured by the bill of sale, shall be applied in satisfaction of the prior mortgage, so as to defeat the right of the execution creditor to such surplus. Chesworth v. Hunt, 49 L. J., C. P. 507; 5 C. P. D. 266; 42 L. T. 774; 28 W. R. 815; 44 J. P. 605.

Bankruptcy.]—Assignees cannot redeem one of several mortgages by bankrupt to same person without redeeming all. Alsager, Ex parte, Breeds, In re, 2 Mont. D. & D. 328.

Where Equities of Redemption in one Person.]—The principle, that, where two distinct estates are mortgaged for two distinct debts, a separate redemption cannot be decreed, operates as long as the equities of redemption remain united in the same person. Willie v. Lugg, 2 Eden, 78.

Debt ceased to Exist.]—Two persons, partners in a mercantile firm, who held a leasehold house, made an equitable mortgage of it to W. Afterwards the firm took in another partner who acquired a share in the equity of redemption. The firm then mortgaged their interest in another house, which they held as joint tenants, to W. for a further debt. The firm having become bankrupt, the lease on the first-mentioned house was determined by the bankruptcy, and the lessor re-entered. W. claimed to consolidate both debts, so that the second-mentioned house should not be redeemed without paying both debts:—Held, that, one mortgaged property having ceased to exist, there could be no consolidation of the two debts. Williams, Ex parte, Raggett, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 187; 16 Ch. D. 117; 44 L. T. 4; 29 W. R. 314—C. A.

Default on Securities.]—Consolidation only applies where default has been made on all the securities in respect of which it is claimed. Cummins v. Fletcher, 49 L. J., Ch. 563; 14 Ch. D. 699; 42 L. T. 859; 28 W. R. 772.

Principles discussed.]—The principles of consolidation discussed and explained. Ib.

Mortgage subsequent to Second Mortgage.]—The right of a first mortgagee of two separately-mortgaged estates belonging to one mortgagor, to consolidate his mortgages as against a second mortgagee of one of the estates, does not extend to a case in which the mortgage of the other estate is subsequent in date to such second mortgage. Baker v. Gray, 45 L. J., Ch. 165; 1 Ch. D. 491; 33 L. T. 721; 24 W. R. 171.

Consolidating Bond and Mortgage.]—A mortgagor who borrows more money from the mortgagee on his bond shall redeem without paying the bond debt, but his heir cannot; neither can the devisee of the equity of redemption since the statute against fraudulent devises. Challis v. Casborn, Pre. Ch. 407; Gilb. Eq. Rep. 96.

In favour of Equitable Mortgagee as against subsequent Legal Mortgagee.]—A. made two equitable mortgages of two several estates, the one to A. and the other to B. He then executed a legal mortgage of both to C., who had constructive notice of the prior equitable mortgages. B. obtained a transfer of A.'s mortgage:—Held, that C. could only redeem B. on payment of both debts. Tweedale v. Tweedale, 23 Beav. 341.

In favour of Second Mortgagee who has redeemed First Mortgagee.]—If two estates are mortgaged to B., and then one of them is again mortgaged to C. and the other to D., and C. redeems B.'s whole mortgage, he shall hold both estates (though one only was comprised in his own mortgage) till he is reimbursed his own money and what he has paid in discharge of B.'s mortgage; and D. shall not be admitted to redeem, but upon those terms; for C. could not have redeemed B. but by entirety, and, having so done, he stands in his place, and has the same right to be redeemed in the same manner. Titley v. Davies, 15 Vin. 447, pl. 20. S. C., 2 Y. & C. C. C. 399, n. And see Clarke v. Abbot, 2 Eq. Abr. 606, pl. 41.

Equity of Redemption purchased before Second Mortgage got in.]—A person holding two mortgages, created by the same mortgagor, on two separate estates, by distinct deeds, may charge each estate with the aggregate of the two debts, even as against a person who purchased the equity of redemption in the estate first mortgaged before the second mortgage was got in. Beevor v. Luck, 36 L. J., Ch. 865; L. R. 4 Eq. 537; 15 W. R. 1221.

Mortgage subsequent to Assignment of Equity of Redemption.]—The rule, that the mortgagee of two estates belonging to the same mortgagor may consolidate them so that one cannot be redeemed without the other, does not apply to a case in which one of the mortgages was created subsequently to the assignment of the equity of redemption to the person seeking to redeem. Tassell v. Smith (2 De G. & J. 713; 27 L. J., Ch. 694) overruled. Beevor v. Luck (L. R. 4 Eq. 537) commented on. White v. Hillacre (3 Y. & C. 597) approved. Jennings v. Jordan, 51 L. J., Ch. 129; 6 App. Cas. 698; 45 L. T. 593; 30 W. R. 369—H. L. (E.)

Union after Mortgage of Equity of Redemption.]—A. B. mortgaged one estate to C. D., and mortgaged another estate to E. F.; he then mortgaged his equity of redemption in both estates to G. H., and notice of this was given to the two original mortgagees. The two original mortgagees ultimately became vested in K., who filed a bill to foreclose G. H., in default of payment of all that was due. G. H. insisted that he was entitled to redeem one estate without redeeming the other, but:—Held (affirming 4 Jur. (N.S.) 254; 1 Giff. 446), that he had no such right, and that the fact of C. D. and E. F. having had notice of the mortgage of the equity of redemption made no difference. Vint v. Padgett, 2 De G. & J. 611; 28 L. J., Ch. 21; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1122; 6 W. R. 641.

Union of Mortgages after Assignment of Equity of Redemption of one.]—When two mortgages made by the same mortgagor to different mortgagees on different estates become united for the first time in one person after the mortgagor has assigned (by way either of sale or mortgage) the equity of redemption of one of them, the owner of the two mortgages cannot consolidate them as against the assignee of the equity of redemption, even though both the mortgages were created before the assignment. The assignee of an equity of redemption takes it subject to all equities which affect the assignor in respect of it at the date of the assignment, but the possibility that the mortgage may, by virtue of its subsequent union in the same person with a mortgage of another estate made previously to the assignment, by the same mortgagor to a different mortgagee, become liable to consolidation, is not such an equity. White v. Hillacre (3 Y. & C. 597) approved and followed. Beeror v. Luck (L. R. 4 Eq. 537) disapproved and not followed. Vint v. Padgett (2 De G. & J. 611) distinguished. Harter v. Colman, 51 L. J., Ch. 481; 19 Ch. D. 630; 46 L. T. 154; 30 W. R. 484.

A transferee of several mortgages made by the same mortgagor to different mortgagees has, as against a person to whom the equity of redemption of one of the mortgages was assigned prior to the union of all the mortgages in one hand, no right of consolidation. Hinter v. Carr, 63 L. J., Ch. 705; [1894] 3 Ch. 498; 7 R. 558; 71 L. T. 526—C. A. Affirming 42 W. R. 619.

The right of the assignee of the equity of redemption to resist consolidation is not affected by the fact that he is also puisne mortgagee of some or all of the properties comprised in the mortgages. Vint v. Padgett (2 De G. & J. 611) doubted. Ib.

Where owner of several properties has mortgaged them to different mortgagees, and all the mortgages are afterwards transferred to one person, such transferee is entitled to consolidate all these mortgages, and to refuse to allow the mortgagor or his assignee to redeem any of the mortgages without redeeming all. Tweedale v. Tweedale (23 Beav. 341) and Vint v. Padgett (2 De G. & J. 611) followed. White v. Hillacre, (3 Y. & C. 547), Jennings v. Jordan (6 App. Cas. 698) and Harter v. Colman (19 Ch. D. 630) distinguished. Pledge v. Carr, 64 L. J., Ch. 51; [1895] 1 Ch. 51; 8 R. 253, 255, n.; 71 L. T. 598; 43 W. R. 50—C. A.

Where several mortgages originally vested in several persons for distinct sums become united in one holder, the right of consolidation can be enforced not only against the original mortgagor, but also against the assignee of the equity of redemption, notwithstanding that the mortgages which it is sought to consolidate were not united in title in the mortgagee with the mortgage which it is sought to redeem until after the assignment of the equity of redemption. Vint v. Padgett (1 Giff. 446; 2 De G. & J. 611; 28 L. J., Ch. 21) approved. Jennings v. Jordan (51 L. J., Ch. 129; 6 App. Cas. 698) distinguished. Pledge v. White, 65 L. J., Ch. 449; [1896] A. C. 187; 74 L. T. 323; 44 W. R. 589—H. L. (E.)

As against Surety.]—C. borrowed 5,000*l.* of a life assurance company. This was advanced in two sums, one of 2,000*l.* and the other of 3,000*l.* Each sum was separately secured upon different property, and by different sets of deeds. F. became surety for payment of the 2,000*l.* and interest only. C. afterwards made default in payment of the 2,000*l.* and interest. The company then sued F. under his bond to obtain payment of the 2,000*l.* and interest. He offered to pay the sum due on having the securities assigned. The company, however, refused to give up the deeds securing the 2,000*l.*: and upon a bill by F., as merely to restrain the proceedings at law, and asking that the deeds might be delivered to him upon payment of the 2,000*l.* and interest:—Held, that the company had a right to retain the securities relating to the 2,000*l.*, and that the property was not redeemable even by F. without payment of the 3,000*l.*, for which he was not surety, as well as the 2,000*l.*, for which he was surety. Farebrother v. Wodehouse, 23 Beav. 18; 26 L. J., Ch. 81; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1178; 5 W. R. 12.

Suretyship not disclosed.]—By a deed dated the 11th March, 1875, G. mortgaged to I. certain real estate for securing 1,050*l.*, and by a deed dated the 10th December, 1875, G. mortgaged to I. certain Hudson Bay shares, and by the same deed A. and wife mortgaged to I. certain railway shares. A. and wife were, in fact, sureties for G., but that fact was not disclosed on the deed. G. subsequently executed other mortgages of the Hudson Bay shares to other persons, including M. The proceeds of the Hudson Bay shares had been paid into court under the Trustee Relief Act. M. presented a petition for payment out of court of that fund, and in August, 1887, the petition was referred to chambers to ascertain the priorities of the various mortgagees on the fund. The chief clerk found that the first mortgagee was I., and that he was entitled to consolidate his mortgage of the 11th March, 1875; that the second mortgagees were A. and wife to the extent of the value realised from the railway shares (which had gone in part payment of I.'s securities of the 10th December, 1875), and that the other mortgagees were entitled subject to those priorities. The petition then came on upon further consideration, together with a summons by A. and wife, to vary the certificate by declaring that I. was not entitled to consolidation as against them:—Held, that I. was entitled to consolidate, on the ground that the suretyship not being disclosed by the deed of the 10th December, 1875, the only right of A. and wife against the trust fund was through G., and was therefore subject to I.'s rights against G. Toogood's Legacy Trusts, In re, 61 L. T. 19.

As against prior Voluntary Settlement.]—A. B. having executed a voluntary settlement of the W. estate, mortgaged it in fee to X. Y. He afterwards mortgaged the Q. estate, and that mortgage became vested in X. Y.:—Held, that X. Y. was not entitled to consolidate as against the persons claiming under the voluntary settlement the mortgages on the W. and Q. estates. Walhampton's Estate, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 1000; 26 Ch. D. 391; 51 L. T. 280; 32 W. R. 874.

Partner and Firm.]—A. mortgaged certain leaseholds, and the mortgage was subsequently transferred to C. Afterwards A., in conjunction with his partner B., mortgaged other leaseholds to C.:—Held, that C. was entitled to consolidate the mortgages as against the legal personal representatives of A. Harris v. Tubb, 60 L. T. 699.

Semble, there can be no consolidation between a mortgage by A. for his own debt and a mortgage by A. and B. of other property for their partnership debt. Cummins v. Fletcher, 49 L. J., Ch. 563; 14 Ch. D. 699; 42 L. T. 859; 28 W. R. 772.

Surplus of Money received on Policy—Arrears of Annuity.]—G. died insolvent, having mortgaged an estate for his own life to secure an annuity granted by himself, payable during his own life. He had also mortgaged a policy on his own life to the same mortgagees. After the death of G. the mortgagees received in respect of the policy a sum more than sufficient to satisfy the amount secured on the policy:—Held, that they had no right to set off the balance against the executor in respect of arrears of the annuity. Gregson, In re, Christison v. Bolam, 57 L. J., Ch. 221; 36 Ch. D. 223; 57 L. T. 250; 35 W. R. 803.

Two Mortgagees Trustees for same Person.]—In 1832 A. mortgaged property for securing 1,700*l.* and interest. In 1856 A. joined as surety in a mortgage by B., and A. thereby assigned a policy of insurance on his own life, for securing 2,000*l.* and interest. The persons named in the two deeds as mortgagees were different, but both sets of mortgagees were trustees for one and the same insurance company, and at the respective periods of the two mortgages A. knew that the advances thereby secured were severally made by such company. In 1841, and in 1847, A. mortgaged the equity of redemption of the property comprised in the first-mentioned mortgage to C. to secure advances made at those periods respectively by C. A sale having, by arrangement between all the parties interested, taken place of the properties comprised in the mortgages of 1832 and 1856, the property comprised in the last-mentioned mortgage proved insufficient to pay the amount secured thereon. It was agreed that the case should be treated as if no sale had taken place:—Held, that, as the mortgages of 1832 and 1856 were held in trust for the same persons, the same principle applied to them as if the same persons had been named in each as mortgagees; and that C. could not have redeemed the first mortgage, dated in 1832, without also redeeming that which was dated in 1856. The deficiency arising on the mortgage of 1856 was therefore directed to be made good out of the proceeds of the sale of the property comprised in the mortgage of 1832. Tassell v. Smith, 2 De G. & J. 713; 27 L. J., Ch. 694; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1090; 6 W. R. 803.

Mortgage by Trustee for Mortgagor.]—Whether a mortgage by three persons can be consolidated with a mortgage by two in trust for the three, quære. Williams, Ex parte, Raggett, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 187; 16 Ch. D. 117; 44 L. T. 4; 29 W. R. 314.

When allowed.]—A mortgagor mortgaged A. to the defendant and the plaintiff as first and second mortgagees respectively, and also mortgaged B. to the defendant. The plaintiff commenced an action against the defendant to redeem the mortgage on A.:—Held, that the defendant was not entitled to consolidate his mortgage on B. with that of A. Squire v. Pardoe, 66 L. T. 242; 40 W. R. 100—C. A.

Where Inapplicable — Bailment of Deeds to secure Debts.]—A mortgage was made of estate A. for 300*l.*, in which sureties joined to secure the debt. Another mortgage of estate B. was made by the mortgagor to the mortgagee to secure 1,500*l.*, and the title deeds of other property belonging to the mortgagor's wife were deposited as collateral security for 300*l.*, part of the 1,500*l.* The first 300*l.* was paid off partly by the sureties. Afterwards the other principal security was realised, and the 1,500*l.* paid off. The mortgagee resisted the delivery of the deposited deeds on the ground that the sureties might have an equity against them, and the sureties were made parties to a suit for delivery of the deeds. The sureties did not assert any claim in the suit:—Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to a decree for delivery of the deeds, and to the costs of the suit against the mortgagee, and that the principle of consolidating securities did not apply to a mere bailment of deeds to secure one of the debts. Crichmore v. Freeston, 40 L. J., Ch. 137.

—— Proper Remedy.]—In such a case the proper remedy is by interpleader. Ib.

—— Mortgage by Testator—Mortgage of Equity of Redemption by one of several Devisees as Tenants in Common.]—In 1830 W. conveyed certain real estates to R. and T., and their heirs, by way of mortgage, for securing a sum of 400*l.*, with a power of sale in case of default. W. died in 1839, having devised the same property, subject to certain charges created by his will, to his sons, A., B. and C., as tenants in common in fee. In 1839, after W.'s death, B. conveyed all his one-third share and interest, under his father's will, to R., H. and N., by way of mortgage, with power of sale in case of default. R., who was the surviving mortgagee of the deed of 1830, threatened to sell under the power in that deed, unless A., the acting executor of W., would redeem both mortgages. Upon a bill by A. to redeem, and for an injunction, the court, upon motion, on payment into court by A. of the money due upon the first mortgage, restrained R. from selling under the power of sale contained in the deed of 1830, and from conveying the legal estate in the one-third share of B. comprised in the mortgage of 1839. Whitworth v. Rhodes, 20 L. J., Ch. 105.

—— Further Charge and further Security.]—In 1843 A. mortgaged freeholds and leaseholds to B. for 200*l.* In 1845, after reciting that mortgage, he charged the freeholds and leaseholds with the further sum of 400*l.* which he then owed B., and assigned other property to B. as a further security for that sum, and empowered B. to sell the property, and to retain the 400*l.* out of the proceeds:—Held, that the property assigned in 1845 was redeemable on payment of the 400*l.* only. Watts v. Symes, 16 Sim. 647. And see S. C., 13 Jur. 245.

A testator devised real estates in settlement, and empowered tenants for life to grant mining leases. A tenant for life, in 1843, demised mines for a term of ninety-nine years at a peppercorn rent, by way of mortgage, to secure 6,000*l.* and interest. On the 26th of April, 1850, the term of ninety-nine years and mortgage debt thereby secured were transferred to S. & Co., and by the same deed the tenant for life mortgaged his life estate to S. & Co. to secure further sums, and thereby made the term of ninety-nine years redeemable only on payment of the further sums as well as of the original mortgage debt:—Held, that the term of ninety-nine years was validly charged with the further sums. Mostyn v. Lancaster, 52 L. J., Ch. 848; 23 Ch. D. 583; 48 L. T. 715; 31 W. R. 686—C. A.

Notice by Mortgagees under s. 20 of Conveyancing Act, 1881, to pay off one Mortgage — Election.] — Mortgagees holding several mortgages executed by the same mortgagor, who have excluded s. 17 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41), are entitled to consolidate, although they have given notice, under s. 20, to the mortgagor to pay off one of the mortgages, in order to acquire a power of sale, and the mortgagor has prepared for the payment and tendered the money, the doctrine of election having no application. Griffith v. Pound, 45 Ch. D. 553.

Right, how Lost.]—The right of consolidation is not lost by a sale of one of the mortgaged estates under a power in the mortgage deed, but the balance of the proceeds, after satisfying the one mortgage debt, may be applied to the other. Selby v. Pomfret, 1 J. & H. 336; 30 L. J., Ch. 770. Affirmed, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 835; 4 L. T. 314; 9 W. R. 583.

Where a mortgagee took a transfer of a mortgage of another estate of the same mortgagor, and sold the second estate under a power in the mortgage deed:—Held, that he was entitled to apply the surplus of the proceeds to the first mortgage. Ib.

Construction—"Redeemable."]—H. advanced money to P., and by agreement was to receive the whole amount due from P. in acceptances of the D. company to C.'s drafts at six, twelve and eighteen months, "but, if not sufficient bills at such dates are received from the D. company, then the balance to be made up in similar bills at twelve, twenty-four and thirty-six months, upon which 10*l.* per cent. interest shall be payable, such last-mentioned bills to be redeemable at any time":—Held, that the word "redeemable" implied that the debtor P. might take up the last-mentioned bills at any time, irrespective of the other debts due by him to H. Hills v. Parker, 14 L. T. 107.

Practice—Right insisted on.]—When the owner of an equity of redemption brings an action to redeem the mortgaged property, and the defendant insists on his admitted right to consolidate the mortgage with a mortgage of other land, the equity of redemption in which is vested, not in the plaintiff, but in a third party, the court will not make any decree in the absence of such third party. Mills v. Jennings, 39 L. T. 442.

—— Parties.]—A purchaser of an equity of redemption filed his bill against the mortgagee to redeem. The original mortgagor having made a mortgage of other premises to the same mortgagee for a distinct debt, the purchaser cannot redeem the first without redeeming the second mortgage, and the parties interested in the equity of redemption of the second mortgage are necessary parties to the suit. Ireson v. Denn, 2 Cox, 425; 2 R. R. 97.

J. MARSHALLING.

Personalty first Liable.]—There being a borrowing and lending in the case of a mortgage, the real estate is considered only as a pledge, and the personal liable in the first place. Lanoy v. Athol (Duke), 2 Atk. 444.

Established Doctine.]—The doctrine is well established that a second mortgagee of property held by a first mortgagee, with other property not included in the second mortgage, has a right to compel the first mortgagee to resort for payment from the property to which the second mortgage does not extend. Lawrance v. Galsworthy, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 249.

Two properties, X. and Y., were mortgaged to A., and afterwards X. alone was mortgaged to B.:—Held, that B. is entitled to have the securities marshalled, so as to throw A.'s mortgage, in the first instance, on estate Y. Gibson v. Seagrim, 20 Beav. 614; 24 L. J., Ch. 782.

—— Marshalling Proceeds.]—The court will marshal the proceeds arising from several mortgaged estates, so as to prevent the first and second mortgagees of different estates from exhausting the proceeds of one estate upon which alone a third mortgagee had taken a security. Ib.

Mortgaged Estates Sold—Apportionment of Proceeds.]—The mortgage of a mesne incumbrancer extended over the whole of certain estates, parts of which had been previously mortgaged to other persons, and parts of which were also subsequently mortgaged. The mesne incumbrancer filed his bill for an account, and for redemption of the prior and foreclosure of the subsequent mortgages; and a decree was made, by consent of all parties interested, that the whole of the estates should be sold; that the proceeds of the sale should be paid into court, and apportioned according to the value of the parts of the estates comprised in the several mortgages; and that the priorities of the incumbrancers should be ascertained on further directions. No question was raised as to the incumbrances or their priorities, but only as to the costs:—Held, that each of the prior mortgagees was to be paid his principal, interest and costs out of the sum in court apportioned in respect of his mortgage, and not out of the general fund. Wild or Lee v. Lockhart, 10 Beav. 320; 16 L. J., Ch. 519.

—— Charge of Legacies.]—A bankrupt, to whom two estates were devised, charged with the payment of legacies, had mortgaged each of them separately, and the assignees held the estates, subject to the unpaid legacies and the mortgages. One of the estates was sold for 1,000*l.* more than the amount of the mortgage money with which it was charged, and which surplus was sufficient to pay the legacies; but the proceeds of the other estate were scarcely sufficient to satisfy the mortgage on it:—Held, on the application of the mortgagees on the last-mentioned estate, that the outstanding legacies should be charged exclusively on the surplus proceeds of the first estate. Hartley, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 288; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 496; 5 L. J., Bk. 13.

Two Estates Mortgaged—Second Mortgage of One.]—Where two estates are mortgaged to A., and one only of the estates to B., A. shall take his satisfaction out of that which is not in mortgage to B., though the estates descend to two different persons. Lanoy v. Athol (Duke), 2 Atk. 444.

As between Puisne Incumbrancers.]—A., having two estates, mortgages both to B., and then one to C.; then both again to B., to secure both the original and a further advance; then both to D. The puisne incumbrancers have notice of the prior charges. The estates are not sufficient to pay all the mortgages, but one of the estates, called No. 32, is sufficient to pay B. in full. The court will not, as between C. and D., marshal the securities by directing B. to take his full payment out of No. 32, so as to leave C. the first incumbrancer on the other estate; but B.'s debt must be thrown ratably on both estates. Barnes v. Rackster, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 401; 11 L. J., Ch. 228; 6 Jur. 595.

Where a person mortgages Blackacre and Whiteacre to A., and then mortgages Blackacre to B. and Whiteacre to C., the rights between B. and C. are to compel the payment of A.'s debt out of the two estates ratably, so that there shall be left of those estates the proper proportion for B. and C. respectively. So, also, where there are two funds, either or both of which A. has the right to apply in paying himself, and one of such funds is assigned to B. and the other to C., then, whether that right arises from a positive charge or by operation of law, in the circumstances under which the two funds came into A.'s hands, it is a right which he can exercise against both B. and C., and an equity to an apportionment of A.'s debt exists between B. and C. Moxon v. Berkeley Building Society, 59 L. J., Ch. 524; 62 L. T. 250.

A second mortgagee having the security of estates A. and B., and offering to redeem a prior mortgagee (having the security of estate A. only, and also leases affecting the equity of redemption of the same estate, but subsequent to the second mortgage), cannot be compelled by the prior mortgagee to resort to estate B. in the first instance. Gregg v. Arrott, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 246.

A. mortgages Blackacre to B., and gives him, as a collateral security, a judgment which attaches on both Blackacre and Whiteacre. Subsequently B. assigns his debt and securities to C., and A. at the same time mortgages Blackacre to C. for a further sum, with a covenant against all incumbraneers except the mortgage to B.:—Held, that C., as a puisne incumbrancer, is entitled to be paid the debt assigned to him by B. out of Whiteacre first, so as to leave Blackacre unimpaired to meet the second mortgage made to C. himself. Roddy, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 369.

A mortgagor being entitled in reversion to funds A. and B., made three mortgages. Mortgage 1 included both funds; mortgage 2 included A. only; and mortgage 3 included both funds. Mortgages 1 and 2 were in the form of assignments of the funds to the mortgagees, upon trust to receive the same when payable, to pay the mortgage debts thereout, and then transfer or pay the surplus to the mortgagor. Mortgage 3 was an assignment of the funds to which the mortgagor was entitled under mortgages 1 and 2, after payment of the debts thereby secured. Fund A. was absorbed in payment of mortgage 1:—Held, that, although fund B. was not included in mortgage 2, it must be applied in satisfaction of that mortgage in full, in priority to mortgage 3. Mower, In re, L. R. 8 Eq. 110; 20 L. T. 838.

When a mortgagor having two funds mortgaged both to A., then one to B., then both to C.; and B. claimed that A. should pay himself first out of the one on which he, B., had no charge, C. objecting to B.'s claim, it was refused. Wellesley v. Mornington (Lord), 17 W. R. 355.

P. purchased, in 1814, three roods twenty-three perches of land, by the description of "about one acre," and in 1815 thirty perches of land immediately adjoining, all of which he threw into one piece, and built a house. In 1819 he mortgaged the whole of the premises to W. for 5,000*l.*, by a description sufficient to pass the whole, and delivered up the title deeds relating to the purchase of 1814. In 1820 he mortgaged the whole of the premises to L. for 2,000*l.*, by the same description as in 1819, and delivered up to L. the title deed of 1815. He acted on this occasion as L.'s solicitor. There was also a subsequent incumbrancer, H. In 1823 P. died, having devised all his property to trustees for sale. In 1829 the trustees for sale contracted to sell to G., who was at that time a yearly tenant. G. sent in requisitions on the title, paid about one-third of the purchase-money, and continued in unmolested enjoyment of the whole of the premises up to the time of the filing of the bill. W., L. and H. had all assented to the contract with G.:—Held, on a bill by the persons beneficially interested in the first mortgage to have the contract carried out and the sales-moneys applied, that H. could not in this suit have the securities marshalled, notwithstanding that the possibility was pointed out of W. and L. having other securities of sufficient value to cover their advances. Wallis v. Woodyear, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 179.

Between Freehold and Copyhold.]—One party having a charge on freehold and copyhold estate, and another party on the freehold estate only, it was held that the latter was entitled to require that the former should be satisfied out of the copyhold estate, so far as it would extend. Tidd v. Lister, 10 Hare, 157.

A., being seised in fee of a freehold and copyhold estate, borrows various sums of money of B., amounting in the whole to 4,000*l.*, upon mortgage of the freehold estate alone. A. afterwards, in 1832, borrows 500*l.* more of B., on the security of both the freehold and copyhold estates. This mortgage is effected by distinct instruments, relating to each property respectively, neither of them referring to the other. In 1833 A. borrowed a sum of 400*l.* of C., on mortgage of the freehold estate alone, subject to B.'s incumbrances thereon. Again, in 1838, A. mortgages to D. for 600*l.* the copyhold estate alone, without notice of the 500*l.* incumbrance. In 1837 B. has notice of C.'s security, and in 1838 (after having sold both the estates, under powers of sale, and received the purchase-money) he has notice of D.'s security. The produce of the freehold estate being insufficient to pay B. and C. in full, but that of the freehold and copyhold being sufficient for that purpose, C. claims to have the whole of the 500*l.* charge thrown upon the produce of the copyhold estate, in order that he may receive payment out of that of the freehold. On the other hand, D. claims to be paid the whole of his debt out of the produce of the copyhold estate in priority to C.:—Held, that the claim of neither party can prevail to the fullest extent; but that, the 500*l.* being, by the security of 1832, charged on the freehold and copyhold estates ratably (that is to say, in proportion to their respective net values), and without preference, C. has an equity, of the nature claimed by him, to the extent of that proportion of the 500*l.* which is charged upon the copyhold estate, while, in other respects, in relation to that estate, D. has priority over C. Bugden v. Bignold, 2

Y. & C. C. C. 377. And see Titley v. Davies, Id. 399, n.

Mortgage by Married Woman—Restraint on Anticipation.]—C., a widow, was entitled to the income of one-third of a fund in court for her life for her separate use without power of anticipation, and was also entitled to the income of the remaining two-thirds of the fund for her life, but subject to certain deductions. She mortgaged all her interest in the fund, and some policies of assurance on her life, to F., and an order was made for payment of the income of the mortgaged property to him. C. then married M.; and after her marriage she charged all her interest in the fund in favour of P. After this T. obtained a judgment against her, and the appointment of a receiver of her separate estate. The income received by F. was more than sufficient for payment of the interest on his mortgage and the premiums on the policies, and he did not desire to reduce his principal:—Held, that, as between F. and the subsequent incumbrancers of the fund, there ought to be a marshalling of securities, and that F. ought to pay the interest on his mortgage and the premiums on the policies out of the income of the one-third with respect to which the restraint on anticipation existed, so as to leave the income of the remaining two-thirds to satisfy the subsequent incumbrances. Loder's Trusts, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 230; 55 L. T. 582; 35 W. R. 58.

Mortgage of Life Estate and Insurance Policy.]—A mortgagee of a life estate and policies of assurance had also obtained subsequent judgments, being charges under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, on the life estate. There were intervening incumbrances on the life estate only. On his first mortgage being discharged out of the life estate:—Held, that the next incumbrancer was entitled, on the principle of marshalling, to be paid out of the policies, and that the first mortgagee could not by consolidating his securities throw his subsequent charges on the policies so as to prevent this. Ford v. Tynte, 41 L. J., Ch. 758; 27 L. T. 304.

Realty and Insurance Policy.]—A trader, who was entitled to certain real estate, and certain policies of insurance, mortgaged the estate and policies to one person to secure the same debt. He afterwards mortgaged the estate alone to another person, and subsequently became bankrupt:—Held, that the general rule respecting the marshalling of securities applied, and that the second mortgagee was entitled to have the proceeds of the policies of insurance applied, in the first instance, in payment of the debt due to the first mortgagee. Cornwall, In re, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 63; 3 Dr. & War. 173; 2 Con. & L. 131.

As between Heir and Administratrix.]—Land already charged with a mortgage debt was comprised, together with other land and a policy of assurance, in a further mortgage for the original debt, and an additional debt; and the mortgagor died intestate:—Held, that (as between the heir and administrator of the deceased mortgagor) the land originally charged with the first-mentioned debt remained primarily liable to it, and that the additional debt must be borne by the lands and the policy ratably. Lipscomb v. Lipscomb, 19 L. T. 342.

Voluntary Settlement.]—A. being seised in fee of lands, subject to a charge for marriage portions, gave judgments for the amount of the charges upon the occasions of the marriages. Subsequently, on his own marriage, he executed a voluntary settlement reciting those charges and settling the lands on himself for life, remainders over in strict settlement. He afterwards executed two separate mortgages of the lands, and still later, on the marriage of his son, executed articles of agreement, reciting the voluntary settlement and the mortgages. During his life some of the incumbrances were paid out of his life estate, and after his death a judgment creditor, whose debt was later in date than the mortgage debts and secured by judgment on his life estate, sought that so much of the mortgage debts as had been paid out of his life estate as should be necessary to satisfy the demands of creditors whose demands affected the life estate alone, should be raised by sale of part of the inheritance in exoneration of the life estate:—Held, that he was not entitled to the relief sought, since courts of equity will not, where there has been a voluntary settlement, interfere to disturb that settlement in favour of a person whose claim is derived only through the settlor. Dolphin v. Aylward, L. R. 4 H. L. 486; 23 L. T. 636; 19 W. R. 49.

—— Against subsequent Mortgagees.]—Where a voluntary settlement of freeholds contained a covenant by the settlor with the trustees for quiet enjoyment, and the settlor afterwards mortgaged the settled, together with some unsettled, property:—Held, that all those who claimed under the settlement might throw the payment of the mortgage debt in the first instance upon the unsettled property, and prove on the covenant for quiet enjoyment against the settlor's estate. Hales v. Cox, 32 Beav. 118; 8 L. T. 134; 11 W. R. 331; 1 N. R. 344.

—— Against Prior Mortgagees.]—The settlor, after making the settlement, but before the mortgage, purchased the share of his son (who had become bankrupt) under the settlement; and after the mortgage he resettled that share for the benefit of that son and another, but did not covenant for quiet enjoyment. After the resettlement the son again became bankrupt. With respect to the parties claiming his interest under the resettlement:—Held, that they were also entitled to throw the payment of the mortgage debt, in the first instance, upon the unsettled property, but were not entitled to prove under the covenant in the original settlement. Ib.

—— Against Mortgagee with Notice.]—The daughter of a mortgagor entitled, under a voluntary settlement, to a charge on one of two estates comprised in a mortgage, is entitled to have the other estate first applied in satisfaction of the mortgage, as against a subsequent mortgagee of the two estates, with notice of her charge. Aldridge v. Forbes, 9 L. J., Ch. 37; 4 Jur. 20.

—— Against unsecured Creditors.]—A mortgagee of lands, part of which is comprised in a voluntary settlement, must first resort to the unsettled lands, and will not be thrown upon the settled property, in order to favour unsecured creditors, against whom the voluntary settlement is good. Anstey v. Newman, 39 L. J., Ch. 769.

Charge for Younger Sons—Consent to Mortgage.]—A testator by will, made in 1836, charged his lands of X. with 2,000*l.*, which he appointed amongst his three younger sons. After his death his eldest son conveyed the lands of X. to trustees to secure 600*l.* by way of mortgage, the younger sons being parties to the mortgage, and consenting to postpone their charges to the mortgage. In 1841 the eldest son purchased the lands of Y., and in 1845 a judgment was obtained against him by S., the lands of X. and Y. having been sold:—Held, that the produce of the lands of X. were to be applied, in the first instance, in payment of the mortgage, and any deficiency was to be made up out of the produce of the lands of Y.; that the balance of the produce of Y. was to be applied in payment of S.'s judgment; and that the appointees of the charge of 2,000*l.* were not entitled to have the proceeds of Y. marshalled in their favour. Lawder, In re, 11 Ir. Ch. R. 346; 5 L. T. 188.

Two Moieties—Conveyance of one to Purchaser with Covenant for further Assurance.]—A person absolutely entitled to one moiety of an estate and contingently entitled to the other moiety mortgaged both moieties to secure a sum of 1,500*l.* and subsequently made an absolute conveyance of the contingent moiety to a purchaser. The conveyance did not refer to the mortgage, and the only covenant it contained was one for further assurance:—Held, that the covenant for further assurance was sufficient to protect the purchaser, and that as between the two owners the unsold portion must bear the whole mortgage debt. Jones, In re, Farrington v. Forrester, 62 L. J., Ch. 996; [1893] 2 Ch. 461; 3 R. 498; 69 L. T. 45.

Effect of Covenant against Incumbrances in Marriage Settlement.]—In the year 1810, a testator devised his real estates to E. R. in fee, subject to the payment of his debts and legacies, and died in the same year. A legacy of 800*l.* was never paid off. The property consisted of four estates, T., F., P. and C. In 1818 E. R. mortgaged estates T. and C. to W. In 1822 E. R., on his marriage, settled estates T., P. and C. on himself for life, remainder in strict settlement upon the first and other sons, &c., of the marriage: and he covenanted therein against incumbrances. In 1836 E. R. mortgaged estate F. to L. In 1843 the plaintiff H. registered a judgment against E. R. In 1844 E. R. became insolvent, and C. was appointed his assignee. H., the judgment creditor, filed her bill against all the above incumbrancers, against C., and the first tenant in tail under the settlement, praying to be permitted to redeem prior incumbrances, &c., and that C. should redeem her, or be foreclosed:—Held, that the effect in equity, of the covenant against incumbrances contained in the settlement of 1822, as between the settlor and the children of the marriage, was to throw the debts, which were then charged upon the four estates, upon that estate which was left out of settlement (F.), or upon the life-interest in the settled estates. Hughes v. Williams, 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 3 Macn. & G. 683; 16 Jur. 415.

Two Estates mortgaged—Devise of one Subject to Debts, &c.]—J. B. being entitled to the lands of P. and K. mortgaged the same, and by his will, having given his son H. B. all his interest in the lands of P., devised thus: "I give, devise and bequeath unto my son A. B., but in trust to and for the sole use and behoof of my daughter H. C., without the control of her husband, all my interest in and to my lands of K., &c., with full power to dispose thereof with the consent of H. C., but subject to my debts, legacies," &c. After his father's death, H. B. took an assignment of the mortgage, and went into possession of all the mortgaged premises. On a bill filed by H. C. and her husband against H. B. and A. B., praying a redemption, and charging that the mortgage was then paid off by the perception of the rents and profits:—Held, that the lands of K. were not bound to exonerate the lands of P., but that both should contribute ratably to the payment of the mortgage; but, the bill having been filed before the mortgage was paid off, the costs of the mortgagee should be borne by the lands of K. exclusively. Clarke v. Brereton, 1 Jones, 165.

Devise of Equities of Redemption to pay Debts—Mortgage of one with Recital that Debts were paid.]—B. being seised in fee of estates P. and C. and also of other estates, made separate mortgages of P. and C., and devised all the estates to trustees, upon trust by sale or mortgage, to raise money to pay his debts and legacies, and subject thereto upon trust for his daughter, Mrs. H., for life, for her separate use, with remainder upon such trusts as she should, by deed or will appoint. Mrs. H., by virtue of her power, mortgaged P. to A. in fee, by a deed reciting that the testator's debts and legacies had been paid (which was not the fact), and containing an unqualified covenant by Mr. and Mrs. H., against incumbrances. Subsequently, Mrs. H., by virtue of her power, mortgaged C. to Holmes in fee, and made similar mortgages of other parts of the estates:—Held, that, however the case might have stood, if these mortgages had been made by virtue of an ownership in fee, the recital and covenant in A.'s mortgage gave him no right to have P. exonerated from the testator's debts and legacies out of C. and the other estates, as against Holmes' and the other subsequent mortgages under the power of appointment. Stronge v. Hawkes, 4 De G. & J. 632.

—— As between Puisne Mortgagees.]—Held, also, that the charge of debts contained in the will did not give A. any right, as against Mrs. H.'s other mortgages, to have the testator's mortgage on P. paid out of all the devised estates ratably, but that it must be borne by P. Ib.

Devise of two Estates—Mortgage of one, subsequent Mortgage of other, to Bank—Debt, how payable.]—A person, having devised estates A. and B., deposited the title deeds of A. with his bankers to secure any balance that might be due from him, and, being largely indebted and unable to satisfy the debt, and, requiring further small advances, deposited with the bank the title deeds of B. The debt remaining due at his death:—Held, that the amount due up to the time of the second deposit was payable out of A.; and the amount accrued subsequently out of A. and B. ratably; the value of A. to be computed after payment of the previous mortgage. De Ruchefort v. Dawes, 40 L. J., Ch. 625; L. R. 12 Eq. 540; 25 L. T. 456.

Trader—Mortgage by Consignee.]—A firm in Ceylon employed a firm in England as their agents and factors, the course of business being that the Ceylon firm consigned cargoes to the English firm for sale on their account, and drew bills on the English firm against the consignments. Consignments of coffee having been made in this manner, and bills accepted by the English firm against them, the English firm pledged the coffee, together with certain securities of their own, with T., their broker, to secure a large debt due from them to him. The English firm became insolvent, and executed a creditor's deed under the act of 1861, and then T. sold the coffee (which produced more than sufficient to cover the bills drawn against it) and enough of the other securities to satisfy his debt :—Held, that the Ceylon firm were entitled, as against the English firm in liquidation, to have the remaining securities in T.'s hands marshalled, and to have a lien thereon for the balance due to them upon the coffee transaction. Alston, Ex parte, Holland, In re, L. R. 4 Ch. 168 ; 19 L. T. 542 ; 17 W. R. 266.

—— In Favour of Mortgagee — Against Assignee in Bankrupty.]—Mortgagee of trader's furniture, stock in trade, &c. :—Held, entitled, as against the assignee of the trader who had become bankrupt, to the benefit of the doctrine of marshalling ; and the goods not in his security held first applicable to the payments of the landlord's demand. Stephenson, Ex parte, 1 De G. 586 ; 17 L. J., Bk. 5 ; 12 Jur. 6.

Between Judgment Creditors—Debts thrown on unsettled Estates.]—A party seised of several estates, and indebted by judgment, settles one of the estates for valuable consideration, with a covenant against incumbrances, and subsequently acknowledges other judgments :—Held, that the prior judgments should be thrown altogether on the unsettled estates, and that the subsequent judgment creditors had no right to make the settled estate contribute. Averall v. Wade, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 252.

As against Surety.]—Mortgage of two funds to A. with a covenant by a surety. Second mortgage of one of the funds to B. ; B.'s funds having been exhausted in part payment of A.'s debt, and A.'s mortgage having been transferred to the surety on payment by him of the balance :—Held, that B. had a right to marshal the securities as against the surety. South v. Bloxham, 2 H. & M. 457 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 369 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 319 ; 11 L. T. 264.

—— Tacking Costs.] — Held, also, that the surety could not tack, as against B., the costs of a defence to an action on his covenant, from which B. derived no benefit, but that he might charge, as against B., all costs incurred for the common benefit of the persons interested in the estate after the first mortgage. Ib.

Semble, also, that, as against the original mortgagor, the surety might have tacked to his security all costs not improperly incurred as surety. Ib.

Debt to Crown—Contribution between Settled and Unsettled Estates.]—A debt due to the crown, overriding the entire estate of the debtor, having been levied out of one portion of it only vested in a mortgagee, the mortgagee is not entitled to contribution from purchasers of other portions of the estate of the crown debtor, who derive title under a settlement for valuable consideration prior to such mortgage. Hartley v. O'Flaherty, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 208.

Collateral Security.]—P. D. mortgaged estates X. and Y., and, as a collateral security, his sons assigned their estates in N. P. D. afterwards sold X. to the defendant, covenanting against incumbrances, the mortgagee purporting to be a party to but never executing the conveyance ; and P. D.'s sons executing a bond of indemnity to the defendant against all incumbrancers. In 1805 the mortgagee filed a bill of foreclosure against P. D., his sons, and the defendant, and in 1806 the sons made an equitable mortgage of N. to the plaintiff, who took without notice of the defendant's claim :—Held, that the defendant had a right to have N. applied in payment of the mortgage before the lands sold to him, and that the plaintiff took subject to the same liability ; held, also, that the plaintiff had a right to have Y. sold, and to redeem the mortgage on N. Going v. Farrell, Beat. 472.

Semble, but for the pendency of the suit, the plaintiff, as equitable mortgagee, would have had priority to the defendant. Ib.

a. What Amounts to.

Half-payment.]—A mortgagee is not bound to accept half of his debt. Robinson v. Cumming, 2 Atk. 410.

Security held till Debt Paid.]—Estates being conveyed, among other purposes, to secure a debt of comparatively small amount, the court will not direct a release upon payment into court of the largest sum to which the debt can in probability amount ; the incumbrancer being entitled to retain the security till the debt is discharged. Postlethwaite v. Blythe, 2 Swanst. 256.

Time of.]—A lessee assigned the demised premises to A. by way of mortgage, and afterwards made two equitable mortgages of them, one to B. and the other to C., and died. C. agreed to purchase the lease of his executors free from incumbrances, and afterwards took possession of the premises, but did not pay the purchase-money :—Held, that, as between C. and the executors, the purchase-money must be considered to have been applied on the day on which C. took possession, towards satisfaction of the incumbrances, according to their priorities. Greenwood v. Taylor, 14 Sim. 505 ; 9 Jur. 480.

Premature Payment.]—A payment of the mortgage-money before the day limited by the deed to the general agent of the mortgagee, but without the mortgagee having authorised a premature repayment, and without his privity, is not a good discharge of the mortgage debt. Burrough v. Cranston, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 203.

Payment before Expiration of Notice.]—A son who was residuary legatee under his father's will, mortgaged his interest under that will to H. The son died, having made P. his executor, and A. his residuary legatee, A., as residuary legatee, and H., on behalf of himself and the other creditors, brought an action against the executors of the son for administration of the son's estate, and H. brought an action against the executors of the father for administration of the father's estate. Shortly after this, P. gave notice to H. that he should pay off the mortgage in six calendar months, and this notice was accepted by H.:—Held, that, notwithstanding the giving and acceptance of the notice, H., having taken proceedings to recover his mortgage-money, was bound to accept, in satisfaction of his claims, his principal money and costs with interest up to the time of payment, though such payment was made before the expiration of the notice. Alcock, In re, Prescott v. Phipps, 23 Ch. D. 372; 49 L. T. 240—C. A.

Interest in lieu of Notice.]—After default in payment of the mortgage-money according to the proviso for redemption in the mortgage deed, the mortgagor is at liberty to pay off the mortgage-money without giving the mortgagee six months' notice if he pays six months' interest in advance in lieu of the notice. Johnson v. Evans, 61 L. T. 18—C. A.

—— Right of Equitable Mortgagee.]—An equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds is not entitled to six months' notice before he is bound to accept a tender of the amount due, nor to six months' interest in lieu of such notice, but he is entitled to a reasonable time to look up the deeds. Fitzgerald's Trustee v. Mellersh, 61 L. J., Ch. 231; [1892] 1 Ch. 385; 66 L. T. 178; 40 W. R. 251.

Payment before Default—Dishonour.]—On the 2nd of May, 1837, freehold and copyhold estates were mortgaged by C. to I., subject to a proviso for redemption on payment of 10,000*l.*, on the 2nd of May, 1844, with half-yearly interest in the meantime. Prior to any default, C. paid to I. 7,000*l.* by cheque, and gave him two bills of exchange drawn by C. & Co., upon and accepted by C. for 1,620*l.*, at three months after date, and 1,500*l.* at six months after date, and for which he signed a receipt which concluded as follows: "and which cheque for 7,000*l.* and bills for 3,120*l.*, making together 10,120*l.*, are in full of principal and interest due to me upon a mortgage of C.'s freehold property in K. and S. for 10,000*l.*, and I do hereby undertake whenever required to execute a conveyance of the said property." I. gave this memorandum, together with the title and mortgage deeds of the premises, to C. The cheque for 7,000*l.* was paid, but both the bills of exchange were dishonoured. C. afterwards conveyed all his estate to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, and then became bankrupt. I. never reconveyed the premises:—Held, that, as between I. and C. and his assignees by deed and his assignees in bankruptcy, the receipt of the cheque and bills, and the giving the above memorandum, did not discharge the mortgaged premises from the mortgage; but that on their dishonour I. was entitled to a decree against them all for the restoration of the title and mortgage deeds, and to a decree for foreclosure. Teed v. Carruthers, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 31; 6 Jur. 987.

Interest paid where no Charge.]—Interest was paid on a mortgage of 360*l.*, from 1829 to 1852, but the court, in 1857, decided that 110*l.* of the 360*l.* was not well charged on the property:—Held, in taking the accounts, that the interest thus paid for twenty-three years on the 110*l.* ought not to be treated as payments in discharge of the capital of the remaining 250*l.* Blandy v. Kimber, 25 Beav. 537.

Depreciation of Security.]—Where a mortgagee permitted an executor and devisee of mortgaged estates under the mortgagor's will to remain in possession of mortgaged leaseholds for fifteen years, and received interest from him during that time, on the security becoming of less value than the debt, he was not allowed to have the unpaid portion of his mortgage made good out of a legacy given by the mortgagor's will, and which had been paid into court. Ridgway v. Newstead, 9 W. R. 31.

Payment to what Attributable.]—A. B., an equitable mortgagee, lent the title deeds to C. D., the mortgagor, to enable him to arrange a sale of the property. C. D. was indebted to A. B., both on the mortgage and on a trade account. C. D. paid to A. B. a part of the produce of the sale, but there was no evidence of his having made any express appropriation of that payment:—Held, that it must be understood that the payment was made on the mortgage account, and that A. B. had no right to appropriate it to a trade account. Young v. English, 7 Beav. 10; 13 L. J., Ch. 76.

Mortgagee concurring in Sale.]—A mortgagee concurred with the transferee of the equity of redemption in selling the property, and he allowed such transferee to receive the purchase-money:—Held, that the mortgagee could not afterwards sue the mortgagor for the debt, and he was perpetually restrained from doing so, and ordered to pay the costs of the suit. Palmer v. Hendrie, 28 Beav. 341.

Redemption of Guarantee — Security not affected.]—Husband and wife deposited title deeds of real estate, to which the wife was entitled, with certain bankers, to secure a running account, not exceeding 2,000*l.* The father of the husband gave a written guarantee as a further security. The father subsequently paid a portion of the amount due on the security, and redeemed his guarantee:—Held, that the security was not thereby released or affected. Waugh v. Wren, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 365; 7 L. T. 612; 11 W. R. 244.

Receipt of Composition from Partner's Estate.]—A solicitor invested money of a client on an improper security (a fourth mortgage). It being supposed that the security was worthless, and the solicitor having absconded, the client received a composition of 5*s.* in the pound from the estate of the deceased partner of the solicitor, under a general scheme of compromise between the executors and creditors of such deceased partner. The mortgaged estate having subsequently proved sufficient to pay the fourth mortgage:—Held, that the amount received under the composition must be repaid to the partner's estate, and did not enure to the benefit of subsequent incumbrancers on the mortgaged property. Sawyer v. Goodwin, 45 L. J., Ch. 289; 1 Ch. D. 351; 34 L. T. 635; 24 W. R. 493—C. A.

Solicitor-Agent to receive Interest only.]—Where a solicitor employed by mortgagor and mortgagee received the interest on the mortgage debt regularly, and after a time fraudulently obtained part of the principal from the former; and, although the interest was not regularly paid to the mortgagee, he made no complaint to the mortgagor:—Held, that the solicitor was agent of the mortgagee to receive the interest, but not the principal. Kent v. Thomas, 1 H. & N. 473.

A. lent to B. 1,000*l.* upon the security of a deed, which contained a covenant by him to surrender copyhold premises to A.'s use. No surrender was made. D., who acted as attorney for both parties, signed a receipt for the money, and the title deeds were delivered to him, and he prepared and delivered to B., but without A.'s knowledge, a schedule of the deeds, at the foot of which was a memorandum, signed by D., acknowledging the receipt of the deeds, and undertaking to deliver them up on payment of the principal money and interest. The mortgage deed remained in D.'s possession, and he from time to time received the interest, and paid it over to A. The principal money was paid to D., who appropriated it to his own use, and died insolvent:—Held, first, that D.'s receipt for the principal, and the memorandum signed by him, were admissible in evidence for A. Wilkinson v. Candlish, 5 Ex. 91; 19 L. J., Ex. 166.

Held, secondly, that neither the possession of the mortgage deed, nor the receipt of the interest, was any evidence of an authority to D. to receive the principal, and consequently that A. was entitled to recover it from B. Ib.

Giving up Deeds.]—Mere delivery up of deeds does not cancel mortgage debt; but, when accompanied with mortgage bond, on purpose to release debt, in case donor should die of then present illness, is, as it seems, a good donatio causâ mortis. Hurst v. Beach, 5 Madd. 351; 21 R. R. 304.

If the scrivener, having the custody of the security, delivers it up, being a bond, payment of the principal is good. Whitlock v. Waltham, 1 Salk. 157; 1 Vern. 150.

—— Absence of Consideration.]—By an indenture made in 1858, G. mortgaged to his father a share of personal estate to which G. was entitled in reversion, expectant on his mother's death. The father died in 1872, having made another son, C., his executor and residuary legatee. The mother died in 1887. C. shortly afterwards sent a letter to G., enclosing the indenture, and stating that he handed it over to G. in compliance with the wish of their late mother. C. afterwards changed his mind and claimed the share under the mortgage. No interest had ever been paid on the mortgage debt by G., and no acknowledgment given by him in respect of it:—Held, that, in the absence of any consideration, the letter, though coupled with delivery of the mortgage deed, was not an effectual release, and was incomplete as a gift, and did not amount to a declaration of trust, and that C. was entitled to the share. Hancock, In re, Hancock v. Berrey, 57 L. J., Ch. 793; 59 L. T. 197; 36 W. R. 710.

Deed omitting to assign Debt.]—A deed was executed by a legal mortgagee of leaseholds, the executor of the mortgagor, and a new mortgagee, whereby, in consideration of the payment by the new mortgagee of the old mortgage debt, the discharge of which the old mortgagee thereby acknowledged, and in consideration of a further advance to the executor of the mortgagor by the new mortgagee, the old mortgagee and the executor assigned the mortgaged premises to the new mortgagee, with a new covenant by the executor of the mortgagor for payment of the aggregate sum, and a new proviso for redemption. The deed contained no assignment of the old mortgage debt, but the operative words extended to all the right and title of the old mortgagee in the premises:—Held, that the old mortgage was not extinguished as far as regarded priority over a subsequent incumbrance. Phillips v. Gutteridge, 4 De G. & J. 531.

Deed not executed by Wife claiming Dower.]—A lessee of land for ninety-nine years created a mortgage term which ultimately became vested in a trustee for a mortgagee and subsequently acquired the fee. He afterwards became bankrupt. In pursuance of an agreement between his assignees, himself and the mortgagee, a deed was executed by which the mortgagee released the mortgage debt, and the fee simple was conveyed to the mortgagee freed and discharged from all equity of redemption. It was intended that the wife of the mortgagor, who was married in 1832, should join in the deed for the purpose of releasing her dower, but she refused to execute it, and after his death she filed a bill to enforce her right to dower:—Held, that the mortgage debt was not extinguished, and that the term was not satisfied within the Satisfied Terms Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. 112), s. 2, and that the term afforded the purchaser protection against the right of dower. Anderson v. Pignet, 42 L. J., Ch. 310; L. R. 8 Ch. 180; 27 L. T. 740; 21 W. R. 150.

Payment by Wife, Tenant for Life under Will of Husband.]—Where a second wife takes large benefits under her husband's will, and pays off a mortgage on lands devised by the husband to her for life, with remainder to the issue of the former marriage, and by her consent the mortgage term is assigned to attend the inheritance; this payment is primâ facie a gift to the remainder-woman, and the wife cannot afterwards set it aside, except on the ground of fraud or mistake. Toplis v. Van der Heyde, 4 Y. & C. 173; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 27.

Payment of Mortgagee by Purchaser.]—A., having a reversionary interest in personalty, which he had mortgaged first to B. and next to C., agreed to sell it to D. for 1,500*l.*; and, D. having, at his request, paid off B. out of the 1,500*l.*, he agreed that, until the sale should be completed, D. should stand in the place of B., and have the full benefit of her security:—Held, that B.'s debt was extinguished by the payment made to her by D., and, consequently, that D. was not entitled to priority over C. Watts v. Symes 16 Sim. 640; 13 Jur. 245.

Taking Conveyance of Equity of Redemption.]—A second mortgagee took a conveyance of the equity of redemption, in consideration of the debts due to himself and the other mortgagees, which he thereby took upon himself and covenanted to pay:—Held, that his debt was extinguished, and therefore that in a foreclosure suit instituted against him, by the parties entitled to the first and third mortgages, he was not entitled to be paid his debt, in priority to the third mortgage. Brown v. Stead, 5 Sim. 535; 2 L. J., Ch. 45.

Transfer to Correspondent, not Satisfaction.]—A. having borrowed money on mortgage from B., such mortgage was afterwards, with the concurrence of A., transferred to C., the correspondent of C., who paid the money to B. by bills, for which he charged A. in the general account between them:—Held, that this was a transfer, and not a satisfaction, of the mortgage. Campbell v. Dent, 2 Moore P. C. 292.

Bond in Substitution of Mortgage.]—A bond from the owner of an estate, charged, to the incumbrancer, who signed a receipt for the amount, is not a substitution for the charge, but merely an additional security; and the estate not thereby released. Saunders v. Leslie, 2 Ball & B. 509; 12 R. R. 114.

Evidence.]—It is not incumbent on the creditor to prove that it was not the intention of the parties to this transaction that the bond should be a substitution of the charge, but it lies on the owner of the estate to make out that the estate is discharged. Ib.

Payment into Court—7 Geo. 2, c. 20.]—When a mortgagor who is being sued at law for the mortgage debt obtains an order under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, for payment into court of the money due from him, and pays such money into court accordingly, such payment operates as a complete discharge from the mortgage debt, and the mortgagor is not bound to see to the application of the money. Bourton v. Williams, 39 L. J., Ch. 800; L. R. 5 Ch. 655; 18 W. R. 1089.

Payment under Protest.]—If mortgagee makes unfounded claims and refuses to reconvey unless they are paid, and mortgagor pays under protest, he can maintain bill for repayment. Chapple v. Mahon, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 225.

Practice—Relief.]—The mortgagee, on her marriage, settled the mortgaged estate on herself for life, remainder to the issue of that marriage. The mortgagor brings a bill to redeem. Mortgagee omits setting forth the settlement in her answer; the mortgagor has a decree to redeem, and pays the mortgage money; afterwards the issue of the mortgagee brings an ejectment on the settlement and recovers the mortgaged premises. The mortgagor relieved, having paid his money pursuant to the decree, and having been in no fault. Chapman v. Duncombe, 2 Vern. 142.

—— Non-payment on Day.]—Where a mortgagee agrees to take a portion of his debt in lieu of the whole, upon payment on a given day, the court will not relieve against the effect of its non-payment on that day. Ford v. Chesterfield (Earl), 19 Beav. 428.

—— Letters cancelling Mortgage.]—Letters by a mortgagee to defendants beneficially interested in the equity of redemption, promising that her executors should cancel the mortgage, and containing words of gift:—Held, to be no defence to a suit of foreclosure by the executors of the mortgagee. Scales v. Maude, 6 De G. M. & G. 43; 25 L. J., Ch. 433; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1417; 4 W. R. 109.

b. Title to Money.

Executor, not Heir, Entitled.]—The executor, not the heir, of a mortgagee in fee is entitled to the money secured by the mortgage. Thornborough v. Baker, 3 Swanst. 628.

Several Mortgagees.]—Where a mortgage is made to several persons jointly, they are in equity tenants in common of the mortgage money. Vickers v. Cowell, 1 Beav. 529; 3 Jur. 864.

Devisees for Life and in Fee.]—Where mortgagee devises mortgage to A. for life, remainder in fee to B., and mortgage in fee is redeemed, tenant for life takes one-third, and remainderman two-thirds of mortgage money. Brent v. Best, 1 Vern. 70.

Tenant for Life and Remaindermen.]—The bill was to redeem a mortgage. It was objected that the defendant was only tenant for life of the equity of redemption, and the remaindermen over were not made parties. Court directed a bill to be brought, the defendant to have a sale, the mortgage debt paid, and the surplus distributed amongst the tenants for life, and the remaindermen in proportion according to their respective interests. Thynn v. Ducall, 2 Vern. 117.

Payment into Court.]—Testator, having a debt secured on lands, gives the mortgage money to the mortgagor, and desires that he will give a reversionary interest therein to a third person. The mortgagor, selling the estate, shall bring the mortgage money into court for the use of the devisee, subject to the life estate. Lewis v. King, 2 Bro. C. C. 600.

—— Sale of Property.]—A mortgagee having commenced an action against the mortgagor to recover the mortgage money upon a collateral security, the mortgagor obtained an injunction against the action, upon the terms of his paying into court the sum which appeared to be really due upon the mortgage. The sum was accordingly paid in and invested in stock, and that stock was afterwards blended with other stock, purchased with another sum of money paid into court in the same suit. The mortgaged property having been afterwards sold under a decree in a different suit between the mortgagee and mortgagor, the mortgagee became the purchaser, and he was allowed to deduct from the purchase-money the amount due to him on the mortgage:—Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to receive back the stock which had been purchased with the sum paid in by him upon obtaining the injunction, and also the accumulated dividends which had accrued on that stock. Taylor v. Waters, 1 Myl. & Cr. 266; 5 L. J., Ch. 210.

Joint Tenancy or Tenancy in Common.]—Mortgages in fee were taken in the name of three sisters as joint tenants, each of the deeds containing a clause by which it was declared that the mortgage money belonged to the mortgagees on a joint account in equity as well as at law. The money advanced on the security of the mortgages formed part of the proceeds of the estate of a brother, to which the three sisters were, under his will, entitled as tenants in common. Having regard to this fact and the other facts in evidence:—Held, that notwithstanding the insertion of the joint account clause the mortgagees were entitled to the mortgage money as tenants in common. Jackson, In re, Smith v. Sibthorpe, 56 L. J., Ch. 593; 34 Ch. D. 732; 56 L. T. 562; 35 W. R. 646.

See also EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR.

c. Presumption of.

After Twenty Years.]—Satisfaction of a mortgage to be presumed after twenty years' possession by the mortgagor, without payment of interest, demand or acknowledgment. Semble. Christophers v. Sparks, 2 J. & W. 223.

Twenty-five Years.]—Mortgage presumed satisfied, no interest having been received for twenty-five years. Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 266.

Rebuttal.]—Twenty years are not an absolute bar to a mortgagee. It is merely a case of presumption which may be rebutted. Stewart v. Nicholls, Tam. 307.

Practice.]—There is no general rule in this court for presuming a mortgage satisfied after twenty years, or any other period of time, elapsing without payment or demand of principal or interest; and, if a jury should on that ground presume the bond satisfied which is given as a collateral security to the mortgagee, yet the mortgagee is not thereby prevented from shewing the truth of the case in this court, if in fact the money has not been paid. Toplis v. Baker, 2 Cox, 119; 2 R. R. 21.

—— Reference to Inquire.]—Although nonpayment of interest for twenty years on a mortgage, where clear, and no demand, raises a presumption of payment, yet on doubtful circumstances, and the original mortgage admitted, it was referred to the master, to inquire whether any interest had been paid. Trash v. White, 3 Bro. C. C. 289.

d. Joint Receipt.

Equitable Charge.]—When an equitable charge is vested in two persons even as joint tenants, the money cannot be paid to one without special authority from the other, so as to discharge the estate which forms the security. Matson v. Dennis, 4 De G. J. & S. 345; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 461; 10 L. T. 391; 12 W. R. 926.

Several Mortgages—Payment by Purchaser.]—A. being entitled to 4,500*l.* secured on his father's estate, and payable after his father's death, borrowed 1,500*l.* of B., and assigned to him the 4,500*l.*, with power to sell the same and give an effectual discharge to the purchaser. A. afterwards borrowed money of other persons and gave similar securities to them. The estate was subsequently sold under the father's will:—Held, that the purchaser of the estate could not safely pay the whole 4,500*l.* to B. on his sole receipt, but that all the other persons who had charges on that sum must be made parties to the conveyance and give receipts for the portions of it to which they were respectively entitled. Brasier v. Hudson, 9 Sim. 1.

Deed executed by One Joint Mortgagee Only.]—A mortgage made to A., B. and C., was paid off. The deed of release recited that the sum of 3,000*l.*, part of the mortgage debt, was not the money of A., B. and C., but belonged to D. and E., upon a joint account. D. and E. were parties to the deed, and purported to acknowledge the receipt of the money. The deed was not executed by D., and E. received the 3,000*l.* The estate being subsequently sold:—Held, that the purchaser could not refuse to complete, on the ground that there was no sufficient discharge of the 3,000*l.* mortgage debt. Matson v. Dennis, 10 L. T. 391; 12 W. R. 596.

e. Tender.

Not Payment.]—In cases of legal or equitable mortgage, a tender properly made and improperly rejected is not equivalent to payment. Bank of New South Wales v. O'Connor, 58 L. J., P. C. 82; 14 App. Cas. 273; 60 L. T. 467; 38 W. R. 465—P. C.

Cheque instead of Cash—Solicitor's Authority.]—A solicitor, having authority from the mortgagees to accept a tender of the amount due under the mortgage, has no implied authority to accept the tender of a cheque in lieu of cash, so as to make such a tender good in law as against the mortgagees. Blumberg v. Life Interests and Reversionary Securities Corporation, 66 L. J., Ch. 127; [1897] 1 Ch. 171; 75 L. T. 627; 45 W. R. 246. Affirmed on the facts, 67 L. J., Ch. 118; [1898] 1 Ch. 27; 77 L. T. 506—C. A.

Absolute or Conditional.]—Under the circumstances of the case, a tender of mortgage money held to be absolute and not conditional. Morley v. Bridges, 2 Coll. C. C. 621.

Place of.]—Six months' notice given to pay in the mortgage money at —— Hall, though this be not the place mentioned in the proviso of the deed, yet where money was lent in town, and no objection made to the notice, no reason for a personal tender, or to make a man carry a great sum to a person in the country. Gyles v. Hall, 2 P. Wms. 378.

Lapse of Time After.]—Tender of payment by mortgagor to agent of mortgagee, and refusal to accept, and twenty-four years thereafter suffered to elapse by mortgagee without demand of principal or interest. Payment of principal and interest for whole time decreed under the circumstances. Meade v. Bandon (Earl), 2 Dow, 268.

Notice.]—As to a tender of mortgage money there ought to be reasonable notice of paying it in, and, if the tender be insisted on to stop interest, the money must be kept dead from that time, because the party is to be always ready. Gyles v. Hall, 2 P. Wms. 378.

Practice — Refusal to Accept.] — Upon the expiration of a notice to pay off mortgage money, the mortgagees are bound to know and to state the amount due for principal, interest, and costs. And, if the mortgagees refuse to receive the amount tendered by the mortgagor, as due for principal, interest, and costs, they do so at their own risk. And a sum having been tendered and refused :—Held, upon a claim to redeem, that the mortgagors were entitled to a decree for an account of the principal, interest, and costs, and that the interest (if the principal did not appear to have been lying idle) must be continued to the time of taking the account; and that, if the sum tendered did not amount to the sum due, the plaintiffs must pay the costs; but, if it exceeded the amount found due, the defendants must pay the costs. Harmer v. Priestley, 16 Beav. 569; 22 L. J., Ch. 1041; 1 W. R. 343.

—— Refusal to Reconvey.] — A mortgagee having refused to reconvey and deliver up the title deeds, though the amount of the mortgage money and interest was tendered to him on the day on which the mortgage was redeemable, a decree was made against him, with costs; and, the money having been paid into court, no interest was allowed to him subsequent to the tender. Robarts v. Jefferys, 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 137.

—— What amounts to Tender.]—The defendants having mortgaged a house to the plaintiffs assigned the equity of redemption to a purchaser, who executed a further charge to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs then sued the defendants upon the covenants of the mortgage. The defendants took out a summons for a stay of proceedings upon payment within a month of principal, interest, and costs, and for a reconveyance of the mortgaged premises; but no order was made upon the summons, in consequence of the refusal of the plaintiffs to reconvey except on payment of the further charge. The question between the parties was subsequently stated in a special case, and was decided in favour of the defendants, the costs being reserved. In taking the mortgage accounts the chief clerk computed the interest down to the date of payment. The defendants took out a summons to vary the certificate by disallowing all interest from the date of the hearing of the summons to stay proceedings :—Held, that the summons to stay was not equivalent to a tender, and that the application failed —that the plaintiffs, having in effect disputed the right of the defendants to redeem, ought to be deprived of the costs occasioned by their unsuccessful claim, but that they were entitled to the other costs of the action. Kinnaird v. Trollope, 58 L. J., Ch. 556; 42 Ch. D. 610; 60 L. T. 892.

—— Injunction against Ejectment.] — The plaintiff, being the purchaser from a co-heir of a mortgagor, had tendered the mortgage money. An injunction was granted to restrain the mortgagee in possession from proceeding in ejectment against a lessee of the property, the plaintiff undertaking to make the other co-heirs parties. Herries v. Griffiths, 2 W. R. 72.

—— Perusing Assignment.] — On tender of redemption of mortgage, mortgagee is entitled to have a reasonable time to peruse the assignment. Wilshaw v. Smith, 9 Mod. 441.

Where covenants are inserted in a deed of assignment, on the part of a mortgagee, he may refuse to take the principal and interest, though tendered, till he had advised with his attorney on the safety of executing the assignment. S. C., 3 Atk. 89.

2. Reconveyance.

a. Right to, 1646.
b. Presumption of, 1650.
c. None Executed, 1650.
d. Obtained by Fraud, 1650.
e. Under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 15. See Assignment and Transfer, ante, D. 6, col. 1490.

a. Right to.

Generally.] — Bill against a mortgagee, to compel him to reconvey upon payment of principal and interest. Cox v. Caffin, 9 Mod. 120.

Equitable mortgagees by deposit of title deeds took, at the time of the mortgage, a conveyance from the mortgagor of the legal estates in the mortgaged properties. They were subsequently paid off, when they surrendered to the mortgagor his title deeds, but did not give up the conveyance. They afterwards claimed a right to retain it as against his subsequent mortgagees of the same properties, on the ground that it comprised other property besides those specifically mortgaged to them :—Held, that those claiming under the mortgagor were entitled to a reconveyance of the legal estates in the specifically mortgaged properties. Young v. Whitchurch and Ellesmere Banking Co., 37 L. J., Ch. 186; 17 L. T. 406.

Not till Payment.]—Until a mortgagee is paid off, he is not obliged to re-convey. Lacey v. Waghorne, 59 L. T. 208.

Before Period fixed for Repayment.]—A mortgagor cannot compel a mortgagee to reconvey the premises prior to the period fixed in the proviso for redemption for repayment of the mortgage money, although the mortgagor tenders the principal and full amount of interest which would be due at that period. Brown v. Cole, 14 L. J., Ch. 167; 9 Jur. 290.

After Money in Mortgagee's Hands.]—Mortgagee cannot be compelled to reconvey till the money due is actually in his hands. On payment into court, is not sufficient. Postlethwaite v. Blythe, 3 Madd. 242.

After Payment.] — A purchaser of property collaterally charged to secure a bond debt, for which he mortgages the purchased estate, and pays the remainder of the purchase-money, is not entitled to insist on having the property reconveyed to him, free of incumbrance, before he pays the sum so secured by mortgage; and, if he file a bill to have the estate reconveyed to him, and a declaration of court as to the persons entitled to receive the money, where there are two sets of claimants, he will be considered as merely a mortgagor filing bill to redeem, and must pay all costs, although he has paid the money into court. Drew v. Harman, 5 Price, 319.

Every mortgagor has the right to have a reconveyance of the mortgaged property upon payment of the money due upon the mortgage, and the mortgagee is charged with the duty of making such reconveyance upon such payment being made. Walker v. Jones, 35 L. J., P. C. 30; L. R. 1 P. C. 50; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 381; 14 L. T. 686; 14 W. R. 484.

Collateral Security — Severance.] — Where, therefore, a mortgagee, having, besides the property mortgaged, certain promissory notes made by the mortgagor as collateral security for his debt, transferred the mortgage without assigning the collateral securities:—Held, is not entitled so to sever the debt from the security. Ib.

Injunction.]—An injunction, granted against his proceeding at law to recover the amount of one of his notes, pending a suit instituted by the mortgagor to redeem and to settle the equities of the parties, was sustained. Ib.

After Payment on Collateral Security.] — Where a debt is secured by mortgage, covenant and bond, if the mortgagee obtain full payment on the bond or covenant, the mortgagor becomes entitled to the estate. Lockhart v. Hardy, 9 Beav. 349; 15 L. J., Ch. 347; 10 Jur. 532.

To Whom.]—A mortgagee is not bound to convey the legal estate in the mortgaged property and to deliver up the title deeds to a person from whom he has accepted payment of principal, interest, and costs, if that person has only contracted to purchase a part of the mortgaged estate, and has not accepted the title. Pearce v. Morris, 39 L. J., Ch. 342; L. R. 5 Ch. 227; 22 L. T. 190; 19 W. R. 196. Varying 38 L. J., Ch. 566; L. R. 8 Eq. 217; 21 L. T. 287; 17 W. R. 1001.

A mortgagee cannot be compelled to place another person in his stead as mortgagee, and he may therefore refuse to convey the mortgaged premises to any person who should become mortgagee by that conveyance. In the absence of contract, he can only be called upon to reconvey to the mortgagor or his assignee. A petition of a tenant for life of an equity of redemption for a transfer of the first mortgage on payment by her into court of the moneys secured thereby, while a second mortgagee was in possession, was dismissed with costs. Colyer v. Colyer, 3 De G. J. & S. 676; 9 L. T. 214; 11 W. R. 587, 1051.

In Accordance with Limitations.]—The same tenant for life having filed her bill to redeem that and a second mortgage, the case was considered as though the plaintiff were tenant in fee, and a decree was made, but with a direction that the reconveyance should be made according to the limitations of the will under which the plaintiff was tenant for life. Ib.

On Tender by Person partially Interested.]—On tender by a person having a partial interest giving a right to redeem, the mortgagee is bound to convey, but the conveyance should reserve the equities of the other persons interested. Pearce v. Morris, supra.

To Administrator—Notwithstanding Infants Interested.]—In a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage of leasehold premises created by an administrator and next-of-kin, an order was made on motion for the mortgagee to assign the mortgaged premises to the administrator, upon payment of principal, interest, and costs; notwithstanding that some of the persons interested in the equity of redemption were infants, and that the case was not within the stat. 7 Geo. 2, c. 20. Grane v. Mitchell, 10 Sim. 484; 9 L. J., Ch. 171.

No Party to Convey.]—An executor of a mortgagee restrained from enforcing payment, and the money ordered into court, where there was no heir of the mortgagee who could reconvey. Schoole v. Sall, 1 Sch. & Lef. 176.

Construction.]—Where in a deed of mortgage it was recited that the mortgagor was entitled under his father's will to a life estate in the hereditaments comprised in the said deed, with remainder to his children as tenants in tail general, with cross-remainders between them, and that for the purpose of increasing the mortgagee's security one of his daughters and her husband (parties thereto of the second part) nad agreed to bar the estate tail in remainder vested in them, the reconveyance to be made to the mortgagors respectively according to their original respective estates and interests therein:—Held, that, according to the true construction of the proviso for redemption, the parties were entitled to a re-conveyance of the estates as originally created by the will, and not as altered for the purposes of the mortgage. Plomley v. Felton, 58 L. J., P. C. 50; 14 App. Cas. 61; 60 L. T. 193—P. C.

Notice.]—An equitable mortgagee, who had proved his debt before the master, was ordered to reconvey to the purchaser, upon receiving his money, without the usual notice. Matson v. Swift, 5 Jur. 645.

Under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20.] — A first mortgagee brought an action on the covenant in the mortgage deed, having received a notice from a second mortgagee not to deliver up the deeds. The mortgagor applied to the court to compel the plaintiff, under the 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, to reconvey the premises upon payment of the principal, interest and costs; and the court held it to be a case within the statute, and made the order. Dixon v. Wigram, 2 C. & J. 613; 1 L. J., Ex. 233.

The 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1, applies only to cases in which the mortgagee is not in possession, and in which he has not attempted to exercise the right of sale. Sutton v. Rawlings, 3 Ex. 407; 6 D. & L. 673; 18 L. J., Ex. 249.

Therefore, where a mortgagee, in pursuance of a power of sale, attempted to dispose of the property, but without success, the court refused to compel him to reconvey the premises and deliver up the deeds, except on payment of the costs of the abortive attempt at sale, and of shewing cause against the rule. Ib.

—— Notice Disputing Right to Redeem.]—To a rule calling upon the mortgagee to shew cause why, upon payment of principal and interest, he should not reconvey the mortgaged premises, and deliver up the deeds, it is an answer that the mortgagee has delivered a notice in writing that he disputes the right of the mortgagor to redeem, although the delivery of such notice has been made since the rule was obtained. Filbee v. Hopkins, 6 D. & L. 264.

Where a mortgagee, by notice to the mortgagor, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 3, seeks to deprive the latter of taking advantage of an application to a court of common law, such notice should contain sufficient to enable the court to form an opinion as to the nature of the objection upon which the right to redeem is disputed, and whether or not a case for the exercise of its jurisdiction exists. Doe d. Harrison v. Louch, 6 D. & L. 270; 18 L. J., Q. B. 278; 14 Jur. 853.

If such a notice contains a mere statement that the mortgagee insists that the mortgagor has no right to redeem, by reason of the mortgaged premises being chargeable with other principal sums than those appearing on the face of the mortgaged deed, or admitted by the mortgagor to be due, it is insufficient. Ib.

Practice—Right disputed—7 Geo. 2, c. 20.]—The court will not interfere under the 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, upon an application by the mortgagor to compel the mortgagee to reconvey the mortgaged premises, where the right to redeem is disputed upon the affidavits. Goodtitle d. Fisher v. Bishop, 1 Y. & J. 344.

—— Setting aside Sale.]—Where an owner of an estate has first mortgaged the property, and then parted with the whole interest, he may, even upon a bill framed as a redemption bill, obtain a reconveyance of the estate, if the facts are such as to entitle him to have the transaction set aside on any established ground of equitable relief. Jenkins v. Parry, 14 L. T. 503.

But where a plaintiff alleges that the defendants who purchased the property were acting at the time as his professional advisers, and they by their answer admitted that they had acted in that capacity, but that they had ceased to do so for some time previously to the transaction, and the plaintiff did not amend the bill and put the fact in issue; and where the case made by the bill was in several material points varied by the evidence, the plaintiff is disentitled to relief, and the decree of the court below was reversed. Ib.

—— Concurrence of Beneficiaries.]—A mortgagee, in whom a satisfied mortgage term was vested:—Held, under the circumstances, bound to assign it to the trustee of the will of the mortgagor, without the concurrence of the parties beneficially interested in the property under the will. Poole v. Pass, 1 Beav. 600; 8 L. J., Ch. 325.

—— Perusal of Assignment.]—On tender of redemption of mortgage, mortgagee is entitled to have a reasonable time to peruse the assignment. Wilshaw v. Smith, 9 Mod. 441.

—— Form of Deed.]—Where all the persons interested in an equity of redemption concur in the deed of reconveyance, the mortgagee cannot insist on having the dealings with the equity of redemption stated in the deed, or object to the deed because it contains no recitals whatever. Hartley v. Burton, L. R. 3 Ch. 365; 16 W. R. 876.

—— In Chambers.]—Semble, that a judge in chambers will not order a reconveyance of mortgaged premises. Morley v. Bridges, 2 Coll. C. C. 621.

—— At Common Law.]—A court of common law has no power to compel a reconveyance of a mortgaged estate after payment of the mortgage debt, interest and costs. Gorely v. Gorely, 1 H. & N. 144.

b. Presumption of.

Generally.]—In 1711 a mortgage for a term of years was made to A. In 1712 a mortgage in fee of the estate was made to S., in trust for A. In 1714 the term was assigned to C. in trust for A., to attend, &c., and then the equity of redemption in fee was conveyed to A. In 1717 A., reciting that he was seised in fee, subject to a lease for ninety-nine years made by a prior owner, grants and confirms that lease. Subsequent owners in their wills and deeds used terms adapted to pass the legal estate, granted leases for long terms, and exercised other acts of ownership. A reconveyance of the legal fee was presumed. Noel v. Bewley, 3 Sim. 103.

After Lapse of Time.]—Reconveyance of the legal estate presumed under obscure circumstances after a great lapse of time, though the possession originally not adverse, but under a trust: upon that presumption a specific performance decreed against a purchaser. Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 239.

A reconveyance of a mortgage made in 1745, but not afterwards mentioned in the title deeds, ought to be presumed where no demand of either principal or interest has been made for several years, and mortgage deeds have been long in possession of the owner and his ancestors. Cooke v. Soltau, 2 Sim. & S. 154; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 30.

c. None Executed.

Generally.]—It is the rule of the court that, if the scrivener have the custody of the security, payment of the interest is good; if he delivers it up, being a bond, payment of the principal is good: but, payment of the principal in case of a mortgage deed, the giving up the deed is not sufficient to restore the estate; there must be a reconveyance. So payment of interest good, if mortgagee consents, or after his death his executor, either expressly or by implication, as if he accept the money afterwards of the scrivener, though the scrivener have not possession either of deed or bond. Whitlock v. Waltham, 1 Salk. 157; 1 Vern. 150.

Lapse of Time.]—When the money due upon a mortgage has been paid to the mortgagee, but no reconveyance has been executed, the mortgagor becomes from the date of such payment a tenant at will to the mortgagee, and the legal estate of the mortgagee is extinguished by thirteen years' adverse possession of the mortgagor. Sands to Thompson, 52 L. J., Ch. 406; 22 Ch. D. 614; 48 L. T. 210; 31 W. R. 397.

Release without Revesting.]—If a mortgage is found cancelled in the possession of the mortgagee, it is as much a release as cancelling a bond, but there must be some deed to revest the estate in the mortgagor. Harrison v. Owen, 1 Atk. 520.

d. Obtained by Fraud.

Generally.] — Mortgagees transferred their mortgage to the plaintiff, who gave no notice to the mortgagors. Afterwards the mortgagors, intending to redeem, paid the amount secured by the mortgage to the solicitors of the mortgagees, without ascertaining that they were authorised to receive it, and the solicitors misappropriated the money. The mortgagees executed a deed prepared by their solicitors, but without perusing the same or knowing its contents, which contained a recital acknowledging the receipt of the money, and purported to convey the property by the direction of the mortgagors to their nominees. There was no proper receipt indorsed on the deed :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the usual foreclosure decree against the mortgagors. Withington v. Tate, L. R. 4 Ch. 288 ; 20 L. T. 637 ; 17 W. R. 559.

Purchaser without Notice.]—In 1851 a mortgage of real estate was made to three persons, the mortgage deed disclosing the fact that the mortgage money was held by the mortgagees upon trust. In 1856 the mortgagor induced the survivor of the three trustee mortgagees, in breach of his duty as trustee, to execute a reconveyance of part of the mortgaged property of such a character as to put anyone who saw it upon inquiry which would have disclosed the breach of trust. The mortgagor then made a fresh mortgage to other persons, from whom he concealed the existence both of the mortgage of 1851 and the reconveyance :—Held, that the mortgagees of 1856 could claim the benefit of the legal estate which passed by the reconveyance without admitting that they had notice of the mortgage of 1851, and of the trusts upon which the mortgage money was held ; and could set up the defence of purchaser without notice against the persons beneficially interested in the mortgage of 1851. Pilcher v. Rawlins, 41 L. J., Ch. 485 ; L. R. 7 Ch. 259 ; 25 L. T. 921 ; 20 W. R. 281.

The mortgagor executed a deed purporting to convey to the surviving trustee another part of the property, in consideration of a sum of money not actually paid, but the receipt for which was indorsed. This conveyance did not refer to the mortgage of 1851 :—Held, that a subsequent mortgagee from the surviving trustee could set up the defence of purchaser without notice against the person beneficially interested in the mortgage of 1851, although this mortgage had been concealed from him. Ib.

Two trustees, one of whom was a solicitor, advanced money on mortgage. The mortgagor, with the concurrence of the solicitor trustee, sold part of the mortgaged property without disclosing the mortgage. Regular conveyances in fee to the purchasers were executed by the mortgagor, containing a recital that he was seised or otherwise well and sufficiently entitled in fee simple. The solicitor-trustee received the purchase-money, and retained it. Eleven years afterwards both trustees executed a reconveyance of the property so sold, the other trustee believing, on the representation of the solicitor-trustee, that the property was then about to be sold by the mortgagor. Soon afterwards the solicitor trustee absconded, and the other trustee then filed a bill against the mortgagor and the purchasers, praying for foreclosure against them : —Held, that, though the purchasers were purchasers for valuable consideration without notice, they could not avail themselves of any legal estate acquired by means of the reconveyance, which, having been obtained by fraud, must be cancelled ; and that they had purchased only the equity of redemption. Heath v. Crealock, 44 L. J., Ch. 157 ; L. R. 10 Ch. 22 ; 31 L. T. 650 ; 23 W. R. 95.

Held, that, under the form of conveyance adopted, neither the plaintiff nor the mortgagor was estopped from denying that the legal estate had passed by the conveyance to the purchasers. Ib.

Held, that a decree must be made against the purchasers, but for foreclosure and not for sale ; and that the purchasers would not be ordered to deliver up the deeds which were in their possession. Ib.

In 1854 a mortgage was executed of real estate in Ireland to E. In 1855 the mortgagor conveyed the estate, with other property, to B., to secure a debt and a further advance made to him. B. had no notice of the prior mortgage, the property being conveyed to him as free from incumbrances. Before the mortgage to B. was completed by registration of the deeds the mortgage to E. was discovered, and B. then insisted upon the mortgagor obtaining a release of the estate from E. This the mortgagor agreed to do, and subsequently obtained a reconveyance to himself from E. of the estate, on an assignment to him of other securities. After the execution of the reconveyance to the mortgagor, no further conveyance was made to B., but B. was apprised of its execution, and allowed the mortgage to continue. The other securities assigned by the mortgagor to E. turned out fictitious, having been fabricated by the mortgagor for the purpose of obtaining the reconveyance. E. claimed the benefit of the original mortgage, on the ground that the reconveyance was obtained by fraud. The court in Ireland held that B. was a purchaser for value of the release, as having been procured by the mortgagor in pursuance of the covenants in the mortgage deed, and that he, being in ignorance of the fraud of the mortgagor, was entitled to retain the advantage which the release had given him. On appeal this decision was reversed. Eyre v. Burmester, 10 H. L. Cas. 90 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1019 ; 6 L. T. 838 ; 10 W. R. 587. And see S. C., 4 De G. J. & S. 435 ; 33 L. J., Ch. 652 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 687 ; 10 L. T. 673 ; 12 W. R. 993.

The claim of E. was against the mortgagor, by paramount right to recover the estate, of which he had been deprived by fraud ; and the mortgagor acquired no interest by the reconveyance to feed his prior contract with by virtue of that fraudulent transaction. Ib.

Although all matters affecting the title to property, or the interest of other persons in connection with it, all circumstances which would entitle parties to equitable priorities, or change the character of rights which depend upon want of notice, if known to the solicitor, have the same effect as if actually known to the client, this imputed knowledge has never been extended to matters which have no reference to rights created or affected by the transaction, but which merely relate to the motives and objects of the parties. Ib.

3. DEEDS.

a. Right to, 1652.
b. Loss of, 1654.
c. Production of, 1656.
d. Costs of obtaining—See COSTS AND EXPENSES, post, S. 2, c, col. 1836.

a. Right to.

Put in Court.]—Deeds sometimes ordered into court for their security. Dixies v. Hillary, Cary, 19.

Between Mortgagees.]—Where there is a subsequent mortgagee without notice, who has possession of the title deeds, the first mortgagee shall not compel a delivery of the writings from him, without paying him his mortgage money. Head v. Egerton, 3 P. Wms. 280.

Between adverse Claimants.]—One who lends money on a security, which he is advised by a lawyer to be a good one, yet, if it is otherwise and he has notice that another made title to it, he must deliver up all the writings relating to it, but not the mortgage deed, for there may be covenants in that for payment of the money. Opie v. Godolphin, Pre. Ch. 548.

Trust of Mortgage Moneys.]—Where mortgagee declared trusts of the mortgage moneys, and transferred the mortgages by the same deeds:—Held, that, on redemption the trust deeds must be delivered to the mortgagor, or, in the case of one of them (being a marriage settlement), the mortgagees, retaining it by his consent, were bound to furnish him, at their expense, with attested copies, and a covenant for production. Dobson v. Land, 4 De G. & Sm. 575; 8 Hare, 216; 19 L. J., Ch. 484; 14 Jur. 288.

On Forgery.]—Mortgagees ordered to deliver up title deeds of estate mortgaged to them by a fraudulent or forged mortgage deed. Since the judicature act, the chancery division has jurisdiction on the application of the legal owner of title deeds to order them to be delivered up by a purchaser for value without notice. McLeod v. Drummond (14 Ves. 353; 17 id. 152) distinguished. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862; 20 Ch. D. 611; 47 L. T. 80; 30 W. R. 648—C. A.

After Payment—Copies.]—A mortgagee or transferee of a mortgage, though entitled to keep a fair copy of the draft deed for his own protection until the transaction is completed, has no right to keep copies of the mortgage deed or deed of transfer after he is paid off, but whatever copies he has are, as a general rule, copies paid for by the mortgagor, and to be delivered up to him when he pays off the mortgage. Wade and Thomas, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 601; 17 Ch. D. 348; 44 L. T. 599; 29 W. R. 625.

After Reconveyance.]—After a reconveyance by a mortgagee to the mortgagor, the attorney of the mortgagee cannot retain the deeds against the mortgagor as a security for the expenses of the transaction due from the mortgagee to the attorney. Wakefield v. Newbon, 6 Q. B. 276; 13 L. J., Q. B. 258; 8 Jur. 735.

On Redemption — After Reconveyance and Re-mortgage—Right to Original Deeds.]—When there have been an assignment of a mortgage and a reconveyance to the mortgagor, and afterwards a re-mortgage to the same mortgagee, upon an order on redemption for delivery up of deeds relating to the title of the mortgaged property, the original mortgage and reconveyance, as they form links in the title, ought to be delivered up. Hudson v. Malcolm, 10 W. R. 720.

On Foreclosure.]—The common decree in foreclosure does not direct the delivery up of the title deeds by the mortgagor to the mortgagee in the case of foreclosure, but merely that the mortgagor shall be absolutely barred and foreclosed of all right and equity of redemption; and it is only where there is a covenant to deliver them in case of default in payment of the principal money and interest, that the court makes such a decree. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R. 765.

A decree for foreclosure being made against a purchaser, at the suit of a mortgagee, who was a mortgagee only for a term:—Held, that the purchaser ought not to be directed to deliver up the deeds to the mortgagee. Hunt v. Elmes, 2 De G. F. & J. 578; 30 L. J., Ch. 255; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 200; 3 L. T. 796; 9 W. R. 362.

When a judgment for foreclosure is given against a puisne mortgagee, the plaintiff is not entitled to delivery up of deeds of subsequent date to his own mortgage, dealing only with the title to the equity of redemption. Greene v. Foster, 52 L. J., Ch. 470; 22 Ch. D. 566; 48 L. T. 411; 31 W. R. 285.

On Purchase.]—A purchaser who, in a suit to realise a mortgage security, has paid the purchase money of the mortgaged property into court is entitled, before its distribution, to the delivery of the title deeds. Fowler v. Scott, 25 L. T. 784; 20 W. R. 199.

—— As against Bankrupt's Assignees.]—In April, 1826, A. having contracted to purchase an estate from B., and having had the title deeds delivered to him, agreed to deposit the same with C. as a security for the loan of 5,000*l.*, and to give him the mortgage as soon as the legal estate was conveyed to him. B. afterwards conveyed the estate to A.; but before such conveyance was made, and after the title deeds had been deposited with C., the latter refused to complete the mortgage, unless A. would agree to pay usurious interest upon the sum of 5,000*l.* A., having so agreed, delivered to C. the deed of conveyance of the estate from B. to A. A. afterwards became bankrupt. In an action of trover brought to recover the deeds:—Held, that the original possession of the title deeds, being perfectly good, gave C. a right to the estate whenever B. should have conveyed that estate to A.; and that he, and not A.'s assignees, had a right, therefore, to the deed of conveyance from B. to A. Wood v. Grimwood, 10 B. & C. 679; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 192.

Practice—Deeds to be given up.]—Defendant stating himself trustee for mortgagees, decreed to deliver up deeds, because he did not name them; so that plaintiff could amend. Scarborough (Earl) v. Parker, 1 Ves. J. 267.

Where the court establishes a prior equitable title to an estate as against a person who took an equitable mortgage by deposit of the title deeds from the legal owner without notice:—Semble, that it will go on to order him to deliver up the deeds, though he acquired them for value and without notice from the person who at law was the absolute owner of them. Newton v. Newton, 38 L. J., Ch. 145; L. R. 4 Ch. 143; 19 L. T. 588; 17 W. R. 238.

b. Loss of.

Indemnity.]—Upon bill of foreclosure, mortgagee having lost title deeds, payment of mortgage money within limited time was decreed, and on payment of the same a reconveyance was directed, with a bond of indemnity. Shelmardine v. Harrop, 6 Madd. 39; 22 R. R. 232.

Where mortgagee had lost some of the title deeds, he was ordered, on a bill to redeem, to give an indemnity, approved by the master. Midleton (Lord) v. Eliot, 15 Sim. 531; 11 Jur. 742.

Form of bond of indemnity from mortgagee to mortgagor on redemption as to title, where mortgage deeds have been lost. Stokoe v. Robson, 6 Madd. 41, n. See 22 R. R. 234, n.

Under a bill of foreclosure by devisee of a mortgagee, the mortgage deed being lost, a reconveyance directed with an indemnity, and costs against plaintiff. S. C., 19 Ves. 385; 3 V. & B. 51.

Compensation.]—A mortgagee having inadvertently burnt the mortgage deed and the documents relating to the title to the mortgaged estate, some of which were original, and others attested and office copies, was ordered, in a foreclosure suit, not only to procure fresh attested and office copies, but to make compensation for the damage done to the estate by the destruction of the deeds, the amount to be settled by the master, and deducted from the mortgage debt. Hornby v. Matcham, 16 Sim. 325; 17 L. J., Ch. 471; 12 Jur. 825.

Compensation and Indemnity.]—S. being in the position of a mortgagee whose mortgage was paid off, being called upon for a reconveyance and redelivery of the deeds, and unable to produce many of the most important, B., the mortgagor, filed his bill praying for the redelivery of the deeds, and, in case they should not be delivered up to him, for an inquiry into the circumstances, and for indemnity, and for general relief. The Master found that the deeds had been lost, but when lost was wholly uncertain. At the bar, B. prayed compensation as well as indemnity:—Held, that he was entitled to both, and that compensation could be given under the prayer for general relief. Brown v. Sewell, 22 L. J., Ch. 1063; 17 Jur. 708.

—— Measure of.]—The court refused to take into consideration the speculative damages which the title or marketable value of the estate might sustain upon any future dealing with it, from the absence of the deeds, yet held that the mortgagor was upon the authorities entitled to relief in respect of the additional expense of producing evidence of his title, and directed a reference (as in Hornby v. Matcham, 16 Sim. 325), to ascertain what ought to be allowed to him as a sufficient compensation for the damage done to the estate by the loss of the deeds. S. C., 11 Hare, 49.

Inquiry.]—Title deeds being stolen from mortgagee, account decreed, with an inquiry as to them. Stokoe v. Robson, 3 Ves. & B. 51. S. C., 6 Madd. 41, n.; 19 Ves. 385. See 22 R. R. 234, n.

Practice.]—Notice to redeem a mortgage having been given, a title deed was missing; and the mortgagor brought his action for redemption and for an indemnity:—Held, that the action was rightly brought, in order that the loss of the deed might be established and that the plaintiff's title justified, although the defendants had before the action offered an indemnity, the terms of which were in controversy. James v. Rumsey, 48 L. J., Ch. 345; 11 Ch. D. 398; 27 W. R. 617.

—— Interest.] — Held, also, that interest ceased to run on the day fixed for redemption under the notice. Ib.

—— Fraud.]—It having been found in the suit that the deed was in the hand of a third party, to whom the defendants' former solicitor had fraudulently pledged it, leave was given to plaintiff to take proceedings for its recovery. Ib.

—— Search and Inquiry.]—A mortgage deed being lost, the execution of it was admitted in the answer of a foreclosure bill, but the defendant swore there was an indorsement of certain payments on it. The memorial executed by the mortgagor and a counterpart in his possession were offered in evidence, but a sufficient search for the original was not proved:—Held, that there should be a decree to account, with an inquiry as to the original deed and the indorsement. Coulson v. Williams, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 287.

—— Proof.]—Where a deed has been lost, it is not necessary to prove the actual fact of the loss. Abington v. Green, 14 W. R. 852.

A policy had been mortgaged to secure a debt, and the deed was missing after the death of the mortgagee, but had been in existence a short time before. The court refused to assume that the mortgagee had cancelled the deed when in extremis, and allowed secondary evidence of its existence. Ib.

An equitable mortgagee, by deposit of deeds, is not deprived of his right to recover his debt by his inability to produce either the deeds deposited or any memorandum of the deposit, when the court believes that there was such deposit, and that the deeds have been really lost. Baskett v. Skeel, 11 W. R. 1019. S. C., 2 N. R. 547.

c. Production of.

i. Of Mortgage Deed, 1656.
ii. Of Title Deeds and other Securities, 1658.

i. Of Mortgage Deed.

Generally.]—Mortgage deed in the hands of of the mortgagee ordered, on the application of the mortgagor, to be produced for the purpose of inspecting an indorsement on the instrument. Phillips v. Evans, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 647.

It was held, upon a question raised as to the costs of a foreclosure suit, that the mortgagee was not bound, until payment of principal and interest, to produce his mortgage deed to the devisee of the mortgaged estate, though requested to do so by the latter for the purpose of ascertaining the amount due, and the other particulars of the security; and the refusal to produce it will not subject the mortgagee to costs. Browne v. Lockhart, 10 Sim. 421; 9 L. J., Ch. 167; 4 Jur. 167.

Unless a special case is made out, a plaintiff is not entitled to inspect the mortgage deeds either of a prior or of a subsequent mortgagee, though the mortgagee by his answer craves leave to refer to the deed. Howard v. Robinson, 4 Drew. 522; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 136; 7 W. R. 223.

A bill was filed by a legatee of a legacy charged on a term against the trustee and against the mortgagee of the term under a mortgage made by the surviving trustee, who had power to give receipts. The bill made a case against the mortgagee of knowledge of circumstances which affected him with a breach of trust; but did not allege that the deed disclosed those circumstances. The mortgagee's answer admitted the deed, and craved leave to refer to it when produced, but denied the notice:—Held, that the plaintiff could not have production of the mortgage deed. Ib.

In a suit by assignees in trust from T. of two policies of assurance (which formed part of a trust estate in T.'s hands as surviving executor of J.) to impeach an alleged prior mortgage of the policies by T. to the company which issued them, the bill, in effect, alleged (though the answer denied) that the giving of the prior mortgage was a breach of trust on T.'s part of which the company was aware at the time. The bill also alleged, and the answer admitted, that the company intended to surrender the policies or sell them by auction. On summons by the plaintiffs for production of documents:—Held, that the plaintiffs had not shewn sufficient interest in the mortgage deed to entitle them to its production. Carter v. Hubback, 24 W. R. 354.

The policies being the plaintiffs' title deeds, were ordered to be produced. Ib.

A mortgagee, though not bound generally to produce deeds which he has obtained in that character, will always be ordered to produce the actual mortgage deed to the mortgagor, because that deed shewed the mortgagor's right to redeem. Patch v. Ward, L. R. 1 Eq. 436; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 2; 13 L. T. 496; 14 W. R. 166.

In a suit by a mortgagor to open a foreclosure decree, the court, on a motion by the mortgagor, will order the production of the mortgage deeds in the possession of the mortgagee. Ib.

Where a solicitor has acted for both mortgagor and mortgagee in the preparation of a mortgage, and he afterwards acquires a right to the money thereby secured, and a decree is made in a suit to foreclose the mortgage, the mortgagor is entitled, in a suit instituted by him to impeach that decree, to call for the production of the mortgage deed against a person holding it as trustee for the solicitor, although no fraud is alleged in the preparation of the deed. Ib.

Under a commission against a bankrupt mortgagor, the commissioners have authority by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, ss. 33, 34, to enforce from a mortgagee of the bankrupt's property the production of his mortgage deed. The rule that a purchaser for valuable consideration, without notice, cannot be compelled to discover his title deeds, does not extend to the mortgage or purchase deed itself. Caldecott, Ex parte, White, In re, Mont. 55.

On a bill by a mortgagor for redemption, the mortgagee is bound to produce the mortgage deed for proof at the hearing; but the mortgagor is not entitled to see the deed for any other purpose. Beaumont v. Foster, 5 L. J., Ch. 4.

In a bill to redeem, the plaintiff contested the validity of one of several mortgages held by the defendant:—Held, that he was not entitled to a production. Crisp v. Platel, 8 Beav. 62.

In a redemption suit the mortgagor is not entitled to have the mortgage deed produced and left with the clerk in court for the usual purposes, although admitted by the defendant, the mortgagee, to be in his possession. He is, however, entitled to the production in an account of rental. M'Comb v. ——, 5 L. J., Ch. 2.

ii. Of Title Deeds and Other Securities.

Generally.]—A mortgagee has no right to shew the title of his mortgagor. Lambert v. Rogers, 2 Mer. 489; 16 R. R. 204.

A mortgagor is always entitled to inspect the mortgage deed, although not the other title deeds in the hands of his mortgagee. Patch v. Ward, L. R. 1 Eq. 436; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 2; 13 L. T. 496; 14 W. R. 166.

By Mortgagee—Before Payment.]—Mortgagee may refuse to part with the deeds till the money is paid, but ought not to deny an inspection in his hands. Thornhill v. Evans, 2 Atk. 332; 9 Mod. 331.

—— Also Executor.]—A defendant, the trustee and executor, was also mortgagee of part of the estate. Upon a bill for the administration of the estate:—Held, that the defendant was not bound to produce the mortgage and title deeds, but that he must produce all accounts in his possession relating to the mortgage. Freeman v. Butler, 33 Beav. 289.

By Tenant in Common.]—Motion on the part of the plaintiff for the production of a deed alleged to be in possession of the defendant as tenant in common with the plaintiff, refused; it appearing by the answer that defendant had sold his share, and was in possession of the deed in question only as mortgagee to the purchaser. Lambert v. Rogers, 2 Mer. 489; 16 R. R. 204.

By Purchaser for Value.]—A deed in the custody of a purchaser for valuable consideration, which the bill impeached for fraud, ordered to be produced. Kennedy v. Green, 6 Sim. 6.

Between Mortgagee and Purchaser.]—Bill by mortgagee of a term of years, against a defendant claiming to be purchaser of the fee for valuable consideration without notice. The plaintiff held not to be entitled to production of title deeds in the defendant's possession; but the defendant held bound to produce one of the deeds, the contents of which he partially described in his answer. Hunt v. Elmes, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 645; 7 W. R. 471.

Mortgagee Purchaser of Equity of Redemption.]—Order for the production of title deeds of a mortgagee, who also claimed to be a purchaser of the equity of redemption, refused. Greenwood v. Rothwell, 7 Beav. 291; 13 L. J., Ch. 226.

In 1799 A. executed a mortgage of his estate, by demise thereof for a term of 1,000 years, for securing 400*l.* and interest. A. afterwards made his will, dated in 1811; devised the same estate to J. G. for life, with remainder to all and every issue of J. G., share and share alike; and died in 1812. After the death of A., and about the year 1823, J. G., together with the executors and trustees named in his will, sold and conveyed the mortgaged premises to A. T. absolutely. A. T. laid out a large sum of money, on the premises, in erecting a mill and other buildings, and afterwards mortgaged the same for 3,000*l.* to W. R., to whose trustee the term of 1,000 years was assigned. W. R. had, by means of recitals contained in the deeds in his possession, constructive notice of the title of the plaintiffs, the issue of J. G., under A.'s will, but he claimed to be paid not only the original mortgage sum of 400*l*., and interest, but also the amount expended on the premises, before he could be required to produce the deeds relating to the same. On motion for production of the deeds in W. R.'s possession, relating to the premises, it was held that he was not bound to produce them for the plaintiff's inspection. Ib.

On Sale.]—A mortgagee, who was a party to the suit, consented to a sale of the mortgaged property:—Held, that he must produce and leave in the Master's office the title deeds which were necessary in order to complete such sale. Livesey v. Harding, 1 Beav. 343.

Documents depending on Impeached Deed.]—If a title deed in the defendant's possession be impeached, all subsequent documents which depend upon and proceed from it may be required to be produced, as well as the deed itself; and, therefore, in a suit to set aside a conveyance of an equity of redemption to the defendant, a receipt for the mortgage-money obtained by him after the date of the deed must be produced. Jones v. Jones, 1 Kay (App.) vi.

Copies retained by Mortgagor—Production to Chargee.]—The defendant being entitled to an estate, subject to a charge thereof, belonging to the plaintiff, mortgaged it, and delivered the title deeds to the mortgagees, but he retained copies:—Held, that he was bound to produce the copies, though the mortgagees were not parties to the suit. Hercy v. Ferrers, 4 Beav. 97; 10 L. J., Ch. 273.

Settlement reversing general Power of Appointment.]—By a deed of settlement a general power of appointment over estates was reserved to the settlors, subject to which, the estates were limited to the settlors for their lives, with remainder to other persons in strict settlement. The settlors executed their power of appointment by mortgaging the estates:—Held, that the mortgagees could not, in a suit for redemption brought by one of the remaindermen, be ordered to produce the deed of settlement or to give any discovery as to it. Chichester v. Donegall (Marquis), 39 L. J., Ch. 694; L. R. 5 Ch. 497; 22 L. T. 458; 18 W. R. 531.

Security for Delivery.]—Mortgagee has a right to proceed on his mortgage and bond at the same time; but mortgagor shall not be obliged to pay upon his bond unless secure of his title deeds being delivered up. Schoole v. Sall, 1 Sch. & Lef. 176.

Covenant to produce.]—A mortgagee, being decreed to reconvey one undivided moiety of an estate included in his security (a part of the debt being satisfied) to the mortgagor, and being entitled to retain the title deeds of the whole estate, is bound to covenant to produce the deeds. Yates v. Plumbe, 2 Sm. & G. 174; 2 W. R. 242.

Practice—Admission.]—A. was a transferee of a mortgage for 4,000*l*., and claimed also under a judgment 880*l*. A bill was filed by a subsequent mortgagee to redeem the mortgage for 4,000*l*., and for payment of the plaintiff's incumbrance in priority over the judgment debt. The bill alleged that A. had in his possession a deed of conveyance of the estate, in which was a recital that the judgment debt had been paid off. A. admitted the possession of the deed, and set out a portion of it, by which it was recited that the judgment debt was paid off; but he said that in fact this was only done for the purpose of clearing the estate, and that he had taken an assignment of the debt:—Held, that if he had not been a mortgagee he must have produced the deed; and 4,000*l*. having been paid to him, without prejudice to any question in the cause:—Held, that he could not set off 880*l*. of that as due to the judgment debt, but must be taken to be paid off as mortgagee, and therefore liable to produce the deed. Cannock v. Jauncey, 1 Drew. 497; 1 W. R. 378.

—— Excuse for non-Production.]—Where, in a suit for the administration of a testator's estate, a mortgagee was ordered to produce before the Master all deeds and writings relating to the estate which were in his custody or power, he does not sufficiently account for the non-production of them, by stating that several years before the decree he had deposited them with a third person as a collateral security for money advanced by him. Rogers v. Rogers, 6 Jur. 497.

—— Denial of Mortgage.]—The plaintiff impeached a certain deed in the defendant's possession, and stated in his bill that this deed had been left with the defendant as a security for a loan of money which had been since repaid. The defendant, in his answer, admitted the possession and relevancy of the impeached deed, and stated that it was a bonâ fide conveyance to him for valuable consideration, and denied that it had ever been so deposited with him as in the bill mentioned:—Held, that, as the defendant denied that he was a mortgagee, the plaintiff's whole statement, that there had been such a mortgage, and that it was paid off, must be regarded, and that the plaintiff was entitled to the production of the deed. Secus, if the defendant had claimed the privilege of a mortgagee to refuse production of the deed. Jones v. Jones, 1 Kay (App.) vi.

—— Privilege.]—In a suit for redemption by a mortgagor against the transferee of the mortgage only, the plaintiff confessing the defendant's title, but stating that he was unable to discover, and seeking discovery, by what means the defendant made it out:—Held, that the defendant was not bound to produce the deed of transfer to him, which his answer admitted to be in his possession, and to be relevant to the matters in question, on the ground that it was privileged as the defendant's title deed. Lewis v. Davis, 17 Jur. 253.

—— Trust for Sale.]—The purchaser from the trustee of an equity of redemption devised in trust for sale cannot, in a suit for redemption instituted by some of the cestuis que trustent, refuse to produce the agreement for sale and conveyance, on the ground that they relate exclusively to his title. Smith v. Barnes 35 L. J., Ch. 109; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 924; 13 L. T. 402; 14 W. R. 96.

—— Answers to Inquiries.]—Mortgagee insisting by his answer that he is not bound to produce his title deeds, but admitting that he is mortgagee of part of certain estates, he is not bound in answer to the inquiries of the bill to say what part, as that would be stating the contents of his title deeds. Addison v. Walker. 4 Y. & C. 442.

—— Answer refusing Particulars.]—A second mortgagee of premises filed a bill to redeem against the first mortgagees, who were a firm of bankers, and alleged that one partner had died and another had retired, and asked that the defendants might set forth a short statement of all deeds and transactions whereby the mortgage had become vested in the remaining partners. The defendants admitted the death and retirement of the two partners, and that by certain deeds the mortgage had become vested in them, but refused to set forth the particular statements required:—An exception to this answer was overruled. Bridgwater v. De Winton, 33 L. J., Ch. 238; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1270; 9 L. T. 568; 12 W. R. 40.

The mortgage stated a settled account between the parties shewing 5,000*l.* to be due; but the bill alleged that there was no settled account, and that no such amount was due, and asked how the defendants made out the amount. The defendants answered that the account was not made out in writing, but was stated orally to the mortgagor, and was admitted by him to be correct, and that they believed 5,000*l.* was due from the mortgagor to the defendants, who were bankers, upon the balance of account current, at the date of the mortgage, and in respect of bills held by the defendant's firm, upon which they had made advances; and they refused to state further particulars:—An exception to this answer was allowed. Ib.

—— Disclosing Accounts with Third Parties.]—Where a bill, to redeem, charges that a secret partnership existed between the mortgagees, who were bankers, and other persons whom the mortgagees declared to be customers merely, the mortgagees will not be compelled to disclose the accounts between themselves and the other persons. Ib.

—— Inconsistency.]—Where there is an accidental inconsistency between the answer and the schedule, a defendant will be compelled to put in a further answer. Ib.

—— Mortgagor only Surety.]—Where a bill alleged that the mortgagors were sureties only, the mortgagees were compelled to set out their dealings with the alleged principals. Ib.

—— Order before Defence.]—In an action for redemption against a mortgagee in possession, an order for production of documents made before the defence was delivered, and without any special case for production being made, was affirmed. Hancock v. Guerin (4 Ex. D. 3) considered. Union Bank of London v. Manby, 49 L. J., Ch. 106; 13 Ch. D. 239; 41 L. T. 393; 28 W. R. 23.

—— After Replication.]—Where a plea of the statute of limitations was pleaded to a bill for redemption against a mortgagee in possession, and the bill stated that interest had been paid within twenty years, but contained no charge of documents, and the plaintiff had filed a replication:—Held, that the plaintiff might nevertheless compel production of documents by the defendant, for the purpose of obtaining evidence upon the issue tendered by the bill as to payment of interest within twenty years. Parkinson v. Chambers, 1 K. & J. 72; 24 L. J., Ch. 47; 3 Eq. R. 234; 3 W. R. 130.

—— Person Interested.]—Person interested in issue devisavit vel non, refusing to be party to it, is yet allowed to attend trial by counsel, and ordered to produce deeds, &c., except those she held as mortgagee. Pindar v. Smith, 6 Madd. 48.

—— Fraud.]—Where, as a security for money advanced from time to time to A., the creditor of A. had taken various bills of sale and assignments of A.'s personal property, but had left A. in the visible user and enjoyment of that property; upon a bill filed by a subsequent judgment creditor of A., impeaching the prior securities for fraud:—Held, upon motion before hearing, that plaintiff was entitled to production of the several bills of sale and assignments. Neate v. Latimer, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 257. Affirmed, 11 Bligh (N.S.) 112.

—— Transfer after Bill.]—After a bill for redemption had been filed, but before the subpœna had been served, the mortgagee transferred his mortgage, and his transferee was brought before the court by supplemental bill. It was alleged that the transfer had been made for fraudulent and vexatious purposes:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the production of the deed of transfer. Gill v. Eyton, 7 Beav. 155.

Notice—Costs.]—In a mortgagee's suit for payment at a fixed time and place, or for a sale, the mortgagor has a right to require the production of an affidavit of documents by the mortgagee, but he must give notice that he requires it, and it must be at his own expense. Weeks v. Stourton, 12 L. T. 71; 13 W. R. 489.

Where an affidavit of documents was not made, and a power of attorney refused to be produced on the one hand, and payment refused on the other, payment was ordered on a future day on production of such affidavit, but no costs of a summons to determine the right in point of practice given, there being no rule on the subject. Ib.

a. General Principles.

Covenant against.] — Covenant against redemption of mortgage is unreasonable, and not enforced. East India Co. v. Athyns, 1 Comyn, 349.

No agreement in a mortgage can make it irredeemable, either after the death of the mortgagor, or upon failure of issue male of his body. Howard v. Harris, 1 Vern. 190.

Fetter on.]—Where mortgagee by agreement, either in the mortgage deed or a separate one, fetters the redemption with a fraudulent design to get the estate, it will not avail. Mellor v. Lees, 2 Atk. 494.

Absence of Covenant to repay.] — In common mortgages, the want of a covenant for repayment of the mortgage-money is no bar to a redemption. Ib.

Right strictly adhered to.]—Where a clause of redemption is in a separate deed, the court adheres to it strictly, to prevent the equity of redemption from being entangled to the prejudice of the mortgagor. Baker v. Wind, 1 Ves. 161.

Price of.]—The price of redeeming the mortgaged premises is the same in a suit by the mortgagor to redeem as it would be in the like circumstances in a suit by the mortgagee to foreclosure. Du Vigier v. Lee, 2 Hare, 326; 12 L. J., Ch. 345; 7 Jur. 299.

Compulsion to.]—The owner of the equity of redemption of one of two estates comprised in the same mortgage cannot be compelled to redeem it separately, his right being to redeem the whole, subject to the equities of the other persons interested. Hall v. Heward, 55 L. J., Ch. 604; 32 Ch. D. 430; 54 L. T. 810; 34 W. R. 571—C. A.

Title—Must be shewn.]—He that comes to redeem a mortgage must shew a title to the equity of redemption. Lomax v. Bird, 1 Vern. 182.

Upon a bill to redeem, a primâ facie title is sufficient; and an issue shall not be directed, though the title is complicated, if uncontradicted. Pym v. Bowreman, 3 Swanst. 241; 19 R. R. 201.

Who may redeem.]—The rule laid down, that no person shall be allowed to redeem in equity but he that has the legal estate, is right; therefore, if an executor, or an assignee of a bankrupt, will industriously get in the mortgagor's estate, the creditors shall not have a bill to redeem; but otherwise, the minor part, or even one creditor, may bring a bill at the peril of costs. Franchlyn v. Fern, Barnard. 30.

—— Collusion.]—The mortgagor or his heirs only can sue the mortgagee for an account and redemption, unless it can be shewn that there is collusion between them and the mortgagee. White v. Parnther, 1 Knapp, 179.

—— After being foreclosed.]—A party to a foreclosure suit, whose interest is thereby foreclosed, and who afterwards becomes entitled to an interest in the same estate by devise or otherwise from another person who was not a party to the foreclosure, may bring his bill of redemption. Bromitt v. Moor, 9 Hare, 374.

Relief will not be given in such a case, on a claim for redemption stating only that the plaintiff is entitled to the equity of redemption under certain instruments, but not stating any of the proceedings in the suit for foreclosure or the grounds on which the plaintiff seeks to set it aside. Ib.

Against whom.]—Courts of equity, with a view to remedy the great inconveniences which formerly arose from the mortgagee's estate becoming absolute at law, if the mortgagor did not pay off the money borrowed on the day appointed, have uniformly maintained the mortgagor's right of redemption, not only against tenants in dower, and by the curtesy, but against the lord by escheat, and all persons claiming under the feoffee. Pawlett v. Att.-Gen., Hardr. 460, 465.

—— Purchaser from Trustee for Sale.] — Semble, that a mortgagor having conveyed to trustees for sale cannot redeem as against a purchaser under the trustees; his remedy is to set aside the sale and have a new sale made. Manser v. Dix, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 253—L.JJ.

—— Second Mortgagee buying under Power of Sale.] — A second mortgagee buying under a power of sale contained in the first mortgage is not subject to redemption by the mortgagor. Kirkwood v. Thompson, 2 De G. J. & S. 613; 12 L. T. 111; 13 W. R. 495, 1052. Affirming 2 H. & M. 392; 34 L. J., Ch. 305, 501; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 385.

The circumstance that the second mortgagee is in the shape of a trust for sale does not alter the case. Ib.

—— Inns of Court Chambers.]—A bill in equity will not lie to redeem a mortgage of chambers in the inns of court, but the plaintiff must apply to the bench, or to the judges of the society. Secus, if on application to the bench, they refer the plaintiff to his remedy in equity. Rakestraw v. Brewer, Sel. Ch. Ca. 55; Moseley, 189; 2 P. Wms. 511.

—— Tenant in Tail.]—A. B., on his marriage, settled certain estates, then in mortgage, on himself for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, and covenanted against incumbrances; he afterwards mortgaged other estates, and became insolvent. A bill was filed by his assignee under the insolvency against the several incumbrancers on all the estates, and against the tenant in tail, praying an account of what was due on the several incumbrances, that their priorities might be ascertained, and for a sale or a redemption. A decree was made in the suit directing that, on the plaintiff and defendant, the tenant in tail, paying what was due on the respective incumbrances, the unsettled estates should be conveyed to the party redeeming, and that the settled estates should be conveyed on the trusts of the settlement; and, in default of redemption, that the bill should be dismissed:—Held, by the Lord Chancellor, that the decree for redemption being permissive only as against the tenant in tail was correct, and that a decree for a sale would have been improper. Chappell v. Rees, 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 16 Jur. 415.

—— By Remainderman, against Mortgagee of Particular Estate in Equity of Redemption.]—A mortgagee who is also assignee or mortgagee of a particular estate in the equity of redemption is not, during the continuance of that particular estate, subject, without his consent, to redemption at the hands of a remainderman. Ravald v. Russell (Younge, 9, 21) followed. Prout v. Cock, 66 L. J., Ch. 24; [1896] 2 Ch. 808; 75 L. T. 409; 45 W. R. 157.

—— Usurious Loan.]—If A. mortgage stock to B., by a conveyance, which is apparently absolute, and B. assigns it to C. as a security for an usurious loan, A.'s right of redemption is not affected by the transaction between B. and C., but is as extensive against C. as against B. Johnson v. Williamshurst, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 112.

4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 16.]—If a mortgage by the statute 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 16, becomes irredeemable, it will remain so in the hands of the assignee, though assigned in consideration of the principal, interest and costs due thereon. Stafford v. Selby, 2 Vern. 590.

If a subsequent mortgagee redeems such mortgage, he shall hold the estate irredeemably. Ib.

If there are more lands in the second mortgage than in the first, that seems to be a case omitted out of the statute; but the adding an acre or two shall not exempt it, for that may be a contrivance to evade the statute. Ib.

Fraud.]—Where possession is gained against a mortgagee by fraud, pending a suit, it must be restored before there can be any redemption. Lant v. Crisp, 15 Vin. Abr. 467, pl. 16.

Mortgagee's Right to Retain Securities.]—A mortgagee who is being redeemed cannot retain any of his securities to answer contingent liabilities of the mortgagor to him, in the absence of an express agreement to that effect. Merchants' Bank of London v. Maud, 18 W. R. 312.

Disputing Right to Redeem — Estoppel.]—Service of notice of foreclosure by the mortgagee on the occupant of the mortgaged premises does not estop the mortgagee from disputing the occupant's title to redeem. Prannath Roy Chowdry v. Ramrutton Roy, 8 W. R. 29—P. C.

Construction—"Redeemable."]—H. advanced money to P., and by agreement was to receive the whole amount due from P. in acceptances of the D. company to C.'s drafts at six, twelve and eighteen months, "but, if not sufficient bills at such dates are received from the D. company, then the balance to be made up in similar bills at twelve, twenty-four and thirty-six months, upon which 10*l.* per cent. interest shall be payable, such last-mentioned bills to be redeemable at any time":—Held, that the word "redeemable" implied that the debtor P. might take up the last-mentioned bills at any time, irrespective of the other debts due by him to H. Hills v. Parker, 14 L. T. 107.

Practice—Redemption not Prayed.]—Although a mortgagor is not entitled to a decree for redemption on a bill which impeaches the mortgage security and contains no prayer for redemption, yet such rule does not apply where the issues disclosed by the pleadings are not merely mortgage or no mortgage, but whether the defendant, by means of his acts subsequent to the impeached mortgage, had ceased to be mortgagee and had become absolute owner, and also whether the mortgagee's advances on the footing of the mortgage had not been more than satisfied by his receipts, the bill praying for an account and offering to allow to the mortgagee all just credits. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c., Co., 4 App. Cas. 391; 40 L. T. 697; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

b. Crown.

Equity of Redemption in.]—A. died intestate, unmarried and illegitimate, having mortgaged his real estates to B. for 500 years, and having subsequently mortgaged them to B. for an additional sum by deposit of the title deeds. The fee simple was not worth the mortgage money:—Held, nevertheless, that the mortgagor could not be deemed a bare trustee for the mortgagee within the statute 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 2, so as to deprive the crown of the equity of redemption; but it was ordered that the estate should be sold in the administration of assets, and P. declared a purchaser with liberty to apply to the crown for a grant of the fee simple. Rogers v. Maule, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 4.

Escheat.]—A., having mortgaged freeholds for a term, with a proviso for cesser on payment, died, intestate and without heirs:—Held, that the crown was entitled to the legal reversion in fee by escheat; and would have been a necessary party to a suit by the administratrix, could it have been maintained. Cuttley v. Sampson, 33 Beav. 551; 34 L. J., Ch. 96; 12 W. R. 927.

Redemption by Outlawry.]—J., having made a mortgage of his estate, was afterwards indicted and outlawed for high treason. The attorney-general thereupon exhibited a bill in the court of exchequer to discover the consideration of the mortgage, and what was due upon it, and that the crown might redeem if anything was due. The court directed several issues to be tried at their own bar, relative to the consideration of this mortgage, &c. Upon the trial, verdicts were found in favour of the mortgagee; but these verdicts were so general that application was made on behalf of the crown for a new trial. This was not only refused, but the court, on hearing the cause upon the equity reserved, ordered the information to stand dismissed. On an appeal, this decree was reversed; and the attorney-general, on behalf of the crown, was admitted to redeem. Att.-Gen. v. Crofts, 4 Bro. P. C. 136.

c. Joint Right.

Generally.] — Where several persons take interests in an equity of redemption by one and the same instrument, only one common right of redemption is given to them all by the decree; but, if they take under different instruments, they are entitled to have the mortgaged property offered to them successively, according to the dates of the instruments under which they take. The latter rule applies where a purchaser or a mortgagee of an equity of redemption of one estate is compelled to redeem another also by virtue of the doctrine of consolidation. Beevor

v. Luck, 36 L. J., Ch. 865; L. R. 4 Eq. 537; 15 W. R. 1221.

J. devised a lease for lives (after payment of his debts) to his two grandchildren, H. and W., but, if either of them died without heirs of their own bodies, then the share of him so dying should go to the testator's other grandchild, C. W. died without issue; and, on a bill filed by a mortgagee to foreclose, it was held that H. and C. were entitled to redeem in equal moieties. Wastneys v. Chappell, 3 Bro. P. C. 50.

Lapse of Time—Acknowledgment of one Joint Mortgagee.]—Two joint mortgagees of lands had been in possession of the mortgage property for more than twenty years, but within the twenty years one of the mortgagees had written letters which were held to amount to a recognition by him of the mortgagor's title:—Held, that such recognition by one of the joint mortgagees did not operate as an acknowledgment within 3 & 4 Will. c. 27, s. 28, and that the equity of redemption was barred. Richardson v. Younge, 39 L. J., Ch. 475; L. R. 10 Eq. 275; 18 W. R. 800. Affirmed, 40 L. J., Ch. 338; L. R. 6 Ch. 478; 25 L. T. 230; 19 W. R. 612.

Jointure.]—An estate in jointure was subject to mortgage. The jointress and reversioner must redeem in proportion; the jointress one-third, and the reversioner two-thirds. So and if estate, subject to a mortgage, is devised to A. for life, remainder to B. in fee, they may redeem in the same proportion. Flud v. Flud, 2 Freem. 210.

d. Puisne Mortgagee.

Must Redeem Entirely.]—Subsequent mortgagee redeeming a prior mortgage must redeem it entirely. Palk v. Clinton, 12 Ves. 59; 8 R. R. 283.

If a man mortgages all his estate to one person, he may notwithstanding slip it into ten puisne mortgages more. But if all such puisne mortgages should have a right to redeem, on payment of proportionable contributions, the first mortgagee could never come to his due, until all those proportions were settled; and an original mortgagee ought not to be entangled with questions arising among subsequent mortgages, for he has a right to be redeemed entire, and not by parcels. Lord Chancellor said, such a redemption was never allowed. Titley v. Davies, 15 Vin. Abr. 447, pl. 19. S.C., 2 Y. & C. C. C. 399, n.

What Entitled to.]—The only relief to which a second mortgagee is entitled is to a decree for the redemption of the first mortgagee, and for the foreclosure or redemption of the mortgagor. He has no right to compel the first mortgagee to transfer to him his first mortgage, on payment of what is due, or to call on the mortgagor to join in such transfer. Ramsbottom v. Wallis, 5 L. J., Ch. 92.

Right, how Extinguished.]—A purchase, by a trustee in bankruptcy, from the first mortgagee of the bankrupt does not extinguish the right of the second mortgagee to redeem. Bell v. Sunderland Building Society, 53 L. J., Ch. 509; 24 Ch. D. 618; 49 L. T. 555.

After Foreclosure of Mortgagor.]—Subsequent incumbrancers may redeem the first mortgagee, though the mortgagor is foreclosed by a decree, and the account taken in the suit where such decree was obtained will not bind the subsequent incumbrances. Morrett v. Westerne, 2 Vern. 663.

First Mortgagee, Duty of.]—First mortgagee ought, without a judicial proceeding, to accept payment from a second mortgagee, and thereupon to convey to him the mortgaged estate, with or without the concurrence of the mortgagor. Smith v. Green, 1 Coll. C. C. 555.

Declining to be Redeemed.]—Where a first mortgagee refuses to accept an offer rightly made by a second mortgagee to redeem him, and an action for redemption is commenced, the defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiff's costs of the action up to and including the trial as well as the costs of a successful appeal by the plaintiff. Squire v. Pardoe, 66 L. T. 242; 40 W. R. 100—C. A.

—— Injunction.]—A puisne incumbrancer offered to pay off the first mortgagee, which being declined, he filed a bill to compel a transfer. The first mortgagee having afterwards proceeded to sell the property was restrained from transferring the first mortgage and parting with the legal estate and title deeds. Rhodes v. Buckland, 16 Beav. 212.

Practice.]—Where there was a suit by a first mortgagee (in possession) against the mortgagor and numerous other mortgagees, the court, having regard to the rights of all parties, refused a motion by the second mortgagee that, on payment of the plaintiff's principal, interest and costs, the estate might be conveyed to him and all proceedings stayed; but directed inquiries as to the priorities and incumbrances of the parties. Paine v. Edwards, 8 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 6 L. T. 600; 10 W. R. 709.

—— Absence of Mortgagor.]—There cannot be an adverse redemption between mortgagees, in the absence of the mortgagor; if, therefore, by contract or other circumstances, a second mortgagee is precluded from bringing, or is unable to bring, the mortgagor before the court, a suit by such second mortgagee to redeem the first cannot proceed. Ramsbottom v. Wallis, 5 L. J., Ch. 92.

—— First Mortgagee not Appearing.]—If, in a suit for redemption against several successive mortgagees, the first mortgagee does not appear at the hearing, a subsequent mortgagee will be allowed to make the decree absolute against him. Cottingham v. Shrewsbury, 5 Sim. 395.

—— Several Parties entitled to Redeem—One Time fixed for Redemption.]—In an action by second mortgagees against subsequent incumbrancers and the mortgagor's trustee in liquidation, there being evidence that the sale of the property would leave a very small margin for the subsequent incumbrancers, only one of whom appeared, one time certain was fixed for all the defendants to redeem or be foreclosed. Cripps v. Wood, 51 L. J., Ch. 584.

—— Answer to Interrogatories.]—In a redemption suit by a second mortgagee against the first mortgagee, he is bound to state in answer to interrogatories not only the amount due upon his security, but also what securities he holds for his debt. West of England and South Wales Bank v. Nickolls, 6 Ch. D. 613.

—— Account, how Taken.]—In a redemption action by a second mortgagee against the first mortgagee, the account to be taken at the instance of the second mortgagee must be taken in all respects as though it were being taken at the instance of the mortgagor himself; and the second mortgagee may assert such equity as the mortgagor himself might have had to exclude any particular item from the account. Mainland v. Upjohn, 58 L. J., Ch. 361; 41 Ch. D. 126; 60 L. T. 614; 37 W. R. 411.

e. Other Cases.

Who may Redeem—Personal Representative.]—The personal representative of a mortgagor of freehold estate has no right to file a bill against the mortgagee to redeem. Catley v. Sampson, 33 Beav. 551; 34 L. J., Ch. 96; 12 W. R. 927.

C., being entitled to real estate, demised it for 1,000 years, by way of mortgage, subject to a proviso for cesser of the term on payment of the mortgage money by C., his heirs, executors or administrators. C. was illegitimate, and he died intestate and without issue. His wife having taken out letters of administration to her husband, filed a bill to redeem:—Held, that she could not sustain the suit. Ib.

A bill by an administratrix, with the will annexed, of a mortgagor, having also a beneficial interest, but becoming an insolvent debtor after the commencement of the suit for redemption against a mortgagee and others, including the heir-at-law of the mortgagor, who refused to be joined as plaintiff, the assignees in insolvency being made defendants, and the trustees of the mortgagor's will having died in the testator's lifetime, dismissed with costs; there being no authority for the proposition that where a trustee is appointed for the payment of debts, and he neglects his duty, a legal personal representative, having no beneficial interest, may maintain a suit; and the bill not stating what means there were for effecting a redemption. Fray v. Drew, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 130; 11 L. T. 730; 13 W. R. 367.

Where an administrator mortgages leasehold premises, reserving the equity of redemption to himself and his executors, administrators and assigns, the right to redeem after his death belongs to his own representatives, and not to the administrator de bonis non of his intestate. Sheffington v. Whitehurst, 3 Y. & C. 1; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 65. But this was questioned on appeal. S. C., nom. Sheffington v. Budd, 9 Cl. & F. 219; 6 Jur. 809.

—— Personal Representative.]—R., in 1840, assigned, by way of mortgage, his two fourth shares in a newspaper to the defendant. The deed contained a proviso for redemption, and a power of sale in default of payment to the mortgagee. Part of the mortgage money was paid off by R., but default was made in payment of the balance; and thereupon the defendant acquired a right to exercise the power of sale. By deed, in 1841, for an expressed consideration of 1,000*l.*, the defendant assigned the two shares to his brother, absolutely freed from the mortgage debt. The owner of the other two fourth shares assigned them for the benefit of his creditors to trustees, who in 1847 assigned them to the defendant; and the defendant afterwards procured from his brother an assignment to himself of the two first-mentioned shares, who thus became legal owner of the whole four shares in the newspaper. R. died in 1852, and the plaintiff became personal representative. In 1855 the plaintiff filed a bill for redemption, alleging that there was no sale in 1841 by the defendant to his brother; that the assignment was a mere fraud on the part of the defendant to acquire the absolute ownership, and to exclude the mortgagor from the property; that no consideration passed; and that the defendant never accounted to the mortgagor:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to redeem. Robertson v. Norris, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 443—L. C.

—— Unconscionable Bargain.] — A man twenty-six years of age, entitled to a reversion of 600*l.*, but wholly without present means, applied to a money-lender, who advanced him 85*l.* on a mortgage of the reversion for 100*l.*, with a provision that, if default should be made in payment of the 100*l.*, the 100*l.* should bear interest at 5 per cent. per month. Twelve years afterwards the reversion fell into possession, and, on a bill filed by the personal representative of the mortgagor, a decree was made for redemption on payment of the sum borrowed and simple interest at 5 per cent. Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. 389; 32 L. T. 353; 23 W. R. 531.

—— Equitable Mortgagor by Deposit.]—When there has been an equitable deposit of deeds to secure repayment of a loan, an action of detinue cannot be maintained therefor prior to repayment. The remedy is by a suit for redemption, or by summary application for the deeds on terms of substituting for the security a sum of money equal to the amount secured with a proper margin. Bank of New South Wales v. O'Connor, 58 L. J., P. C. 82; 14 App. Cas. 273; 60 L. T. 467; 38 W. R. 465—P. C.

—— Mortgagor after Assignment of Equity of Redemption.]—A mortgagor, who has absolutely assigned his equity of redemption in the mortgaged property, acquires, when sued by the mortgagee upon the covenant to pay principal and interest contained in the mortgage, a new right to redeem, and is entitled upon paying the mortgage money to a reconveyance to himself, subject to any equity of redemption vested in any other person. And he is so entitled even if, after the assignment of the equity of redemption, the assignee has further charged the property either to the original mortgagee or to some other person. Kinnaird v. Trollope, 57 L. J., Ch. 905; 39 Ch. D. 636; 59 L. T. 433; 37 W. R. 234.

—— Under Mortgage by Way of Trust.]—Under a mortgage of real estate made by way of a conveyance to a trustee, upon trust to sell at discretion and out of the proceeds of sale to pay the mortgage debt and to pay the surplus moneys to the mortgagor, the only right of the mortgagor is to redeem, and he cannot file a bill for a sale. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 8 Ch. 30; 27 L. T. 635; 21 W. R. 113.

—— Assignee.]—Proviso in a mortgage, that the mortgagor, or the heirs male of his body, might redeem:—Decreed, the assignee might redeem. Howard v. Harris, 1 Vern. 33; 2 Ch. Ca. 147.

—— Volunteer.]—One that claims under a voluntary conveyance may redeem a mortgage. Howard v. Harris, 1 Vern. 193.

—— Tenant for Life.]—Where property subject to a mortgage is settled, the tenant for life is entitled to redeem, and to have the legal estate conveyed to himself, but must hold the equity of redemption subject to the trusts of the settlement. Wicks v. Scrivens, 1 J. & H. 215.

The same principle applies where the security is in the form of a trust for sale. Ib.

—— Tenant in Tail.]—A father (tenant for life), and a son (tenant in tail), in 1831, joined in mortgaging the estate to secure payment of a debt of the son, under an agreement between them to suffer a recovery, and resettle the estate. As to the remainder, after the death of the tenant for life, in case the father should at any time be obliged to pay any part of the interest of the mortgage debt, or the son should not pay off that debt by a certain day, and the father should then pay it off and release the son therefrom, to the use of the father in fee; the father covenanting to convey or devise a seventh part of the estate to the son; and, in case the son should pay off the mortgage by the time mentioned, then to the son and the heirs of his body, charged with 500*l.* for such persons as the father should by deed or will appoint. The son did not pay off the mortgage debt, nor did the father pay it off, or release the son therefrom, but the father paid the interest until his death in 1841, and after his death his devisees paid off the mortgage:—Held, that, neither party having performed the agreement, or apparently acted upon it, in the lifetime of the father, the court would not, after the death of the father, enforce the specific performance of the agreement, nor would the court in such a case enforce the specific performance of an agreement, which, apparently, was an agreement for the sale of the son's reversionary interest in the estate at an under-value; that, as the agreement could not be specifically performed, the original rights of the parties remained; and the son was therefore entitled to redeem the estate upon payment of the mortgage debt and the interest. Playford v. Playford, 4 Hare, 546.

Testator devised his real estates to E. R. in fee, subject to the payment of his debts and legacies, and died in 1810. A legacy of 800*l.* was never paid off. The property consisted of four estates, T., F., P. and C. In 1818 E. R. mortgaged T. and C. to W. In 1822 E. R., on his marriage, settled T., P. and C. on himself for life, remainder in strict settlement upon the first and other sons, &c., of the marriage; and he covenanted therein against incumbrances. In 1836 E. R. mortgaged F. to L. In 1843 the plaintiff H. registered a judgment against E. R. In 1844 E. R. became insolvent, and C. was appointed his assignee. C. filed a bill against all the prior incumbrancers, and against the tenant in tail, praying a sale of the estates, &c., or permission to redeem:—Held, by Lord St. Leonards, first, that the decree was right in not granting a sale; secondly, that the decree was not vicious by reason of there being a permission to the tenant in tail as well as the plaintiff to redeem, the decree being, that, upon either of them paying off the charges, the settled estates should be conveyed upon the trusts of the settlement of 1822. Hughes v. Williams, 3 Mac. & G. 683; 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 16 Jur. 415.

—— Tenant for Years.]—A tenant for years under an agreement for lease made subsequently to a mortgage on the demised property, and by which the mortgagee is not bound, is entitled to redeem the mortgage. The principle is the same whether the tenancy is beneficial or otherwise. Tarn v. Turner, 57 L. J., Ch. 1085; 39 Ch. D. 456; 59 L. T. 742; 37 W. R. 276—C. A.

—— Protestant Kin.]—The next protestant of kin may redeem a mortgage by a popish heir. Jones v. Meredith, Bunb. 346; 2 Comyn, 661.

—— Tenant by Elegit, Staple, Curtesy, Dower.]—So may a tenant by elegit, statute merchant, staple, or tenant by curtesy, or in dower, as well as the mortgagor, his heir, assignee or subsequent incumbrancer. S. C., Bunb. 347.

—— Doweress.]—A doweress may redeem a term against a mortgagee, and remove it out of the way against an heir. Swannock v. Lyford, Amb. 7. S. C., sub nom. Hill v. Adams, 2 Atk. 200.

A doweress has a right to redeem a mortgage, and hold over till satisfied. Palmes v. Danby, Pre. Ch. 137.

The wife joins in a mortgage, and levies a fine to bar her dower; under consideration thereof the husband agrees the wife shall have the equity of redemption in lieu of her dower, and afterwards he makes a second mortgage. This agreement is fraudulent as against the second mortgagee, so far as to entitle the wife to the whole equity of redemption, but decreed she should have her dower notwithstanding the fine. Dolin v. Coltman, 1 Vern. 294.

The widow of a mortgagor who had joined with him in the mortgage for the purpose of barring her dower, and to whom he subsequently left an annuity in lieu of dower (not charged, however, on his real estate), has no equity as a bonâ fide purchaser of the annuity, to have it paid out of the mortgaged estate, and her representatives cannot file a bill for the purpose of redeeming it. White v. Parnther, 1 Knapp, 179.

—— Lord by Escheat.]—Where the lord of the manor took by escheat, on the death of the tenant without heirs, the fee simple subject to a mortgage for a term created by the tenant;—Held, that as against the mortgagee the lord had a right in equity to redeem. Downe (Viscount) v. Morris, 3 Hare, 394; 13 L. J., Ch. 337; 8 Jur. 486.

—— Trustee for Payment of Debts.]—Trustee in receipt of the rents and profits of mortgaged estate under an old conveyance of equity of redemption, on trust to sell and pay off certain debts which had been long since satisfied, is not entitled to redeem the mortgage. James v. Biou. Owen v. Flack, 2 Sim. & S. 600; 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 202.

—— Creditors.]—The plaintiff in a creditors' suit, after a decree for sale of the real estate, may sustain a suit for redemption against a mortgagee or a party entitled to a lien on the title deeds. Christian v. Field, 2 Hare, 177; 11 L. J., Ch. 97; 5 Jur. 1130.

Creditors under deed of trust cannot have a decree for redemption of mortgage against mortgagee unless on special case, as collusion, that trustee refuses, &c. Troughton v. Binkes, 6 Ves. 573 ; 5 R. R. 401.

In 1850 H. conveyed estates to trustees for the benefit of creditors, and Y., who prepared the deed, was appointed the solicitor, and acted in the matters of the trust. Y., in 1857, in reply to inquiries on behalf of H., stated that he had, in February, 1853, purchased interests in the property, and was willing, on receiving the amount that would be due to him, to deliver up all the deeds in his possession, but limiting the offer to that month. The statement of account sent with the letter was disputed. Y. refused to furnish a copy of the deed of 1850, as the document was his title deed. The original bill of H. was filed in March, 1859, and was dismissed in July, he residing abroad, and not being able to comply with an order obtained by Y., requiring security for costs. The bill was again filed in July, 1862, and prayed for declarations that Y. was a mortgagee in possession, and entitled to such sums as had been actually paid by him, and for accounts. On the 6th December, 1862, Y. put in his answer, stating that he ceased to be the solicitor to the trustees in October, 1852 ; that the interests in the estates and certain policies were conveyed and assigned to him in April, 1853 ; that he had never set up any title as purchaser, but was willing to be treated as a mortgagee. On the 7th January, 1863, Y. filed a bill for foreclosure, to which H. put in an answer in March. H. filed an amended bill in February, 1863, setting forth all the correspondence, for the purpose of shewing that Y. had insisted upon his position of purchaser, and to that bill Y. filed a voluntary answer in March :—Held, that H. was entitled to redeem ; that Y. must pay the costs of the litigation up to the time of filing his answer in December, 1862, when he consented to be considered as a mortgagee in possession ; and that H. must pay all the costs of the subsequent litigation. Yetts v. Hilton, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1273 ; 9 L. T. 502.

Covenant to pay Principal and Interest on Specified Day, but no Covenant for Payment of Subsequent Interest.]—A mortgage of reversionary interests in personal estate contained a covenant by the mortgagor for payment of the mortgage money with interest at 5 per cent. on a specified day, but there was no provision for payment of any subsequent interest. No interest was ever paid. Fourteen years after the date of the mortgage an action was brought for foreclosure and the usual decree was made :—Held, that redemption could only be allowed on payment of interest at 5 per cent. for the whole period of fourteen years. Mellersh v. Brown, 60 L. J., Ch. 43 ; 45 Ch. D. 225 ; 63 L. T. 189 ; 38 W. R. 732.

Mortgage before Bankruptcy Petition.]—The plaintiff filed his petition in the court of bankruptcy under the provisions of the act 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, for the relief of insolvent debtors, not owing more than 300*l.*, and passed his examination, and obtained his interim and final orders for protection ; he then filed an affidavit in the court of bankruptcy, stating that he had satisfied and obtained a discharge from all the creditors named in his schedule, and that he had notified such satisfaction and discharge by public advertisement : the plaintiff then applied to the official assignee for a release of his estate, which, according to the provisions of the act, vested in such assignee on the presentation of the petition, but, in the absence of any proviso in the act for determining the duties of the official assignee in such a case, the plaintiff was unable to obtain any release or reconveyance ; the plaintiff then filed his bill against the defendant as mortgagee, for the redemption of an estate which had been mortgaged before he presented his petition to the court of bankruptcy. Upon the objection of the defendant that the estate of the plaintiff (if any) was vested in the official assignee :—Held, that, in the absence of any statutory jurisdiction on the subject in the court of bankruptcy, and upon the submission of the assignee, the plaintiff was entitled to sustain the suit at the hearing. Whether, if the defendant had demurred, the bill would have been sustained, quære. Preston v. Wilson, 5 Hare, 125 ; 16 L. J., Ch. 137 ; 11 Jur. 201.

Account between Mortgagor, Mortgagee and Attorney.]—On bill for account of all transactions between mortgagor and mortgagee, and attorney who acted as agent for both, and agent and quasi banker for mortgagor, such account having been decreed, the court will order, on application, if any of the transactions developed in the investigation appear to warrant it, that deputy-remembrancer take a separate account (and report it specially) of the mortgaged account strictly speaking ; and, if found to have been satisfied (however less the amount may be than the money actually advanced by the attorney), they will admit the mortgagor to redeem, or where the whole has not been satisfied, on paying what shall not have been already paid. Lewes v. Morgan, 5 Price, 42 ; 19 R. R. 566.

Two Estates — Successive Incumbrances—Apportionment.]—Prior to 1885 the owner of two estates X. and Y. made a first mortgage of both to H. for 6,000*l.* ; a second mortgage of both to the plaintiff for 5,000*l.* ; and a third mortgage of X. alone to the plaintiff for 2,500*l.* In 1885 a deed was executed by which the plaintiff transferred his mortgage of 2,500*l.* on X. to H., and also released the X. property from his mortgage of 5,000*l.*, so that H. thereby became first and second mortgagee of X. as well as remaining first mortgagee of Y. The plaintiff subsequently, by means of an order of foreclosure absolute, became the owner of the equity of redemption of the Y. estate, subject to H.'s first mortgage of 6,000*l.* thereon. The plaintiff then brought an action to redeem the Y. estate on the payment off of H.'s mortgage of 6,000*l.* thereon, and claimed to be entitled also to have the X. estate conveyed to him as one of the securities for the 6,000*l.* :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled by the payment of 6,000*l.* to redeem H.'s mortgage on Y. and to have Y. conveyed to him absolutely ; that he was also, on making such payment, entitled to have X. conveyed to him, but only as a security for such part of 6,000*l.* as was proportionate to the relative values of X. and Y. respectively ; and that there was nothing in the terms of the deed of 1885 inconsistent with these rights of the plaintiff. Barnes v. Racster (1 Y. & C. C. C. 401), and Bugden v. Bignold (2 Y. & C. C. C. 377), approved. Flint v. Howard, 62 L. J., Ch. 804 ; [1893] 2 Ch. 54 ; 2 R. 386 ; 68 L. T. 390—C. A.

First Mortgagee agreeing to postpone Debt —Parol Evidence.]—A mortgagee of leaseholds for 1,150*l.* entered into a parol agreement with the mortgagor to concur in a new mortgage for 750*l.*, to be paid to the original mortgagee in reduction of her debt, so that the new mortgage should be the first charge, but upon an express understanding that the mortgagor should execute to her a second mortgage for the balance. The new mortgage was executed accordingly; and the deed witnessed that, in consideration of 750*l.* paid to the original mortgagee, she and the mortgagor assigned the mortgage premises to the new mortgagee for 750*l.*, discharged from the original mortgage. Afterwards the 750*l.* was paid off by another person, to whom the mortgagor applied for that purpose, on an agreement for an assignment; but all parties had notice of the agreement with the original mortgagee. On the original mortgagee filing a bill to be declared first incumbrancer or to redeem:—Held, that she might adduce parol evidence of the agreement with her, and was entitled to redeem on payment of the 750*l.* and interest, but had not a lien prior to that of the person who had last advanced that sum. Banks v. Whittall, 1 De G. & Sm. 536. Affirmed, 17 L. J., Ch. 352.

Specific Performance of Agreement for Redemption.]—Specific performance decreed of an agreement by a purchaser to allow the mortgagor to redeem an estate sold under a power of sale by the mortgagee. Orme v. Wright, 3 Jur. 19.

Preventing Forfeiture.]—A. mortgaged his lands, on condition to re-enter if he or his heirs should pay 100*l.* at such a day; A. died, leaving a daughter, and his wife enceinte with a son; the daughter paid the money at the day, and then the son was born. The daughter shall keep the lands, for she became a purchaser, and by her vigilance prevented the lands from being forfeited at law. Kirton's Case, Cro. Cas. 87.

Right of Re-purchase—Assignment of.]—A. in consideration of a cash payment covenanted with an assurance company, if he should survive his father, to pay to the company an annuity during his life; and as beneficial owner conveyed to the company certain property as security for the annuity. The deed provided that A. might on giving the company notice pay off the sum advanced and re-purchase the annuity, and thereupon the company should reconvey the property charged as security. A. assigned all his interest in the property charged to B., who tendered the amount of the re-purchase to the company, which they refused to accept:—Held, that the deed was a mortgage, and that the right of re-purchase was not personal to A., but was capable of assignment, and, therefore, that B. was entitled to redeem. Secretary of State for India v. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co., 67 L. T. 434.

—— Barring.]—O., a cotton-spinner, being under advances from B., a cotton-broker, for which B. held an equitable mortgage of the mills and premises, came to a general composition with his creditors in July, 1850, paying them the amount of their compositions by means of promissory notes, in which B. joined, and which B. had ultimately to pay. B. got no composition, but the whole spinning mills and business, as a going concern, was sold to B. by O., with a proviso that, if within ten years O. should repay B. principal and interest, or if the profits of the business, after deductions for necessaries and repairs, should within ten years repay the principal and interest, then B. should reconvey to O. It was further agreed that, if at any period of the ten years the result of six months' business, on an account thereof being taken, should be that there was not enough net profit to pay interest on the whole principal moneys advanced by B., B. might give O. two months' notice to bar the right of repurchase; and, if within that period of two months O. should not pay up to B. all principal and interest then due, all the right and equity of redemption should be barred. B. further agreed to continue to employ O. as manager at 3*l.* per week. In November, 1850, stock was taken, and showed sufficient profit. In September, 1851, an account was taken, which showed, as B. alleged, a loss of 3,000*l.* Thereupon B. sent a notice dismissing O. from his situation as manager, on the ground of disobedience, and calling on him to pay up in two months the amount of principal and interest, or to stand barred:—Held, that the notice to bar the right of repurchase might well be given on the account in question, although it was a nine months' account, not a six months' account, as required by the provision, provided that it could be shown that a loss upon the business for the six months ending July, 1851, had actually been incurred; and an inquiry was directed accordingly, notwithstanding a statement in the answer that the amount of profit or loss could not now be accurately ascertained. Ogden v. Battams, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 791.

Charging Commission or Profit.]—Held, that under the circumstances B. was not entitled to charge commission or profit on cotton supplied to the mills, and, therefore, in estimating the profits made by him at the mills, he was to be allowed to charge for the cotton delivered at the mills by him only the price which he had actually paid for the same; and, where that could not be ascertained, then he was to be allowed the market price of the day. Ib.

Liberty to Surcharge and Falsify.]—The books being kept by B. while O. was not manager:—Held, not binding on O.; but O. having free access to the said books, they were to be taken as primâ facie evidence, with liberty to O. to surcharge and falsify. Ib.

Right of Purchaser from Administrator.]—A sale having been made by a party claiming as administrator cum testamento annexo, certain mortgagees on the property sold refused to give an account of the moneys due to them, or to concur in the conveyance to the purchaser on being paid, whereupon a bill was filed by the vendor and purchaser, as co-plaintiffs, against the mortgagees, to redeem. The defence set up by the mortgagees being that the administrator had no right to redeem, on the ground that the original executor had assented to a bequest made by the testator of the property, the administrator refused to prosecute the suit, or to permit the purchaser to do so. A bill was then filed by the purchaser against the administrator to compel him to put him (the purchaser) in a situation to prosecute the suit against the mortgagees: and it was ordered, on the application of the plaintiff for leave to prosecute that suit, &c., that the plaintiff should be at liberty to pay his purchase-money into court; and that the defendant should concur in paying the deposit into court, and should execute an assignment to the plaintiff; and that the defendant should dismiss the bill in the suit to redeem, at his own expense, and the plaintiff should be at liberty to institute a suit against the mortgagees to redeem them. Birch v. Davies, 5 Jur. 909.

Consolidation.]—Property in M. and S. was mortgaged separately to A. at different times. The property in S. was then mortgaged to B., and afterwards the property in M. to C. The second mortgagees had no notice of the first mortgage, and B.'s security turned out to be insufficient. A. having obtained a decree for foreclosure:—Held, that, A. being entitled to consolidate, and B.'s mortgage being prior in point of date to that of C., B. was entitled to redeem both properties, and hold them as security not only for the amount paid to A. on account of his debt, but also for the whole of B.'s own debt; and that C. was entitled to redeem B., but only on payment of the whole amount then due to B. Bradley v. Riches, 39 L. T. 78.

—— Sale of Equities of Redemption—Rights of Purchasers to Redeem.]—When a mortgagee has consolidated several mortgages of different properties made by the same mortgagor, who has conveyed away the respective equities of redemption to different purchasers, upon foreclosure by the mortgagee, the earliest purchaser of any part in point of time, or a subsequent purchaser of that part from him who stands in his shoes, will have the first right of redeeming the whole; and, if he does not do so, then the purchasers of other parts will be entitled successively in order of date to redeem the whole. Loveday v. Chapman, 32 L. T. 689.

If the first purchaser of a part has bought that part subject to a mortgage debt, he, or whoever stands in his place at the time of the consolidation and redemption, must pay that mortgage debt. Ib.

2. Concealment of Prior Mortgage.

4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 16.]—On a bill filed against a mortgagor to enforce a forfeiture under 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 16, for concealment of a prior mortgage:—Held, that the statute confers no active remedy in the court of chancery, and the bill was dismissed against the mortgagor without costs, and against a puisne incumbrancer with costs. Kennard v. Futvoye, 2 Giff. 81; 29 L. J., Ch. 553; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 312; 2 L. T. 30.

—— Who is Within.]—The statute is penal in its character, and must receive strict construction; therefore neither an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds, nor by deed of further charge without any proviso for redemption, is an after mortgagee within the meaning of the act. Ib.

Practice—Clean Hands.]—A person who will take advantage of the statute against clandestine mortgages must be a honest mortgagee, and therefore if a man has used any fraud or ill practice in obtaining a second mortgage he shall not have the benefit of the statute. Stafford v. Selby, 2 Vern. 590.

a. General Incidents of.

Whether an "Estate."]—It is a misapplication of words to call an equity of redemption an "estate" in the proper technical legal sense. Paget v. Ede, 43 L. J., Ch. 571; L. R. 18 Eq. 118; 30 L. T. 228; 22 W. R. 625.

Qualities of.]—The equity of redemption in this court is the fee simple of the land; will descend, may be granted, devised, and entailed, and barred by a common recovery; which proves that, in consideration of this court, it is such an estate as there may be a seisin of. Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 225; 1 Wm. Bl. 121.

The owner of the equity of redemption is in equity considered as the owner of the estate; it descends to his heir, may be the subject of settlement, limited in the same manner, and those limitations barred in the same manner, as those of the legal estate; the mortgagee being considered in equity as a mere incumbrance. Blake v. Foster, 2 Ball & B. 402.

An equity of redemption may be devised, granted, or entailed, and such entail may be barred by fine and recovery, and the person entitled to it is the owner of the land. Casborne v. Scarfe, 1 Atk. 603.

By a devise of land, mortgaged in fee, the equity of redemption alone passes; if for years, the reversion and equity of redemption passes. Forrester v. Leigh, Amb. 174.

Agreement to Convey must be Written.]—An agreement to convey an equity of redemption is not binding unless in writing. Massey v. Johnson, 1 Ex. 241; 17 L. J., Ex. 182.

Distinguished from Trust.]—Distinction between an equity of redemption and a mere trust. Downe (Viscount) v. Morris, 3 Hare, 394; 13 L. J., Ch. 337; 8 Jur. 486.

Execution.]—Equity of redemption of a term cannot be taken in execution. Lyster v. Dolland, 1 Ves. J. 431; 3 Bro. C. C. 478.

Judgment.]—A judgment against mortgagee obtained subsequent to mortgage does not attach upon assets produced by a release of the equity of redemption. Freeman v. Taylor, 1 Mod. 115.

Annuity Act.]—An equity of redemption is within the exception in the Annuity Act (stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 26, s. 8) repealed, and see 53 Geo. 3, c. 141, s. 10. Tucker v. Thurstan, 17 Ves. 131.

4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 16.]—Until the legal right to redeem is determined, there can be no equity of redemption within the provisions of the 4 & 5 Will. & M. c. 16. Kennard v. Futvoye, 2 Giff. 81; 29 L. J., Ch. 553; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 312; 2 L. T. 30.

Curtesy.]—Husband may be tenant by curtesy of the wife's equity of redemption. Casborne v. Scarfe, 1 Atk. 603.

Dower.]—A widow is not dowable of an equity of redemption. Dixon v. Saville, 1 Bro. C. C. 325.

Husband seised in fee mortgages for years, and marries; the mortgagee never enters: the wife, on the death of her husband, shall be endowed. Hamilton v. Mohun, 1 P. Wms. 121.

Equity to Settlement.]—Where a person entitled jure mariti to chattels real mortgages them, the wife has not any equity to a settlement thereout as against the mortgagee seeking a foreclosure and sale. Hatchell v. Eggleso, 1 Ch. Rep. 215.

b. Sale of.

i. In General.

Sale of Portion—Application of Residue.]—If a mortgagor sell a portion of the equity of redemption for good or valuable consideration, the entire residue is applicable in the first instance to the discharge of the mortgage, in ease of the bonâ fide purchaser, and a subsequent purchaser from the mortgagor cannot be in a better situation than the mortgagor himself. Hartley v. O'Flaherty, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 216.

Agreement by Purchaser to Pay Mortgage.]—Upon the purchase of an equity of redemption, the agreement of the purchaser with the vendor to pay the mortgage, without any communication with the mortgagee, is not sufficient to make it the personal debt of the purchaser. Butler v. Butler, 5 Ves. 534.

Implied Covenant to Indemnify.]—Independently of any contract, a court of equity will compel the purchaser of an equity of redemption to indemnify the vendor against the mortgage debt; and he may be required to covenant to do so. Bridgman v. Daw, 40 W. R. 253.

Death before Completion.]—If a mortgagor contracts to sell his equity of redemption, and dies before completion, his heirs are necessary parties to the conveyance. Duly v. Nalder, 35 L. J., Ch. 52; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 921; 13 W. R. 269; 14 W. R. 45.

Keeping Mortgage on Foot.]—Where a mortgagor contracts to sell the fee simple of a mortgaged estate free from incumbrances, the purchaser, with the concurrence of the mortgagee, is entitled, on procuring a discharge of the vendor from all liability in respect of the mortgage debt, and bearing any extra expense occasioned by his demand, to require a conveyance of the equity of redemption, so as to keep the mortgage on foot. Cooper v. Cartwright, 1 John. 697.

Setting up Prior Mortgage on.]—Purchaser of an equity of redemption cannot set up a prior mortgage of his own, on which he has got in, against subsequent incumbrances of which he had notice. Toulmin v. Steere, 3 Mer. 210; 17 R. R. 67.

Recovery.]—Equitable tenant in tail aliens in fee by way of mortgage; a good equitable recovery may be suffered of the secondary equitable estate without the concurrence of the mortgagee. Nouaille v. Greenwood, Turn. & R. 26; 22 R. R. 174.

Fine.]—Mortgagee is not bound by fine by mortgagor in possession. Pomfret (Earl) v. Windsor (Lord), 2 Ves. 482.

Liability of Assignee—Bankruptcy.]—The mere fact of assignment of the equity of redemption of a mortgage does not create a personal liability in the assignee, so as to enable the mortgagee to prove for arrears of interest of the mortgage debt against the estate in bankruptcy of the assignee. But it may be that such a liability may be created by the circumstances of some particular case. Errington, In re, Mason, Ex parte, [1894] 1 Q. B. 11; 10 R. 91; 69 L. T. 766.

Such a liability will not, however, necessarily be inferred from the fact that the assignee has paid the interest for a period of two years in the absence of the mortgagor, who could not be heard of, and that the days on which interest was to be paid under the mortgage have been altered by arrangement between the assignee of the equity of redemption and the mortgagees, who were not parties to the assignment. Ib.

Section 26 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, does not create a statutory liability in the assignee to the mortgagee for arrears of interest, so as to give a right of proof. Ib.

Right of Mortgagee to, on rejection by Assignees.]—A mortgagee of a term gave an equitable mortgage, and subsequently purchased the equity of redemption and became bankrupt:—Held, that the equitable mortgagee was entitled to a sale of the equity of redemption, if it be rejected by the assignees. Tuffnell, Ex parte, Watts, In re, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 620.

Pendente lite.]—Assignee of equity of redemption pendente lite for redemption is subject to decree. Metcalfe v. Pulvertoft, 2 Ves. & B. 207; 13 R. R. 63.

Pending a suit by a mortgagor for redemption, the plaintiff became an insolvent, and he also aliened property. Neither his assignees nor his alienee were made parties, and in their absence an order was made foreclosing the plaintiff:—Held, that the assignees in insolvency were not bound by it, the assignment to them by the insolvent being in invitum; but that it was binding on the alienee pendente lite, and those claiming under him. Wood v. Parr, 19 Beav. 551.

Held, also, that the latter could not avail themselves of the objection of the absence in the suit of the former. Ib.

Practice—Bill for Account and Redemption.]—A., entitled to a remainder in tail, to take effect on the death of B., joined B. in levying fines and suffering recoveries for the purpose of selling those lands to pay the debts of B., who, in consideration thereof, in June conveyed to A. other lands not included in the settlement, but then under mortgage. In October B. conveyed the equity of redemption in these latter lands to the mortgagee, whereupon A. filed his bill in the exchequer for an account and redemption, which bill the barons dismissed; but, on appeal, the lords reversed their decree. Wrixon v. Cotter, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 295.

ii. Purchase by Mortgagee.

Mortgagor may Sell.]—A mortgagor may sell his equity of redemption to his mortgagee, although the sale is coupled with a right of repurchase within a given time upon fixed terms. Gossip v. Wright, 32 L. J., Ch. 648 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 592 ; 8 L. T. 627 ; 11 W. R. 632.

Relation of Parties to Each Other.]—Where a mortgagor in consideration of the mortgage debt releases the equity of redemption to the mortgagee, the parties should be regarded, until the contrary is shewn by the party impeaching the deed, as on the ordinary footing of vendor and purchaser. Knight v. Marjoribanks (2 Mac. & G. 10) approved. If such a release is voidable on the ground of misrepresentation or mutual mistake, an equity to set it aside is an equitable interest in the property to which it relates. Melbourne Banking Corporation v. Brougham, 51 L. J., P. C. 65 ; 7 App. Cas. 307 ; 46 L. T. 603 ; 30 W. R. 925.

Collusion.]—A purchase by a mortgagee of mortgaged property, sold either under the power of sale or in execution of a decree against the mortgagor company, (obtained collusively between the mortgagee and the directors,) does not operate to vest an absolute title in the mortgagee. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c. Co., 4 App. Cas. 391 ; 40 L. T. 697 ; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

Agreement not Carried Out—Lapse of Time.]—When a mortgagor had executed an agreement to deliver up possession of the mortgaged property, and to release all his interest to the mortgagee, and the agreement was not acted upon for twelve years, when the property was sold :—Held, that, under the circumstances, the mortgagor was entitled to the surplus of the purchase-money. Rushbrook v. Lawrence, L. R. 5 Ch. 3 ; 21 L. T. 477 ; 18 W. R. 101—C. A.

Priority, Loss of.]—A first mortgagee purchased the equity of redemption, which was conveyed to him :—Held, under the circumstances, that the second mortgagee had not thereby obtained priority over the first. Hayden v. Kirkpatrick, 34 Beav. 645 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 836 ; 13 L. T. 56 ; 13 W. R. 1010.

A. and B. mortgaged their estate to C. Afterwards B. conveyed all his interest in the estate to A., in consideration of a second charge on the estate. A. afterwards sold and conveyed the equity of redemption to C., in consideration of the mortgage debt :—Held, that the first mortgage was not extinguished as against B., so as to give him priority over A. Ib.

If a creditor with a prior incumbrance buys the estate, which is subject to a puisne incumbrance, he lets in the second incumbrance to the injury of the prior incumbrance, the benefit of which is completely lost. Garnett v. Armstrong, 2 Con. & L. 458 ; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 533 ; 4 Dr. & War. 82.

A second mortgagee took a conveyance of the equity of redemption in consideration of the debts due to himself and the other mortgagees, which he thereby took upon himself and covenanted to pay :—Held, that his debt was extinguished, and, therefore, in a foreclosure suit instituted against him by the parties entitled to the first and third mortgages, he was not entitled to be paid his debt in priority to the third mortgagee. Brown v. Stead, 5 Sim. 535 ; 2 L. J., Ch. 45.

—— Intention to Postpone Debt.]—A., first mortgagee, after an order for foreclosure against the mortgagor, purchased from C., the trustee in bankruptcy of his mortgagor, the equity of redemption in the mortgaged premises. N. was a second mortgagee of the same, besides other property. The deed of assignment contained recitals that C. had agreed to sell to A., subject to the claim of N., at the price of 1,400*l.*, and that 1,380*l.*, the first mortgage debt, should be retained by A. out of the purchase-money, and it was thereby witnessed that, in consideration of the sum of 1,380*l.* so retained in full satisfaction of the mortgage debt of 1,380*l.*, which sum A. did thereby declare to be fully satisfied, and also in consideration of 20*l.* paid to C. by A., the receipt whereof making, with the 1,380*l.* so retained, the purchase-money of 1,400*l.*, he, C., did grant, bargain, &c., all those hereditaments, . . . subject to the claim of N. :—Held, that upon the deed itself there was no intention shewn on the part of the first mortgagee to postpone his own mortgage debt. Adams v. Angell, 25 W. R. 139. Affirmed, 46 L. J., Ch. 352 ; 5 Ch. D. 634 ; 36 L. T. 334—C. A.

Relief.]—The mortgagor of estate releases equity of redemption to mortgagee for a valuable consideration ; the mortgagee at same time gives mortgagor a note that, if he should within a year pay a certain sum, being the original mortgage money and the consideration for the release of the equity, he (the mortgagee) would sell and convey to him the premises :—Held, that this was an original agreement between the parties, and did not operate as a defeasance of the release or raise any new equity to the mortgagor, and that, the money not being paid, the party was not entitled to any relief. Emsworth v. Griffiths, 5 Bro. P. C. 184 ; 15 Vin. Abr. 468, pl. 8.

Setting Aside.]—A release of the equity of redemption was set aside at the instance of the mortgagee, he having been induced to accept of it, and in consideration thereof to covenant for the payment of a perpetual annuity to the mortgagor, and to give the mortgagor a perpetual right of redemption, by means of misrepresentations by the mortgagor and his solicitor (who was also the solicitor for the mortgagee) as to the title of the mortgagor, the value of the premises, and the nature of the contract he was entering into. Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jo. & Lat. 1.

A conveyance by a mortgagor to the defendant of the equity of redemption in real estate, part of which was at the date of such conveyance in mortgage to the defendant, and other part of which was in mortgage to another person, set aside at the suit of the assignee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, upon the ground of the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, of pressure, of the insolvency of the mortgagor at the time of the conveyance, and of inadequacy of consideration. Ford v. Olden, 36 L. J., Ch. 651 ; L. R. 3 Eq. 461 ; 15 L. T. 558.

Practice.]—Plea (to a bill to redeem a mortgage) of a conveyance by the mortgagor of the equity of redemption, in trust to sell and pay the mortgage, and a bond debt from him and two other persons, and a conveyance from the trustee to the mortgagee, nobody offering at an auction so much as was due for the mortgage money, with interest and costs ; ordered to stand for an answer, with liberty to except. Stabback v. Leatt, G. Cooper, 46.

4. TIME FOR.

Before Day of Payment.]—Mortgagor admitted to redeem before the day of payment in the deed. Talbot v. Braddill, 1 Vern. 183.

A., in 1657, conveys to B., subject to redemption on payment of 380*l.* in 1688, and possession is immediately delivered. Redemption decreed, and an account of profits before the day of payment in the proviso. S. C., 1 Vern. 394.

—— Demurrer.]—Where a mortgage was in the form of a demise, with a proviso that, if the money secured should be paid on a fixed day, or on full payment thereof, either previously or subsequently, and before the execution of the trust for sale therein contained, the term should cease, and a trust for sale was declared in case the mortgagor should not pay the mortgagee the sum secured on the day fixed:—Held, that a demurrer would not lie to a bill by the mortgagor for an account, and for reconveyance on payment of what should be found due, filed on the day before the day fixed. Harding v. Tingey, 34 L. J., Ch. 13; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 872; 10 L. T. 323; 12 W. R. 684.

—— Where Mortgagee in Possession.]—Where a mortgagee takes possession he may be redeemed before the time limited by the mortgage for payment of the mortgage money expires. Brown v. Cole (14 Sim. 427; 14 L. J., Ch. 167) distinguished. Borill v. Endle, 65 L. J., Ch. 542; [1896] 1 Ch. 648; 44 W. R. 523.

After Day of Payment.]—The parties entitled to redeem at law, at the appointed time, are in equity entitled to redeem afterwards. Skeffington v. Whitehurst, 3 Y. & C. 1; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 65. And see S. C., nom. Skeffington v. Budd, 9 Cl. & F. 219; 6 Jur. 809.

After Forfeiture.]—Bill to redeem a lottery annuity, mortgaged to defendant upon the common terms, for paying principal and interest; defendant insisted upon the benefit of 6 Geo. 1, c. 24, s. 23, having subscribed the annuity afterwards into the South Sea Company, but it appeared that he subscribed the annuity after the mortgage was forfeited. Redemption decreed as prayed. Thomas v. Pendlebury, 2 Eq. Abr. 601.

After Foreclosure Order.]—In a foreclosure action the mortgagor can redeem after the order for foreclosure absolute, and notwithstanding that, after the order, the mortgagee may have disposed of his interest to a purchaser; but whether or not he shall be allowed so to redeem lies in the discretion of the court and depends on the circumstances of each particular case. Campbell v. Holyland, 47 L. J., Ch. 145; 7 Ch. D. 166; 38 L. T. 128; 26 W. R. 109.

On Final Hearing of Bill for Foreclosure and Sale.]—A puisne mortgagee filed a bill for a foreclosure and sale against a prior mortgagee in possession. Upon the final hearing, the prior mortgagee, for the first time, insisted upon being redeemed:—Held, that he had not waived his right by not having made this claim by his answer. Rotheram v. Webb, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 52.

After Foreclosure, on Payment.]—After judgment in a foreclosure action, and the certificate of the master, finding the amount due for principal, interest and costs up to the date of the certificate, and adding the amount of interest due up to the time allowed by the judgment for redemption—that is, six months from the date of the certificate—the mortgagor cannot redeem before the expiration of the six months upon payment of the principal and interest up to the time of payment only, but must pay the full amount found due by the certificate. Hill v. Rowlands, 66 L. J., Ch. 689; [1897] 2 Ch. 361; 77 L. T. 34; 46 W. R. 26—C. A.

Mortgage of Rent.]—Mortgage of a rent redeemable at a greater distance of time than a mortgage of lands. Floyer v. Lavington, 1 P. Wms. 269.

Restricting Payment Off.]—The court will not give effect to a stipulation contained in a mortgage by a client to his solicitor, whereby the client is restricted from paying off the mortgage money for so long a period as twenty years. Cowdry v. Day, 1 Giff. 316; 29 L. J., Ch. 39; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 1 L. T. 88.

Confirming Equity of Redemption.]—In case of a mortgage, no clause can confine the equity of redemption to the lifetime of the mortgagor, or to him and the heirs male or heirs only of his body. Floyer v. Lavington, 1 P. Wms. 269.

Equitable Mortgage without Interest.]—Where a deposit of a lease was made to secure a debt, and from the nature of the transaction no interest was to be paid on the principal sum secured, the equitable mortgagor, on a bill filed by the equitable mortgagee, to have the lease sold, is entitled to the usual time to redeem. Meller v. Woods, 1 Keen, 16; 5 L. J., Ch. 109.

Absolute Conveyance Redeemable.]—A. made an absolute conveyance to B. of the reversion of an estate pur autre vie, and by another deed, of equal date, the lands were made redeemable at any time during the life of the grantor only. A. died, not having paid the money. Lord Nottingham decreed that the heir might redeem, but it was against the sense of the bar. Lord North, however, reversed the decree, it appearing that A. had a kindness for B., and was related to him by marriage, which made it in nature of a settlement; and the case was more strong, as B. could not have compelled A. to redeem during his life. Newcomb v. Bonham, 1 Vern. 7, 214, 232; 2 Vent. 364; 2 Free. C. C. 67.

No Proviso for Redemption.]—A. conveyed lands to B., on trust, in case a sum and interest should not be paid by a day named, to sell, and after payment of principal, interest and costs, to reconvey the lands remaining unsold, or pay over the residue of the money; and B. covenanted not to sell without giving six months' notice, but the deed contained no proviso for redemption:—Held, that this was a mere mortgage, and that A. was therefore entitled to six months' time to redeem. Bell v. Carter, 17 Beav. 11; 22 L. J., Ch. 933; 17 Jur. 478; 1 W. R. 270.

Judgment Creditors.]—Judgment creditors are not allowed successive periods of three months for redemption. Bates v. Hillcoat, 16 Beav. 139.

But one period of three months is given to them, or any of them. Radcliff v. Salmon, 4 De G. & Sm. 526.

Barred by Lapse of Time.]—Where twenty years have elapsed from entry by a mortgagee, and there has been no subsequent acknowledgment, the mortgagor's right of redemption becomes extinct, under the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), ss. 28, 34; and, if in such a case the mortgage deed contained a power of sale with a trust of surplus proceeds for the mortgagor and his representatives, and that power of sale has not been exercised within the twenty years from entry by the mortgagee, the trust of surplus proceeds becomes equally extinct, and cannot be enforced with respect to surplus proceeds resulting from a subsequent sale. Chapman v. Corpe, 41 L. T. 22; 27 W. R. 781. See also Cases under LIMITATIONS (STATUTE OF).

Calendar.]—The nine months allowed by the stat. 3 Geo. 1, c. 2, s. 4, to a mortgagee of an evicted lease to redeem, are calendar months. Biddulph v. St. John, 2 Sch. & Lef. 521.

Practice—Demurrer.]—A bill to redeem a mortgage, filed before the mortgage has become absolute at law, is demurrable, notwithstanding the mortgagor may have tendered to the mortgagee the principal money, together with interest up to the day named in the proviso for redemption. Brown v. Cole, 14 Sim. 427; 14 L. J., Ch. 167; 9 Jur. 290.

—— Tender after Day appointed.]—If the plaintiff in a suit for redemption does not pay the principal and interest at the time appointed, he will not be allowed to redeem, although, before the motion to dismiss is made, he has tendered the amount reported due with the subsequent interest. Faulkner v. Bolton, 7 Sim. 319; 4 L. J., Ch. 81.

—— Motion of Course.]—Upon a bill to redeem a mortgage and nonpayment at the time appointed, it is a motion of course to dismiss the bill. Stuart v. Worrall, 1 Bro. C. C. 581.

—— Enlarging Time.]—The time not enlarged upon a bill of redemption as upon a bill of foreclosure. Nevosielski v. Wakefield, 17 Ves. 417.

—— Terms.]—Where the amount of principal and interest found due upon a mortgage has been found by the master's report, the rule now is to compute subsequent interest upon the principal only, and the time for payment of the money found due upon a mortgage is enlarged upon the terms of paying the interest and costs found due. Whatton v. Craddock, 1 Keen, 267; 6 L. J., Ch. 178.

—— Order dismissing Action in default of Payment into Court within a Specified Time—Extension of Time—Mistake.]—Where in a redemption action liberty is given to lodge a sum of money in court before a certain day, and in default that "the action be dismissed with costs," the action will not be treated as wholly dead and at an end if the money is not lodged before the specified day, so as to preclude an application made after that day for extension of the time for lodgment. If the failure to make the lodgment within the time limited is due to an honest mistake, the court will favourably consider an application for extension of time. Collinson v. Jeffery, 65 L. J., Ch. 375; [1896] 1 Ch. 644; 74 L. T. 78; 44 W. R. 311.

5. PROCEEDINGS FOR.

a. In General, 1686.
b. Offer to Redeem, 1689.
c. Accounts, 1690.
d. Decree, 1691.

a. In General.

Pendente lite.]—After a bill brought in the exchequer to foreclose, the defendants may bring a bill in this court to redeem; the pendency of the former suit is not pleadable. Newbury v. Wren, 1 Beav. 220.

What must be Alleged.] — In a bill for redemption, against a mortgagee stated to be in possession without acknowledgment of a mortgage title, it is not necessary to allege that such possession without acknowledgment of mortgage title has not been for twenty years. Green v. Nicholls, 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 118.

Disputing Mortgagor's Title.]—A mortgagee cannot dispute his mortgagor's title; therefore, a plea, that the mortgagor was an uncertificated bankrupt at the time of his purchasing the estate, to a bill of redemption, cannot be sustained. Wroe v. Clayton, 8 L. J., Ch. 356; 9 Ib., 107; 4 Jur. 82. And see S. C., 10 Sim. 185.

Objection to Bill.]—On a bill to redeem, the mortgagee cannot object that the bill does not state a valid legal conveyance to him. Roberts v. Clayton, 3 Anst. 715.

First Hearing.]—If a prior mortgagee does not insist on being redeemed at the first hearing, he cannot do so at the final hearing. Foster v. Ker, 12 Ir. Eq. R. 51.

Dismissing Bill.]—Dismission on default of payment under decree upon bill for redemption operates as a foreclosure. Winchester (Bishop) v. Paine, 11 Ves. 199.

The rule that the dismissal of the bill in a redemption suit operates as a foreclosure of the mortgage does not apply to an equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds. Marshall v. Shrewsbury, 44 L. J., Ch. 302; L. R. 10 Ch. 250; 32 L. T. 418; 23 W. R. 803.

—— Effect of.] — Dismission of a bill for redemption for want of prosecution has not the effect of foreclosure, not preventing another bill. Hansard v. Hardy, 18 Ves. 460.

Praying Relief.]—Praying relief where mortgagee is a party is the same as praying to redeem; and, if on a reference to a master they do not redeem him, the court will dismiss the bill, which is equivalent to a foreclosure. Cholmley v. Oxford (Lord), 2 Atk. 267.

Absconding Mortgagee.]—The proceedings to be taken against an absconding mortgagee, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 14, in Ireland are similar to those adopted in England to have a bill taken pro confesso, and, if the plaintiff should obtain the common conditional decree on sequestration, it must be vacated. Brien v. Murphy, 1 Hog. 480.

Setting up Incumbrance.]—Subsequent mortgagee prays redemption of first mortgagee, upon payment of what was due, and pending suit, first mortgagee sets up another mortgage prior to all:—Decreed, a trial of its validity at law, and an account of money paid, &c. Dowse v. Rue, 9 Mod. 38.

Setting up Contract.]—In defence to a bill for redemption, the mortgagee set up a contract entered into with him by the mortgagor for the sale to him of the equity of redemption. This the mortgagor insisted had been abandoned:—Held, that this defence could only be made available by a cross bill. Howells v. Wilson, 34 Beav. 573; 34 L. J., Ch. 593; 12 L. T. 818; 13 W. R. 1011.

Enforcing Agreement for Compromise.]—In a redemption suit against the mortgagee in possession of business premises, a compromise was agreed upon, under which the mortgagor was to pay a fixed sum on a certain day, and the mortgagee was to carry on the business in the meantime and give up possession on payment, and all proceedings in the suit were to be stayed. The mortgagor failed to pay the money at the time appointed:—Held, that the agreement for compromise could not be enforced on motion in the suit, but a fresh bill must be filed for specific performance. Pryer v. Gribble, 44 L. J., Ch. 676; L. R. 10 Ch. 534; 32 L. T. 238; 23 W. R. 642.

Failure of Suit.]—A suit for redemption which fails cannot, under the prayer for general relief, be turned into a suit for an account. Patch v. Ward, 7 L. T. 413; 11 W. R. 135.

Revival.]—Mortgagor brings bills to redeem; an account is decreed, and a report is made, and divers proceedings are had in the cause, and plaintiff is ordered to pay costs and deliver possession. The defendant, the mortgagee, dies: his executor can revive the suit. Stowell (Lady) v. Cole, 2 Vern. 296.

Supplemental Suit.]—Heir-at-law filing a bill to redeem a mortgage, having also brought in the claim of a third person to the heirship; if he himself is found upon an issue not heir, he cannot, by supplemental bill, have the benefit of the original suit, as the purchaser of the heirship in such third person. On demurrer to supplemental bill. Tonkin v. Lethbridge, G. Cooper, 43.

Counter-claim.]—When a question arises as to the rights of mortgagees and sub-mortgagees who are co-defendants, the proper course to pursue is to raise it by counter-claim, and to deliver it to the co-defendants. Shephard v. Beane, 2 Ch. D. 223; 24 W. R. 363.

Notice.]—In the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-s. 3, and Rules of Court, 1875, Ord. XVI., rr. 17, 18 and 19, "notice" is applicable to third parties, and not to co-defendants. Ib.

—— Deed Missing after.]—Notice to redeem a mortgage having been given, a title deed was missing; and the mortgagor brought his action for redemption and for an indemnity:—Held, that the action was rightly brought in order that the loss of the deed might be established and the plaintiff's title justified, although the defendants had before the action offered an indemnity, the terms of which were in controversy. James v. Rumsey, 48 L. J., Ch. 345; 11 Ch. D. 398; 27 W. R. 617.

It having been found in the suit that the deed was in the hands of a third party to whom the defendants' former solicitor had fraudulently pledged it, leave was given to plaintiff to take proceedings for its recovery. Ib.

Loss of Mortgage Deed and other Documents —Indemnity.]—In 1867 M. mortgaged his life interest in certain funds subject to the trusts of his marriage settlement, and three policies of insurance on his own life. In 1876 he executed a second mortgage of his life interest to the plaintiffs. This mortgage did not include the policies of insurance. In 1886 an action was brought by the plaintiffs against the mortgagor and H., the legal personal representative of the first mortgagee, to redeem the first mortgage and foreclose the mortgagor. Pending the progress of the action it was discovered that the mortgage of 1867 and the policies were not in the possession of H., and an inquiry was directed as to the loss of the documents, and whether any and what indemnity should be given in respect of the loss in case it should be found that any of them had been lost. In the meanwhile the plaintiffs had paid into court the amount which had been certified to be due to the defendant H. under the mortgage of 1867, and for her taxed costs of the action. The chief clerk, in answer to the inquiry, found that the mortgage of 1867 and the policies had been lost, and he also found that the plaintiffs were entitled to "such an indemnity as will equal that which the insurance company may require." The plaintiffs took out a summons to vary this certificate, by which they asked that the whole of the fund in court might be retained until further order by way of indemnity to them. The insurance company declined to make any arrangement with regard to an indemnity until claims should be made on the policies:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a bond of indemnity, to be given by the defendant H. as executrix, the bond to be settled in chambers in case the parties differed, and that they were also entitled to have retained in court the sum of 100*l.*, and no more, to meet any possible costs that might be incurred when the policies should become claims. Caldwell v. Matthews, 62 L. T. 799.

Notice for Affidavit of Documents.] — If a mortgagor, intending to redeem under the usual decree in a foreclosure suit, requires an affidavit of the documents to be delivered to him, he should give previous notice to that effect to the mortgagor. Weeks v. Stourton, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 278; 12 L. T. 71; 13 W. R. 489.

Where a mortgagor had not given such notice, and the mortgagee was not prepared with such affidavit, a new day and place for payment were fixed on an application by summons. Ib.

Production of Documents.]—In an action for redemption against a mortgagee in possession an order for production of documents made before the defence was delivered, and without any special case for production being made, was affirmed. Union Bank of London v. Manby, 49

L. J., Ch. 106 ; 13 Ch. D. 239 ; 41 L. T. 393 ; 28 W. R. 22—C. A.

Costs.]—Bill by the owner against his mortgagees and the trustee of a fund to compel payment :—Held, to be a suit for administration, and not redemption, and the costs of all parties were ordered to be paid out of the fund in the first instance. Bryant v. Blackwell, 15 Beav. 44.

b. Offer to Redeem.

Rule as to.]—Although neither a mortgagor, nor any person deriving title under him, can make a mortgagee defendant to a suit without offering to redeem him, this rule does not apply where other relations besides those of the mortgagor and mortgagee subsist between the parties. Jefferys v. Dickson, 35 L. J., Ch. 376 ; L. R. 1 Ch. 183 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 281 ; 14 L. T. 208 ; 14 W. R. 322.

Accordingly, where a mortgagor, by deed to which his mortgagees were parties, conveyed the mortgaged estates to trustees for better securing to the mortgagees payment of the interest on their incumbrances, and to accumulate the surplus rents as a fund to satisfy the incumbrances, and, subject thereto, for the mortgagor, with a proviso that, when the incumbrances should be satisfied, the trusts should cease :—Held, that a subsequent judgment creditor could make the mortgagees defendants to a bill against the trustees for an account without offering to redeem them. Ib.

Held, also, that, although a receiver, appointed by a mortgagee under the ordinary power is the agent of the mortgagor, who may file a bill against him for an account without making the mortgagee a party, in this case the trustees were not mere receivers, and, therefore, the mortgagees were properly made parties to the suit. Ib.

Held, also, that the account should be taken as from the filing of the bill only. Ib.

Bill Without.]—A bill by a person claiming under a mortgagor against the mortgagee is irregular, unless it offers to redeem. Hughes v. Cook, 34 Beav. 407.

The plaintiff was entitled to an estate, subject to a mortgage created by his ancestor. He instituted a suit against the mortgagee and the representatives of his ancestor, praying to have the mortgage paid out of his assets or by sale of the estate, and also for the delivery up of independent securities given by the plaintiff to the defendant :—Held, that the suit was multifarious, and a demurrer to it was allowed. Ib.

A bill by a person entitled to a mortgaged estate under the mortgagor's will, against the mortgagee and the mortgagor's representatives, to have the mortgagor's estate applied in payment of the mortgage, cannot be sustained. Ib.

Demurrer by mortgagee to a bill by a trustee under the will of the mortgagor to carry into execution the trusts of the will, without offering to redeem the mortgage, allowed. M'Donough v. Shewbridge, 2 Ball & B. 555.

A. being entitled to an annuity out of an estate, it was afterwards conveyed to a trustee, in trust, out of the rents, or by a sale, to raise a sum due to A. The owner of the estate afterwards mortgaged it to B., who filed his bill, praying the execution of the trusts of the first deed, and a sale of the estate, but the bill did not offer to redeem :—Held, that it was demurrable. Cave v. Foulks, 5 L. J., Ch. 206.

A person entitled to an equity of redemption cannot make the mortgagee a party to a suit respecting the mortgaged estates, without offering to redeem ; but where a mortgagor by deed, to which the mortgagee was not a party, had conveyed another estate to trustees to sell and pay off the mortgage, so as to exonerate the mortgaged estate, it was held that a person interested in the equity of redemption might file a bill, not offering to redeem, against the mortgagee and trustees, to have an execution of the trust. Dalton v. Hayter, 7 Beav. 313.

—— Summons to determine Construction.]—A mortgagor may proceed by originating summons, under Ord. LIV.A. r. 1, to have a question of construction arising on the mortgage-deed determined without making an offer to redeem. Nobbs v. Law Reversionary Interest Society, 65 L. J., Ch. 906 ; [1896] 2 Ch. 830 ; 75 L. T. 309.

What Sufficient.]—A mortgagor filed a bill against a mortgagee for an account, and to restrain him from selling the mortgaged premises, and prayed that, "on payment by the plaintiff to the defendant of what, on taking such accounts, might be found due, the defendant might be ordered to" reconvey the property :—Held, that this was not a sufficient offer to pay what should be found due, and a demurrer to the bill allowed, with leave to amend the bill by inserting a formal offer to pay. Harding v. Tingey, 34 L. J., Ch. 13 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 872 ; 10 L. T. 323 ; 12 W. R. 684.

Effect of.]—If a bill is not for redemption, but for a totally different object, and is quite incapable of being used as a bill of redemption, an offer at the bar to redeem will not sustain it as such. Gordon v. Horsfall, 5 Moore, P. C. 393 ; 11 Jur. 569.

Courts of Equity Exchequer and Chancery.]—In the court of equity exchequer, a puisne mortgagee need not, on a bill of foreclosure and sale, offer to redeem a prior mortgage ; aliter, in the court of chancery. Perrott v. O'Halloran, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 428.

Practice—Demurrer.]—The objection by a prior mortgagee brought before the court in a foreclosure suit, that the plaintiff has not offered by his bill to redeem him, if valid, ought to be taken advantage of by demurrer. Balfe v. Lord, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 648 ; 2 Dr. & War. 480 ; 1 Con. & L. 519.

Order.]—Where a mortgagor obtains a decree for an account, but neither the bill nor the decree contains the usual offer by the mortgagor to pay any balance found due to the mortgagee, if a balance is found due, the court cannot order the payment ; but, if the bill contains allegations which fail, will direct all the costs to be paid by the mortgagor. Hollis v. Bulpett, 12 L. T. 293 ; 13 W. R. 492.

c. Accounts.

Setting out.]—A defendant in a redemption suit, who admits that the plaintiff is entitled to a decree, cannot refuse to set out in his answer his accounts as mortgagee. The rule as to answering applicable to redemption suits is the same as for any other suits for accounts. Elmer v.

Death of Mortgagor after Taking.]—A mortgagor brings a bill to redeem, obtains a decree for an account, &c., in the usual manner, and the account is accordingly taken by the master. Before any further proceedings, the plaintiff dies, and his infant son and heir revives and carries on the suit:—Held, that he is bound by the account already taken, but he shall be at liberty to surcharge and falsify it if he can. Badham v. Odell, 4 Bro. P. C. 349.

Particulars.]—It was alleged by counter-claim to a redemption action that the mortgage comprised:—(1) certain commission; (2) a sum also secured by bills of exchange; (3) a sum due on open account; and that the mortgagee had received divers sums in respect of the bills of exchange and on the open account. The mortgagee counter-claimed for an account and foreclosure or sale. Particulars of the sums received by him on the bills of exchange and open account were ordered to be given. Kemp v. Goldberg, 36 Ch. D. 505; 56 L. T. 736.

d. Decree.

Generally.]—As to decree to redeem, and delivery up of title deeds, see Kendall v. Hulls, 11 Jur. 864.

Against first Mortgagee not Appearing.]—If in a suit for redemption against several successive mortgagees, the first mortgagee does not appear at the hearing, a subsequent mortgagee will be allowed to make the decree absolute against him. Cottingham v. Shrewsbury, 5 Sim. 395.

In Absence of Party.] — Real and personal estate were mortgaged together. The mortgagor died leaving a will of personalty, but intestate as to real estate. It was not known who was the heir-at-law, and the mortgagee entered into possession. The executrix of the mortgagor claimed to redeem the whole of the mortgaged property, which claim was resisted by the mortgagee, who insisted that her only right was to redeem the mortgaged personalty on payment of a proportionate part of the mortgaged debt. The executrix brought an action for redemption, and the court made a decree for the usual accounts as against a mortgagee in possession, directing that on payment of what was found due the mortgagee should convey and assign the mortgaged properties, real and personal, to the plaintiff, subject to such equity of redemption as might be subsisting therein in any other person or persons. The defendant appealed:—Held, that, although the heir-at-law, if known, ought to have been a party, the court would not delay making a decree until he was ascertained and made a party. Hall v. Heward, 55 L. J., Ch. 604; 32 Ch. D. 430; 54 L. T. 810; 34 W. R. 571—C. A.

Form.]—Form of decree in a suit for redemption of a first mortgagee (in possession), and foreclosure of the mortgagor. Scholefield v. Ingham, C. P. Cooper, 477.

In a suit against A., an incumbrancer, and B., a sub-incumbrancer, to redeem the securities:—Held, that the proper form of decree was that, upon the amount due from the plaintiff to A. being paid into court, both A. and B. should reconvey the estate and deliver the deeds to the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff was not bound to wait until the accounts had been taken and the equities settled between A. and B. Lysaght v. Westmacott, 33 Beav. 417.

In a suit for redemption by the heir of the mortgagor, against the assignee of the mortgagee, who was also the personal representative of the mortgagor, the court, besides the usual decree for redemption, declared the plaintiff entitled to have the balance which should be found due from him, and which should be paid by him to the defendant, in respect of the mortgage debt, interest, and costs of the redemption, repaid to him out of the personal estate of the mortgagor in a due course of administration, and decreed accordingly, the bill being properly framed with a view to such relief. Lloyd v. Wait, 1 Ph. 61; 6 Jur. 456.

—— Future Account.]—In decrees against a mortgagee on a bill for redemption, or against an executor to account, it is the course of the court to direct it without future words; and yet, if the person decreed to account receive any sums subsequently to the decree, they must bring such sums into the account before the master. Bulstrode v. Bradley, 3 Atk. 582.

—— Conditional Redemption.] — Form of decree of conditional redemption where a second mortgage by another has been given to secure the first. Beckett v. Micklethwaite, 6 Madd. 199; 22 R. R. 274.

Production for Correction.]—The representative of a mortgagor, who had obtained a decree for redemption, ordered, on the petition of the mortgagee, to produce the original decree, for the purpose of correction. Bird v. Heath, 6 Hare, 236.

Summons under Ord. XV. r. 1, after Writ.]—The plaintiff, after issuing the writ in a redemption action, took out a summons for an account under Ord. XV. r. 1:—Held, that the order under the summons must be limited to preliminary accounts, and that the usual terms of a final judgment for redemption ought not to be added without the plaintiff's consent. Clover v. Wilts and Western Benefit Building Society, 53 L. J., Ch. 622; 50 L. T. 382; 32 W. R. 895.

M. REMEDIES OF MORTGAGEE.

(See also, post, FORECLOSURE (col. 1707 foll.), SALE BY COURT (col. 1757 foll.), SALE UNDER POWER (col. 1770 foll.), RECEIVER (col. 1797 foll.).)

2. On Covenant, 1696.
3. On Collateral Securities, 1699.
4. Distress—Attornment Clause, 1701.
5. Ejectment, 1706.

1. IN GENERAL.

Right to every Security.]—A mortgagee, if he is not redeemed, is entitled to every possible security for his title, and has a right to buy in an anterior mortgage at any price he pleases. Kirkwood v. Thompson, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 385. Affirmed, 2 De G. J. & S. 613; 34 L. J., Ch. 501; 12 L. T. 811; 13 W. R. 1052.

Where a debt is secured by mortgage, covenant and bond, the mortgagee may pursue all his remedies at the same time. Lockhart v. Hardy, 9 Beav. 349; 15 L. J., Ch. 347; 10 Jur. 532.

Mortgagee of Lease as against Devisee.]—Relief in favour of the mortgagee of a lease against the devisee of the mortgagor. Gregson v. Hindley, 7 Jur. 248.

Right of Eigné against Puisne Mortgagee.]—Right of eigné as against a puisne mortgagee to enforce all his remedies at the same time. Cockell v. Bacon, 16 Beav. 158.

Equitable Mortgagee.]—An equitable mortgagee is entitled, at his option, either to a foreclosure or sale. Perry v. Keane, 6 L. J., Ch. 67.

—— By Deposit.]—The right of an equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds without a written memorandum is a decree of foreclosure, not sale. Backhouse v. Charlton, 8 Ch. D. 444; 26 W. R. 504.

The proper remedy for an equitable mortgagee with a deposit of title-deeds is by a decree of foreclosure, and not a sale. James v. James, 42 L. J., Ch. 386; L. R. 16 Eq. 153; 21 W. R. 522.

An equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds, accompanied by an agreement to execute a legal mortgage, is entitled to either sale or foreclosure. York Union Banking Co. v. Artley, 11 Ch. D. 205; 27 W. R. 704.

—— Right of, in Administration.]—Where, in an administration suit, the personal estate is insufficient to pay the debts in full, an equitable mortgagee, who is also a simple contract creditor in respect of the same debt, and whose security is also insufficient, is entitled to prove for and take a dividend upon the entire debt for the time being actually unpaid, notwithstanding that the security has been realised by order of the court, and the proceeds have been carried on to a separate account to meet the mortgage claim. But such creditor must not ultimately receive more than twenty shillings in the pound from all sources. Rhodes v. Moxhay, 10 W. R. 103.

Under Mortgage by Way of Trust.]—Under a mortgage of real estate made by way of a conveyance to a trustee, upon trust to sell at discretion, and out of the proceeds of sale to pay the mortgage debt, and to pay the surplus moneys to the mortgagor, the only right of the mortgagee is to have the property sold, and he is not entitled to foreclose. Locking v. Parker, 42 L. J., Ch. 257; L. R. 8 Ch. 30; 27 L. T. 635; 21 W. R. 113.

Treating Mortgagor, and Claimants under him, as Trespassers.]—Semble, the mortgagee can in all cases treat the mortgagor, and all who claim under him, as trespassers. Evans v. Elliott, 9 Ad. & E. 342; 1 P. & D. 256; 8 L. J., Q. B. 51.

Against Infants.]—Where a decree had been made in two suits, framed for the purpose of administering the testator's personal estate only, and the devisee of the real estate was an infant, a suit by mortgagees, for the purpose of realising their security by a sale of the mortgaged premises, was properly instituted. Davis v. Dowding, 2 Keen, 245; 7 L. J., Ch. 169.

In Suit by Settlor, as Co-plaintiff.]—In a bill filed by the settlor for the purpose of a setting aside the settlement, the mortgagee of her interest under the settlement joined as a co-plaintiff. He can obtain no relief in such a suit. Bill v. Cureton, 2 Myl. & K. 503; 4 L. J., Ch. 98.

Bankruptcy.]—A mortgagee may petition to stay bankrupt's certificate. The circumstance of his not having tendered proof till third meeting will not prevent him from presenting such a petition. Where the amount of mortgage debt was disputed, the certificate was lodged in bankrupt office till it should be ascertained. Whitchurch, Ex parte, 2 J. & W. 548; 1 Glyn & J. 71.

After taking Debtor in Execution.]—A mortgagee, who has taken the body of his debtor in execution for the mortgage debt, is nevertheless entitled to the benefit of his mortgage security. Davis v. Battine, 2 Russ. & M. 76.

Arrest pending Foreclosure.]—A party having a mortgage, and also a bond as a security for the same debt, may arrest the defendant on the bond pending a suit in equity for a foreclosure. Burnell v. Martin, 2 Dougl. 417.

After giving up Mortgage, and Proof in Bankruptcy.]—Mortgagee having given up mortgage, and proved under a commission of bankruptcy against the mortgagor, not allowed to retract. Robinson v. Grant, 18 Ves. 290.

Where Mortgagor Outlawed.]—Mortgagor having been outlawed, the first mortgagee obtained a decree to foreclose subsequent mortgagees, and if they should not redeem, to sell against the crown. Scott v. Roberts, 4 W. R. 499.

After Foreclosure—Impossibility of Restoring Estate.]—A mortgagee who has foreclosed is not debarred from taking proceedings against the general estate of the mortgagor to recover his debt in cases where it has become impossible, through no default of the mortgagee, to restore the mortgaged estate. Burrell, In re, Burrell v. Smith, 38 L. J., Ch. 382; L. R. 7 Eq. 399; 17 W. R. 516.

Mortgage of Trust Fund.]—The assignee of a trust fund by way of mortgage, with power to give receipts in the name of the mortgagor, cannot compel the trustees of the fund to pay the whole over to him, notwithstanding the existence of puisne incumbrancers. All that he is entitled to demand is the amount due upon the mortgage. Bell, In re, Jeffery v. Sayles, 65 L. J., Ch. 188; [1896] 1 Ch. 1; 73 L. T. 391; 44 W. R. 99—C. A.

Depreciation.]—Where, at the death of a mortgagor of leaseholds, the value of the mortgaged property exceeded the mortgaged debt, and the mortgagee took no steps to realise his security for fourteen years after the death of the mortgagor, and in the meantime the property became very much deteriorated in value:—Held (affirming 2 Giff. 492), that the mortgagee was not entitled to recover the deficiency arising on his security from those legatees of mortgagor who had been paid. Ridgway v. Newstead, 30 L. J., Ch. 889; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 451; 4 L. T. 6; 9 W. R. 401—L. C.

—— Right against Residuary Legatees.]—The right of mortgagees of real estate whose security proves insufficient, to come against the residuary legatees of the mortgagor, amongst whom his personal estate has been distributed, is a purely equitable right, and the court will not enforce it if there are circumstances which would make it inequitable to do so. Blake v. Gale, 55 L. J., Ch. 559; 32 Ch. D. 571; 55 L. T. 234; 34 W. R. 555—C. A.

—— Proof in Administration for Deficiency.]—In a suit to foreclose by a mortgagee (all parties consenting), the premises were ordered to be sold and the proceeds paid into court. The purchase-money was invested, at the instance of the mortgagee, in consols, without objection on the part of the personal representative of the mortgagor; but, when again converted into money, (owing to a fall in the price of stock,) was insufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to come in and prove for the deficiency in a suit to administer the mortgagor's estate. Tompsett v. Wickens, 3 Sm. & G. 171; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 10; 4 W. R. 136.

By Action—For Money Lent.]—When a mortgage deed contains no covenant for repayment, so that no action can be maintained on the deed, an action for money lent will lie. Yates v. Aston, 3 G. & D. 351; 4 Q. B. 182; 12 L. J., Q. B. 160; 7 Jur. 83.

A deed of mortgage, and conditional sale, contained a covenant for possession by the mortgagee during the mortgage term. Possession was withheld, though the mortgagor received the mortgage money:—Held, that an action would lie by the mortgagee against the mortgagor for recovery of the principal and interest on the money advanced. Raja Oodit Purkash Sing v. Martindell, 4 Moore, Ind. App. 444.

The plaintiff was mortgagee under a mortgage from the defendant to him, with a power of sale in the event of nonpayment of a sum of money, which was further secured by a bond given by the defendant to him. The property was afterwards sold by the plaintiff under the power, but did not produce sufficient to discharge the debt. An account was then stated between the plaintiff and the defendant, charging the defendant with the full amount of the principal and interest, and giving him credit for the net proceeds of the sale. The defendant admitted the correctness of the account, and promised to pay the balance, to recover which the plaintiff brought an action for money lent and due on an account stated:—Held, that, the debt having been secured by specialty, the action could not be maintained, except upon the deed. Middleditch v. Ellis, 2 Ex. 623; 17 L. J., Ex. 365.

After Robbery of Title Deeds.]—Upon a bill of foreclosure, the mortgagee having been robbed of the title deeds, payment of the mortgage money within a limited time was decreed; and on payment of the same a reconveyance was directed, with a bond of indemnity. Shelmardine v. Harrop, 6 Madd. 39; 22 R. R. 232.

Practice—Right of Equitable Mortgagee against Legal Estate.]—In an action by an equitable mortgagee for sale or foreclosure the court granted an interim injunction to restrain dealing with the legal estate till the next motion day, on an ex parte application by the plaintiff; there being ground for believing that the defendants intended to part with the legal estate pendente lite. London and County Banking Co. v. Lewis, 21 Ch. D. 490; 47 L. T. 501.

—— Staying Proceedings.]—Bill by a mortgagee for an account, and for foreclosure, and a sale after a decree in a creditors' suit, under which the plaintiff in the second suit had gone in before the master, and proved his charge before he filed his bill: application to stay the proceedings in the second cause, as involving the same accounts, refused: the plaintiff having more speedy and effectual relief is entitled to go on; as, where there are litigated points beyond that of the amount of his demand, he is required to go on, in his separate suit, up to such point as all ulterior relief can be equally had in the suit first instituted: and, as to staying the proceedings in the first suit, while properly conducted, the court, however anxious to guard against unnecessary expense, has no authority. Uniacke v. Rochford, 1 Moll. 216.

—— In Absence of Parties Interested.]—The court cannot make a decree for foreclosure or sale in the absence of any of the parties interested in the equity of redemption. Caddick v. Cook, 32 L. J., Ch. 769; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 454; 7 L. T. 844; 11 W. R. 395.

—— Order to Pay—Stamping.]—Where plaintiffs were mortgagees in fee of freeholds in M., and of a lease for lives of a rectory, &c., in R., and had appointed H. and W. as receivers as to both, but the defendant, as tenant of the tithes, &c., in R. under an agreement with the mortgagor, was allowed to receive them, and the mortgagor, being in arrears, by letter directed him to pay a sum, part of the arrears, to H. and W., and charge it in the account of the year's tithes, &c.:—Held, to be, in effect, an order to pay money due from the defendant to the mortgagor as arrears, and not as receiver to the mortgagees; and, therefore, void for want of a stamp. Braybrooke (Lord) v. Meredith, 13 Sim. 271; 12 L. J., Ch. 289; 7 Jur. 144.

2. On Covenant.

Right to Remedy on all Securities.]—A mortgagee having filed a bill of foreclosure, and having proceeded to execution in ejectment, and being in possession of the rents and profits under an ejectment, and having brought an action for the mortgage money, and obtained execution; the court refused to discharge the defendant out of execution; for a mortgagee has a right to his remedy on all his securities. Colby v. Gibson, 3 Smith, 516; 8 R. R. 738.

Remedy at Law not Compulsory.]—A mortgagee coming into equity, or being before the court, not sent to avail himself of his securities at law, since the matter must finally come round to the same end, on a bill to redeem. Jacomb v. Harwood, 2 Ves. 265.

Merger—Suing for Difference between Interests on Mortgage and under Judgment.]—By a mortgage deed the mortgagor covenanted to pay the debt on a day named, and (by a separate covenant) to pay interest at 7*l.* per cent., so long as the 3,000*l.* or any part thereof should remain due. The mortgagee obtained a judgment for the principal and interest due at the date of the judgment with interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the sum made up by such principal and interest:—Held, that the security of the mortgage was not merged in the judgment, but that the mortgagee was entitled to sue for the difference between interest at 7*l.* per cent. on the mortgage debt and the interest at 4*l.* per cent. paid under the judgment. Popple v. Sylvester, 52 L. J., Ch. 54; 22 Ch. D. 98; 47 L. T. 329; 31 W. R. 116. Distinguished in Fewings, Ex parte, Sueyd, In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 545; 25 Ch. D. 338; 50 L. T. 100; 32 W. R. 352.

After Foreclosure and Sale.]—After foreclosure and sale of the mortgaged estate, injunction was granted to restrain the mortgagee from recovering the difference at law. Perry v. Barker, 8 Ves. 527; 9 R. R. 171.

After foreclosure and sale, the mortgagee may bring an action for the residue. Tooke v. Hartley, 2 Bro. C. C. 125.

Ground for Restraining.]—It is no ground for restraining a mortgagee from enforcing his security at law that he has contracted to buy from the mortgagor another estate, from the purchase-money from which the mortgage debt is to be deducted. Pell v. Stephens, Coop. t. Brough. 266.

The circumstance of the mortgagee with power of sale having contracted to sell a portion for a sum exceeding the amount due to him:—Held, not a sufficient ground for restraining him from enforcing by action the covenant for payment. Willes v. Levett, 1 De G. & Sm. 392.

The plaintiff, as mortgagee, got possession of the estate, sued at law on the covenant for non-payment, and brought his bill to foreclose; this is regular, and the court will not stop the proceedings at law, unless the defendant brings in the money. Rees v. Parkinson, 2 Anst. 497; 3 R. R. 618.

—— Impossibility of Restoring Estate.]—If a mortgagee so deals with the mortgaged estate as to render it impossible for him to restore it on full payment, a court of equity will prevent him suing at law to recover the mortgage money. Palmer v. Hendrie, 27 Beav. 349.

A mortgagor having transferred the equity of redemption, the transferee and mortgagee joined in a partial alienation of the property, but the money was received by the transferee alone:—Held, that the mortgagee could not afterwards sue the mortgagor on his covenant to pay. Ib.

Since Judicature Act.]—Since the Judicature Acts, a second action brought to recover arrears of interest on the mortgage while the foreclosure action is still pending will be stayed as vexatious. Poulett v. Hill, 62 L. J., Ch. 466; [1893] 1 Ch. 277; 2 R. 288; 68 L. T. 476; 41 W. R. 503—C. A.

Devisee in Trust.]—A devisee in trust of mortgaged premises, for sale and payment of the debts of the mortgagor, borrowed 200*l.* of the plaintiff, for the purpose of paying off a portion of the debts of the mortgagor; and by deed between him and the plaintiff, reciting these facts, charged the premises with payment of that amount, and covenanted that he and his heirs should, out of the money that should come to his hands as such trustee, or out of the personal estate, if any, of the mortgagor, pay to the plaintiff the principal and interest secured by the deed:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue the devisee in an action for money lent, but that his remedy was upon the covenant contained in the deed. Mathew v. Blackmore, 1 H. & N. 762; 26 L. J., Ex. 150; 5 W. R. 363.

Deed not executed by Mortgagees.]—There were cross covenants in a mortgage deed, and the mortgagees did not execute it:—Held, that they might nevertheless bring their action against the mortgagor, who did execute. Morgan v. Pike, 14 C. B. 473; 2 C. L. R. 696; 23 L. J., C. P. 64; 2 W. R. 193.

Delivery up of Deeds—7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1.]—Where an action is brought on the covenant for payment in the mortgage deed, the case is within the act, and an order may be made for the delivery up of deeds. Smeeton v. Collier, 5 D. & L. 184; 1 Ex. 457; 17 L. J., Ex. 57.

The order may be made at chambers. Ib.

Practice—Agreement not to call in is Conditional.]—When, default having been made in payment of interest, a mortgagee has recovered judgment for the amount of the principal and interest, and a bill is filed to restrain execution and for specific performance, on the ground that the mortgage deed is not in accordance with the terms of a previous agreement, which provided that the principal should not be called in for a term still unexpired, an injunction will be refused except on the terms of the amount recovered being paid into court, since, if a clause in accordance with that provision in the agreement had been inserted in the deed, it would, as a matter of course, have made the not calling in of the principal conditional on the punctual payment of interest. Seaton v. Twyford, 19 W. R. 200.

—— Pleading—Effect of Exercise of Power of Sale.]—To a declaration on a mortgagor's covenant to pay the debt, the action being brought to recover the balance due to the mortgagee, after giving credit for the money realised on the sale of the property, the defendant pleaded, by way of equitable defence, a plea which shewed that the plaintiff had taken possession of the property, and had sold it under the power of sale contained in the mortgage, and had thereby, as the plea alleged, deprived the defendant of his right to have such property conveyed to him upon payment of the money and interest due on the mortgage:—Held, that the plea was clearly bad, since it did not shew that sufficient had been realised by the sale to satisfy the debt. Rudge v. Richens, 42 L. J., C. P. 127; L. R. 8 C. P. 127; 28 L. T. 537.

—— Concurrent Actions—Costs.]—A mortgagee by deed, of lands, after commencing an action in the Chancery Division for an account of what was due on the mortgage, and for sale of the mortgaged premises, brought a personal action in a common law division on the covenant in the mortgage deed for payment of the principal debt and interest, and moved for final judgment. The defendant had not moved to stay the second action:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to judgment, but without costs of the action or motion. Bourke v. Donoghue, 20 L. R., Ir. 324.

3. On Collateral Securities.

Generally.]—Mortgagee has a right to proceed on his mortgage and bond at the same time. Schoole v. Sall, 1 Sch. & Lef. 176.

In a suit by an assignee of a policy of insurance upon trust, as a collateral security accompanying a mortgage of real estate:—Held, under the circumstances, that the mortgagee was not entitled to a decree for the sale of the policy. Dyson v. Morris, 1 Hare, 413; 11 L. J., Ch. 241; 6 Jur. 297.

Waiver.]—If a mortgagee has a bond as a counter-security, his issuing process or making use of his counter-security is not a waiver of his mortgage. Birch's Case, Gilb. Exch. Rep. 186.

Donatio Mortis Causâ.]—Mortgage or bond given as collateral security for money due on mortgage cannot be made subject of donatio mortis causâ. Duffield v. Elwes, 1 Sim. & S. 239; 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 213.

Lease.] — The defendant having taken a deposit of a lease as a collateral security, decreed to take an assignment. Lucas v. Comerford, 3 Bro. C. C. 166; 1 Ves. J. 235. But see 8 Sim. 499.

Equitable Mortgage to secure Bond Debt.]—Where the assignee of a bond debt had obtained from his debtor an equitable mortgage, by way of collateral security, which having been sold under a decree of a court of equity did not produce sufficient for payment of the full amount of the debt:—Held, that the creditor was not entitled to have the balance paid him, under an order of a court of equity. Keys v. Williams, 3 Y. & C. 462; 3 Jur. 950.

After Bill by First Mortgagee.]—A. mortgaged to B. an oat mill and certain lands. He afterwards erected additional mills and machinery, and mortgaged the equity of redemption to C., to whom he also gave a bond collateral:—Held, that, after a bill of foreclosure filed by B. to which C. was made a party defendant, C. could not, under an execution sued out on his bond, seize the movable machinery erected after the date of B.'s mortgage. M'Cluney v. Lemon, Hayes, 154.

After Foreclosure and Sale.]—After foreclosure, the mortgagee fairly sold the estate for less than what was due to him:—Held, that he could not afterwards recover from the mortgagor, upon his collateral personal securities, the amount still remaining unpaid. Lockhart v. Hardy, 9 Beav. 349; 15 L. J., Ch. 347; 10 Jur. 532.

After Part Payment on Foreclosure.]—Where a debt is secured on mortgage, covenant, and bond, if the mortgagee forecloses first, and the value of the estate proves insufficient to satisfy the debt, he may, while the mortgaged estate remains in his power, sue on the bond or covenant. Ib.

Representatives of mortgagee, after foreclosure, sell the mortgaged premises, and, the amount not being sufficient to pay the debt, bring an action on the bond. Injunction to restrain their proceeding dissolved. Tooke v. Hartley, 2 Bro. C. C. 125.

Extent of Security—Claim in Bankruptcy for Deficiency.]—A mortgagee, who has a bond as a collateral security, received part of his debt under a decree of foreclosure and sale. The mortgagor having become bankrupt, the mortgagee, upon giving up all the remaining benefit of the decree, was allowed to come in for the deficiency under the commission. Wyly, Ex parte, Vern. & Scriv. 518.

Mortgage of Policy—Entering up Judgment on Warrant of Attorney.]—A debt having been secured by a policy of insurance effected on the life of one of the debtors, the debtors, by way of further security, executed a warrant of attorney to their creditor to enter up judgment for the debt, the defeasance of the warrant providing that, so long as the policy was kept on foot by the debtors, judgment should not be entered up, nor execution issued on the warrant; by indenture of even date with the warrant, and executed by the debtors, a similar stipulation was made as to execution on the warrant, with a further provision that, on default by the debtors in payment of the premiums within a certain period after they should become due, the creditor might himself either keep the policy on foot, or effect a new policy in his own name, at the expense of his debtors. The debtors having failed to pay the premiums in due time, and the creditor not exercising his right to keep it on foot, the policy became forfeited; four days afterwards, the creditor, who was a director of the insurance company, paid up the premium, and induced the office to renew the policy:—Held, that he was nevertheless entitled to enter up judgment, and issue execution on the warrant of attorney; and a bill by the debtors, seeking to restrain him from so doing, was dismissed. Winthrop v. Murray, 8 Hare, 214; 19 L. J., Ch. 547; 14 Jur. 302.

Suing in Two Capacities.]—A creditor by mortgage and collateral bond cannot sue both as mortgagee and also on behalf of himself and all other creditors of the debtor, such rights of suing being inconsistent with each other; nor for the purpose of obtaining payment out of the real assets of his debtor can he sue as sole specialty creditor, unless he make all persons interested in contesting that fact parties to the suit. White v. Hillacre, 3 Y. & C. 597; 4 Jur. 102.

Limitation by Lapse of Time.]—Where a bond is entered into as a collateral security for money by mortgage, and the interest being in arrear the mortgagee takes possession, and remains in possession upwards of twenty years without taking interest otherwise than by receipt of rents and profits, quære whether his remedy on the bond is not barred in equity as well as at law by the Statute of Limitations. Ib.

Transfer on Redemption.]—In a foreclosure action personal judgment for the mortgage debt being given against the mortgagor, and a foreclosure judgment against the mortgagor and a purchaser from him:—Held, that the purchaser, in the event of his redeeming the mortgage, would be entitled to have transferred to him the personal judgment against the mortgagor, as being one of the securities held by the mortgagee for the debt. Greenough v. Littler, 15 Ch. D. 93; 42 L. T. 144; 28 W. R. 318.

Leave was given to the purchaser to apply in chambers for a sale of the property. Ib.

Restraining.]—Mortgagee having possession of mortgagor's title deeds lodged them with an attorney, who claimed a lien on them for business done for mortgagee. On application of mortgagor, mortgagee was restrained from proceeding at law upon his collateral security. Schoole v. Sall, 1 Sch. & Lef. 176.

—— Right to Interest—Practice.]—On an application to stay proceedings in an action on a bond securing the principal and interest payable on a mortgage, if the mortgagee seeks to obtain interest for the interval between granting the rule and the actual payment of the principal into his hands, he must make his claim to it at the time of discussing the rule, for he cannot afterwards sustain it. Jordan v. Chowns, 8 D. P. C. 709.

4. DISTRESS—ATTORNMENT CLAUSE.

Distress—Amount of.]—B. executed a mortgage of certain real property to secure the payment of 12,500*l.*, with interest at 4*l.* 15*s.* per cent., payable half-yearly, on the 8th May and 9th November in each year; and the deed contained a clause by which the mortgagor attorned tenant from year to year to the mortgagees at the yearly rent of 593*l.* 15*s.*, that being the exact amount of the interest reserved by the deed, and payable on the same days, namely, the 1st July and the 1st January. The mortgagor subsequently filed his petition, and, composition resolutions having been resolved upon, the mortgagees, on the 19th November, 1880, distrained for a half-year's rent under the attornment clause, although at that time, in accordance with an arrangement which had been previously entered into and acted upon by both parties, the interest had been paid by the trustees appointed under the composition proceedings down to July 1st, 1880. Upon the application of the trustees, the county court judge decided that the mortgagees were only entitled to receive the amount of rent or interest from the 1st July:—Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to the full amount for which they had distrained, and that the balance, after payment of the interest then due, was applicable for the reduction of the principal debt. Harrison, Ex parte, Betts, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 832; 18 Ch. D. 127; 45 L. T. 290; 30 W. R. 38—C. A.

—— Creation of Relation of Landlord and Tenant—Notice.]—A mortgage deed by which a messuage and premises were conveyed to the trustees of a building society to secure payment by the mortgagor of the sums payable by him under the rules of the society contained a provision that, in case of default in such payment, then immediately, or at any time after such default should have been made, the mortgagor should and would hold the premises, expressed to be thereby conveyed, as yearly tenant to the trustees from the day of the date of the deed at a certain yearly rent, and that the trustees should have the same remedies for recovering the rent as if the same had been reserved by a common lease. Default was made by the mortgagor under the deed, and in the following year the trustees distrained, for a year's rent, the goods of the plaintiff which were upon the premises. No notice was ever given to the mortgagor by the trustees of the society that they intended to treat him as tenant. The plaintiff brought trover for the goods so distrained against the trustees:—Held, that the trustees were not entitled to treat the mortgagor as a tenant until they had given him notice of their intention to alter the relation in which he stood to them, from that of mortgagor and mortgagee to that of tenant and landlord; and that consequently the distress could not be justified, and the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Clowes v. Hughes, 39 L. J., Ex. 62; L. R. 5 Ex. 160; 22 L. T. 103; 18 W. R. 459.

—— On Partnership Property.]—P. and F. were in partnership as brickmakers, and they mortgaged lands which they used for their partnership purposes, and of which they were seised as tenants in common, and also each of them separately attorned as tenants to the mortgagees in respect of a moiety of the property which was in their joint occupation and at a separate rent. Subsequently the mortgagees took out separate distresses against the mortgagors for six years' rent due from each for his one equal undivided moiety of the premises, and they seized chattels on the partnership premises. The mortgagors became bankrupt, and the receiver in the bankruptcy claimed the goods as against the mortgagees:—Held, that the mortgagees, having in both cases distrained on goods which were the joint partnership property of the bankrupts, had exceeded their rights, and that they could not distrain on goods in which the tenant and another person had an undivided interest. Parke, Ex parte, Potter, In re, 43 L. J., Bk. 139; L. R. 18 Eq. 381; 30 L. T. 618; 22 W. R. 768.

Attornment—Effect of.]—An attornment in a mortgage deed by the mortgagor as tenant to the mortgagee, at a rent reserved, creates a tenancy and rent with all its incident remedies, so that the mortgagee can in such a case distrain upon the goods of a third person, who has no notice of the mortgage, which may be on the mortgaged premises at the time of default in payment of rent by the mortgagor. Kearsley v. Philips, 52 L. J., Q. B. 581; 11 Q. B. D. 621; 49 L. T. 435; 31 W. R. 909—C. A.

A mortgage by mortgagors in possession, of premises used for the purposes of trade, contained a provision that the mortgage should continue for five years if the interest should be regularly paid, and the mortgagors should not become bankrupt, or take proceedings for liquidation or composition, and also an attornment clause whereby the mortgagors attorned tenants to the mortgagee at a rent far exceeding the interest on the mortgage or the annual value of the property. The mortgagors having gone into liquidation, the mortgagee claimed under the attornment to distrain for a year's rent:—Held, that the attornment clause was a mere device for making the chattel subject to the mortgage without a bill of sale, and, being a fraud upon the bankruptcy laws, an injunction must be granted to restrain him from proceeding with his distress. Thompson, In re, Williams, Ex parte, 47 L. J., Bk. 26; 7 Ch. D. 138; 37 L. T. 764; 26 W. R. 274—C. A.

A. mortgaged to B. the lease of a house and two policies of assurance to secure 250*l.*, with interest at 10*l.* per cent., and after covenanting to pay the interest, 25*l.*, the rent reserved by the lease. 115*l.*, and the premiums on the policies, 32*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, he attorned tenant from year to year to B., the mortgagee, at the yearly rent of 175*l.*, which sum exceeded the amount of the interest, the landlord's rent, and the premiums by 2*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* A. having become bankrupt, the mortgagee distrained under the attornment clause for 175*l.*, as for a year's rent due, notwithstanding that the interest, the landlord's rent, and the premiums had all been duly paid, and seized goods upon the premises belonging to a third party:—Held, that, notwithstanding the difference in the amounts, the attornment clause was intended to secure the interest, the landlord's rent, and the premiums, and nothing more, and that these having all been duly paid, the distress was unlawful. Secus, if the object of the attornment clause had been expressed to be for enabling the recovery of the principal as well. Hampson v. Fellows, 37 L. J., Ch. 694; L. R. 6 Eq. 575; 19 L. T. 6.

By a receivership deed executed contemporaneously with a mortgage in fee, which it recited, the mortgagor and mortgagee appointed a receiver, and constituted him their agent and attorney to receive the rents of the mortgaged property, and to use such remedies by way of entry and distress as should be requisite for that purpose. By the same deed the mortgagor attorned as tenant from year to year to the receiver, and there was a proviso that, if default should be made in payment of the mortgage-money or interest at the times appointed, the mortgagee might enter and avoid the tenancy created by the attornment. There was also a proviso that nothing therein contained should lessen the rights, powers, or remedies of the mortgagee under the mortgage. On the mortgagor being found bankrupt:—Held, that the relation of landlord and tenant had been created between the receiver and mortgagor by the receivership deed, and that the receiver was entitled to distrain, and take the goods which had belonged to the mortgagor on the mortgaged premises. Jolly v. Arbuthnot, 4 De G. & J. 224; 28 L. J., Ch. 547; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 7 W. R. 532.

Held, secondly, that the express power of distress was not a power in gross, but one annexed to the tenancy, and that the distress was valid. Ib.

The deed could not operate as a grant of a rent-charge, as the mortgagor had no estate in him to create such a right. Ib.

B., being mortgagor in possession, executed a mortgage on the 12th of September, 1866, of the premises to his bankers to secure the repayment with interest of certain advances to be made by them. The mortgage was by indenture between B. and his bankers, but was never executed by them: the deed recited the previous mortgage (which was in fee), and by it B. conveyed all the premises comprised in the recited mortgage to his bankers, in fee, upon trust that they should, either immediately or at any time, sell them, "and, as a further security for the principal and interest for the time being due from B. to them, B. did thereby attorn and become tenant to them, their heirs and assigns, as and from the date thereof, of such of the premises thereby conveyed as were in his occupation, for and during the term of ten years, if that security should so long continue, at the yearly rent of 800*l.*, to be paid on the 1st of October, the first yearly rent to be payable on the 1st of October then next. Provided that, notwithstanding anything therein contained, and without any notice or demand of possession, it should be lawful for the bankers, their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, before or after the execution of the trusts of sale, to enter upon the mortgaged premises, or any part thereof, and to eject B. or any person claiming through him, and to determine the term of ten years, notwithstanding any lease that might have been granted by B." The bankers made the stipulated advances, and B. continued in occupation of the premises; and on the 15th of October, 1866, they distrained for the first year's rent:—Held, first, that the intention of the parties, as evidenced by the deed, was to create a tenancy at will only, and not a term of ten years; that, a deed being therefore unnecessary, the tenancy was created by the assent of the parties and the occupation under it, and that the fact that the bankers had not executed the deed was immaterial. Morton v. Woods, 18 L. T. 791. Affirmed, 9 B. & S. 632; 38 L. J., Q. B. 81; L. R. 4 Q. B. 293; 17 W. R. 414—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that, the parties having agreed that the relation of landlord and tenant should be established between them, the mortgagor was estopped from setting up that the mortgagees had no legal reversion; and that it made no difference that the fact of the mortgagor having only the equity of redemption appeared on the face of the deed; and that the distress was therefore lawful. Ib.

A mortgage deed contained an attornment clause whereby A. (the mortgagor) attorned and became tenant from year to year to B. (the mortgagee) for and in respect of the mortgaged premises, at the yearly rent of 800*l.*, to be paid by equal quarterly payments. And it was thereby agreed that it should be lawful for B., at any time after three months from the date of the mortgage, without giving previous notice of his intention so to do, to enter upon and take possession of the premises whereof A. had attorned tenant, and to determine the tenancy created by the aforesaid attornment. A. filed a liquidation petition, and on the same day a receiver was appointed, who entered into possession of A.'s estate and effects. Notice of the petition and of the appointment of a receiver was sent to B., who two days later, by virtue of the attornment clause, distrained upon the goods and chattels on the mortgaged premises for a half-year's rent then due:—Held, that a tenancy from year to year and not a tenancy at will was created by the attornment clause, and that B. was entitled, under the act of 1869, s. 34, to distrain for the rent due to him from A. at the time of filing the liquidation petition. Morton v. Woods (L. R. 4 Q. B. 293) explained. Queen's Benefit Building Society, Ex parte, or Blakey, Ex parte, Threlfall, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 318; 16 Ch. D. 274; 44 L. T. 74; 29 W. R. 128—C. A.

A limited company gave, in 1875, a mortgage to its bankers for its account current, by covenant to surrender its copyhold works, and by the mortgage deed the company became tenant to the bankers at the rent of 5,000*l.* No surrender of the copyholds was made. On the 16th July, 1877, the bankers sent an auctioneer to distrain for 10,000*l.*, being two years' rent. The auctioneer, on the same day, saw the managing director of the company, gave him formal notice of distraint, and by arrangement with him employed two workmen of the company to keep possession of the chattels distrained. On the 18th July, the company requested the bankers not to proceed to an immediate sale, to which the bankers assented, and the two men remained in possession. On the 19th July a petition was presented for winding up the company; and on the 28th July a winding-up order was made. By arrangement with the liquidator, the men went out of possession in October, and in November the bulk of the chattels was sold by the liquidator without prejudice to the rights of the bankers, and realised less than 5,000*l.*:—Held, that the attornment clause created the relation of landlord and tenant; that, there being no ground for saying that the rent of 5,000*l.* was so unreasonable as to be fraudulent, the mortgagees had the same rights of distress as any other landlord; and that, as the value of the chattels sold was less than one year's rent, on the mortgagees abandoning all claim to the chattels remaining unsold, the proceeds of sale must go to them. Stockton Iron Furnace Co., In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 417; 10 Ch. D. 335; 40 L. T. 19; 27 W. R. 433.

Held, also, that the doctrine of reputed ownership had no application, as a distress does not make the landlord the owner of the goods distrained. Ib.

And see Jackson, Ex parte, Bowes, In re, 14 Ch. D. 725; 43 L. T. 272; 28 W. R. 523—C. A.

—— Death of Mortgagor—Payment of Interest by Heir—Inference of Tenancy.]—Where a mortgage of a freehold farm and chattels contained an attornment clause by the mortgagor, and the mortgagor died, the court refused to infer an agreement for a new tenancy at will by the mortgagor's son—entitling the mortgagee to distrain—from the fact of the son having entered as heir-at-law and for six years paid the interest on the mortgage, he (the son) having paid it as interest and in ignorance of the attornment clause. Scobie v. Collins, 64 L. J., Q. B. 10; [1895] 1 Q. B. 375; 15 R. 6; 71 L. T. 775.

—— To Second Mortgagee.]—An attornment by a mortgagor to a second mortgagee is valid, notwithstanding the fact that the mortgagor has already attorned tenant to the first mortgagee of the same property. And, if the amount of the rents fixed by the two attornment clauses is a fair rent of the property, so that there is no fraud on the bankruptcy law, valid distresses can be levied by both mortgagees after the commencement of the bankruptcy of the mortgagor. Morton v. Woods (L. R. 4 Q. B. 293), explained and followed. Punnett, Ex parte, Kitchin, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 212; 16 Ch. D. 226; 44 L. T. 226; 29 W. R. 129.

—— Bills of Sale Act.]—Sect. 6 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1878 (enacting that every attorney whereby a power of distress is given, or agreed to be given, by any person to any other person by way of security for any debt or advance shall be deemed to be a bill of sale, within the meaning of the act, of any personal chattels which may be seized or taken under such power of distress), and s. 9 of the Bills of Sale Act, 1882 (by which a bill of sale made or given by way of security for the payment of money by the grantor thereof shall be void unless made in accordance with the form in the schedule), do not render void the ordinary attornment clause contained in mortgages of real property so as to destroy the relation of landlord and tenant created by it between the mortgagee and mortgagor. Mumford v. Collier, 59 L. J., Q. B. 552; 25 Q. B. D. 279; 38 W. R. 716.

Account.]—In taking the account in a foreclosure action between first mortgagee and second mortgagee and mortgagor, an attornment clause in his mortgage deed will not render the first mortgagee liable to account on the footing of mortgagee in possession in respect of the rent reserved by the attornment clause. Stanley v. Grundy, 52 L. J., Ch. 248; 22 Ch. D. 478; 48 L. T. 606; 31 W. R. 315.

5. Ejectment.

Generally.]—Court refused to interfere by injunction to prevent a mortgagee from pursuing his legal remedy to get possession of the mortgaged premises. Davies v. Williams, 7 Jur. 663.

With Foreclosure.]—Mortgagee is not precluded from bringing an ejectment at law at the same time he has bill of foreclosure depending here. Booth v. Booth, 2 Atk. 343.

Mortgagee may bring ejectment and bill to foreclose. Garforth v. Bradley, 2 Ves. 678.

7 Geo. 2, c. 20.]—A mortgagor, in order to entitle himself to the benefit, in a court of law, of the 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1, must become a defendant in the action of ejectment. Where he is not such defendant the court will not interfere. Doe d. Hurst v. Clifton, 4 A. & E. 814; 2 H. & W. 285; 6 L. J., K. B. 274.

Condition of Staying.]—In ejectment by a mortgagee, the court, or a judge, can include, as a condition of an order for a stay of proceedings, the payment of the costs of an abortive attempt at the sale under a power. Dowle v. Neale, 10 W. R. 627.

After Receiver and Decree for Sale.]—A second incumbrancer having obtained the appointment of a receiver, and a decree for a sale, without making the first incumbrancer a party, a petition by the latter for a reference to ascertain priorities, and for the receiver to keep down the interest, refused, on the ground that the petitioner had commenced a suit for the same purpose, and had delayed it; but leave was given to bring an ejectment. Brooks v. Greathed, 1 J. & W. 176.

Waiver of Default—Restraint of Ejectment.]—Agreement in writing not to call in a mortgage for two years, the mortgagor fulfilling his covenants. On one occasion, within two years, interest was not paid on the day, and the mortgagee shortly afterwards, after giving notice that he was no longer bound by the agreement, demanded and received payment of the interest and incidental costs:—Held, a waiver of the default, and injunction granted to restrain an ejectment brought within the two years. Langridge v. Payne, 2 J. & H. 423; 7 L. T. 23; 10 W. R. 726.

Statute of Limitations.]—A legal mortgage of freehold land in 1856; no possession by the mortgagee, and no payment of principal or interest to him nor any acknowledgment of his title. In 1870 a bill by the mortgagee for redemption or foreclosure; in 1874 a decree nisi for redemption or foreclosure; and in 1877 an order absolute for foreclosure. In 1878 an action by the mortgagee to recover possession of the land:—Held, that, although brought more than twenty years after the date of the mortgage deed, the action was not barred by the Statutes of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27 & 1 Vict. c. 28). Pugh v. Heath, 51 L. J., Q. B. 367; 7 App. Cas. 235; 46 L. T. 321; 30 W. R. 553—H. L. (E.)

Semble, per Earl Cairns, that the action being brought by one who had become absolute owner of the land under the foreclosure decree was an action as to which the right to bring it must be taken to have accrued within s. 2 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, at the date of that decree; and that s. 3 of that act, in defining when the right shall be deemed to have accrued, is not necessarily exhaustive, or otherwise inconsistent with this view. Ib.

—— Evidence.]—In an ejectment by a mortgagee against a mortgagor, to recover a house, he gave in evidence the mortgage deed (which included the house and some other property), and judgment in ejectment for the mortgaged property obtained in 1847; and shewed that a paper (suggested to have been the declaration in ejectment) was, in that year, served on the mortgagor, and that from 1847 the mortgagor, who had till then been in possession of all the property, only held the house:—Held, that there was no evidence of possession by the mortgagee, or of the creation of a new tenancy under him in 1847, so as to prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Thorp v. Facey, 1 H. & R. 678; 35 L. J., C. P. 349; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 741.

Practice—Ord. III. r. 6—Ord. XIV.]—A mortgage deed contained a clause by which, for the purpose of securing the punctual payment of the interest, the mortgagor attorned tenant to the mortgagee, and the mortgagee had a power of re-entry for default in payment. Default having been made, the mortgagee commenced an action for the recovery of the premises, and applied for judgment under Ord. XIV.:—Held, that the mortgagor was a tenant whose term had expired, or had been duly determined by notice to quit, within the meaning of Ord. III. r. 6 (F.), and the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Daubuz v. Lavington (13 Q. B. D. 347), approved and followed. Hall v. Comfort, 56 L. J., Q. B. 185; 18 Q. B. D. 11; 55 L. T. 550; 35 W. R. 48. S. P., Daubuz v. Lavington, 53 L. J., Q. B. 283; 13 Q. B. D. 347; 51 L. T. 206; 32 W. R. 772.

1. RIGHT TO.

One of Several Mortgagees.] — One of several mortgagees can maintain an action to foreclose the mortgage, making the others co-defendants if they are unwilling to be joined as co-plaintiffs, or have done some act precluding them from being plaintiffs. Luke v. South Kensington Hotel Co., 48 L. J., Ch. 361; 11 Ch. D. 121; 40 L. T. 638; 27 W. R. 514—C. A. See also cases, post, R, 1, b., col. 1817.

Conveyance on Trust, with Power of Sale.]—Conveyance of real estate upon trust to secure the payment of advances made upon the security thereof, with a power of sale, held not to entitle the mortgagee to a decree for foreclosure. Sampson v. Pattison, 1 Hare, 533.

Purchaser.]—A. mortgaged three houses (23, 26 and 27) to B., and afterwards contracted to sell 23 (one of the houses) to C.; C. paid the purchase-money to A. under the contract, but without obtaining a conveyance, and with constructive notice of the prior mortgage to B.; C. afterwards paid off what was due to B. upon his mortgage, and, having taken a transfer of the mortgage, filed a bill against the devisee of A. and several mortgagees under subsequent mortgages made by A., which included the houses 26 and 27 and other property, and obtained a decree for the specific performance by the devisees of A. of the contract of sale as to the house 23, and for successive foreclosure of all subsequent mortgagees and the devisees of A., in default of the redemption of the houses 26 and 27. Sober v. Kemp, 6 Hare, 155, 160.

Equitable Mortgagee.]—An equitable mortgagee, as of right, is entitled to a foreclosure, and not to a sale. Cox v. Toole, 20 Beav. 145.

An equitable mortgagee is entitled to a conveyance and foreclosure, unless the mortgagor requires a sale, and will make the proper deposit. Underwood v. Joyce, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 566.

Mortgagee by Deposit.]—The proper remedy for an equitable mortgagee with a deposit of title deeds is by a decree for foreclosure, and not a sale. James v. James, 42 L. J., Ch. 386; L. R. 16 Eq. 153; 21 W. R. 522.

—— Without Memorandum.]—The right of an equitable mortgagee by deposit without memorandum is foreclosure, not sale. Semble v. Wilson, 5 N. R. 395.

—— With or without Memorandum.]—The relief to which an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds with or without a memorandum of deposit is entitled is foreclosure. Backhouse v. Charlton, 8 Ch. D. 444; 26 W. R. 504.

—— With Memorandum to execute Legal Mortgage.]—Where there is a mortgage by deposit of deeds, and the memorandum states an agreement to execute a legal mortgage, a decree on a bill to enforce the security will not direct a sale, but foreclosure; but if there is no memorandum a sale will be directed. London Monetary Advance, &c. Co. v. Brown, 12 L. T. 199; 13 W. R. 490.

When a bill is filed for foreclosure or sale by an equitable mortgagee by deposit, accompanied by a memorandum of agreement to execute a legal mortgage, the court will not decree a legal sale, but will order the execution of a legal mortgage, with due provision for the foreclosure of such legal mortgage when executed. Yeatman v. Reed, 36 L. J., Ch. 136; 15 L. T. 349; 15 W. R. 168.

Where a deposit of title deeds was accompanied by a memorandum containing an express stipulation that the depositor would, if required, execute a mortgage, upon a claim to obtain the benefit of the security, the depositee was held entitled to a decree for foreclosure. Moore v. Perry, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 126.

—— Suit by, against Bankrupt's Trustee.]—An equitable mortgagee, by deposit of title deeds, having commenced an action for foreclosure against the trustee of a bankrupt's estate, the Court of Appeal declined to interfere under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 72. Pannell, or Pennell, Ex parte, England, In re, 47 L. J., Bk. 21; 6 Ch. D. 335; 37 L. T. 450; 26 W. R. 194.

Person standing in Shoes of Equitable Mortgagee.]—Two promissory notes being given, accompanied by a memorandum and deposit of title deeds, to remain as a security for both sums, judgments are entered up against the drawer; the acceptor of the notes and depositee of the debts transfers his interest by a mortgage on the premises comprised in the deeds, in which the drawer confirms and the acceptor releases. Upon a foreclosure claim by the transferee, and the question whether the transfer was not a separate transaction, and therefore came after the judgment debts:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to foreclosure, and stood in the shoes of the first equitable mortgagee. Neve v. Hodges, 2 W. R. 315.

Pledgee of Personal Chattels.]—The doctrine that an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds is entitled to foreclosure does not extend to a pledgee of personal chattels. Carter v. Wake, 46 L. J., Ch. 841; 4 Ch. D. 605.

Personal Obligation with Deposit.]—When a personal obligation is given to pay a sum of money advanced to a party, accompanied by a deposit of copies of court rolls, a foreclosure will be decreed, and not a sale. Price v. Curtis, 1 Jur. 233.

Judgment Creditor.—The relief to which a judgment creditor is entitled under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is a foreclosure, and not a sale. Jones v. Bailey, 17 Beav. 582.

A judgment creditor, ranking after a first mortgagee, but prior in date to a further charge and to other judgments, held entitled to a foreclosure, although all the other parties insisted on a sale. Messer v. Boyle, 21 Beav. 559.

Part Owner.]—A person entitled to part only of a sum of money due on mortgage cannot file a bill for a foreclosure of the same part of the mortgaged estate. Palmer v. Carlisle (Earl), 1 Sim. & S. 423.

Two Mortgages, One Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee, having separate mortgages created by the same mortgagor on two different estates, has not the right to foreclose both estates on nonpayment of the aggregate amount of the mortgage debts, but can only foreclose each estate separately on nonpayment of what is secured upon it. Holmes v. Turner, 7 Hare, 367, n. S. P., Smeathman v. Bray, 15 Jur. 1051.

—— Where prior Mortgages.]—A mortgagee of two different estates, each of which was subject to a prior mortgage to distinct mortgagees, was held entitled, as against the mortgagor, to redeem or foreclose either or both of such estates. Pelly v. Wathen, 7 Hare, 351; 18 L. J., Ch. 281; 14 Jur. 9.

Copyhold.]—Before admittance, mortgagee of copyholds may bring bill of foreclosure, and after decree an ejectment for possession of the premises. Sutton v. Stone, 2 Atk. 101.

Annuity out of Lands.]—An annuity is granted out of lands, and made redeemable on payment of a sum of money. The grantor cannot be foreclosed of the land, though he may of the redemption of the annuity. Carnesew v. Arscott, 1 Vern. 209.

Policy of Assurance—Without Power of Sale.]—Where a policy of assurance on the life of the mortgagor was, upon a further advance being made, assigned as a collateral security, with a declaration of trust that the mortgagee should stand possessed of the moneys to be received under the policy upon trust to pay his debt, &c., and without any power of sale; the court held this declaration to be a ground for excluding the right of sale which the mortgagee would otherwise have had, but allowed the mortgagee to foreclose, retaining the policy; the court observing that it would have power to interfere if the policy was used for the purpose of obtaining more than the value of the debt. Dyson v. Morris, 1 Hare, 413; 11 L. J., Ch. 241; 6 Jur. 297.

Reversionary Interest in Stock.]—The mortgagee of a reversionary interest in stock in the public funds, with a power of sale, may bring his bill for foreclosure; and is entitled to a decree in the common form for an account, and, in default of payment, for foreclosure. Slade v. Rigg, 3 Hare, 35.

Share in Colliery Partnership.]—The mortgagee of a share in a colliery partnership is entitled to a decree for foreclosure, but he is not entitled to any account of the property paid or distributed to shareholders or partners before he filed his bill, nor is he entitled to contest or call the shareholders to account for their previous management of the colliery, but he is entitled to say that no extra burden shall be thrown on his shares which is not in accordance with some contract or agreement in force at the date of the mortgage. Redmayne v. Foster, 35 Beav. 529.

Sub-demise of Leasehold.]—A mortgage by sub-demise of leasehold property contained an absolute declaration of trust by the mortgagor of his reversion. The mortgagor having refused to convey, the court decreed judgment for foreclosure of the equity of redemption in the premises, and of the reversionary term; but the court refused to make a vesting order as to the reversion until the decree absolute. British Empire Mutual Life Assurance Co. v. Sugden, 47 L. J., Ch. 691; 26 W. R. 631.

After Part Payment on Covenant or Bond.—Where a debt is secured by mortgage, covenant, and bond, if the mortgagee obtain, on the covenant or bond, part payment only, he may go on with his foreclosure suit and foreclose for the remainder. Lockhart v. Hardy, 9 Beav. 349; 15 L. J., Ch. 347; 10 Jur. 532.

On Covenant.]—Although by the mortgage deed no day was fixed for repayment, yet, there being a covenant by the borrower to pay when required to do so, and a covenant by the lender to reconvey upon being repaid, it was held that a bill for foreclosure was maintainable. Balfe v. Lord, 1 Con. & L. 519; 2 Dr. & War. 480; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 648.

Presumption of Equity.]—A court of equity will presume an instrument of this nature, intended as a security for money advanced, to be an ordinary mortgage, and the lender entitled to the usual remedies of a mortgagor, unless the terms of the instrument exclude such a construction. Ib.

Effect of Covenant in Prior Mortgage.]—The plaintiff was transferee of a mortgage on the defendant's property, the original mortgage deed containing a personal covenant by the mortgagee not to proceed for the recovery of the mortgage money until the expiration of a notice. After the transfer the plaintiff made a further advance to the defendant, on the security of a deed further charging the same property, the defendant agreeing that it should not be redeemable until the payment of the whole amount due to the plaintiff. On a bill by the plaintiff, who had not given the notice, praying for an account of what was due on his securities, and for payment or foreclosure:—Held, that, assuming the covenant as to notice to affect the right to foreclose the original mortgage, it did not affect the plaintiff's rights under the subsequent mortgage; and that, as the defendant had precluded himself by his agreement from being admitted to redeem the subsequent without also redeeming the prior mortgage, the plaintiff was entitled to the relief which he asked for. Haywood v. Gregg, 24 W. R. 157.

After Default of Interest.]—In a mortgage of leaseholds there was a proviso for redemption in case the principal should be paid at the expiration of five years, with interest half-yearly in the meantime, at 5*l.* per cent. Default having been made in payment of the interest, a bill of foreclosure was filed, although the period for payment of the principal had not arrived:—Held, that, the condition having been broken, the mortgagee was entitled to a decree of foreclosure, notwithstanding he had taken possession of the property, and had realised, by sale of a portion of it, more than enough to cover the interest due. Edwards v. Martin, 25 L. J., Ch. 284; 4 W. R. 219.

Equity of Redemption Purchased by first Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee having instituted an action for foreclosure of a mortgage against the mortgagor, making a second mortgagee party, during the pendency of an action purchased the equity of redemption:—Held, that, the intention being apparent upon the deeds not to let in the second mortgagee as first mortgagee, such second mortgagee could only foreclose on terms of paying off the amount secured by the first mortgage. Adams v. Angell, 25 W. R. 139. Affirmed, 46 L. J., Ch. 352; 5 Ch. D. 634; 36 L. T. 334—C. A.

Mortgage for Term and Trust for Sale of Fee.]—Where money is secured by mortgage for a term, and by trust for sale of the fee, the mortgagee, if he files a bill praying for a sale only, is not entitled to foreclose the fee, nor, unless he amends his bill, to foreclose the term. Kerrick v. Saffery, 7 Sim. 371; 4 L. J., Ch. 162.

Notwithstanding Notice to Pay off, or Decree for Redemption.]—Until the mortgagee is actually paid off by his own consent, or by a decree of the court, he retains the character of mortgagee with all the rights incident to it, and may file a bill for foreclosure notwithstanding a notice by the mortgagor to pay off the mortgage, and even notwithstanding a decree for redemption. Grugeon v. Gerrard, 4 Y. & C. 119.

Under Assignment.]—A. mortgaged to B., who filed a bill of foreclosure, and B., pending the suit, assigned to C., who mortgaged to D., and became insolvent. D. filed a supplemental bill, to have the benefit of the suit for foreclosure:—Held, that he was entitled to such relief. Coles v. Forrest, 10 Beav. 552.

Right to Stand in place of Assignor.]—After decree in a suit by a second mortgagee to redeem the first and foreclose the subsequent mortgagees, one of the latter assigned his interest in the premises to A., who filed a bill against all the parties in the first suit, praying to have the benefit of that suit, and also, to redeem the mortgages prior to his own and foreclose the others. This bill was dismissed with costs against all the defendants except the assignor, in whose place A. was declared to be entitled to stand in the further prosecution of the first suit. Booth v. Creswicke, 8 Sim. 352.

Between Heir and Executor.]—The heir of the mortgagee forecloses the mortgagor, the executor being no party. Upon a bill by the executor against the heir of the mortgagee and the mortgagor, the land was decreed to the executor: but, if the executor of the mortgagee, after a foreclosure by the heir, brings a bill to have the benefit of the mortgage, the heir, if he thinks fit, may take the benefit of the foreclosure to himself, paying the executor the mortgage money and interest. Clerkson v. Bowyer, 2 Vern. 67.

Further Advance on Mortgaged Realty, Covenant and Assignment of Policy.]—The mortgagee of a real estate made a further advance, and took, as security for the same, a further charge upon the mortgaged premises, the covenant of the mortgagor for payment, and an assignment of a policy of assurance on the life of the mortgagor, upon trust to receive the moneys to become payable on the policy, and thereout first to pay the expenses of the trust, then to apply the residue towards payment of the mortgage debt, or so much thereof as should remain due, and subject thereto upon trust for the mortgagor. Upon the bill of the mortgagee praying a sale of the policy, and payment by the mortgagor of so much of the debt as the proceeds of the sale should be insufficient to pay, or in default that the mortgagor might be foreclosed :—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled only to the usual decree for payment or foreclosure of the real estate, and not to a decree for the sale of the policy ; but that he was entitled to retain the policy upon the terms of the trust, notwithstanding the foreclosure of the real estate. Dyson v. Morris, 1 Hare, 413 ; 11 L. J., Ch. 241 ; 6 Jur. 297.

Cancelling Mortgage.]—Letters, which purported to cancel a mortgage, operating neither by way of gift nor as valid declarations of trust, the plaintiffs, mortgagee's executors, were entitled to the usual decree of foreclosure. Scales v. Maude, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 533 ; 3 W. R. 527.

Trusts of Will.]—A testator, by his will, gave to trustees a term of 500 years in real estate, upon trust to levy and raise 2,400*l.*, and when so raised upon trust to place out the same at interest upon government or real security, and call in and place out the same from time to time as they should think proper. In 1828 the trustees mortgaged the term for 2,400*l.*, and signed a receipt for the money. In 1845 the executors of the original mortgagee transferred the mortgage to C. and D., who in 1848 filed a bill for foreclosure. One of the defendants, who under the will was entitled to a portion of the 2,400*l.*, raised a question as to the trustees having ever received the sum, which it was alleged had been paid to other parties, and contended that the term was consequently not properly charged :—Held, that under the trusts of the will the trustees had an implied power to give a receipt for the money, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree for foreclosure. Locke v. Lomas, 5 De G. & Sm. 326 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 503 ; 16 Jur. 813.

In this case, if the mortgagee had paid the money to the trustees, he would not have been bound to see to the application of it ; and, if his mortgage deed was regular on the face of it, the transferees would not have been affected by any breach of trust in which the trustees and the mortgagee might have been implicated. Ib.

Bills Dishonoured, after Receipt given and Deeds handed over.]—Where there was a mortgage payable in 1844, with interest only in the meantime, and in 1839 the mortgagor paid the principal by cheque and gave two bills, accepted by himself, but drawn by a third party, for the arrears of interest, and thereupon the following receipt was executed by the mortgagee : "London, 23rd December, 1839. Received the sum of 7,000*l.* in cash, and two bills of exchange as under for 3,120*l.*, drawn by C. & Co. of M., upon and accepted by the said C. the mortgagor, and which cheque for 7,000*l.* and bills for 3,120*l.*, making together 10,120*l.*, are in full of principal and interest due to me upon a mortgage of C.'s freehold property in K. and S. for 10,000*l.*, and I do hereby undertake, whenever required, to execute a conveyance of the said property. (Signed) T." The deeds were delivered up to the mortgagor together with this memorandum, but the estate was not reconveyed. The cheque was paid, but the bills were dishonoured :—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled against the assignees of the bankrupt mortgagor to have the deeds redelivered up, and to have a foreclosure of the estate. Teed v. Carruthers, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 31 ; 6 Jur. 987.

For Costs only.]—Where the debt in the nature of a mortgage debt is paid off, the mortgagee, entitled to a balance consisting of costs only, cannot have a decree of foreclosure in default of payment of such a demand for costs only, with costs. Drought v. Redford, 1 Moll. 572.

Practice—Equitable Defence—Opening Signed Accounts.]—Upon a proper case for opening signed accounts made by a mortgagor by his answer and evidence in a foreclosure suit in issue before the 2nd November, 1875, the court has power under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24, sub-ss. 2 and 3, to entertain this equitable defence in the same manner as if a cross bill, or, under the new procedure, a counter-claim had been filed for the purpose. Eyre v. Hughes, 45 L. J., Ch. 395 ; 2 Ch. D. 148 ; 34 L. T. 211 ; 24 W. R. 597.

2. Who Bound by.

Puisne Mortgagee not a Party.] — Puisne mortgagee not bound by an account taken in a foreclosure cause, to which he was not a party. Dick v. Butler, 1 Moll. 42.

Subsequent mortgagees of equity of redemption are bound by decree of foreclosure, though not parties. Winchester (Bishop) v. Paine, 11 Ves. 194 ; 8 R. R. 131.

Mortgagor Tenant for Life of Moneys secured by Second Mortgage.]—A mortgagor being a defendant to a claim for foreclosure, in that character, and who, in such character, has a right given to him to redeem, is bound by the foreclosure, in respect of an interest which he may have as tenant for life under a settlement made of moneys secured by a second mortgage of the same estate, although such latter interest be not stated on the claim. Bromitt v. Moor, 9 Hare (App.) xxxix. n.

Judgment after Foreclosure.]—Judgment confessed after bill of foreclosure is ineffectual against plaintiff. Metcalfe v. Pulvertoft, 2 V. & B. 207 ; 13 R. R. 63.

Issue.]—Where settlement, on marriage, is made of an estate subject to a mortgage, if the mortgagee forecloses the husband and wife, it will bind, though issue is afterwards born. Platt v. Sprigg, 2 Vern. 304.

Administrator Pendente Lite.] — Decree of foreclosure against an administrator pendente lite, plaintiff knowing limited character in which administrator represented mortgagor, and that there were persons claiming the beneficial title to estate, not parties to suit, merely forecloses administrator pendente lite. Sale directed by decree of foreclosure to be made in a month, on the consent of administrator pendente lite ; not binding on persons beneficially entitled to the estate, not parties in the suit. Ellis v. Deane, Beat. 5.

Purchaser under Second Mortgage made pending Suit.]—Plaintiff in redemption suit became insolvent after decree, but before default in payment. The bill was dismissed after default, without bringing the assignee before the court:—Held, that the foreclosure was good against a purchaser under a second mortgage made before the insolvency, but pending the suit, of which the purchaser and his vendor had notice, though they were not parties thereto. Wood v. Surr, 2 W. R. 683.

Creditors.]—Creditors of mortgagor obtaining judgments between first and second mortgages, who did not come in to take the benefit of the decree of foreclosure, are bound by the decree, and cannot follow the estate in the hands of a purchaser taking his title under the decree. Steele v. Philips, Beat. 188.

Subsequent Judgment — Creditors.]—M., in 1846, mortgaged some property to the plaintiffs for securing a debt. In 1857 the plaintiffs assigned to trustees, for their creditors, this and another debt due from M., and all securities for the same (except the mortgage of 1846, and the premises thereby assigned, and the benefit and advantage to arise therefrom). The surplus was to be paid to the plaintiffs, and there was a proviso that they were to have the property comprised in the mortgage for their own benefit:—Held, that, as against a subsequent judgment creditor of M., the plaintiffs could maintain a bill to foreclose the mortgage. Morley v. Morley, 25 Beav. 253.

Beneficiaries.]—The mortgagor of a mortgaged estate devised it to trustees upon trust to sell, with a power to give receipts to purchasers. A bill of foreclosure being filed by the mortgagee against the trustees only:—Held, that a decree in this suit would not bind the cestui que trusts under the will of the mortgagor. Chamberlain v. Thacker, 18 L. J., Ch. 489; 13 Jur. 785; 14 Id. 190.

Mortgagee of Term by Executor—Right of Beneficiaries.]—A. having a term in a business for twenty-one years, by will directs that 2,000*l.* shall be raised out of the profits for his daughter and her children, and made B. executor. B. mortgages the term:—Decreed, the daughter and her children should redeem or be foreclosed; but this decree was reversed by the House of Lords. Humble v. Bill, 2 Vern. 444.

Person Disclaiming Interest.]—The court will decree a foreclosure against defendants who disclaim any interest, instead of simply dismissing the bill as against them. Johnson v. Clarke, 3 W. R. 193. S. P., Perkin v. Stafford, 10 Sim. 562.

3. Against Crown.

Part of Mortgagor's Interest vested in Crown.]—Where part of the mortgagor's interest is vested in the Crown, the court will not decree foreclosure in respect thereof, but will give the plaintiff liberty to apply in chambers for a sale. Bartlett v. Rees, 40 L. J., Ch. 599; L. R. 12 Eq. 395, 459; 24 L. T. 779; 25 Id. 373; 19 W. R. 1046.

Intestacy — Illegitimacy — Bare Trustee.]—Where the fee-simple of estates mortgaged by an intestate, illegitimate, was not worth the mortgage money:—Held, that the mortgagor could not on that account as against the Crown, entitled to the equity of redemption, be deemed a bare trustee for the mortgagee within 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 23, s. 2; the estate ordered to be sold in the administration of assets, the mortgagee to become a purchaser, with liberty to apply to the Crown for a grant of the fee. Rogers v. Maule, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 4.

Death without Heirs.]—The mortgagor having died entitled to an equitable inheritance only, and without heirs, a sale ordered, and the attorney-general dismissed. Prescott v. Tyler, 2 Jur. 870.

Mortgagee by deposit may sell against the Crown, when the mortgagor has died without heirs. S. C., 1 Jur. 470.

Where Mortgagor Attainted.]—Where mortgagor was attainted, the court would not decree a foreclosure against the Crown, but directed the mortgagee should hold and enjoy till the Crown thought proper to redeem the estate. Powell v. Knowles, 2 Atk. 224.

Conviction of Felony — Jurisdiction.]—The title deeds of a leasehold estate were deposited with bankers, by way of equitable mortgage, for securing the balance of a running account. The party making the deposit was subsequently convicted of felony. A bill was filed by the bankers, claiming to be equitable mortgagees by virtue of the deposit, against the attorney-general for a sale of the property:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction, the legal estate being in the Crown, to decree a sale of the estate, nor any power to compel a conveyance by the Crown of the legal estate, but only to declare the plaintiffs as equitable mortgagees, entitled to hold possession of the property until the Crown should think fit to redeem. Hodge v. Att.-Gen., 3 Y. & C. 342; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 28.

—— Equitable Mortgage of Leasehold.]—In a foreclosure suit by an equitable mortgagee of leaseholds, where the mortgagor has been convicted of felony, the court will order a sale, but has no jurisdiction to direct the Crown to convey. Hancock v. Att.-Gen., 33 L. J., Ch. 661; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 557; 10 L. T. 222; 12 W. R. 569.

—— Sale with Condition.]—The mortgagor having been convicted of felony, the mortgaged premises were set up to be sold under the decree, subject to the condition that conveyance not to be executed by the attorney-general, nor the record of conviction to be made up. Anon., 4 Ir. Eq. R. 701.

4. Against Infants.

a. In General, 1716.
b. Decree Absolute, or Day to shew Cause, 1718.
c. Sale when Ordered, 1720.

a. In General.

Error.]—An infant may be foreclosed subject only to error. Winchester (Bishop) v. Beavor, 3 Ves. 316. See 8 R. R. 132, n.

In a foreclosure against an infant, though the infant has six months after he comes of age to shew cause, &c., yet he cannot ravel into the account, nor even redeem, but only shew an error in the decree. Mallack v. Galton, 3 P. Wms. 352.

Second Mortgagee.]—A. has a first mortgage, and B. a second, and, subject to these mortgages, the estate is settled on C. for life, remainder on D., an infant. A. brings a bill to foreclose, though B. has not the like remedy over against D., who because of his infancy cannot be foreclosed; yet B. must redeem A. in six months, or be foreclosed. Draper v. Clarendon (Earl), 2 Vern. 518.

Property Insufficient to pay Debt.]—When, in a foreclosure suit against an infant heiress-at-law of the mortgagor, the property was insufficient to satisfy the mortgage debt, the court, at the instance of the plaintiff, and upon his offering to pay the defendant's costs, made an immediate and absolute foreclosure decree. Bennett v. Harfoot, 24 L. T. 86; 19 W. R. 428.

Equitable Mortgage — Death before Legal Estate Conveyed.]—Where a person creates an equitable mortgage, and dies intestate before he has conveyed the legal estate, leaving an infant heir, the equitable mortgagee can obtain only a modified decree against this infant. Oldaker v. Petford, 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 47.

Interest on Interest.]—Bill to foreclose an infant. By decree it is sent to a master to see what due. Master reports what is due for principal, interest and costs. Whether upon a subsequent order to carry on interest, the former interest, during the infancy, shall carry interest. Benet v. Edwards, 2 Vern. 392.

Reference when Ordered.]—A reference, on motion, to ascertain what is due to the plaintiff in a foreclosure suit, will not be ordered, unless on the application of all the defendants having a right to redeem, nor if any of the defendants are, through infancy or otherwise, incompetent to admit the right and title of the plaintiff. Lushington v. Price, 9 Sim. 651; 8 L. J., Ch. 254.

Decree only with Consent of Mortgagee.]—Upon a bill of foreclosure against an infant entitled to the equity of redemption, no sale will be ordered, nor any other decree than the common decree of foreclosure made, unless by the consent of the mortgagee. Adkins v. Graves, 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 62.

Defence—Statute of Limitations.]—In a foreclosure suit the defendants (some of whom were minors) by their answer relied on the Statute of Limitations, as disentitling the plaintiff to more than six years' interest. In the progress of the cause an order was made on consent, in pursuance of which a payment was made to the plaintiff on account of his demand:—Held, that, although such payment would have defeated the bar of the statute set up by the answer, had the transaction taken place between adults, yet as the interests of minors were concerned the payment ought to be considered as made without prejudice to the rights and subject to the equities of the parties in the cause, and ought not therefore to be permitted to defeat the defence relied upon by the answer. Thwaites v. M'Donough, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 97.

Practice—Answer on Coming of Age.]—Where a decree has been made against an infant defendant, who put in the common answer by his guardian, the general rule is that such defendant, on coming of age, has the privilege of putting in a new answer stating a different case, and of going into evidence in support of that case. The privilege does not extend to foreclosure suits. Kelsall v. Kelsall, 2 Myl. & K. 409.

Rehearing.]—An order had been obtained on an ordinary claim for foreclosure. It afterwards appeared that two of the defendants were still infants. The court declined to allow the claim to be set down for rehearing against the infants, but directed a supplemental claim to be filed against them. Scawen v. Nicholson, 22 L. J. Ch. 632; 17 Jur. 369.

b. Decree Absolute, or Day to shew Cause.

Right of Infant.]—An infant defendant in an action to foreclose a legal mortgage is still entitled to have a day given him on which to shew cause against the judgment for foreclosure. Gray v. Bell, 46 L. T. 521; 30 W. R. 606.

An infant cannot be foreclosed without a day to shew cause. But the proper way is to decree a sale, and that binds the infant. Booth v. Rich, 1 Vern. 295.

Lands were mortgaged in fee, subject to which the equity of redemption was settled in strict settlement. The first tenant in tail was a minor:—Held, that in a decree for a foreclosure and sale, at the suit of the mortgagee, a day to shew cause ought not to be given to the minor. Hutton v. Mayne, 3 Jo. & Lat. 584; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 343.

Where the decree is for an immediate sale, and no conveyance of the legal estate is required from a minor defendant, the decree ought not to give him a day to shew cause. Ib.

In a decree for a sale in mortgage cause an infant owner of the equity of redemption is not entitled to a day to shew cause. Hutton v. Mayne, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 343; 3 Jo. & Lat. 586.

Nor is the infant heir or devisee of the mortgagor. Clinton v. Bernard, Dr. 287; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 355.

—— Order for Conveyance by Infant.]—The court will make an order, under the statute 1 Will. 4, c. 47, s. 11, that the infant shall execute the conveyance to the purchaser. Ib.

Right on Attaining Twenty-one.] — Infant devisee of equity of redemption of copyhold, decreed to join in sale at twenty-one, had liberty to shew cause against it when he attained twenty-one. Adams v. Gould. Dick. 443.

A decree of foreclosure and sale against the mortgagor and against an infant, who is entitled under a settlement of the equity of redemption, must give the infant a day to shew cause after he shall have attained his age. Clibborn v. Forstall, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 531.

—— Order for Conveyance by Infant.]—If a decree against an infant give him a day to shew cause, the court will not, before the day given, order him to execute a conveyance to the purchaser under the decree. Ib.

On Coming of Age.]—An infant defendant entitled to a portion of the equity of redemption of lands decreed to be sold in a foreclosure suit was ordered to execute the conveyance to the purchaser. The decree did not give him a day to shew cause on coming of age. Jones v. Ham, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 65.

A decree of foreclosure against an infant must give the infant a day to shew cause against the decree, after he attains twenty-one, notwithstanding the provisions of the act 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 47, ss. 10, 11. Price v. Carrer, 3 Myl. & Cr. 157. Overruling Powys v. Mansfield, 6 Sim. 637; 5 L. J., Ch. 297.

In a decree for foreclosure against the infant heir of an estate subject to an equitable mortgage, the infant ought to be allowed a day to shew cause against the decree on coming of age. Scholefield v. Heafield, 7 Sim. 669. S. C., 8 Sim. 470; 7 L. J., Ch. 4.

In an action by an equitable mortgagee, without any memorandum of deposit of title deeds, against the widow and infant heir-at-law of the mortgagor for foreclosure:—Held, on motion for judgment, the defendants not having appeared, that the infant heir must be ordered to convey the estate when he attained the age of twenty-one years, and that he must have a day to shew cause in the usual way. Price v. Carrer (3 Myl. & Cr. 157) followed. Mellor v. Porter, 53 L. J., Ch. 178; 25 Ch. D. 158; 50 L. T. 49; 32 W. R. 271.

Benefit of Infant.]—Judgment for foreclosure was made absolute against an infant without giving time to shew cause, the mortgagee offering to pay the infant's costs as between solicitor and client, and the guardian of the infant being of opinion that it was for the benefit of the infant that the order should be made, and there being evidence that the mortgage debt greatly exceeded the value of the property. Younge v. Cocker, 32 W. R. 359.

Form.]—Foreclosure against an infant, the decree absolute should repeat the clause nisi, as in the original decree, giving six months after age to shew cause. Williamson v. Gordon, 19 Ves. 114; 12 R. R. 149.

Costs.]—Judgment for an immediate foreclosure absolute against an infant granted, the plaintiffs offering to pay the defendant's costs of the action as between solicitor and client, and the defendant's counsel not asking for liberty to redeem, or that an account should be taken of what was due to the plaintiffs, upon the court being satisfied by evidence that the value of the property was not sufficient to pay the amount of the principal sum due on the mortgage, together with interest and the costs of the action, and that it would be for the benefit of the infant to give judgment in that form. Wolverhampton and Staffordshire Banking Co. v. George, 24 Ch. D. 707.

Where, at the hearing of a foreclosure suit against an infant heir of the mortgagor, it appeared that the property was not worth the money due on the mortgage, and the plaintiff offered to pay the costs of the infant, the court made an order at once for foreclosure absolute against him. Croxon v. Lerer, 12 W. R. 237. S. P., Bennett v. Harfoot, 24 L. T. 86; 19 W. R. 428.

Service of Subpœna.]—An infant, having a day to shew cause against a decree of foreclosure after he attained twenty-one, attained that age, and left the kingdom before he was served, to avoid his creditors; application to serve his clerk in court with the subpœna: Lord Thurlow thought it must be personal service, but, it being again moved upon strong affidavit, it was granted. Elcock v. Glegg, Dick. 764.

c. Sale, when Ordered.

Benefit of Infant.]—Direction for sale of an infant's estate in a foreclosure suit (under circumstances shewing it to be clearly for the benefit of the infant) without giving time to redeem. Mears v. Best, 10 Hare (App.) li.

Where the heir of a mortgagor is an infant, the mortgagee is not entitled to a sale of the estate, unless it appears, upon reference to the master, to be for the benefit of the infant; otherwise the mortgagee is entitled to a foreclosure only. Davis v. Dowding, 2 Keen, 245; 7 L. J., Ch. 169.

—— Without Reference.]—Where, from the facts, the court is able to see that it will be for the benefit of the infant that a sale should take place, it will order a sale without a previous reference to the master. Ib.

—— Inquiry.]—Inquiry directed in case the mortgagees consent to a sale, whether it will be for the benefit of the infant heir of the mortgagor. Mondey v. Mondey, 1 V. & B. 223.

Adversely.]—On a bill for foreclosure, the court refused to direct a sale adversely on application on behalf of infants partially interested in equity of redemption. Farrow v. Rees, 4 Beav. 18; 4 Jur. 1028.

5. Against Lunatics.

Issue directed—As to Validity of Mortgage.]—Where a common foreclosure clause was supported by affidavits of the attesting witnesses to the mortgage deed, and the defendant, who was the heir-at-law of the alleged mortgagor, did not cross-examine the witnesses, but set up by affidavit the insanity of the alleged mortgagor at the time of the alleged mortgage:—Held, that, without instituting a suit of his own to set aside the mortgage, he might have its validity tried by an issue or an ejectment. Jacobs v. Richards, 18 Beav. 300; 5 De G. M. & G. 55; 23 L. J., Ch. 557; 18 Jur. 527; 2 Eq. R. 299.

—— As to Sanity.]—After a bill to foreclose, the mortgagor was found lunatic by inquisition, at a date overreaching the mortgage deed. At the hearing, an issue was directed as to his sanity at the date of the mortgage. Snook v. Watts, 11 Beav. 105; 12 Jur. 444.

Knowledge of Mortgagee.]—A mortgagee held entitled to a foreclosure decree in a suit against the real and personal representative of a mortgagor, who was a lunatic at the time of the mortgage, there being no evidence to shew that the mortgagee knew or took advantage of the lunacy. Campbell v. Hooper, 3 Sm. & G. 153; 24 L. J., Ch. 644; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 670; 3 Eq. R. 727; 3 W. R. 528.

The cases of Snook v. Watts (11 Beav. 105; 12 Jur. 444) and Jacobs v. Richards (18 Beav. 300) observed upon. Ib.

Practice.]—A charge in the bill, that A. was of a weak and feeble understanding approaching almost to idiotcy, was an allegation sufficiently precise (no demurrer being taken) to put in issue that A. was of insane memory; it being proved that A. was incapable of managing himself or his affairs, he was held to be within the saving of the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 14, (Ir.,) c. 8. But this allegation would not have been sufficiently precise on a plea, nor on a bill, if demurred to. The heir of the mortgagor may take advantage of the saving in s. 8 of the statute. Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 280.

6. Against Married Women.

No Time to shew Cause.]—The equity of redemption of a mortgage comes to a feme covert, against whom and her husband a bill is brought to foreclose; the feme covert shall be foreclosed absolutely, and shall have no time to shew cause after the death of her husband. Mallack v. Galton, 3 P. Wms. 352.

Reversionary Interest.]—Assignment by a husband of reversionary interest of his wife, and of a policy of insurance on his own life, to secure a running account to a banking company. The security contained no power of sale, or proviso for redemption. The limitation of the property was upon trust to pay the costs of the assignment and of keeping on foot the policy, and to retain and pay all and every such sum and sums of money as should from time to time be due and owing to the company; and, as to the residue, upon trust to retain and pay the same unto the husband and his wife according to their respective interests therein. On a bill for foreclosure and sale:—Held, that the company was not entitled to either a decree of foreclosure or for sale in respect of the reversionary interest of the wife. Stamford, Spalding and Boston Banking Co. v. Ball, 31 L. J., Ch. 143; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 420; 5 L. T. 594; 10 W. R. 196.

The whole assignment was limited by the trusts and by the direction to "retain"; the trust could only operate, therefore, on the reversionary interest when it fell into possession. Ib.

A mortgage of a wife's reversionary property in court was executed by A. and B. after their marriage, and after the mortgagee had knowledge of the marriage, the agreement having been entered into, and a small part of the mortgage-money paid to B. before her marriage, the court made a decree of foreclosure against the husband and wife. Lewis v. Poole, 3 Giff. 636; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 536; 6 L. T. 709.

Form.]—Decree for foreclosure of the estate of a married woman should be in the ordinary form, and ought not to be made absolute at once, even by consent. Harrison v. Kennedy, 10 Hare (App.) xlv., li.

7. Tenant for Life and Remainderman.

Tenant in Tail abroad.]—Decree of foreclosure against a tenant for life, the tenant in tail being abroad. Fishwick v. Lowe, 1 Cox, 411.

Remainderman's Title vesting long after Decree.]—Where a decree of foreclosure has been made against a tenant for life of an equity of redemption, who afterwards executed the conveyance to a purchaser under the decree, a remainderman whose title did not, until many years after, vest in possession, filing a bill immediately on the death of the tenant for life, not bound by the decree or sale. Blake v. Foster, 2 Ball & B. 574.

Setting aside Title after Twenty Years.]—A remote remainderman of an equity of redemption, filing a bill to redeem immediately after his title vested in possession:—Held, not too late to set aside a title founded on a decree made upwards of twenty years, which was fraudulent and void as against him, and the other persons claiming remainders under the will, and length of time no bar. Eyre v. Dolphin, 2 Ball & B. 387; 12 R. R. 94.

Release of Equity of Redemption by Tenant in Tail.]—Bill of foreclosure against tenant for life and the first remainder in tail. The usual decree made and the time for redemption being elapsed, tenant in tail released the equity of redemption, so that the decree was never made absolute:—Held, binding on those in remainder. Reynoldson v. Perkins, Amb. 564; Dick. 427.

Distribution of Surplus Proceeds of Sale.]—The bill was to redeem or foreclose; it was objected that the defendant was only tenant for life of the equity of redemption, and the remaindermen over were not made parties; court directed a bill to be brought, the defendant to have a sale made, the mortgage debt paid, and the surplus distributed amongst the tenants for life and the remaindermen in proportion according to their respective interests. Thynn v. Ducall, 2 Vern. 117.

Death of Tenant for Life before Hearing.]—Where a mortgagee of a tenant for life of an equity of redemption filed a bill for redemption and foreclosure against the mortgagees in fee and the remaindermen, and the tenant for life died before the hearing of the cause, the bill was dismissed with costs. Riley v. Croydon, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1251; 13 W. R. 223.

Mortgage by Tenant for Life and Exercise of Power to raise Portions.]—A tenant for life of real estates, with a power to charge 20,000*l.* for the portions of younger children, mortgaged his life estate; he covenanted with some of the mortgagees that he would not execute the power without their consent. He subsequently exercised the power for the benefit of his children, and created a term of 1,000 years to secure payment of the 20,000*l.*, and upon the marriage of one of his daughters he appointed 5,000*l.* to her for a portion. The trustees, and also the appointees, had notice of the mortgages and of the covenant entered into by the tenant for life. A common decree of foreclosure was made. Hurst v. Hurst, 16 Beav. 372; 22 L. J., Ch. 538; 1 W. R. 105.

Against Tenant in Tail.]—In 1810 a testator devised his real estates to E. R. in fee, subject to the payment of his debts and legacies, and died in the same year. A legacy of 800*l.* was never paid off. The property consisted of four estates, T., F., P. and C. In 1818, E. R. mortgaged estates T. and C. to W. In 1822, E. R., on his marriage, settled estates T., P. and C., on himself for life, remainder in strict settlement upon the first and other sons, &c., of the marriage; and he covenanted therein against incumbrances. In 1836, E. R. mortgaged F. to L. In 1843, the plaintiff H. registered a judgment against E. R. In 1844, E. R. became insolvent, and C. was appointed his assignee. H., the judgment creditor, filed her bill against all the above incumbrancers, against C., and the first tenant in tail under the settlement, praying to be permitted to redeem prior incumbrances, &c., and that C. should redeem her or be foreclosed:—Held, that both as to pleading and on the merits it was altogether erroneous to foreclose the tenant in tail. Hughes v. Williams, Chappell v. Rees, 3 Mac. & G. 683; 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 16 Jur. 415.

Account.]—Though the general rule of the court is, that where, in a foreclosure suit, the tenant for life is a party, and the accounts directed are fairly taken, such accounts are binding on those in remainder, and they can only be permitted to surcharge and falsify them, yet as, in this case, the decrees were all upon sequestration, and the accounts taken in the absence of every person interested in their being taken fairly, and as some doubts were thrown upon the case, as to the existence of any debt, the remainderman was entitled to have a general account directed. Wrixon v. Vize, 2 Con. & L. 138; 3 Dr. & War. 104; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 173.

8. TRUSTEE IN BANKRUPTCY.

Trustee of Mortgagee against Trustee of Mortgagor.]—The trustee in bankruptcy of a mortgagee can obtain judgment for foreclosure against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, and is not obliged to make his application to the court of bankruptcy. Waddell v. Toleman, 9 Ch. D. 212; 38 L. T. 910; 26 W. R. 802.

Ground of dismissing Bill.]—A bill of foreclosure against the assignees of a bankrupt mortgagor, before the execution of the bargain and sale by the commissioners, will not be dismissed on the ground that the assignees have not any interest that can be the subject of a foreclosure. Bainbridge v. Pinhorn, Buck, 135.

Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 72.]—An equitable mortgagee, by deposit of title deeds, having commenced an action for foreclosure against the trustees of a bankrupt's estate, the Court of Appeal declined to interfere under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, s. 72. Pannell or Pennell, Ex parte, England, In re, 47 L. J., Bk. 21; 6 Ch. D. 335; 37 L. T. 450; 26 W. R. 194.

9. UNDER 7 GEO. 2, C. 20.

Effect of Act.]—The statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, as to foreclosure, gives no new power to courts of equity. Praed v. Hull, 1 Sim. & S. 331.

Application of Act—Submission of Defendant.]—The statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, applies only to simple cases of foreclosure, and not where the bill prays a sale; but, if the defendant submits to such a decree as the plaintiff claims to be entitled to, the court, in the exercise of its general jurisdiction, will make the order upon motion, upon the terms of the defendant paying the costs. Aberdeen v. Chitty, 3 Y. & C. 382; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 30.

Subject Matter of Bill.]—No order, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2, the bill not being confined to mere foreclosure, but including also another subject. Bastard v. Clarke, 7 Ves. 489.

No Decree unless Title admitted.]—The court will not, under statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, make a decree of foreclosure upon motion, where any of the defendants do not admit, though they may not absolutely deny, the plaintiff's title. Roe v. Wardle, 3 Y. & C. 70; 2 Jur. 640.

Infant Defendant.]—Whether the court will not make such a decree against an infant, unless he do more than merely submit his rights and interests to the court, quære. Ib.

A decretal order on foreclosure, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2, requiring the concurrence of all the defendants who are interested in the equity of redemption, cannot be made where one of them is an infant. Lushington v. Price, 9 Sim. 65; 8 L. J., Ch. 254.

A., seised in fee, mortgaged for a term of years, and afterwards devised the mortgaged premises, and died. The mortgagee brought his bill against the devisees, some of whom were infants, for foreclosure:—Held, that the defendants, during the infancy of the devisees, were not entitled to a decretal order on motion, under the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2. Taylor v. Coates, 3 Hare, 263.

Infants Interested.]—Where the equity of redemption of a term was vested in A. as the administrator of his father, although his children, who had an interest in it, were infants, and could not admit the title of the mortgagee in a proceeding under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, the court held that, independently of that statute, A. being administrator and responsible for any undue admission, an order might be made in a foreclosure suit, on motion made by A. admitting the balance due, to the same effect as a decree. Grane v. Mitchell, 10 Sim. 484; 9 L. J., Ch. 171.

Execution—Relief.]—No relief to a mortgagor under the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, the mortgagee being entitled to execution. Amis v. Lloyd, 3 V. & B. 15.

Assignees of Bankrupt.]—Where mortgagor becomes bankrupt, and a bill is filed against him and his assignees, the court will not, on application of assignees alone, make an immediate decree under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2. Garth v. Thomas, 2 Sim. & S. 188; 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 94.

Mortgagor in Contempt.]—Mortgagor, defendant to a bill of foreclosure, being in contempt, cannot obtain the reference on motion, under the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20. Hewitt v. M'Cartney, 13 Ves. 560.

Reference.]—A reference under the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, must proceed upon admission of the principal and interest due upon the mortgage, and the master cannot admit evidence. Huson v. Hewson, 4 Ves. 105.

On motion for reference under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, the court refused to direct master to take into account costs incurred at law, no mention of proceedings at law having been made in the bill; but leave was given to amend bill in that respect, and motion directed to stand over till bill amended. Millard v. Major, 3 Madd. 433.

Defendant to a bill for an account cannot, upon motion immediately after answer, have a reference to the master by analogy to the case of a mortgage by statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, and the case of specific performance according to the practice settled, though the reason of it is questionable. Eldridge v. Porter, 14 Ves. 139.

Order without Answer—Discovery on Affidavit.]—On a motion by a defendant for an immediate decree, in a foreclosure suit, under the statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, or under the jurisdiction of the court, independent of the statute, the order may be made without answer; and, if the bill suggests that the defendant has parted with the equity of redemption, he will be allowed to give the required discovery as to the fact upon affidavit. Piggin v. Cheetham, 2 Hare, 80; 6 Jur. 819.

Ground of resisting Motion.]—A motion by defendant in a foreclosure suit for the ordinary decree under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2, cannot be resisted by the plaintiff on the ground that he has, pending the action, parted with the legal estate; nor (if the action has been entered for trial) on the ground that he desires to stay proceedings, in order to take advantage of a transfer and right of consolidation arising since the entry for trial. Matthews v. Antrobus, 49 L. J., Ch. 80.

Plaintiff's Right to dismiss Action.]—Rule of court, Ord. XXIII. r. 1 (Jud. Act), does not entitle a plaintiff to dismiss his action after it has been entered for trial. Ib.

Staying Proceedings.]—On bill of foreclosure, defendant submitting to same decree as the plaintiff, according to the case made by the bill, would be entitled to at the hearing, may at any time stay all further proceedings in the cause, under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20. Praed v. Hull, 1 Sim. & S. 331.

Discharging Decree.]—A decree on motion under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, cannot be discharged on motion. Cadle v. Fowle, 1 Bro. C. C. 515.

10. Time.

a. Computation, 1725.
b. Enlargement, 1725.
c. Equitable Mortgages, 1729.
d. Where several Defendants, 1730.

a. Computation.

Calendar not Lunar.]—The time granted on a decree of foreclosure shall be computed by the calendar and not by the lunar month. Anon., Barnard. 324.

b. Enlargement.

Rules of Court.]—The rules of court allow mortgagor in foreclosure suit so much time as may be occupied in procuring report of principal, and interest, and costs, and three months from date of that report. Ellis v. Deane, 1 Beat. 16.

Not of course.]—In a foreclosure suit, the order to enlarge the time for payment of the mortgage-money is by no means of course, but may be refused where no excuse for the default is stated, and the security does not appear to be ample. Eyre v. Hanson, 2 Beav. 478; 9 L. J., Ch. 302.

Condition of.]—The usual condition on which it is granted is on payment of interest and costs before the time appointed by the master for payment of the whole; in this case, however, it was ordered that, upon payment of the interest and costs within a month, the time should be enlarged for five months. Ib.

Discretionary.]—Motion to enlarge time for foreclosure is not of course, although interest and costs be paid; and where there is no opposition it is discretionary in court. Quarles v. Knight, 8 Price, 630.

Ground for.]—The slightest ground will induce a court of equity to extend the time of sale in a foreclosure cause. Jessop v. King, 2 Ball & B. 97.

The defendant in a foreclosure suit may obtain an enlargement of the time limited for absolute foreclosure upon slight evidence of the probability of his being able to pay off the mortgage; but the order will only be made upon the terms of his paying a large part of the interest due to the plaintiff within a short specified time, and paying interest upon the aggregate sum found to be due to the plaintiff for principal, interest and costs from the date of the certificate, and the costs of the application, and that, if he fail to pay the specified sum to the plaintiff for interest at the time appointed, he shall be absolutely foreclosed. Holford v. Yates, 1 K. & J. 677.

Where mortgaged premises afford an ample security for the mortgage debt and interest, the court will, when there is a reasonable prospect of the mortgagor being able to discharge the debt, enlarge the time fixed for foreclosure absolute upon immediate payment by the mortgagor to the mortgagee of a substantial portion of the interest accrued due and costs. Forrest v. Shore, 32 W. R. 356.

Infants.]—Even in the case of infants, the court will, in a suit for foreclosure, only extend the time for payment of the mortgage-money upon the terms of immediate payment of the interest and costs. Coombe v. Stewart, 13 Beav. 111.

On Death of one joint Mortgagee.]—A foreclosure was decreed, in default of payment, to three mortgagees, who were entitled "on a joint account." Before the day appointed for payment arrived, one of the mortgagees died:—Held, that the foreclosure could not be made absolute, and the court appointed a new day for payment to the survivors. Cockburn v. Caine, 22 Beav. 614.

Negotiations between Parties.]—Where, in a suit of foreclosure, pending exceptions to the master's report, which are afterwards disallowed, and after the time fixed by the report for the payment of the money, the plaintiff negotiates with the defendants, with respect to the payment of his debt, he cannot apply to have them foreclosed from the day originally given them. Grove v. Cooper, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 197.

Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.]—In February, 1851, a decree for foreclosure was made, and in January, 1853, after report made, it was ordered, by consent, that the plaintiff, the first mortgagee, should be at liberty to continue in possession until the 25th June, 1854, and that, upon payment within one week after that date of the amount which should be found due, the plaintiff should convey, &c.; but, in default of payment within that time, the defendants were to be foreclosed without any further order, and without any further extension of time. Motion by second mortgagee, under statute 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, that the time for foreclosure might be enlarged to the second day of Michaelmas term, and that the property might be in the meantime sold by and under the direction of the court, refused, with costs. Campbell v. Moxhay, 18 Jur. 641.

Under 5 Geo. 2, c. 25.]—Time enlarged for appearance to a bill of foreclosure under statute 5 Geo. 2, c. 25, notice in the parish church having been prevented while under repair. Knowles v. Broome, 1 V. & B. 305.

Under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20.]—Under statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2, the time for payment of money on mortgage may be enlarged on usual terms. Wakerell v. Delight, 9 Ves. 36.

After Six Years.]—Equity will not enlarge time to redeem mortgage after six years' acquiescence, under forfeiture by mortgagor's own consent, specially if there have been any improvements on the estate. Lant v. Crispe, 5 Bro. P. C. 200.

Fourth Order for.]—Under circumstances, a fourth order made for enlargement of time for payment of mortgage-money. Edwards v. Cunliffe, 1 Madd. 287.

On a decree of foreclosure, six months were given to the mortgagor in the usual way; then six more months were granted, which time was enlarged for six months longer, on his undertaking not to ask for more time. Yet the court, on motion, allowed him another six months, to be peremptory, because the estate was of greater value than the incumbrance upon it. Anon., Barnard. 221.

Till Exceptions disposed of.]—Where, in foreclosure suit, exceptions are taken to the master's report, and the time appointed for payment of the mortgage-money is likely to elapse before the exceptions are heard, the defendant should apply to the court, upon the exceptions being filed, to have the time enlarged until the exceptions are disposed of. Renvoize v. Cooper, 1 Sim. & S. 364.

Pending Appeal.]—The time appointed for redemption enlarged, on terms, pending an appeal to the House of Lords. Finch v. Shaw, Colyer v. Finch, 20 Beav. 555.

After Decree.]—When a decree is to foreclose, the court, in cases of necessity, will enlarge the time for the performance in paying the money, though the decree be signed and enrolled. Cocker v. Bevis, 1 Ch. Ca. 61.

The inrolment of an order absolute of foreclosure does not, any more than an inrolment of the decree of foreclosure, preclude the court from again enlarging the time in a proper case, and upon the usual terms. Ford v. Wastell, 2 Ph. 591; 17 L. J., Ch. 368; 12 Jur. 404.

The time fixed, by the decree in a foreclosure suit, for payment of principal, interest, and costs, enlarged by vice-chancellor, notwithstanding the decree had been made absolute, and the order absolute had been signed and enrolled. Thornhill v. Manning, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 451; 20 L. J., Ch. 604.

In a foreclosure suit, the court will not refrain from pronouncing the usual decree for a sale, at the motion of the defendant, suggesting the appointment of a receiver, unless upon consent; but it will, after decree, enlarge the time for redemption, on a proper case being made. Anon., 10 Ir. Eq. R. 174.

Reference.]—The defendant in a foreclosure suit made default in the payment of the mortgage debt at the time and place appointed, whereupon the order for foreclosure was made absolute. He then moved for a reference to the master to compute subsequent interest, and tax subsequent costs, and appoint a further time for payment, upon affidavits, shewing that the default had been owing to accidental and unusual circumstances. Motion granted. Jones v. Creswicke, 9 Sim. 304; 9 L. J., Ch. 113; 4 Jur. 216. S. P., Nanfan v. Perkins, Crompton v. Effingham (Earl). Joachim v. M'Douall, Lee v. Heath, Abney v. Wordsworth, Ismoord v. Claypool, and Clay v. ——, stated in the notes, 9 Sim. 306, et seq.

Interest—Neglect to Pay.]—On bill of foreclosure, an order being obtained for enlarging time for payment of principal money on condition of interest being paid; the defendant neglecting to pay the interest, plaintiff obtained the usual decree absolute on motion, as of course. A petition to discharge this decree as obtained by surprise was dismissed with costs. Jones v. Roberts, M'Cle. & Y. 567.

—— Computation of.]—Where the time fixed by the decree in a foreclosure suit for payment of principal and interest and costs is enlarged, the court will direct subsequent interest to be computed on the aggregate sum found due for principal, interest and costs. Bruere v. Wharton, 7 Sim. 483.

Where the time for payment of principal, interest and costs, under a foreclosure decree, is enlarged, and no terms are imposed as to payment of subsequent interest, such subsequent interest is to be calculated upon the principal due and the unpaid costs, and not upon the aggregate of principal, interest and costs. Whitfield v. Roberts, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1268; 9 W. R. 844.

Application refused.]—A first application by a mortgagor to change the time for the payment of mortgage-money, refused. Nanny v. Edwards, 4 Russ. 124; 6 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 20; 28 R. R. 24.

Where Mortgagor prevented from receiving Rents.]—Where, after the second report and day of payment fixed, in a foreclosure suit, the mortgagor was prevented by the act of the mortgagee from receiving the rents of the property, the time of payment was ordered to be enlarged for three months, upon payment of the mortgagor, within one month, of the interest and costs found due by the report, notwithstanding there was a doubt whether the value of the security was ample. Geldard v. Hornby, 1 Hare, 251; 6 Jur. 78.

Mortgagor not Appearing — Mortgagee in Receipt of Rents.]—Upon a motion by mortgagees for judgment for foreclosure absolute, and possession of the property, to which the mortgagor did not appear, and the mortgagees had received rents since the date of the certificate, the court enlarged the time for redemption by one month, and directed the plaintiffs to file and deliver to the registrar an affidavit shewing what would be the balance due to them up to that date for principal, interest and costs; and ordered that, if the amount should not be paid, the defendant should be absolutely foreclosed, and the plaintiffs should have possession of the property. Lacon v. Tyrrell, 56 L. T. 483.

Mortgagor not Insisting on Redemption.]—On motion by mortgagor for further time to redeem, and that mortgage should stand as security only for what was bonâ fide advanced, but forfeited as to what was won at play:—Held, that, as mortgagor in a former cause, where he might have done it, did not insist on a redemption, the foreclosures could not regularly be kept open, but on the whole circumstance three months were allowed. Fleetwood v. Jansen, 2 Atk. 467.

Scire facias.]—Upon scire facias taken out on a judgment, defendant shall insist only on what he might have done at the hearing of the original cause. The rule in equity is the same, with this difference only, that if anything new have happened since the hearing, defendant may avail himself of it. Id. 468.

Before Puisne Mortgagee Foreclosed.]—In an action by executors of a mortgagee against the mortgagor and a puisne mortgagee an order nisi for foreclosure was made, giving successive periods of redemption. After the time fixed for redemption, and before final judgment was obtained against the puisne mortgagee, and before the expiration of the time allowed to the mortgagor, the plaintiffs received a sum of money for rent. A further account had been taken against the mortgagor, and a further day fixed for redemption by him:—Held, that it was irregular to fix a further time for the mortgagor to redeem until the puisne mortgagee had been finally foreclosed. The order was to foreclose the puisne mortgagee absolutely, and to take a further account against the mortgagor. Webster v. Patteson, 53 L. J., Ch. 621; 25 Ch. D. 626; 50 L. T. 252; 32 W. R. 581.

c. Equitable Mortgages.

Six Months before Sale.]—In a suit by an equitable mortgagee, the decree will give the mortgagor six months to redeem before a sale of the estate. Thorpe v. Gartside, 2 Y. & Coll. 730; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 30.

Deposit of Deeds.]—In the decree upon a bill by an equitable mortgagee, the equitable mortgagor will be allowed six months to redeem the deposited deeds. Parker v. Housefield, 2 Myl. & K. 419; 4 L. J., Ch. 57.

Equitable mortgagees by deposit of deed; the court refused to suspend the execution of a decree obtained by a mortgagee until six months after hearing an appeal, but gave six months on bringing the money into court, consenting to a receiver, and paying interest and costs, on plaintiff undertaking to repay if the decree should be reversed. Monkhouse v. Bedford Corporation, 17 Ves. 380.

—— Of Lease.]—Where a deposit of a lease was made to secure a debt, and from the nature of the transaction no interest was to be paid on the principal sum secured, the equitable mortgagor, on a bill filed by the equitable mortgagee to have the lease sold, is entitled to the usual time to redeem. Meller v. Woods, 1 Keen, 16; 5 L. J., Ch. 109.

d. Where Several Defendants.

General Rule.]—As a general but not invariable rule, when there are several defendants to a foreclosure action, one period for redemption should be allowed to all the defendants. Mutual Life Assurance Society v. Langley, 26 Ch. D. 686; 51 L. T. 284; 32 W. R. 792.

Where there were two defendants to a foreclosure action—the mortgagor and a second mortgagee who had joined in the plaintiff's security to postpone his previously prior right, and as surety for the plaintiff:—Held, that only one period of six months should be allowed for redemption by both defendants. Bartlett v. Rees (L. R. 12 Eq. 395) and General Credit and Discount Co. v. Glegg (22 Ch. D. 549) followed. Smith v. Olding, 54 L. J., Ch. 250; 25 Ch. D. 462; 50 L. T. 357; 32 W. R. 386. Contra, Sweet v. Combley, 25 Ch. D. 463, n.

—— Questions of Priority.]—In a foreclosure suit, when questions as to priorities not affecting the plaintiff are raised between co-defendants, the court will fix a day certain for all to redeem or be foreclosed, without prejudice to the rights of the several defendants inter se. Bartlett v. Rees, 40 L. J., Ch. 599; L. R. 12 Eq. 395; 25 L. T. 373; 19 W. R. 1046.

Several Puisne Mortgagees.] — Foreclosure ordered with one term of redemption for all the puisne mortgagees. Bartlett v. Rees (L. R. 12 Eq. 395) followed. General Credit and Discount Co. v. Glegg, 52 L. J., Ch. 297; 22 Ch. D. 549; 48 L. T. 182; 31 W. R. 421.

A suit having been instituted by a first mortgagee to redeem or foreclose several subsequent incumbrances, the court made a special decree fixing a day for any of the subsequent incumbrancers to redeem or to be foreclosed. Edwards v. Martin, 28 L. J., Ch. 49; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1044; 7 W. R. 30.

A., a first mortgagee, brought an action for foreclosure against the mortgagor, his trustee in bankruptcy, and two subsequent incumbrancers, C. and R. The defendants all appeared, and both C. and R. delivered defences. C.'s defence alleged that his mortgage was registered in Middlesex without notice, and therefore had priority over R. R.'s defence made no answer to this allegation:—Held, that the mere fact that R.'s defence did not deny the allegation of priority in C.'s defence could not be taken as an admission by R. of the priority of C.'s mortgage; that, therefore, the priorities were in dispute, and the plaintiff was entitled to have only one period of redemption, as in Bartlett v. Rees (L. R. 12 Eq. 395). Tufnell v. Nicholls, 56 L. T. 152.

A first mortgage is primâ facie entitled to a judgment in a foreclosure action limiting only one period for redemption, both as against subsequent incumbrancers and the mortgagor, and, where there are conflicting claims as to priority between co-defendants, the practice, as settled by Bartlett v. Rees (L. R. 12 Eq. 395), is to grant only one period for redemption. Where, however, the defendants have put in a defence or appeared at the bar and have proved or offered to prove their incumbrances, and there is no question of priority between them, the court will at the request of the puisne incumbrancers, but not at the request of the mortgagor, limit successive periods for redemption. A mortgagor has no right in himself to more than one period of six months to redeem. Platt v. Mendel, 54 L. J., Ch. 1145; 27 Ch. D. 246; 51 L. T. 424; 32 W. R. 918.

The settled practice of the court in a foreclosure action, where there are incumbrances subsequent to that of the plaintiff, to grant successive periods of redemption to the subsequent incumbrancers and the mortgagor, will only be departed from where special reason for so doing is shewn. Lewis v. Aberdare and Plymouth Co., 53 L. J., Ch. 741; 50 L. T. 451.

The fact that there is a contest as to priorities between the subsequent incumbrancers may be a reason for departing from the ordinary practice. Ib.

Where such a contest was raised upon the pleadings, and the nature of the property and other special circumstances were such as to render any delay peculiarly disadvantageous to the plaintiffs, the court fixed one period of nine months for redemption by the mortgagors (a company in liquidation) and two sets of incumbrancers subsequent to the plaintiffs. Ib.

Semble, even in a case in which the priorities are not in dispute, the court will not now give successive periods for redemption. Tufnell v. Nicholls, 56 L. T. 152.

—— Non-appearance.]—In a foreclosure action by the transferee of the first mortgagee, the statement of claim alleged that the defendants other than the mortgagor claimed to have some charge upon the mortgaged premises subsequent to the plaintiff's charge. None of the defendants, including the mortgagor, put in a defence or appeared at the bar:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to a foreclosure judgment on the pleadings, allowing one period for redemption as against all the defendants. Platt v. Mendel, 54 L. J., Ch. 1145; 27 Ch. D. 246; 51 L. T. 424; 32 W. R. 918.

In a foreclosure judgment against the mortgagor and subsequent incumbrancers, only one period for redemption will be fixed where none of the defendants appear on the motion for judgment; whether it is alleged by the statement of claim that the subsequent incumbrancers are "entitled," or only that they "claim to be entitled" to charges upon the mortgage premises. Doble v. Manley, 54 L. J., Ch. 636; 28 Ch. D. 664; 52 L. T. 246; 33 W. R. 409.

—— And Mortgagor's Trustee in Liquidation.]—In an action by second mortgagees against subsequent incumbrancers and the mortgagor's trustee in liquidation, there being evidence that the sale of the property would leave a very small margin for the subsequent incumbrancers, only one of whom appeared, one time certain was fixed for all the defendants to redeem or be foreclosed. Cripps v. Wood, 51 L. J., Ch. 584.

—— And Judgment Creditors.]—Upon a foreclosure claim by a mortgagee against the mortgagor, and subsequent mortgagees and judgment creditors:—Held, that the judgment creditors ought not to stand exactly in the position of mortgagees; and the court made a decree fixing one period for redemption by all the judgment creditors, as if their judgments formed one incumbrance only. Stead v. Banks, 5 De G. & Sm. 560; 22 L. J., Ch. 208; 16 Jur. 945.

—— And Jointress.]—In a foreclosure action the plaintiffs were first mortgagees, and also third mortgagees. The defendants were the second incumbrancer, who was a jointress, and several subsequent incumbrancers, whose priorities had not been ascertained. An order was made, on the hearing of the action, giving the jointress a period of six months within which to redeem; in case she did not redeem, the subsequent incumbrancers were to have one period of three months within which to redeem; but, in case the jointress did redeem, the plaintiffs, as third mortgagees, were to have a period of three months within which to redeem subject to the jointure; and a further period of three months was given to the subsequent incumbrancers within which to redeem. Smithett v. Hesketh, 59 L. J., Ch. 567; 44 Ch. D. 161; 62 L. T. 802; 38 W. R. 698.

11. Attendance for Payment.

Time of.]—Notice for payment of a mortgage at three o'clock is not forfeited, where there is an attendance before four o'clock. Knox v. Simmons, 4 Bro. C. C. 443.

Foreclosure may be made absolute, although the mortgagee does not attend the first moment of the time appointed for payment of the mortgage money. Anon., 1 Coll. C. C. 273.

The court will make an order for foreclosure absolute, although the mortgagee has not attended at the spot named for payment of the mortgage money until after the time fixed by the parties. Bernard v. Norton, 10 L. T. 183.

Under a foreclosure decree, the solicitor of the mortgagee attended at the time and place appointed by the chief clerk for the payment of the redemption money (but without any power of attorney to receive the money). The mortgagee did not attend until after the commencement of the time fixed, but both remained until the time had expired. The mortgagor did not attend, and the money remained unpaid. A decree absolute was made. Lechmere v. Clamp, 31 Beav. 578; 32 L. J., Ch. 276; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 482; 7 L. T. 411; 11 W. R. 83.

Under the common decree in a foreclosure suit, the chief clerk's certificate having fixed a time and place for the repayment by the mortgagor of what was due for principal and interest, the plaintiff's solicitor attended at the time and place appointed, but without any power of attorney from the plaintiffs to receive the mortgage moneys; the mortgagor made default. Upon a motion for the order absolute to foreclose:—Held, it is the mortgagor's right to have every formality strictly observed. Gurney v. Jackson, 1 Sm. & G. (App.) xxvi.

Through Agent.]—In a foreclosure suit the plaintiff's agent attended during the prescribed time for payment, but without a power of attorney to receive the money. No one attended to pay. On an ex parte application the foreclosure was made absolute. Macrae v. Evans, 24 W. R. 55.

In a foreclosure suit the money was to be paid between twelve and one. The agent of the mortgagee attended during the whole of the appointed time, but without any power of attorney to receive the money. The mortgagee himself did not attend. No one appeared on behalf of the mortgagor:—Held, that the foreclosure ought to be made absolute. Cox v. Watson, 47 L. J., Ch. 263; 7 Ch. D. 196.

Authority to give Receipt.]—On a motion to make a foreclosure decree absolute, it is not necessary that the person attending at the Rolls Chapel should have authority to give a receipt where no one appears to pay. London Monetary Advance and Assurance Society v. Brown, 18 L. T. 52; 16 W. R. 782.

—— Affidavit of Agent's Authority.]—After judgment for foreclosure, an agent of the mortgagee attended at the place appointed for the payment of the money, but the mortgagor failed to attend:—Held, that the mortgagee, upon production of an affidavit stating that his agent had received the power of attorney, enabling him to receive the money, was entitled to have foreclosure made absolute. Hart v. Hawthorne, 42 L. T. 79.

Mistake.]—In a suit to redeem, the mortgagee having, by mistake, omitted to attend at the time and place fixed by the master for payment of the sum computed to be due to him for principal, interest and costs, the court, upon motion, with notice, appointed a new time and place for the payment of the money ten days after the date of the order. In such a case the defendant is not entitled to subsequent interest. Hughes v. Williams, 1 Kay (App.) iv.

12. OPENING.

a. In General, 1733.
b. Subsequent Receipt of Rents and Profits, 1736.

a. In General.

When.]—A decree for foreclosure is never really absolute, but is always liable to be reopened upon proper cause within reasonable time. Campbell v. Holyland, 26 W. R. 160. S. C., 47 L. J., Ch. 145; 7 Ch. D. 166; 38 L. T. 128.

What is—Bringing Action for Balance.]—If after foreclosure and sale mortgagee brings an action for the balance, this, it has been held, opens the foreclosure. Dashwood v. Blythway, 1 Eq. Abr. 317.

After foreclosure and sale, action by the mortgagee for the balance opens the foreclosure; therefore the mortgagee should have time to get back the estate, and tender a reconveyance, and the mortgagor to redeem. But the mortgagee having taken possession a considerable time ago, and the balance being inconsiderable, a perpetual injunction was decreed. Perry v. Barker, 13 Ves. 198; 9 R. R. 171.

—— Unfair Conduct.]—Foreclosure will be opened if there is unfair conduct on part of mortgagee. Soley v. Salisbury, 9 Mod. 153.

—— By Suing on Collateral Security.]—Where a debt is secured on mortgage, covenant and bond, if the mortgagee forecloses first and, the value of the estate proving insufficient to satisfy the debt, sues on the bond or covenant for the deficiency, he thereby opens the foreclosure, and the mortgagor may thereupon redeem. Lockhart v. Hardy, 9 Beav. 349; 15 L. J., Ch. 347; 10 Jur. 532.

—— By Devise.]—After a decree of foreclosure had been made absolute, and the mortgagee for many years in possession, he made his will, and thereby disposed of the mortgage debt in these words: "And if M. S.'s debt be well paid, as I doubt not but it will, I order my executor to pay the sum of 4,800*l.*" (which was the exact amount of the debt) "amongst the children of my nephew":—Held, that this devise did not open the foreclosure, and that the testator's calling it a debt did not alter the nature of his estate in the premises. Tooke v. Ely, 5 Bro. P. C. 181.

—— By Receipt of Rent.]—In an action by executors of a mortgagee against the mortgagor and a puisne mortgagee:—Held, that the receipt of moneys for rent after the time fixed for the puisne mortgagee to redeem, and before final judgment obtained against him, did not open the foreclosure against him. Webster v. Patteson, 53 L. J., Ch. 621; 25 Ch. D. 626; 50 L. T. 252; 32 W. R. 581.

—— By Sale to a Defendant.]—After a decree for foreclosure absolute had been made, one of the defendants in the action purchased the lands from the executors and trustees of the mortgagees, who had died subsequent to the decree, the purchase-money being equivalent to the amount due on foot of the mortgage and costs of the foreclosure, payment of the principal being deferred for five years, and interest in the meantime payable at a lower rate than that secured by the mortgage:—Held, that the foreclosure decree was not thereby opened, and that the defendant so purchasing could confer a good title on a sale by her. Power and Carton, In re, 25 L. R., Ir. 459.

—— By Receiver's Mistake.]—Some months after the usual order for foreclosure absolute had been made in favour of first mortgagees against the mortgagor and second mortgagees, and after the first mortgagees acting upon that order had actually sold portions of the mortgaged property, the mortgagor discovered that the receiver had omitted from his accounts certain rents which he had received. The mortgagor accordingly moved that the foreclosure might be reopened; and that the first mortgagees might be restrained from parting with the legal estate of the mortgaged property:—Held, that there was no evidence that the first mortgagees had received any of the rents for which the receiver had not accounted, and there was no reason why the foreclosure should be reopened merely because the receiver, who was not the agent of the first mortgagees for all purposes, but was an officer of the court, had made a mistake which the mortgagor had not discovered before it was too late. Jenner-Fust v. Needham (32 Ch. D. 582) distinguished. Ingham v. Sutherland, 63 L. T. 614.

Admitting Part of Decree.]—A foreclosure decree cannot be opened at the suit of a plaintiff who admits part of the decree and impeaches the rest. Patch v. Ward, 4 Giff. 96; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 373; 7 L. T. 413; 11 W. R. 135.

Four mortgagees obtained in 1848, in a suit against P., a decree of foreclosure. In 1861 P. filed a bill against one of the mortgagees to open the decree against him only, alleging fraudulent conduct, and that the other mortgagees were not cognisant of the acts complained of:—Demurrer allowed with costs. Ib.

By Judgment Creditors giving Notice.]—A. mortgaged his land, and then confessed several judgments; some of the judgment creditors gave the mortgagee notice, and he afterwards obtained a decree to foreclose the mortgagor. Those who gave notice may redeem as creditors for a valuable consideration, but those who gave no previous notice of their judgments are barred of all redemption. Smith v. Valence, 1 Ch. Rep. 170. And see Weldon v. Rallison, 1 Ch. Rep. 171.

Recent Foreclosure.]—Bill by a conusee of a statute of the mortgagor, to redeem, after a decree of foreclosure, defendant pleaded the decree, and that the statute was acknowledged pendente lite, without notice to him. Per cur., this is a recent foreclosure, and plaintiff shall redeem, paying what is due, with costs. Crisp v. Heath, 7 Vin. Abr. 52, pl. 2.

After Years.]—After a decree of foreclosure made absolute, and an acquiescence of eleven years in mortgagee's possession under it, no parol evidence of his promising to account and reconvey on payment of his money, can be admitted. Wichalse v. Short, 3 Bro. P. C. 558.

A decree of foreclosure was opened in this case after sixteen years, the mortgagee being interested, and the equity of redemption being worth more than was due on the account. Burgh v. Lanton, 15 Vin. Abr. 476, pl. 2; 5 Bro. P. C. 213.

—— Errors of Form.] — A decree of foreclosure, after an acquiescence of twenty years, shall not be set aside upon a bill of review for errors in form only, and not of substance, and therefore a demurrer to such a bill is good. Jones v. Kenrick, 5 Bro. P. C. 244.

Notwithstanding Mortgagee has Sold.]—In a foreclosure action the mortgagor can redeem after the order for foreclosure absolute, and notwithstanding that, after the order, the mortgagee may have disposed of his interest to a purchaser; but whether or not he shall be allowed so to redeem lies in the discretion of the court, and depends on the circumstances of each particular case. Campbell v. Holyland, 47 L. J., Ch. 145; 7 Ch. D. 166; 38 L. T. 128. S. C., 26 W. R. 160.

Surprise.]—On bill for foreclosure, and order being obtained enlarging payment of principal money due on condition of interest being paid, the defendant neglecting to pay the interest, plaintiff obtained the usual decree absolute, on motion of course. Petition to discharge decree as obtained by surprise was dismissed with costs. Jones v. Roberts, M'Cle. & Y. 567.

Fraud.]—After a foreclosure decree absolute a mortgagor will not be allowed to redeem, although he alleges that the decree was obtained by fraud. He must seek to have it set aside. Patch v. Ward, 7 L. T. 413; 11 W. R. 135.

Setting Aside.]—W., as solicitor of V., a second mortgagee, received the rents of the mortgaged property. The first mortgagees obtained a decree for foreclosure, and a first report was made finding what was due to them. W. paid them off with his own money, in V.'s name, and also paid off V. The proceedings went on without W.'s interest being disclosed, and shortly afterwards a second report was made finding what was due to V. in respect of his own security, and of what he had paid to the first mortgagees, after allowing for the rents received by him. P., the mortgagor, not paying this, an order absolute for foreclosure was made, V. making the usual affidavit that he had received nothing towards payment of the sum found due. Between the second report and the making this affidavit W. had gone on receiving rents. He was entitled to an undisputed third mortgage, given him by P., on the same property. P., twelve years afterwards, filed a bill to impeach the order for foreclosure absolute as having been obtained by fraud:—Held, that it was not the duty of W., when he became owner of the mortgages, to disclose his interest, and make himself a party to the proceedings; and that, although the affidavit made by V. was in the circumstances irregular, the irregularity did not prove any fraudulent design on the part of W., as it was a doubtful question whether he was not entitled to retain the rents towards satisfaction of this third mortgage, which he claimed to do; and if he was so entitled V.'s affidavit was substantially correct: and that, therefore, the decree for foreclosure absolute could not be set aside. Patch v. Ward, L. R. 3 Ch. 203; 18 L. T. 134; 16 W. R. 441.

—— Against alleged Heir of Mortgagor.]—Judgment was given in a foreclosure action against the son and supposed heir-at-law of C. A contract for sale of the property was entered into, but the chief clerk declined to sanction it, there being no proper evidence that the defendant was heir-at-law. On an application to amend the writ and pleadings by adding the name of any person claiming to be the true heir-at-law, or to set aside the judgment, the judgment was set aside and the action dismissed without costs. Lancaster Banking Co. v. Cooper, 9 Ch. D. 594; 27 W. R. 164.

First Mortgagee Foreclosing Second and Devising to Mortgagor.]—A. mortgages land to B., and afterwards mortgages the same land to C. B., the first mortgagee, forecloses C., and afterwards devises the premises to the mortgagor. Whether C. may now in equity set aside the first mortgage, quære. Cook v. Sadler, 2 Vern. 235.

Plea in Bar.]—Bill to redeem mortgagee being overpaid:—Defence of foreclosure, signed and inrolled, is good plea in bar. Mallock v. Galton, Dick. 65.

Resisting—Costs.]— Mortgagee resisting the right to redemption, on the ground of a decree of foreclosure collusively obtained, decreed to pay so much of the costs as was occasioned by his resistance. Harvey v. Tebbutt, 1 J. & W. 197; 21 R. R. 145.

b. Subsequent Receipt of Rents and Profits.

After Default of Payment.]—When a mortgagee receives rents after default is made in payment of the principal and interest on the day fixed by the chief clerk's certificate, but before the affidavit of such default is made, an order for final foreclosure will be granted without further account. Constable v. Howick, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 331; 7 W. R. 160. S. P., National Building Society v. Raper, 61 L. J., Ch. 73; [1892] 1 Ch. 54; 65 L. T. 668; 40 W. R. 73.

After Account taken.]—A foreclosure is not complete until the final order has been made, and the final order cannot be obtained if rents have been received by the mortgagee since the account was taken. Prees v. Coke, L. R. 6 Ch. 645.

Opening Account.]—A mortgagee in possession, who receives a sum by way of rent from the mortgaged property in the interval between the filing of the chief clerk's certificate and the day fixed for payment, thereby opens the account and cannot get a final order without getting another certificate fixing another day for redemption. Allen v. Edwards, 42 L. J., Ch. 455 ; 21 W. R. 471.

After Report.]—A mortgagee received rents between the master's report and the day fixed for the payment ; default being made :—Held, that the mortgagee was not then entitled to an order absolute. Garlick v. Jackson, 4 Beav. 154.

—— Further Reference.]—If a mortgagee receives rents after the master's report and before the day appointed for payment, there must be a further reference and account and a new day appointed for payment. Alden v. Foster, 5 Beav. 592. S. P., Ellis v. Griffiths, 7 Beav. 83.

—— Costs.]—Where a mortgagee receives rents between the report and the day of payment, it is not the practice, on directing the accounts to be continued, and the time to be extended, to order the mortgagor forthwith to pay the arrears of interest and costs. Buchanan v. Greenway, 12 Beav. 355.

13. STAYING.

On Payment into Court.]—In a suit for foreclosure, on motion by a subsequent mortgagee, the bill was ordered to be dismissed on the mover paying into court a fixed sum on or before a day specified, to answer the plaintiff's claim, and the costs of the plaintiff and other defendants. Challie v. Gwynne, 1 Kay (App.) xlvi.

In a foreclosure suit by a subsequent mortgagee (to which the prior mortgagees were parties), an order was made on the motion of the mortgagor to stay proceedings, and that the plaintiff should reconvey the estates subject to the prior mortgages, on payment into court of a sum sufficient to satisfy the amount due to him for principal, interest and costs (as between solicitor and client) of him and all the other mortgagees, defendants in the suit. Lastett v. Cliffe, 9 L. J., Ch. 393. Affirmed, 5 Jur. 493.

Terms of.]—In a foreclosure suit the court will not stay proceedings on the application of a defendant, except upon the terms of his paying down, or having previously paid or tendered to the plaintiff his principal and interest, and all the costs of the suit. Paynter v. Carew, 1 Kay (App.) xxxvi. ; 23 L. J., Ch. 596 ; 18 Jur. 417 ; 2 Eq. R. 496 ; 2 W. R. 345.

Resisting.]—Other incumbrancers, who are parties to the suit, have not such an interest in it as to enable them successfully to oppose a motion to stay proceedings, because the plaintiff might at any time dismiss the bill against them upon payment of their costs. Ib.

On Payment on future Day.]—The court will not make an order to stay proceedings upon payment of principal, interest, and costs on a future specified day, however near, because the right of a mortgagee is to pursue any or all of his remedies without hindrance, until he actually obtains payment of his demand. Ib.

By Plaintiff in his own Suit.]—A decree was made in a suit for the administration of a mortgagor's estate. The mortgagee afterwards filed a foreclosure bill, but subsequently obtained full payment in the administration suit :—Held, that he was entitled to stay proceedings in his own suit, and to have the costs of it. Brooksbank v. Higginbottom, Bent v. Buckley, 31 Beav. 35.

Two Suits.]—When an action was commenced by an equitable mortgagee, whose claim was disputed, to establish his charge, and also seeking general administration, and the usual administration decree as to personalty was subsequently made under an administration summons taken out by another creditor, the court stayed all proceedings in the first action, added an inquiry as to incumbrances to the decree, and gave the conduct of the decree to the plaintiff in the first action. Matthews v. Matthews, Willyams v. Matthews, 45 L. J., Ch. 711 ; 34 L. T. 718.

Bill by a mortgagee for an account, and for foreclosure, and a sale after a decree in a creditor's suit, under which the plaintiff in a second suit had gone in before the master and proved his charge before he filed his bill, application to stay the proceedings in the second cause, as involving the same accounts, refused ; the plaintiff having more speedy and effectual relief, is entitled to go on ; as, where there are litigated points beyond that of the amount of his demand, he is required to go on, in his separate suit, up to such point, as all ulterior relief can be equally had in the suit first instituted : and, as to staying the proceedings in the first suit, while properly conducted, the court, however anxious to guard against unnecessary expense, has no authority. Uniacke v. Rochford, 1 Moll. 216.

Evidence.]—On a motion by a defendant in a foreclosure suit to stay proceedings on payment of principal, interest and costs, the defendant need not produce an affidavit to shew that he is the only person entitled to redeem. Piggin v. Cheetham (2 Hare, 80) disapproved of. Reeves v. Glastonbury Canal Co., 14 Sim. 351.

Palatine Court.]—The court will not stay proceedings in an action for foreclosure or sale commenced in the palatine court of Lancaster, where the property is beyond the limit of the jurisdiction of the palatine court but both mortgagees and mortgagors are within such jurisdiction. Longdendale Cotton Spinning Co., In re, 8 Ch. D. 150 ; 38 L. T. 776 ; 26 W. R. 491.

a. Form of.

What Relief to be asked.]—The fact that a bill does not pray for foreclosure is not a sufficient reason for refusing the assistance of the court. Hutton v. Sealy, 27 L. J., Ch. 263; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 450; 6 W. R. 350.

General Creditor's Suit.]—Where a plaintiff, claiming as mortgagee, frames his bill also as a general creditor's suit, the course is, that he should go in under the general decree for an account; and, if not satisfied under that, then go for the unsatisfied balance against his particular security. Stone v. Van Heythuysen, 18 Jur. 344.

Summons.]—There is no jurisdiction to give judgment for foreclosure upon summons, although the facts are not in dispute. Lloyd v. David Lloyd & Co., 26 W. R. 572.

Pending Winding-up.]—Liberty to a mortgagee, pending a winding-up, to institute a suit for foreclosure refused, there being no special difficulty, and it being competent to him to obtain the proper order in chambers without the necessity of a suit. St. Cuthbert Lead Smelting Co., In re, 35 Beav. 384.

Short Cause.]—Bill of foreclosure cannot be set down as a short cause, except by consent. Rashleigh v. Dayman, 2 Madd. 147.

It is contrary to the practice to advance a foreclosure suit to be heard as a short cause, unless with the consent of the defendant; but see the 4th general order, 9th May, 1839. Lewin v. Moline, 1 Beav. 99; 8 L. J., Ch. 96.

Writ specially Endorsed under Ord. III. r. 6.]—Where the writ in an action for foreclosure was also specially indorsed under Ord. III. r. 6, with a claim for the amount due on the covenant to pay in the mortgage deed, an application to enter judgment against the mortgagor under Ord. XIV. r. 1, for the amount claimed, before the action was heard, was refused. Hill v. Sidebottom, 47 L. T. 224.

Suit for Recovery of Money.]—The Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 40) may be pleaded to a bill of foreclosure; a foreclosure suit being in fact a suit for the recovery of the money secured by the mortgage. Dearman v. Wyche, 9 Sim. 570; 9 L. J., Ch. 76.

Action for Recovery of Land.]—A foreclosure action is not an action for the recovery of land within the meaning of rules of court, 1875, Ord. XVII. r. 2. Tawell v. Slate Co., 3 Ch. D. 629.

Although a foreclosure action is an action for the recovery of land, a foreclosure judgment absolute is not a judgment for the recovery of the possession of land within the meaning of the Judicature Act, Ord. XLII. r. 3, and consequently cannot be enforced by writ of possession. Wood v. Wheater, 52 L. J., Ch. 144; 22 Ch. D. 281; 47 L. T. 440; 31 W. R. 117.

Delivery of Possession—Ex parte Application.]—Where a summons for foreclosure does not ask for delivery of possession, the subsequent order for foreclosure absolute and delivery of possession will not be made ex parte. Le Bas v. Grant, 64 L. J., Ch. 368.

Where an order nisi for foreclosure and possession had been made, the order absolute was made ex parte. Withall v. Nixon, 54 L. J., Ch. 616; 28 Ch. D. 413; 33 W. R. 565.

In a foreclosure action the plaintiff did not ask for possession in his originating summons. An order for foreclosure absolute having been made, the plaintiff applied ex parte for delivery of possession. The defendant had not appeared:—Held, that after foreclosure absolute the court could make such order. Jenkins v. Ridgley, 3 R. 628; 68 L. T. 671; 41 W. R. 585.

Setting out Lunacy.]—A mortgage was executed by S., who was afterwards found lunatic by inquisition as from a date prior to the mortgage. The mortgagee filed his claim for foreclosure against the mortgagor and his committee, but did not set out the date from which the mortgagor had been found lunatic. The deed was proved by the surviving attesting witness, who was not cross-examined by the defendants, but they went into evidence to shew that the mortgagor was lunatic both prior to and at the time of the mortgage being executed:—Held, that the suit was properly by claim, and was not defective in not setting out the prior lunacy of the mortgagor. Jacobs v. Richards, 5 De G. M. & G. 55; 23 L. J., Ch. 557; 18 Jur. 527; 2 Eq. R. 299.

Impeaching Mortgage by Cross Suit.]—Semble, that in a foreclosure suit, it is not competent for the defendant to impeach the mortgage on the ground of fraud without instituting a cross suit. Eddleston v. Collins, 3 De G. M. & G. 1; 22 L. J., Ch. 480; 17 Jur. 331; 1 W. R. 169.

Demurrer.]—Mortgagee filed a bill of foreclosure against his mortgagor and others whom he considered subsequent mortgagees. B., one of the defendants, demurs to the bill for want of equity, upon the ground that A. shews by his bill that he is only entitled to redeem him, and therefore can have no equity for relief so inconsistent with his right:—Held, that the demurrer could not hold, plaintiff having, by the admission of the defendant, shewn upon his bill a title to some relief, though inconsistent with the prayer of his bill, and that the hearing was the proper time to decide upon the precise relief for the plaintiff. Medley v. Horton, 5 Jur. 1031.

Issue Directed and Abandoned.]—Upon the hearing of a foreclosure claim the court directed an issue, in which the defendant was to be the plaintiff. The defendant having abandoned the issue:—Held, that the plaintiff's proper course was to move that the issue might be taken pro confesso against the defendant; upon which the court could dispense with the issue, and the claim would stand in the same situation as if the issue had been tried and found for the plaintiff. Hartland v. Dancocks, 5 De G. & Sm. 561; 21 L. J., Ch. 449.

Evidence of Nonpayment.]—A mortgagee had obtained a foreclosure judgment nisi, and now moved the court to grant him foreclosure absolute.

He had made no affidavit of nonpayment of moneys due to him, but the solicitor's clerk, who attended on his behalf to receive the money due on the security, had made an affidavit of nonpayment. The defendant had not appeared in the action since its commencement :—Held, that, on a motion by a mortgagee for foreclosure absolute, the plaintiff's personal affidavit of nonpayment might be dispensed with, in spite of the contrary practice laid down in Seton on Decrees, 4th edit. p. 1091. Frith v. Cooke, 52 L. T. 798 ; 33 W. R. 688.

Upon an application for an order for foreclosure absolute, where an affidavit of nonpayment had been made by the person attending on behalf of the plaintiff to receive the mortgage-moneys, the court declined to dispense with an affidavit by the plaintiff stating that he had not received the mortgage-moneys between the date of attendance and the date of the application. Barrow v. Smith, 52 L. T. 798 ; 33 W. R. 743.

Where one of six mortgagees had made an affidavit for himself positively, and for the other mortgagees to the best of his knowledge and belief, that the debt had not been paid, and one of the remaining five mortgagees was out of the jurisdiction, and the others in the jurisdiction ; on motion, ex parte, on behalf of the plaintiffs for an order absolute for foreclosure :—Held, that the affidavit in support of the motion was not sufficient, and that an affidavit must be made by all the mortgagees in the jurisdiction, and the matter mentioned again to the court. Kinnaird v. Yorke, 60 L. T. 380.

Upon a motion made on 20th March, for a final order of foreclosure, an affidavit made on 20th Feb. by J. D., one of two joint mortgagees, and by James S., was tendered in evidence. John S., the other mortgagee, had in 1874 gone to reside in New Zealand, and had granted James S. a power of attorney to act for him in the matter of the mortgage. Under the authority of this power, and under a power of attorney granted by J. D., James S. had attended on 31st Jan. previous, to receive payment of the mortgage-moneys. The affidavit stated that John S. was still in New Zealand ; that default had been made in payment of the mortgage-moneys, and that the whole of this sum remained due to the mortgagees :—Held, that the affidavit was not sufficient, and that more recent evidence must be adduced. At the subsequent hearing of the motion on 25th March, an affidavit made by James S. alone on 21st March was produced. In this James S. stated that John S. was still residing in New Zealand, that J. D. was away from his home in Derbyshire, and that his whereabouts was unknown, and that to the best of his knowledge the mortgage-moneys remained unpaid :—Held, that an affidavit made by James S. alone was insufficient. Docksey v. Else, 64 L. T. 256.

Multifariousness.]—Two separate portions charged on real estates were assigned by way of mortgage to a person who also became the mortgagee in fee of the entirety of the same estates, subject to the portions. The mortgagee in one foreclosure suit sought to foreclose the mortgagors of the two portions and the mortgagor of the entirety. On an objection taken by the mortgagor of the entirety at the hearing :—Held, that the suit was not multifarious. Pearce v. Watkins, 5 De G. & Sm. 315 ; 16 Jur. 832.

b. Disclaimer.

In Ignorance.]—Where a defendant in a foreclosure suit had filed an answer and disclaimer, in ignorance of her rights to the equity of redemption, applied after a decree to account for liberty to withdraw the disclaimer and amend the answer, or to file a supplemental answer stating her claims to the equity of redemption ; the court refused the order, without prejudice to any application which the defendant might make after satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand under the decree. Glenny v. Murdock, Fl. & K. 277.

By some Defendants.]—If some of the defendants in a foreclosure suit disclaim, the court will decree them to be foreclosed, and not simply dismiss the bill as against them. Perkin v. Stafford, 10 Sim. 562. S. P., Johnson v. Clarke, 3 W. R. 193.

Party till.] — A second incumbrancer not having disclaimed interest by answer must remain a party. M'Nab v. Mensal, Tam. 375.

Effect of—By Bankrupt.]—A defendant (bankrupt mortgagor) to a suit by his mortgagee, praying for a declaration of priority and for accounts, cannot by means of an answer and disclaimer avoid answering fully, for, though he may disclaim his interest in the subject-matter of the suit, he cannot disclaim his liability to account. Dobree v. Nicholson, 22 L. T. 774 ; 18 W. R. 965.

—— By Trustee of Bankrupt.]—In a foreclosure action brought against a bankrupt mortgagor and his trustee in bankrutpcy where the trustee has disclaimed and neither defendant has appeared, the mortgagee is entitled at the hearing to a foreclosure absolute against the trustee, but against the mortgagor he is only entitled to an ordinary foreclosure decree. English v. Barlow, 48 L. T. 188.

—— By Assignees of Bankrupt.]—The disclaimer by the assignees of a bankrupt, of the equity of redemption of a term of years vested in the bankrupt by the devise to him of the fee simple of the same estate, renders the bankrupt a necessary party to the bill of foreclosure. Semble. Singleton v. Cox, 4 Hare, 326.

An insolvent mortgagor, even where his assignees disclaim all interest in the equity of redemption, ought not to be made a party to a suit of foreclosure. Collins v. Shirley, 1 Russ. & M. 638.

When may be Pleaded.]—A disclaimer in a foreclosure suit can be pleaded as an answer to any further suit for redemption, but not in any other way. Burrell, In re, Burrell v. Smith, 38 L. J., Ch. 382 ; L. R. 7 Eq. 399 ; 17 W. R. 516.

Duration of.] — Therefore, when A., being lessee of a house for a term of years, made an underlease to B., by way of mortgage, and on a bill filed by B. for a foreclosure of the mortgage, A.'s representatives disclaimed :—Held, that the effect of the disclaimer upon the mortgaged property was confined to the period comprised in the underlease. Ib.

c. Defendant out of Jurisdiction.

Principle.]—It is a principle not to foreclose an absent mortgagee; aliter, semble, as to a decree for sale. Leahy v. Dancer, 3 Moll. 109. S. P., Gowan v. Tyghe, 3 Moll. 113.

A decree for foreclosure or sale cannot be made in the absence, abroad, of a party entitled to one-third of the equity of redemption. The objection is not removed by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86. Caddick v. Cook, 32 Beav. 70.

Decree—Against some of several.]—A mortgagor devised a mortgaged estate, in trust for sale, and to divide the produce amongst his nine children; two of the children were living out of the jurisdiction, and on a bill for foreclosure a decree was made against the other seven only. Runcorn v. Nicholson, 5 L. J., Ch. 203.

—— Against Defendant Absconded.]—In a foreclosure suit where, the defendant having absconded, the plaintiff had, by leave, entered an appearance for him, and advertised the replication and subpœna to hear judgment, the court, on proof of the facts in the bill, made a decree in the terms of the prayer. Lechmere v. Clamp, 30 L. J., Ch. 651; 9 W. R. 860.

Vesting Order.]—The court also made a prospective order under the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 60, ss. 34, 43, vesting the mortgage property in the plaintiff. Ib.

On making an order of foreclosure absolute, the court refused to add a declaration under the Trustee Act, 1850, that the mortgagor being out of the jurisdiction is a trustee, in order to found upon it a subsequent application for a vesting order. Such a declaration can be obtained only on a separate application. Smith v. Boucher, 1 Sm. & G. 72; 16 Jur. 1154.

Service—Dispensing with.]—In a foreclosure suit, when the bill had been ordered to be taken pro confesso against a trustee, out of the jurisdiction, and he had been served with the order without the notice specifying the time within which he must appear and object, as required by r. 11 of the Cons. Ord. XXII., the court, after the lapse of three years from the decree, upon being satisfied that service of the order upon him was unnecessary altogether, dispensed with such service, and made the order absolute. Thurgood v. Cane, 11 W. R. 297.

—— By Advertisement.] — In a foreclosure suit, by a mortgagee who had been in possession twelve years, against several defendants, trustees and beneficiaries under the will of the original mortgagor—some of whom were out of the jurisdiction in America—the bill having been ordered to be taken pro confesso against the defendants out of the jurisdiction, and at the hearing none of the defendants appearing, service of copy of the decree upon the defendants out of the jurisdiction was permitted to be made by advertisements in two London, and one American, newspapers. Hyde v. Large, L. R. 19 Eq. 48; 23 W. R. 22.

—— Proceeding after.] — The plaintiff was allowed to proceed under the decree at the expiration of three months from the date of the advertisements. Ib.

Form.] — A defendant in a foreclosure suit having made default, and it being impossible to find him, a motion was made to take the bill pro confesso, and make the decree absolute. In drawing up the order the registrar considered that he could only make the order absolute:—Held, that there must be an order similar to that in Lechmere v. Clamp (31 Beav. 578). London Monetary Advance Co. v. Bean, 18 L. T. 349.

d. Non-Appearance of Defendant.

Decree—Ordinary.] — Immediate foreclosure, in case the mortgagor did not appear, was claimed by the pleading. The mortgagor made default in appearance, and the court made only an ordinary foreclosure decree. Patey v. Flint, 48 L. J., Ch. 696; 40 L. T. 651; 27 W. R. 595.

The bill in a foreclosure suit was taken pro confesso against two defendants, who at the hearing did not appear:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled only to the ordinary decree, and not to a decree of foreclosure absolute. Brierly v. Ward, 20 L. J., Ch. 46; 15 Jur. 277.

—— Nisi.]—Defendant not appearing to bill to redeem or foreclose, decree nisi pronounced. Kettle v. Corbin, Dick. 314.

Under Mortgage Act.]—The court felt itself bound, even in a case of hardship, to refuse to give any effect to a proceeding, under the Mortgage Act, against an absent mortgagor; but Lord Chancellor intimated that, on a bill filed, an application might be so framed as to protect the rents which should accrue during the four terms required by the act to make such suit effectual, from being paid out, being received in a cause instituted by a puisne incumbrancer to the prejudice of the petitioner. Wolfe v. Jackson, 1 Moll. 250.

Account—Ordering.]—When at the trial of a foreclosure action the plaintiff asks for a sale of the property, and the mortgagor does not appear, the court will order an account of what is due to the plaintiff to be first taken, and then that so much of the property be sold as will be sufficient to satisfy what is found due to the plaintiff. Wade v. Wilson, 52 L. J., Ch. 399; 22 Ch. D. 235; 47 L. T. 696; 31 W. R. 237.

—— Dispensing with.]—Where, at a trial of a foreclosure action, the plaintiff asks for a sale of the property, and the mortgagor does not appear, the court will dispense with an account of what is due, if it appear by the pleadings that the security is insufficient. Williams v. Owen, 48 L. T. 388.

7 Geo. 2, c. 2.]—A decree of foreclosure had on sequestration in 1777, in pursuance of 7 Geo. 2, c. 2 (Irish), against an absent mortgagor, known by the plaintiff to be incompetent from mental imbecility to conduct his affairs, and advantage having been taken in the account of the state of the defendant, and of his absence, and of his having nobody to manage his defence: and a sale had in 1780, in pursuance of such decree, to the person conducting the suit, set aside as fraudulent; and an inquiry directed into the circumstances upon the ground of which the decree and former proceedings were impeached: on original bill filed in 1785 by the heir of the mortgagor. Carew v. Johnston, 2 Sch. & Lef. 280.

—— Application of.]—The statute 7 Geo. 2, c. 14 (Irish), enabling plaintiffs to proceed where defendants refuse to appear, does not apply to defendants labouring under incompetency, as idiotcy, &c. Id. 292.

Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 25, sub-s. 2.]—Upon motion for judgment in an action where foreclosure alone is claimed by the mortgagee, and the mortgagor does not appear, the court will not exercise its discretion under s. 25, sub-s. 2 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, unless the mortgagor has had notice of the mortgagee's intention to ask for a sale, instead of foreclosure, of the mortgaged premises. South-Western District Bank v. Turner, 47 L. T. 433; 31 W. R. 113.

Judgment under Ord. XIII. r. 3—Ord. XV.]—A writ was indorsed with a claim for an account of principal, interest and costs on a mortgage security, and for foreclosure or sale, and also with a claim for a specific sum for principal and interest due under a covenant in the mortgage deed. The defendant did not appear, and no statement of claim was delivered. The plaintiff moved, under Ord. XIII. r. 3, for liberty to forthwith sign final judgment for the amount indorsed on the writ, and, under Ord. XV., for the usual foreclosure judgment nisi:—Held, that, under Ord. XIII. r. 3, the plaintiff was entitled to sign judgment for the liquidated demand, notwithstanding that the writ was also indorsed with a claim for an account and foreclosure, but that he was not entitled under Ord. XV. to a foreclosure judgment. Observations on Blake v. Harvey (29 Ch. D. 827). Bissett v. Jones, 55 L. J., Ch. 648; 32 Ch. D. 635; 54 L. T. 603; 34 W. R. 591.

e. Proof of Mortgage.

Need not prove Consideration.]—On a bill by a mortgagee, where the payment to the mortgagor of the money secured by the mortgage deed is not put in issue by the answer, the mortgagee need only prove her mortgage deed, and is not obliged to prove also the payment of the consideration. Minot v. Eaton, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 134.

Third mortgagee buys in the first, and brings his bill to foreclose the second; he need not prove the money actually lent on the third mortgage, the producing an acquittance being sufficient. Holt v. Mill, 2 Vern. 279.

Proof of Second Mortgage by First Mortgagee.]—On a bill to foreclose by first mortgagee against mortgagor and second mortgagee, the plaintiff should prove the second mortgage, otherwise he can only take an inquiry at the first hearing. Guardner v. Boucher, 13 Beav. 68.

By Proof of Handwriting of Witness.]—Mortgage bequeathed to wife of sole subscribing witness of mortgage; proof of his handwriting sufficient proof of execution of mortgage between mortgagor and mortgagee. Inman v. Parsons, 4 Madd. 271.

Deed primâ facie valid.]—A mortgage was executed by S., who was afterwards found lunatic by inquisition as from a date prior to the mortgage. The mortgagee pleaded his claim for foreclosure against the mortgagor and his committee, but did not set out the date from which the mortgagor had been found lunatic. The deed was proved by the surviving attesting witness, who was not cross-examined by the defendants, but they went into evidence to shew that the mortgagor was lunatic both prior to and at the time of the mortgage being executed:—Held, that, the deed being a good one primâ facie, the defendants could not be permitted to shew its invalidity in the present suit (except, semble, by cross-examination of the attesting witness), and that the court would act upon it until it was set aside by a court of law. The usual foreclosure decree was made, with a direction for it not to be drawn up for six months, the defendants to be at liberty in the meantime to take proceedings to set aside the deed. Upon appeal to the Lords Justices, the claim was ordered to be retained for a year, with a direction to the plaintiff to bring an action of ejectment. Jacobs v. Richards, 5 De G. M. & G. 55; 23 L. J., Ch. 557; 18 Jur. 527; 2 Eq. R. 299.

Judgment, primâ facie Evidence.]—In 1818, A. and B. agreed to build a mill at their joint expense, A. undertaking to advance the whole sum. B. gave him a mortgage for 400*l.* as his moiety of the cost. The mill was afterwards sold. In 1831 A. brought an action against B., on the mortgage deed, and obtained a judgment, but took no further steps. In 1837 A. filed a bill of foreclosure, admitting that 240*l.*, part of the mortgage-money, was paid in 1824. B., by his answer, insisted that the whole was satisfied by the mill transaction, and gave in evidence general admissions by the plaintiff to third persons, made before the action at law, to that effect:—Held, that the judgment was primâ facie evidence of the strongest nature that a debt was due at the time, and that it could not be impeached in equity by evidence of conversations and general admissions on the part of the plaintiff, which might have been used as a defence to the action at law. Caldecott v. Williams, 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 26.

Affidavit, by whom to be made.]—A common foreclosure decree was made; but the registrar objected to draw up the decree, on the ground that the affidavit was made by an officer of a public company:—Held, that the affidavit was properly made, and the objection of the registrar was overruled. Consolidated Investment and Insurance Society v. Dodd, 9 W. R. 12.

Copy of Deed and Re-conveyance.]—A mortgage deed could not be produced, and a copy purporting to have been furnished by the solicitor who held the deed was produced on behalf of the plaintiff as evidence of the deed; the plaintiff also deposed to the existence of the mortgage. The defendants had in their answers not expressly challenged the mortgage deed, and had admitted that there had been a reconveyance of part of the property comprised in the mortgage:—Held, that as against them the mortgage deed was sufficiently proved. Heath v. Crealock, 44 L. J., Ch. 157; L. R. 10 Ch. 22; 31 L. T. 650; 23 W. R. 95.

Drafts good secondary Evidence.]—Drafts produced from the proper custody, and bearing indorsement in the handwriting of a solicitor shewing that the deeds were engrossed from them and were duly executed and stamped, and the diary of a deceased clerk containing entries in his handwriting made in the regular course of his business, and shewing that he had drawn the drafts and had attended the execution and stamping of the deeds, were good secondary evidence of the mortgages. Waldy v. Gray, 44 L. J., Ch. 394; L. R. 20 Eq. 238; 32 L. T. 531; 23 W. R. 676.

Interrogating Defendant.]—In every bill for redemption and foreclosure it is relevant for the plaintiff to interrogate the defendant as to the dates of his securities, the amount of money which he has actually advanced, and the rates of interest reserved. Beavan v. Cook, 20 L. T. 689; 17 W. R. 872.

f. Form of Decree.

Common Decree, what.]—The common decree in foreclosure does not direct the delivery up of the title deeds by the mortgagor to the mortgagee in case of foreclosure, but merely that the mortgagor shall be absolutely barred and foreclosed of all right and equity of redemption; and it is only where there is a covenant to deliver them in case of default in payment of the principal money and interest that the court makes such a decree. Wiseman v. Westland, 1 Y. & J. 117; 30 R. R. 765.

In Action by second Mortgagee.]—In an action by a second mortgagee to redeem the first mortgagee, and to foreclose the mortgagor, the proper form of judgment is that in default of the plaintiff redeeming the action is to stand dismissed with costs. Hallett v. Furze, 55 L. J., Ch. 226; 31 Ch. D. 312; 54 L. T. 12; 34 W. R. 225.

Where Debt payable by Instalments.]—Form of foreclosure judgment when mortgage debt is payable by instalments. Greenhough v. Littler, 15 Ch. D. 93; 42 L. T. 144; 28 W. R. 318.

Personal Payment combined with Foreclosure.]—In a foreclosure action, since the Judicature Acts, where both forms of relief are expressly claimed, an order for personal payment may be combined with an order for foreclosure. Gibbon v. Walker, 38 L. T. 217.

Since the Judicature Acts, it is the practice in foreclosure actions to make a personal order for payment of the sum found due for principal and interest. Poulett v. Hill, 62 L. J. Ch. 466; [1893] 1 Ch. 277; 2 R. 288; 68 L. T. 476; 41 W. R. 503—C. A.

A mortgagee, being now entitled to combine in one action his right to judgment on the mortgage covenant against the mortgagor personally with his right to foreclosure, is entitled:—(a) If the amount of debt and interest is proved, admitted, or agreed to at the trial, to judgment for immediate payment of the whole amount; (b) If the amount is not so proved, admitted, or agreed to, to an account of what is due to him for principal and interest in respect thereof, and to judgment for payment of the whole amount immediately the same is certified—unless in either case the judge in his discretion gives time. Semble, the allowance of one month for payment from the date of the certificate is a reasonable exercise of such discretion. Farrer v. Lacy, 55 L. J., Ch. 149; 31 Ch. D. 42; 53 L. T. 515; 34 W. R. 22—C. A.

Where Personal Judgment against Mortgagor.]—Form of judgment in a foreclosure action, when a personal judgment is taken against the mortgagor on his covenant for payment of principal and interest. The form in Grundy v. Grice, Seton on Decrees, 4th ed. vol. ii., p. 1036 (Form No. 2) modified. Hunter v. Myatt, 54 L. J., Ch. 615; 28 Ch. D. 181; 52 L. T. 509; 33 W. R. 411.

Where Widow claims Dower.]—Form of a decree of foreclosure, where a widow claimed dower out of the mortgaged premises, paramount, to some extent, to the mortgage. Jones v. Griffith, 2 Coll. C. C. 207.

On equitable Mortgage.] — By a foreclosure decree on an equitable mortgage, the mortgagor was declared a trustee, and an order was made vesting the estate in the mortgagee. Lechmere v. Clamp, 30 Beav. 218.

A decree for foreclosure in the case of an equitable mortgage ought not to omit the word "foreclose," but ought to contain directions that upon default the mortgagor will be foreclosed, that the hereditaments will be discharged from all equity of redemption, and that a conveyance must be executed. Lees v. Fisher, 22 Ch. D. 283; 31 W. R. 94.

A foreclosure decree upon an equitable mortgage should contain the word "foreclose" in addition to the words used in Seton on Decrees, p. 1126, Form 4. Ib.

—— Against Infants.]—Form of equitable mortgagees' decree, some of the defendants, devisees of the mortgagor, being infants. Lewis v. John, C. P. Cooper, 8; 9 Sim. 366; 7 L. J., Ch. 242.

In a foreclosure action, where the estate of the mortgagor was devised in trust for sale and had become vested in an infant, who was also one of the persons beneficially interested:—Held, that the decree should contain a direction that, in case the mortgagees were not redeemed within six months, the infant should be a trustee for them within the meaning of the Trustee Act, and the executrix of the mortgagor be ordered to convey the estate to the mortgagees on his behalf. Foster v. Parker, 8 Ch. D. 147.

Where Equity divided.]—Form of decree where equity of redemption is divided. Thorneycroft v. Crocket, 7 Jur. 712.

One Decree in Two Causes.]—Where the mortgagor met a foreclosure suit by a bill for an account (the mortgagee being also a trustee), it was held that the court might make one decree in both causes, so as to give the mortgagor any set-off he might be entitled to, or make a decree of foreclosure in the former suit, and a separate decree for an account against the trustee personally in the latter, according to the circumstances and justice of the case. Dodd v. Lydall, 1 Hare, 333.

Where Mortgagee has two Mortgages.]—Form of decree of foreclosure where the mortgagee had two mortgages, by one of which property, belonging partly to A. and partly to B., was conveyed to secure money advanced to A. and B. in different proportions, with a proviso for redemption on payment of the money by them, or either of them; and, by the other, property belonging to A., and partly comprised in the first mortgage, was covenanted to be conveyed to secure the debt of A. Higgins v. Frankis, 15 L. J., Ch. 329; 10 Jur. 328.

—— Both legal and equitable.]—Form of decree for foreclosure where the mortgagee has a legal mortgage for the whole of his debt on one of the mortgagor's estates, and an equitable mortgage for part of his debt on another of the mortgagor's estates. Holmes v. Turner, 7 Hare, 367.

—— Mortgages of both Mortgagor's and Surety's Estates.]—Form of decree in a foreclosure suit, where A., whose estate was already mortgaged to the plaintiff, joined B. as his surety, in a mortgage to the plaintiff of both their estates, for a further sum. Aldworth v. Robinson, 2 Beav. 287.

Separate Orders against Mortgagor and puisne Mortgagee.]—Under a decree of foreclosure against puisne mortgagees and the mortgagor, the mortgagor is not to be foreclosed before the foreclosure has been made absolute against the second mortgagee, and the foreclosure is not to be made absolute against the second mortgagee and the mortgagor by one and the same order. Whitbread v. Lyall, 3 Sm. & G. 314. S. C., 8 De G. M. & G. 383; 25 L. J., Ch. 791; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 671.

Against Official Receiver and puisne Incumbrancers.]—A mortgagor was adjudicated bankrupt, and his estate became vested in the official receiver in bankruptcy for the county of Lancaster. The mortgagee assessed the value of his mortgage security in accordance with the rules contained in the second schedule to the Bankruptcy Act, 1883. The mortgage debt amounted to 4,566*l.* 10*s.* 1*d.*, and the assessed valuation of the mortgage security was 3,500*l.* The mortgagee commenced a foreclosure action against the official receiver and subsequent incumbrancers. Upon motion for judgment in default of pleading:—Held, that the judgment for foreclosure ought to shew on the face of it that the official receiver was entitled to redeem the mortgaged property at a sum less than that at which the subsequent incumbrancers were entitled to redeem the mortgaged property. Knowles v. Dibbs, 60 L. T. 291; 37 W. R. 378.

Decree for Partition, how far incident to Foreclosure or Redemption.]—A decree for partition is not properly incident to a foreclosure or redemption suit in such a way that the owners of the equity of redemption can be allowed to insist on it against the will of the mortgagee, who has no interest in the question. Watkins v. Williams, 3 Mac. & G. 622; 21 L. J., Ch. 601; 16 Jur. 181.

Non-Admission, subsequent Admission, of Debt.]—Where a mortgagor in his defence to a foreclosure action did not admit the mortgage debt, but afterwards admitted it at the trial, the court, in giving judgment for personal payment under the covenant and for foreclosure, declined to grant a month's time for payment. Instone v. Elmslie, 54 L. T. 730; 34 W. R. 592.

Puisne Incumbrancer having Priority.]—Where, in a foreclosure suit, a subsequent incumbrancer is held to have priority by reason of the possession of deeds, in case the first mortgagee elects not to redeem him, the bill will be dismissed against him only, and, as against the subsequent incumbrancers, there will be the usual foreclosure decree. Layard v. Maud, 16 L. T. 738.

Where Rents received by Receiver after Certificate—Liberty to apply.]—When in a foreclosure action the plaintiff, in order to avoid opening the foreclosure by claiming payment of rents come to the hands of the receiver in the action between the date of the certificate and the day fixed for the redemption, submits to be charged in account with a sum certain in the hands of the receiver in respect of such rents, the judgment should reserve liberty to either party to apply for payment of any money come to the hands of the receiver. Lusk v. Sebright, 71 L. T. 59.

After Receiver appointed—Liberty to apply.]—Where, after the commencement of a foreclosure action concerning certain property subject to a mortgage which included the goodwill of a business, a receiver and manager had been appointed, the court directed a proviso to be inserted in the order for foreclosure, that any person redeeming, or in the event of foreclosure the plaintiff, should be at liberty to apply to the judge in chambers for payment of any money in court, or in the hands of the receiver. Smith v. Pearman, 58 L. T. 720; 36 W. R. 681.

—— Special Circumstances.]—On motion for judgment for default of appearance in a foreclosure action, in which a receiver had been appointed, an order in the form made in Coleman v. Llewellin (34 Ch. D. 143) was refused, there being no special circumstances to justify the insertion of the provision therein contained. Cheston v. Wells, 62 L. J., Ch. 468; [1893] 2 Ch. 151; 3 R. 367; 68 L. T. 197; 41 W. R. 374.

Mortgage of Land in Colonies.]—A foreclosure decree being a decree in personam depriving the mortgagor of his personal right to redeem, the court has jurisdiction to make such a decree in respect of a mortgage between an English mortgagor and mortgagee of land in one of the colonies. Paget v. Ede, 43 L. J., Ch. 571; L. R. 18 Eq. 118; 30 L. T. 228; 22 W. R. 625.

Difference between Causes in England and Ireland.]—The course of proceedings in foreclosure causes in Ireland and in England is materially different: in England, it is merely a suit between mortgagor and mortgagee, to bar the equity of redemption of the former; but no sale is directed, and no provision made for creditors, as under similar decrees in this court. Steele v. Phillips, Beat. 192.

For Delivery of Possession.]—A summons for foreclosure asked for delivery of possession in the event of foreclosure. The usual foreclosure order was made without any direction as to the delivery of possession. Default in payment having been made, the order for foreclosure was made absolute. The plaintiff then moved in the action for an order on the defendant to deliver up possession of the mortgaged property:—Held, that such an order ought to be made, and that the plaintiff ought not to be obliged to bring a new action for the purpose of recovering possession. Keith v. Day, 58 L. J., Ch. 118; 39 Ch. D. 452; 60 L. T. 126; 37 W. R. 242—C. A.

After an order absolute for foreclosure made on an originating summons, the court will grant an order for possession, although possession was not asked for by the summons; and will also, on motion, grant an injunction to restrain removal of chattels comprised in the security, and an order for restitution of chattels wrongfully removed. Manchester Banking Co. v. Parkinson, 60 L. T. 258.

An order for foreclosure absolute in a foreclosure action commenced by summons may, as against the defendant mortgagor in possession (he having been served and not appearing), include an order for delivery of possession by him to the plaintiff, even though the summons did not ask for delivery of possession. Best v. Applegate 57 L. J. Ch. 506; 37 Ch. D. 42; 57 L. T. 599; 36 W. R. 397.

Under Ord. XVIII. r. 2, of the rules of the supreme court, Dec. 1885, the court has jurisdiction in a foreclosure action to order delivery of possession where possession is asked, not against a third party, but against the mortgagor, notwithstanding that the plaintiff has not asked for possession either in the writ or statement of claim. Salt v. Edgar, 54 L. T. 374.

The minutes of the order in a mortgagee's action, where possession of the mortgaged premises is (inter alia) claimed, should contain a direction that, in default of the defendant redeeming, he should deliver up possession of the mortgaged premises to the plaintiff, inasmuch as the order for possession is a conditional order like a foreclosure order, and requires to be made absolute like a foreclosure order. Williamson v. Burrage, 56 L. T. 702.

Where an order nisi for foreclosure and possession had been made, the order absolute also provided for possession and was made ex parte. Withall v. Nixon, 54 L. J., Ch. 616; 28 Ch. D. 413; 33 W. R. 565.

An order for the delivery of possession of mortgaged property (forming part of an order for foreclosure absolute) should contain the description of the property contained in the mortgage deed, so that the writ of possession may be filled up in such a way as to enable the sheriff to identify the property. Thynne v. Sarl, 60 L. J., Ch. 590; [1891] 2 Ch. 79; 64 L. T. 781.

By Consent, without Account.]—Form of order for foreclosure taken by consent without account. Boydell v. Manby, 9 Hare (App.) liii.

When new Accounts and several Defendants.]—In a foreclosure action when new accounts and directions are necessary, and there are several defendants, the form of order will follow that suggested by Lord Selborne in Jennings v. Jordan (6 App. Cas. 698), rather than that in Seton on Judgments and Orders, 5th edit., p. 1628. Biddulph v. Billiter Street Offices Co., 13 R. 572; 72 L. T. 834.

Liberty to apply for Sale.]—The court, in making a foreclosure decree, gave liberty to any party to apply in chambers for a sale. Burmester v. Moxon, 35 Beav. 310.

g. Dismissal of Bill to Redeem.

See REDEMPTION, PROCEEDINGS FOR, IN GENERAL, ante, col. 1686.

h. Reference for Inquiry.

Between Defendants.]—An inquiry directed between two defendants. Ede v. Knowles, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 172.

—— As to Priority.]—Upon a bill of foreclosure by first mortgagee, there was a contest between the defendants, the puisne mortgagees, as to their respective priorities. The court held that it must, in the first instance, direct an inquiry. Duberly v. Day, 14 Beav. 9.

—— Decree without Inquiry.]—Decree for foreclosure against divers sub-mortgagees and parties having derivative interest under the mortgagor, subsequent to the plaintiff, without any inquiry as to their respective priorities. Long v. Storie, 9 Hare, 551; 21 L. J., Ch. 521; 16 Jur. 349.

As to Notice of Plaintiff's Title.]—A defendant claiming as a mortgagee, and by his answer denying notice of the plaintiff's title, which was neither alleged by the bill nor proved, an inquiry for the purpose of affecting him with notice was refused, first, upon a petition to vary the minutes, and, again, upon a rehearing. Hardy v. Reeves, 5 Ves. 426.

As to Sum advanced.]—An inquiry as to what sums he had advanced upon the security of the mortgage, and at what times respectively, was granted. Ib.

As to Repairs and Improvements.]—Reference for an inquiry as to substantial repairs and lasting improvements will not be ordered at the hearing on further directions, merely on the statement of counsel for an incumbrancer that such repairs, &c., have been made, unless all parties interested consent; a petition is necessary. Pelly v. Wathen, 5 Hare, 351; 18 L. J., Ch. 281; 14 Jur. 9.

Surplus Fund in Court.]—Where there was a clear surplus fund in court, which had been produced by a sale under a decree in a foreclosure cause, the court, on motion of the plaintiff, who was also a creditor, by judgment subsequent to his mortgage, granted a reference to the remembrancer, to inquire and report who was entitled to the surplus, and whether the applicant had any, and what lien upon it; and, if so, whether there were any, and what, prior liens thereon. Mackay v. Martins, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 331.

Benefit of Infant.]—In a suit for realising a mortgage security where the devisee or heir of the mortgagor is an infant, the court usually directs a reference to the master to inquire whether a sale of the mortgaged premises will be for the benefit of the infant; but, where it is clear that such sale will be for the infant's benefit, the court will direct a sale in the first instance. Davis v. Dowding, 2 Keen, 245; 7 L. J., Ch. 169.

Under 5th Order of May, 1839.]—The court will not direct preliminary inquiries to be made under the 5th order of May, 1839, unless it is plain that they would be directed at the hearing, and would be binding on the parties to the suit. Meinhertzhagen v. Davis, 10 Sim. 289 ; 3 Jur. 1025.

The court will not, under the 5th order of the 9th of May 1839, direct an inquiry in a suit for foreclosure, of who was the heir-at-law of a party who was entitled to the equity of redemption of mortgaged premises. Warner v. Moore, 10 L. J., Ch. 371 ; 5 Jur. 910.

Adding Accounts and Inquires after Judgment.]—When some time after a judgment of foreclosure directing accounts against the plaintiffs as mortgagees in possession, but containing no inquiry or direction as to improper working, a probable case was made out that the mortgaged property had been seriously damaged by the improper working of the mortgagees in possession, or persons acting under their authority :—Held, that the mortgagors should not be absolutely foreclosed and left to the remedy of proceeding against the plaintiffs, either as mortgagees or as lessees in respect of their breach of the covenants of the lease, but were entitled to an inquiry with reference to the injury caused, and to a declaration charging the plaintiffs with the amount of the loss or damage caused thereby. Such an inquiry should be obtained either by means of a supplemental judgment, or by an addition to the existing judgment. Taylor v. Mostyn, 55 L. J., Ch. 893 ; 33 Ch. D. 226 ; 55 L. T. 651—C. A.

Exception to Report.]—Leave given, under the circumstances, to except to a report, although the party had not carried in objections to it. Wood v. Lambirth, 9 Sim. 195.

Jurisdiction under.]—To a foreclosure bill, filed by a mortgagee, stating subsequent incumbrances, and that some specified defendants claimed an interest in the mortgaged property, one of these defendants put in an answer claiming to be entitled under a security which was void for usury. By the decree the usual reference was directed as to incumbrances and their priorities. The defendant claimed as an incumbrancer under this decree, and the master disallowed his claim :—Held, that the master had jurisdiction so to decide, although the security was not impeached by the pleadings. Mansfield (Earl) v. Ogle, 7 De G. M. & G. 181 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 450 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 603 ; 3 W. R. 557.

Form.]—Form of inquiry in a bill of foreclosure, where the defendant suggests by his answer that the plaintiff has been in possession and paid himself interest. Dobson v. Lee, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 714.

Practice on.]—Where the plaintiff in a foreclosure suit asks to be redeemed by, or to foreclose, a defendant whose security, stated upon the pleadings, is questionable but not questioned by the plaintiff, he can only proceed against the defendant as being a person entitled to redeem, or as having no right to redeem ; and, therefore, where, on an inquiry before the master as to what incumbrances affected the estates, a controversy arose as to the validity of a security which was not questioned in the pleadings, it was held, allowing the exception, that it is not in accordance with the practice of the court to contest questions in the master's office not raised by the pleadings. Baker v. Bradley, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 415.

—— Staying Proceedings.]—On a reference in a foreclosure suit to ascertain what is due to the plaintiff for principal, interest and costs, the plaintiff must ascertain his rights, and have his costs taxed, or the defendant may apply to have the proceedings in the cause stayed. Creed v. Byrne, 1 Hog. 108.

See also next subdivision.

i. Accounts.

Form of.]—Form of inquiry and accounts in a bill of foreclosure, where the defendant suggests in his answer that the plaintiff has been in possession and paid himself interest. Dobson v. Lee, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 714.

Account of Costs.]—The plaintiff in a foreclosure action is, as a general rule, entitled to an account of only principal and interest due to him on his mortgage, and of the costs of the action. To entitle him to an account of any other costs he must make out a special case. But, where the plaintiff was the transferee of a mortgage, on which interest was overdue at the date of the transfer, and the mortgagor was a bankrupt : —Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to an account of costs generally. Bolingbroke v. Hinde, 53 L. J., Ch. 704 ; 25 Ch. D. 795 ; 32 W. R. 427.

Puisne Mortgagee not a Party.]—Puisne mortgagee not bound by an account taken in a foreclosure cause, to which he was not a party. Dick v. Butler, 1 Moll. 42.

Surcharge.]—A mortgagee having notice of a judgment before his foreclosure and purchase of the equity of redemption, the judgment creditor may go before the master and surcharge and falsify the mortgagee's account, but the mortgagee is not to account for the profits since the decree of foreclosure. Bird v. Gandy, 7 Vin. Abr. 45, pl. 20.

Bill of Review.]—It having been referred to a master to take an account between mortgagor and mortgagee, under a foreclosure, and the report being confirmed in 1736, Lord Hardwicke dismissed defendant's petition for a bill of review, as it appeared that his attorney, solicitor and agent had then attended the settling of the account before the master, by which defendant should be bound. Gould v. Tancred, 2 Atk. 533.

Working out successive Foreclosures.]—In working out a decree for successive foreclosures, an order absolute to foreclose the person having the first right to redeem must be obtained, before the chief clerk can proceed to take an account of subsequent interest and costs, and to appoint a time for redemption by the person next entitled to redeem. Whitbread v. Lyall, 8 De G. M. & G. 383 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 791 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 671. S. C., 3 Sm. & G. 314.

—— Interest, computing.]—When a judgment for foreclosure, obtained by a first mortgagee against subsequent mortgagees, and the mortgagor directs successive redemptions, and foreclosure in default of redemption, and a puisne mortgagee fails to pay the amount found due from him to the prior mortgagee for principal, interest and costs, and is accordingly foreclosed, in taking the account against the person next entitled to redeem, subsequent interest ought to be computed on the whole sum found due from the person who has failed to redeem, i.e. upon the interest found due from him, as well as upon the principal and costs. Elton v. Curteis, 51 L. J., Ch. 60; 19 Ch. D. 49; 45 L. T. 435; 30 W. R. 316.

Interest — Form of Order.]—A mortgagee claimed payment, or, in default, sale or foreclosure. Judgment was given for immediate payment of principal and interest proved to be due, and, in default, for foreclosure, the account being directed with interest at the rate provided by the mortgage, the plaintiff bringing into account what, if anything, should be received under the judgment. Lee v. Dunsford, 54 L. J., Ch. 108; 51 L. T. 590.

Rents and Profits in Receiver's Hands—Form of Order.]—In taking the usual account of what is due on the security in a foreclosure action where a receiver has been appointed, the mortgagees must be charged with the whole of the rents and profits in the receiver's hands at the date of the chief clerk's certificate, and not merely with such a sum, if any, as they submit to be charged with in respect thereof. Form of order in Barber v. Jeckells (Seton, p. 2142) corrected accordingly. Simmons v. Blandy, 66 L. J., Ch. 83; [1897] 1 Ch. 19; 75 L. T. 646; 45 W. R. 296.

Irregularity of Certificate.]—To facilitate the computation of interest in a foreclosure suit, the chief clerk's certificate was dated the 15th July, 1874, but was not signed by the chief clerk till the 31st July, 1874:—Held, that the certificate was irregular. Buckeridge v. Whalley, 23 W. R. 224.

—— Waiver.]—The defendant attended several appointments to settle the certificate between the 15th and 31st July:—Held, that, as he must have known that the 15th July was fixed as the date of the certificate, he had by his conduct waived the irregularity. Ib.

Abstaining from bringing in—Order insisted on.]—Mortgagees abstained from bringing in the accounts directed by a foreclosure judgment on the ground that needless expense would be occasioned thereby, the security being alleged to be already insufficient:—Held, that, there being no evidence before the court that the taking of the accounts would be a reckless proceeding, the mortgagors were entitled to an order on the mortgagees to bring in the accounts, but that the order must be prefaced with a statement that it was insisted on by the mortgagors, and be without prejudice to an application by the mortgagees to stay proceedings in case they should be able to prove the proceedings to be reckless. Taylor v. Mostyn, 53 L. J., Ch. 89; 25 Ch. D. 48; 49 L. T. 483; 32 W. R. 256.

—— Costs.]—Whether this statement would give the court jurisdiction as to the costs if it turned out that the accounts had been asked for vexatiously and unreasonably, and whether the court would not on a substantive application by the plaintiffs stay the taking the accounts if it was satisfactorily shewn that taking them would be useless, quære. Ib.

Practice—Special Circumstances, when to be mentioned.] — Any special circumstances affecting the taking of an account under a foreclosure judgment should be brought to the attention of the court at the trial. Sanguinetti v. Stuckey's Bank, 65 L. J., Ch. 340; [1896] 1 Ch. 502; 74 L. T. 269; 44 W. R. 308.

The trustee in bankruptcy of a mortgagor having, after a foreclosure judgment directing the usual accounts and inquiries, claimed to be entitled to have the accounts taken on the footing that he was entitled to redeem on payment of the amount at which the mortgagee had valued his security in the bankruptcy:—Held, that the trustee should have asked at the hearing for a special declaration, and that in the absence of any such declaration the question could not be raised during the mechanical operation of taking an ordinary account. Ib.

General Order, 22nd June, 1842.]—The general order of 22nd June, 1842, is not to have the effect of involving plaintiffs in the account of the sums due on incumbrances puisne to their demands. Davis v. Rowan, 2 Con. & L. 154; 3 Dr. & War. 478.

Rules of Court, 1875.]—When an order for preliminary accounts is obtained under rules of court, 1875, Ord. XV. r. 1, after issuing the writ of summons in a foreclosure action, and after simple appearance to the writ by the defendant, the order should not prejudice the trial of any issues which might be raised by the pleading subsequently delivered by inserting as of common form the words "and the judge not requiring any trial of this action other than this application." Gatti v. Webster, 48 L. J., Ch. 763; 12 Ch. D. 771; 41 L. T. 18; 27 W. R. 935. See also Greenough v. Littler, 15 Ch. D. 93; 42 L. T. 144; 28 W. R. 318.

The plaintiff, after issuing the writ in a redemption action, took out a summons for an account under (Jud. Act) Ord. XV. r. 1:—Held, that the order under the summons must be limited to preliminary accounts, and that the usual terms of a final judgment for redemption ought not to be added without the plaintiff's consent. Clover v. Wilts and Western Benefit Building Society, 53 L. J., Ch. 622; 50 L. T. 382; 32 W. R. 895.

Rules of Court, 1883.]—In foreclosure actions, where there is no preliminary question to be tried, the plaintiff may obtain, under rules of supreme court, 1883, Ord. XV., an order for an account with all necessary inquiries, and the usual directions as in a common foreclosure judgment nisi. Smith v. Davies or Davies v. Smith, 54 L. J., Ch. 278; 28 Ch. D. 650; 52 L. T. 19; 33 W. R. 211.

Summons in Chambers—Costs.]—Such order should be applied for by summons in chambers, and not by motion in court, and only the costs of a summons in chambers attended by counsel will be allowed. Ib.

j. Revivor.

Upon Death of Plaintiff.]—The heir-at-law of a mortgagee of real estate, of which there was no devise, applied for a common order to revive under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 52, a foreclosure suit abated by the death of the sole plaintiff:—Held, that the order ought to be made. Ward v. Shakeshaft, 1 Dr. & Sm. 607; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1229; 5 L. T. 342; 10 W. R. 6.

Upon Transfer.]—When a decree has been made in a foreclosure suit, and the plaintiff has subsequently transferred his interest, the transferee may obtain an order of revivor under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 52, whether the transfer took place before or after the chief clerk had made his certificate. Bibby v. Naylor, 43 L. J., Ch. 405; L. R. 17 Eq. 14; 22 W. R. 52.

O. SALE BY COURT.

1. When Ordered, 1757.
2. Leave to Bid, and Reserve, 1766.
3. Conveyance, 1768.
4. Other Matters, 1768.

1. When Ordered.

a. In General, 1757.
b. Equitable Mortgages, 1765.

a. In General.

Generally.]—Sale of plantation decreed for money charged on it. Gascoigne v. Douglas, Dick. 431.

Tenant for life subject to mortgage is not entitled to pray sale; though mortgagee may, if security be scanty. Kinnoul (Earl) v. Money, 3 Swanst. 208, n.

Mortgagee may pray a sale of the mortgaged premises in the first instance, where the heir and personal representative are the same person, and the personal estate is clearly deficient. Tweddell v. Tweddell, 2 Bro. C. C. 155. S. P., Daniel v. Skipwith, Ib.

Charge on Drilling-hall.]—The court will give effect, by sale, to a charge on a building used as a drilling-hall for a volunteer corps. Grissell v. Money, 38 L. J., Ch. 312.

In Foreclosure Suit.]—Immediate sale directed on a foreclosure suit, instead of the common foreclosure decree. Anning v. Lavers, 1 W. R. 19.

Application by the mortgagor for sale, instead of foreclosure. Boydell v. Manby, 9 Hare (App.) liii.

Conveyance on Trust.]—A conveyance of an estate to A., in trust that the same should stand chargeable with a sum of money and interest, and subject thereto in trust for B., with a power of sale by A., upon nonpayment, after notice, does not entitle him to a decree of foreclosure, but only for a sale. Sampson v. Pattison, 1 Hare, 533.

Mortgage for Term and Trust of Fee.]—Where money is secured by mortgage for a term, and by trust for sale of the fee, the mortgagee, if he files a bill praying for a sale only, is not entitled to foreclose the fee, nor, unless he amends his bill, to foreclose the term. Kerrick v. Saffery, 7 Sim. 317; 4 L. J., Ch. 162.

Assignment on Trust to sell.]—Certain tenements were, upon a loan of 200*l.*, assigned by the owner to the lender for a long term of years, upon trust to sell, and out of the proceeds, first, to pay the costs of sale; secondly, to pay the 200*l.* and interest; and thirdly, to pay the surplus to the owner. The deed contained a covenant by the owner to pay to the lender the 200*l.* and interest at the end of six months, and also absolute covenants by the owner for title, as upon a mortgage, and for quiet enjoyment by the lender after default. Upon a bill to foreclose the equity of redemption in the form No. 6, of schedule A. to the orders of April, 1850:—Held, that the case was one for a sale, and not for a foreclosure. Jenkin v. Row, 5 De G. & Sm. 107.

Where Agreement for Payment out of Rents of other Lands.]—Where the agreement of the parties to a loan is that the money shall be repaid by the creditor retaining the rents of certain lands of which he was tenant to the debtor, a sale of the lands will not be decreed. Maguire v. O'Reilly, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 335; 3 Jo. & Lat. 224.

In Exoneration of mortgaged Estate.]—By a family settlement it was agreed that the K. estate should exonerate the L. estate from a charge of 60,000*l.* which affected them both, and the trustees were empowered, from time to time, as occasion should require, to sell the whole or part of the K. estate to indemnify the L. estate. The L. estate was afterwards mortgaged, with the benefit of the provision from exoneration, and this mortgage came by assignment to the mortgagees of the 60,000*l.* A second mortgage of the L. estate was made to the plaintiff, subject to the former mortgage thereof. The plaintiff filed his bill to have the K. estate sold for relieving the L. estate from the 60,000*l.* The interest on this sum not being in arrear, and no demand having been made for payment of the principal, and the defendant, who was beneficially entitled, undertaking to keep down the interest, and to give notice to the plaintiff of any application for payment of the principal, the Court of Appeal held, that no occasion for the sale had arisen; but retained the bill on the file, the plaintiff paying all costs up to the hearing. Rooke v. Kensington (Lord), 25 L. J., Ch. 567; 4 W. R. 582—L. JJ.

Notwithstanding Limitation of Right to sell.]—The common order for sale made on a mortgage, with power of sale, notwithstanding a proviso that it should not be exercised for five years, and the mortgagor had become bankrupt within the five years. Bignold, Ex parte, Theobald, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 477; 3 Deac. 151; 7 L. J., Bk. 35.

Where Covenant not to redeem.]—A mortgage contained a covenant by the mortgagor not to redeem for eight years, and, five years being yet unexpired, the mortgagor presented a petition for sale in the usual form:—Held, that the covenant was cause against making an absolute order for sale. Hone's Estate, In re, Ir. R. 8 Eq. 65.

doubtful evidence of title, and possession for twenty years without payment of interest, demand, or acknowledgment. Christophers v. Sparke, 2 J. & W. 223.

Right—On Construction of Deed.]—By a deed, property was conveyed to the sons of the settlor upon certain trusts for the benefit of the children and grandchildren of the settlor. The trustees had power to sell, and extensive powers of management, and provisions were made that any trustee advancing money to the settlor, or paying off any part of a certain mortgage debt, should be entitled to a charge by way of mortgage on the estate. One of the trustees advanced considerable sums to the settlor, and paid off part of the mortgage debt:—Held, on the construction of the deed, that the trustee was not entitled to have such a mortgage on the estate as would empower him to foreclosure, and was entitled only to a sale. Tennant v. Trenchard, 38 L. J., Ch. 169; L. R. 4 Ch. 537; 20 L. T. 856.

Where Infants interested.]—Although there are infants interested in the equity of redemption of property (devised to trustees subject to mortgages), the court will direct an immediate sale where it appears to be for the benefit of the infants. Cockburn v. Ankett, 3 W. R. 641.

In Bankruptcy.]—The court will not, sitting in bankruptcy, on behalf of the sureties of a bankrupt, direct a sale of mortgaged premises for payment of the debt secured by recognizance, or for payment of any other security except a mortgage. Usher, Ex parte, 1 Ball & B. 197.

Resale after Purchase by Bankrupt's Assignee.]—An assignee who was also a mortgagee of the bankrupt's freehold property having purchased it for himself when it was put up for sale, the estate was ordered to be resold, subject to any claim of the assignee by virtue of his mortgage. Turvill, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 346.

In Prejudice of Creditors.]—Where mortgagee is a creditor of trustee under will of estate to pay debts, and advances further moneys to trustee for payment of them, and takes mortgage of estate knowing of trust, he cannot have a sale of estate in prejudice of other creditors of testator. Turner, Ex parte, 9 Mod. 418.

For Benefit of Bankrupt's Estate.]—Where there have been several mortgages of different estates by a bankrupt for distinct debts to one and the same mortgagee, and the latter petitions to have a consolidated account taken of what is due on all the securities, and the amount realised by sale of all or any of the mortgaged estates, and the circumstances of the case shew that such a course would be beneficial to the bankrupt's estate, the court would adopt it. Berridge, Ex parte, 3 Mont. D. & D. 464; 7 Jur. 1141.

Against Executors.]—Semble, the mortgagee may maintain a suit against the executors of the mortgagor for a sale of the property comprised in the security, and for the payment of any deficiency out of the general estate of the testator. King v. Smith, 2 Hare, 239; 7 Jur. 694.

Against Widow and Devisees in Trust.]—R., by indenture, in 1851 conveyed freehold lands and tenements unto and to the use of B. and M., their heirs and assigns, to secure repayment of 3,000*l.* and interest, but subject to redemption. The indenture contained a power to the mortgagees, after six months' notice, to sell the premises, and to hold the moneys arising thereby upon the trusts therein mentioned, for better securing the repayment of the mortgage-moneys. The mortgagor died in 1856, having by his will devised and bequeathed all his real and personal property for the benefit, as to the real estate, of his wife for life; and after her decease, upon trust, as to both the real and personal estates, for the benefit of his twelve nephews and nieces. B. and M. afterwards, in conformity with the terms of the power, gave notice of their intention to exercise the power of sale at the expiration of six months, if their debt was not previously paid; but in 1857 they, instead of selling under the power, pursuant to their notice, filed a bill against the widow of the mortgagor and his devisees in trust, praying for an account of the mortgage debt, that the premises might be sold under the direction of the court, and that the sum found due to the plaintiffs in respect of the debt might be paid out of the proceeds of sale, together with all the costs of the suit:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to a decree in the terms of the prayer. Hutton v. Sealy, 27 L. J., Ch. 263; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 450.

At Request of Second Mortgagee—Settled Property.]—At the request of a second mortgagee, the court ordered a sale of some settled property that had been mortgaged, and for foreclosure in case a sale were not effected. Saul v. Pattinson, 55 L. J., Ch. 831; 54 L. T. 670; 34 W. R. 561.

Mortgage by Beneficiary — Mortgage by Trustee.]—A bishop's lease was assigned to a trustee, in trust for the husband for life, then to secure a jointure to the wife, and, after her decease, in trust for the husband absolutely; and the husband covenanted to procure the lease to be renewed. The husband subsequently mortgaged his interest in the lease; and, having neglected to procure the lease to be renewed, the trustee mortgaged the legal estate under the lease, for the purpose of obtaining money wherewith to procure a renewal. A renewal was afterwards executed to the mortgagee of the trustee:—Held, that, although the mortgagee of the husband was entitled to redeem the mortgagee of the trustee, he was not entitled to have the legal estate in the lease sold for payment of his demands. Tremble v. Simpson, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 98.

Property unproductive—Discretion of Court.]—When a mortgagee of leasehold property which was unlet and could not be let, and was consequently unproductive, asked in a suit for foreclosure or sale, for an immediate sale, under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, and the court below decreed accordingly, the Court of Appeal declined to interfere with what the court below had done. Foster v. Harvey, 4 De G. J. & S. 59; 9 L. T. 404; 12 W. R. 92; 3 N. R. 98.

Property unlikely to Sell.]—In an action for foreclosure by first mortgagees of a residential estate and plots of freehold and leasehold lands in different places, the second mortgagees and an alleged incumbrancer asked for a sale. The first mortgagees and the owner of the equity of redemption asked for foreclosure, the latter anticipating that the property might increase in value, and allow of redemption. The court was not satisfied as to the sufficiency or insufficiency of the security; but, considering that the property was in various places, and not likely to sell, except as a speculation, in one lot, declined to exercise its discretion by ordering a sale. Provident Clerks' Association v. Lewis, 62 L. J., Ch. 89; 67 L. T. 644.

Rents insufficient to keep down Interest.]—Where leaseholds were subject to a first mortgage, an annuity and subsequent incumbrances, and the rents were insufficient to keep down the interest on the first mortgage:—Held, that it was a proper case for an immediate sale at the first mortgagee's instance. Phillips v. Gutteridge, 4 De G. & J. 531.

Notwithstanding Third Mortgagee claiming Foreclosure and Redemption.]—Decree for sale ordered, at the request of the first and second mortgagees and the mortgagor, notwithstanding the third incumbrancer insisted on a decree for foreclosure and redemption, the value of the property not being proved. Wickham v. Nicholson, 19 Beav. 38.

Defendant not appearing at Hearing.]—In a foreclosure claim, the defendants appeared to the claim, but, though duly summoned, did not appear at the hearing. The plaintiff asked for an immediate sale. The court declined to direct an immediate sale, but ordered that an account should be taken, and that, in default of payment within a short period, the property should be sold. Smith v. Robinson, 1 Sm. & G. 140; 22 L. J., Ch. 482; 1 W. R. 123.

By Consent in Foreclosure Decree.]—On pronouncing a final decree in a foreclosure suit, the court will not order an immediate sale, however desirable it may appear, except upon consent. Betham v. Mitchell, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 218.

After Decree for Foreclosure.]—After a decree for foreclosure, but before it was drawn up, a sale was directed on the application of one of the defendants, a puisne mortgagee, with the consent of the prior mortgagees, in the absence of the mortgagor, against whom the bill had been taken pro confesso. Woodford v. Brooking, L. R. 17 Eq. 425; 22 W. R. 683.

Under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, the court has power after decree for foreclosure to direct a sale. On the petition of an insolvent mortgagor and two of his creditors, with the concurrence of the plaintiff (the first incumbrancer), the court, after a decree in a foreclosure suit, and upon payment into court of a sum sufficient to indemnify a puisne incumbrancer, made an order for a sale. Laslett v. Cliffe, 2 Sm. & G. 278; 2 W. R. 536.

Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.]—Principles on which the court acts in directing a sale of a mortgaged estate, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86. Hurst v. Hurst, 16 Beav. 372; 22 L. J., Ch. 538; 1 W. R. 105.

Under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, the court has a discretion, and will not direct the sale of an incumbered estate, unless it is manifestly for the benefit of all parties. Ib.

Under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, the court requires a case to be made for a sale instead of a foreclosure. Robert v. Price, 1 W. R. 303.

A sale will not in general be ordered under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, instead of foreclosure, unless there is such complication that the common decree cannot be conveniently worked. Hiorns v. Holtom, 16 Beav. 259; 16 Jur. 1077.

The court refused, on the application of the mortgagee, after a decree of foreclosure had been made, to vary the decree by directing a sale, under the 48th section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86. Girdlestone v. Lavender, 9 Hare (App.) liii.; 16 Jur. 1081.

—— Consent of Mortgagor.]—Under statute 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, the court will not make a decree for sale instead of foreclosure without the consent of the mortgagor, except under special circumstances. Probert v. Price, 1 Eq. Rep. 51.

The court has power, in a foreclosure suit, under s. 48 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, to make an immediate order for sale, if it thinks fit, without the consent of the mortgagor. Under the circumstances the court directed a sale within three months. Newman v. Selfe, 33 Beav. 522; 33 L. J., Ch. 527; 10 L. T. 152; 12 W. R. 564.

—— Where Mortgagee in Possession.]—Mortgaged premises were a distillery, at which no business was carried on, and held under a lease, of which about twenty-five years were to run, and on which several subsequent mortgagees disputed their respective priorities. The mortgagee was in possession, and liable to the rents and covenants in the lease. No income was derived from the property:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to a decree for immediate sale under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, instead of one for foreclosure. Foster v. Harvey, 4 De G. J. & S. 59; 9 L. T. 404; 12 W. R. 92.

—— Where Infants interested.]—In a foreclosure suit under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, an immediate sale will be ordered, notwithstanding that infants are interested in the equity of redemption, without inquiring whether such sale is for their benefit. Wigham v. Measor, 5 W. R. 394.

—— At instance of Subsequent Incumbrancer—Deposit to cover Expense.]—In a foreclosure suit a sale was directed, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, at the instance of a subsequent incumbrancer, upon deposit of 200*l.*, sufficient to cover the expenses of an abortive sale, and upon a bidding being reserved sufficient to cover the amount found due to the plaintiff. Whitbread v. Roberts, 28 L. J., Ch. 431; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 113; 7 W. R. 216.

—— Terms.]—Whatever other terms may be imposed by the court in its discretion, upon a mortgagor asking a sale instead of a foreclosure under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, a deposit to cover the expense of a sale must be made. Observations as to the terms, and amount of deposit. Bellamy v. Cockle, 23 L. J., Ch. 456; 18 Jur. 465; 2 Eq. R. 435; 2 W. R. 326.

On Interlocutory Application.]—The court has no power to order a sale under s. 48 of the Chancery Improvement Act, on interlocutory application, but only where, before the act, foreclosure might have been decreed. Wayn v. Lewis, 1 Drew. 487; 22 L. J., Ch. 1051; 1 W. R. 344.

Sect. 55 of the stat. 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, is applicable only to cases in which, for the protection of property or other like cause, it is necessary to apply to the court for a sale, and it was not intended to enable parties, in a contested suit, to obtain, upon an interlocutory application before the hearing, a decision upon the questions in contest. Prince v. Cooper, 16 Beav. 546; 23 L. J., Ch. 343.

The 55th section of the Chancery Procedure Act, 1852, does not authorise the court in an ordinary foreclosure action to direct a sale on an interlocutory application. London and County Banking Co. v. Dover, 48 L. J., Ch. 336; 11 Ch. D. 204; 27 W. R. 749.

Jurisdiction — Sale any Time before Foreclosure absolute — Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 25.]—A decree for successive redemptions and foreclosures having been obtained in an action by a second mortgagee against the first mortgagee and several successive incumbrancers, the second mortgagee redeemed the first, and then applied for a sale of the mortgaged property:—Held, that under the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, s. 25, the court has jurisdiction to order a sale of mortgaged property in a foreclosure or redemption action at any time before the suit is concluded by foreclosure absolute, and a sale was ordered. Union Bank of London v. Ingram, 51 L. J., Ch. 508; 20 Ch. D. 463; 46 L. T. 507; 30 W. R. 375—C. A.

At Request of Second Mortgagee—Conveyancing Act, 1881.]—In an action for foreclosure by first mortgagees of a building estate at Manchester, the second mortgagees and mortgagor requested a sale, and offered to pay into court a sum sufficient to meet the costs of sale. The value of the estate was insufficient to cover what was due on the first mortgage; but the applicants produced evidence stating that since the date of the action such value had, in consequence of the subsequent passing of the Manchester Ship Canal Act, increased, and was likely to continuously increase:—Held, that the court had no power to grant the application, notwithstanding the discretion conferred by the Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 25, sub-s. 2. Merchant Banking Co. v. London and Hanseatic Bank, 55 L. J., Ch. 479.

Under Conveyancing Act, 1881.]—Under s. 25 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, the court has power in a redemption action to order a sale of the mortgaged property on an interlocutory application made before the trial of the action by a person interested in the equity of redemption. In an action by the owner of the equity of redemption of property, subject to several mortgages, for the redemption of the mortgages, the plaintiff, soon after the issue of the writ, applied by summons for an order giving him liberty to sell the mortgaged property, and asking that he might have the conduct of the sale. The first and second mortgagees opposed the application, the other supported it:—Held, that an order for sale ought to be made, but that a reserved price must be fixed large enough to cover what was due on the first and second mortgages, and that the plaintiff must give security for the costs of the sale. The conduct of the sale was given to the plaintiff, on the ground that he was more interested than the first or second mortgagees in obtaining as large a price as possible for the property. And it was ordered that the sale should take place out of court, and that the proceeds of sale should be paid into court. Woolley v. Colman, 51 L. J., Ch. 854; 21 Ch. D. 169; 46 L. T. 737; 30 W. R. 769.

Where one tenant in common has mortgaged his interest in the property to another tenant in common, the mortgagor cannot enforce a sale of the property against the will of the mortgagee, except on the terms of paying off the mortgage, and this rule is unaffected by sub-s. 2 of s. 25 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881. Gibbs v. Haydon, 47 L. T. 184; 30 W. R. 726.

Upon motion for judgment in an action where foreclosure alone is claimed by the mortgagee, and the mortgagor does not appear, the court will not exercise its discretion under s. 25, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, unless the mortgagor has had notice of the mortgagee's intention to ask for a sale instead of foreclosure of the mortgaged premises. South-Western District Bank v. Turner, 47 L. T. 433; 31 W. R. 113.

Setting Aside Order for Sale.]—A bill to foreclose having been filed in this case, the court made a decree and ordered the mortgaged lands to be sold; afterwards a third person, who had paid off the mortgage and taken an assignment thereof and of the decree of foreclosure, applied to the court to set aside their order for sale, which the court refusing, he appealed to the lords, by whom the order of refusal was affirmed with costs. Crowe v. Halliday, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 50.

Extension of Decree.]—On bill by first mortgagee to foreclose and sell a competent part, the decree could not be extended, except by consent of the mortgagor, to sell a further part sufficient to cover the demands of subsequent charges made by defendants: it is limited to provide for the plaintiff and prior incumbrancers; but such subsequent incumbrancers brought before the court, if they do not redeem, are entitled to costs. Ellis v. Molloy, 1 Moll. 536.

Practice—Form.]—An order for sale made on a claim for foreclosure, at the request of the mortgagee, such sale to be "one month after the judge's clerk shall have made his certificate of the amount of the principal, interest and costs due to the mortgagee, if such amount shall not be paid." Staines v. Rudlin, 9 Hare (App.) liii. n.; 16 Jur. 965.

—— Accounts.]—A sale of mortgaged property, consisting of freehold and leasehold premises, and a policy of life insurance, ordered in a foreclosure suit, at the request of the mortgagee. The mortgagors were bankrupt, and the suit was against their assignees and against incumbrancers subsequent to the plaintiff. The decree directed the accounts of what was due to the several incumbrancers, and directed the proceeds of the different property to be distinguished. Cator v. Reeves, 9 Hare (App.) liii. n.; 16 Jur. 1004.

In Adminstration Suits.]—See EXECUTOR AND ADMINISTRATOR.

b. Equitable Mortgages.

i. In General, 1765.
ii. By Deposit, 1765.

i. In General.

Extent of Saleable Interest.]—An equitable mortgagee, from vendee who has not paid purchase-money, can sell bankrupt's interest only, unless vendor consents, and the court will not act till he is served. Wright, Ex parte, Watts, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 49.

If Mortgagor Dead.]—An equitable mortgagee, if the mortgagor is dead, is entitled to have the estate sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of his debt, and to stand as a creditor, for the balance (if any) on the general assets of the mortgagor. Brocklehurst v. Jessop, 7 Sim. 438.

Benefit of Infant.]—On a bill filed by an equitable mortgagee praying a sale, the court will order an immediate sale, although the heir of the mortgagor is an infant, if it appears that such a sale will be for the benefit of the infant. Redshaw v. Newbold, 12 Jur. 833.

Sale under Agreement for Equitable Mortgage.]—The agreement for an equitable mortgage must be free from all taint and suspicion; otherwise, the court will not make the usual order for the sale of it. Nunn, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 393.

Where Contest as to Priority.]—Where a contest existed between equitable mortgagees as to priority, and a question arose whether the one who had the title deeds would be bound to give them up, the difficulty was removed by ordering a sale, and all parties to concur therein, reserving the rights of the parties as against the purchase-money. Langstaff v. Nicholson, 25 Beav. 160.

Where Sale rejected by Assignees.]—A mortgagee of a term gave an equitable mortgage, and subsequently purchased the equity of redemption:—Held, that the equitable mortgagee was entitled to a sale of the equity of redemption, if rejected by the assignees. Tuffnell, Ex parte, Watts, In re, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 620; 4 Deac. & C. 29.

ii. By Deposit.

Right.]—Where an equitable security is given by the deposit of deeds, the plaintiff, on a bill brought to give effect to his security, is entitled to a decree for a sale. Pain v. Smith, 2 Myl. & K. 417.

Running Balance.]—On a claim by an equitable mortgagee under a deposit of title deeds, with a memorandum for securing a running balance, limited to a certain amount, the court will direct a sale. Lloyd v. Whittey, 22 L. J., Ch. 1038; 17 Jur. 754.

Pledgee of Personal Chattels.]—The doctrine, that an equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds is entitled to foreclosure, does not extend to a pledgee of personal chattels. Carter v. Wake, 46 L. J., Ch. 841; 4 Ch. D. 605.

A. deposited with B. certain Canada railway bonds as security for a debt. On bill filed by B. for foreclosure or sale:—Held, that B. was entitled to an order for sale only. Ib.

As against Prior Voluntary Conveyance.]—An equitable mortgage by deposit of title deeds, with an agreement in writing by the party making the deposit to execute a formal mortgage of the property to the mortgagee for the balance which might be due to him, constitutes the equitable mortgagee a purchaser for good consideration within the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4, in respect of such balance; and, it being a term of the agreement that the mortgage to be executed should contain a power of sale, the court, on a bill to set aside a prior voluntary conveyance by the mortgagor as fraudulent and void under the statute 27 Eliz. c. 4, decreed that on default of payment the mortgaged property should be sold. Lister v. Turner, 5 Hare, 281; 15 L. J., Ch. 336; 10 Jur. 751.

Agreement with Deposit—Effect of.]—An agreement in writing, accompanying a deposit of deeds, to charge lands with a sum of money, is nothing more than an equitable charge enforceable in equity by having the money raised by sale or mortgage, and gives no right to foreclose, nor to ask for a legal mortgage. Matthews v. Goodday, 31 L. J., Ch. 282; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 90; 5 L. T. 572; 10 W. R. 148.

A contract to charge land, and also, if required, to give a legal mortgage, accompanied by a deposit of deeds, gives a right to a sale, but does not compel the mortgagee to take a legal mortgage. Ib.

Under Conveyancing Act, 1881, s. 25.]—An equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds is entitled under s. 25, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, for an order for sale instead of foreclosure, although there is no memorandum of the charge and no agreement by the mortgagor to execute a legal mortgage. Oldham v. Stringer, 51 L. T. 895; 33 W. R. 251.

Where an equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds applied, under s. 25, sub-s. 2, of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, for an order for sale instead of foreclosure, there being a memorandum of the charge, and an agreement by the mortgagor to execute a legal mortgage, the court made an order for sale of the property, such sale not to take place until three months after the chief clerk's certificate, as to the amount due to the plaintiff, should be filed; but refused to order an immediate sale after such certificate. Green v. Biggs, 52 L. T. 680.

2. Leave to Bid, and Reserve.

Generally.]—Mortgagee of premises to be sold under the general order, permitted to bid at the sale. Duncane, Ex parte, Buck. 18.

Leave to the plaintiff to bid at the sale without taking from him the carriage of the decree, where he was the first incumbrancer, and the property clearly insufficient to pay his demand. Steele v. Devonport, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 339.

Trustee, Beneficiaries objecting.]—If any of the cestuis que trustent object, a trustee of an estate, though also a mortgagee, will not be allowed to bid at a sale of the estate directed by the court; but, semble, if the estate is not sold at the sale, the trustee may be allowed to become the purchaser under proposals to the court. Tennant v. Trenchard, 38 L. J., Ch. 169; L. R. 4 Ch. 537; 20 L. T. 856.

Incumbrancers.] — Incumbrancers will be allowed to bid at the sale of the premises charged; but the sale must not be under their direction. Slack, Ex parte, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 70.

Bankruptcy.]—Mortgagee of bankrupt's estate allowed to bid on sale of it. Marsh, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 148.

Creditors.] — A mortgagee who was sole assignee and principal creditor, there being only one other creditor to a small amount, permitted to bid for the estates subject, &c. Anon., Buck, 245.

Assignees.]—A reserved bidding allowed to assignees on the sale of an estate which had been mortgaged by the bankrupt. Ellis, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 297.

Under what circumstances a reserved bidding refused to assignees, on the sale of property under an equitable mortgage. Bernard, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 291; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 81.

Equitable Mortgagee.]—Where an equitable mortgagee is allowed to conduct the sale, and wishes to bid and become the purchaser of the premises comprised in his mortgage, the court will, before giving leave, ascertain the value of the premises and fix a reserved bidding. Commercial Bank of London, Ex parte, Hills, In re, 9 L. T. 782.

—— Must pay Deposit.] — Equitable mortgagee is not entitled to be excused from paying deposit on sale. Stephens, Ex parte and In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 31.

—— Costs.]—Where an equitable mortgagee applies for leave to bid at the sale of the mortgaged premises, the practice is for him to pay the costs of the application. Robinson, Ex parte, Mont. & M'Ar. 261.

Condition of.]—Before a mortgagee with a power of sale can apply for leave to bid, he must waive his power of sale, and come before the court in the simple character of mortgagee. Davis, Ex parte, Hagley, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 504; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 89.

Deposit.]—The court will not exempt a mortgagee who bids from paying a deposit. Tatham, Ex parte, Sheppard, In re, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 335; 4 Deac. & C. 640.

Purchase without Leave.] — A mortgagee having bid at the sale of the mortgage property, and become the purchaser without having previously obtained an order for him to bid, the court granted him an order, nunc pro tunc. Pedder, Ex parte, Hadwen, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 622; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 327.

Although it is the usual and the prudent practice for a mortgagee to apply to the court for leave to bid, the court will not rescind the sale where the mortgagee has purchased the property without such leave if the purchase has been made by him bonâ fide. Ashley, Ex parte, Bell, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 510; 1 Mont. & Ayr. 82; 3 L. J., Bky. 9.

3. Conveyance.

Parties to — Incumbrancers.] — An incumbrancer paid off by the proceeds of the sale under a decree is not obliged to assign his security to the purchaser. He is only bound to join, if required, in conveyance to the purchaser. Anon., 2 Moll. 505.

—— Covenantees.] — A colliery company covenanted to appropriate 6*d*. per ton to secure money lent, and gave to the lenders power to appoint receivers and powers of distress over all their property:—Held, that on a sale in liquidation of a colliery the covenantees were not necessary parties to the conveyance. Sankey Brook Coal Co., In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 119.

In Bankruptcy — Compelling Second Mortgagee to join in Sale.]—The lord chancellor has no authority in bankruptcy to compel a second mortgagee, not claiming under the commission, but resting upon his security, to join in a sale obtained by a prior mortgagee under the general order, 8th March, 1794, not producing enough for both mortgagees. Jackson, Ex parte, 5 Ves. 357.

4. Other Matters.

Sale, whether Subject to, or Discharged from, Lease.]—To a bill to raise a charge secured by a term, a subsequent mortgagee of the inheritance, and a lessee who claimed under a lease made by the inheritor after he had executed the mortgage, were made parties. The bill prayed that, if necessary, the lands should be sold discharged of the lease. There was a consent to sell the inheritance instead of the term. The mortgagee insisted by his answer that the lease had been made at a gross under-value, and that the lands should be sold, discharged of it. The lessee insisted that the lease was made at the full value, and that the lands should be sold subject to it. The plaintiff amended his bill, but did not put in issue the case made by the mortgagee:—Held, that in this suit the mortgagee was not entitled to have the lands sold discharged of the lease; and the lands were directed to be sold subject to the lease, without prejudice to the mortgagee filing a bill to have them sold discharged of it. Colthurst v. Colthurst, 2 Jones, 262.

Sale Under Extent—Right of Crown.]—If estate subject to mortgage be sold absolutely, under extent, and purchase-money paid into court, crown will not be allowed on motion to satisfy mortgagee, but court will order reference to deputy remembrancer to ascertain what is due on mortgage. Rex v. Coombes, 1 Price, 207.

—— Notice.]—Notice of motion for order of sale of crown debtor's mortgaged lands under extent should be given to mortgagee before motion. Ib.

Equitable Mortgagee.]—Equitable mortgagee is not entitled to costs of defending extent in aid, or to be excused from paying deposit on sale. Stephens, Ex parte and In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 31.

Infant Coming of Age—Right to Show Cause.] —On a decree for sale, in case of an equitable mortgage, the infant heir ought not to be allowed the six months to show cause against the decree on coming of age. Schalefield v. Heafield, 7 Sim. 667. S. C., 8 Sim. 470; 7 L. J., Ch. 4.

Benefit of Infant—Right to Proceeds.]—An estate was mortgaged to A. for a term of five hundred years. A. filed a bill of foreclosure against the persons entitled to the equity of redemption and the reversion, some of whom were infants. By consent it was ordered that the master should inquire whether a sale in fee would be for the benefit of the infant, and, if he should so find, that the property should be so sold. The property was sold under the decree, but realised less than the mortgage debt:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to the difference in value between the term and the fee. Foster v. Eddy, 18 L. J., Ch. 151; 13 Jur. 761.

Price.]—Sale by order of the court. Incumbrancer's suit. Contract by first mortgagor before the suit, for 460*l.*, went off. Offer by a person to purchase at that price accepted by the court, on affidavit of surveyor that the estate would probably fetch less by auction, on consent of the other incumbrancers, the estate being deficient. Anon., 1 Jur. 525.

Sale of Unnecessarily Large Portion—Balance of Purchase-Money, whether Realty or Personalty.]—In a mortgagee's suit for foreclosure and sale, a decree was made that, in default of payment within the usual time, the mortgaged lands, or a sufficient part, should be sold, and that after payment of the incumbrances the remainder should be paid to the mortgagor, and that if any part of the lands remained unsold they also should be reconveyed to the mortgagor. A larger part of the estate was sold than was sufficient to satisfy all the incumbrancers. The mortgagor made two applications to the court as to the investment of this surplus fund, on the second of which it was invested in government stock. No further proceedings had ever been taken as to the fund till the present action:—Held, that the capital of the fund was to be deemed a portion of the mortgagor's real estate, and descended to his heir-at-law. Scott v. Scott, 9 L. R., Ir. 367.

Inquiry.]—A mortgagor of property continued to retain control of the same, which was seized by the landlord for arrears of rent due from the mortgagor. An inquiry had been directed in the suit as to what part of the mortgaged property had been sold by the mortgagee, and a direction that the property sold by him should be set off against his mortgage debt. The chief clerk found that the part of the property in question had not been sold by the mortgagee. His finding was upheld by the court. Aylward v. Shrimpton, 14 W. R. 628.

Specific Performance.]—Specific performance of sale under Lord Loughborough's Order decreed by this court, although the following objections were urged, viz.—1st. That particulars of sale did not state that sale took place under order of court, it appearing that purchaser must have known the fact that it was so. 2nd. That a third mortgagee of equity of redemption, and an assignee on prior insolvency of bankrupt, were not parties. 3rd. Though the petitioning creditor's debt on which this fiat was founded was contained in the schedule in prior insolvency, especially as the purchaser was presumed to have known of all the objections to the title, and was held to have waived them by granting a lease of the premises purchased by him before the title to him was completed. Quære, whether this court has jurisdiction to direct specific performance of contract of purchase of bankrupt's property, where the purchaser did not know, and had no means of knowing, that the sale took place under order of this court, or of commissioners. Sidebotham, Ex parte, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 146; 4 L. J., Bk. 27. See 4 Deac. & C. 461.

Setting Aside—On Application of Assignee.]—A bill to foreclose having been filed in this case, the court made a decree and ordered the mortgaged lands to be sold; afterwards a third person, who had paid off the mortgage and taken an assignment thereof, and of the decree of foreclosure, applied to the court to set aside the order for a sale, which the court refusing, he appealed to the lords, by whom the order of refusal was affirmed with costs. Crowe v. Halliday, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 50.

—— Fraud.]—Decree of foreclosure; the proceedings and sale under it set aside as fraudulent, the res gestæ of the parties concerned affording conclusive evidence of a contrivance to use the process of the court to effect fraudulent sale, to obtain the estate under colour of pursuing the legitimate right to recover a debt. Ellis v. Deane, Beat. 5.

Laches.]—A man, though no party to decree, may preclude himself from aid of a court of equity, if he knowingly allowed parties to proceed under it, and used unreasonable delay in bringing forward his complaint, but every case of this kind depends on its own circumstances. Id. 21.

Diligence.]—It is the settled course that an incumbrancer, using reasonable diligence in clearing the title, has a right to have it sold such as it is, being set up subject to the incumbrances reported. Galway v. Butler, 2 Moll. 504.

Sale of Property Out of Court—Reserved Biddings and Remuneration of Auctioneer to be Fixed by Judge—Form of Order.]—In a foreclosure action, where an order is made for the sale of the mortgaged property by the plaintiffs out of court, but the reserved biddings and the remuneration of the auctioneer are to be fixed by the judge, and the proceeds of sale are to be paid into court by the plaintiffs—such order must be prefaced with the declaration (required when the proceedings are altogether out of court) that the judge is satisfied by the evidence that all persons interested in the estate to be sold are before the court. Cumberland Union Banking Co. v. Maryport Hematite Iron Co. 61 L. J., Ch. 335; [1892] 1 Ch. 92; 66 L. T. 103.

7. Injunction Against, 1793.
8. Setting Aside, 1794.
9. Specific Performance, 1796.

1. Existence of Power.

Nature of.]—A power of sale in a mortgage deed is to be regarded as limiting the exercise of the rights of legal ownership of the mortgaged property, and at the same time as enabling the mortgagee to realise his security; and, as the mortgagee is the sole judge of what is necessary to enable him to realise, his motives in exercising the power will not be regarded by the court, and so long as he does all that he fairly can do to obtain a fair price, as a prudent owner intending to sell for his own advantage and to the best of his judgment, he will come under no liability to the mortgagor or puisne incumbrancer. Colson v. Williams, 58 L. J., Ch. 539; 61 L. T. 71.

Creation of — Under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, ss. 11-24.]—A power to raise money by sale or mortgage authorises a mortgage with a power of sale. Bridges v. Longman, 24 Beav. 27.

Where Mortgagee sub-mortgages.]—Where a mortgagee sub-mortgages, it is doubtful whether his power of sale is not gone. Cruse v. Nowell, 25 L. J., Ch. 709; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 536; 4 W. R. 619.

Mortgage by Underlease—23 & 24 Vict. c. 145.]—The 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 15, gives power to a mortgagee of leaseholds by underlease to sell the whole of the original term. Hiatt v. Hillman, 25 L. T. 55; 19 W. R. 694.

After Transfer.]—In 1825 D. mortgaged an estate to I. in fee. The mortgage deed contained a power of sale. In 1830, I. having called for payment, a deed of transfer was executed:—Held, that the power of sale in the mortgage of 1825 was still subsisting, and capable of being exercised. Boyd v. Petrie, 41 L. J., Ch. 378; L. R. 7 Ch. 385; 26 L. T. 460; 20 W. R. 513.

—— And Change of Covenant.]—A mortgage contained a power of sale. The mortgage was transferred, with the benefit of the provisoes, &c., contained therein. The mortgagor concurred and covenanted to pay a different sum on a different day:—Held, that the power of sale still existed, and that a good title could be made upon a sale under the power. Young v. Roberts, 15 Beav. 558.

On Demise by Mortgagor and Mortgagee upon Trust.]—A mortgagor and a mortgagee with a power of sale joined in demising the mortgaged hereditaments upon trust, at the request of the mortgagee during the continuance of the security, and at the request of the mortgagor after the satisfaction of the mortgage, to grant leases of the premises in such manner as the person making such request should appoint, and to permit the mortgagor to receive the rents until default was made in payment of the mortgage money or interest, and upon trust after default to receive the rents and apply the same in keeping down the interest upon the mortgage. These trusts were not declared to be subject to the power of sale in the mortgage:—Held, that they were so in effect, and that the trustee was bound, without the concurrence of the mortgagor, to join in conveying the hereditaments to a purchaser from the mortgagee under the power of sale. King v. Heenan, 3 De G. M. & G. 890.

Under Royal Charter and Deed of Settlement.]—An institution was incorporated by royal charter and deed of settlement, authorising the council or managing body to hold lands, tenements or hereditaments, and to sell, grant, demise, exchange and dispose of the same; but no sale, mortgage, incumbrance or other disposition of any such lands, tenements or hereditaments to be made, except with the approbation and concurrence of a general meeting of the proprietors of the corporation. At a general meeting of the proprietors the council were authorised to mortgage the property of the corporation for 25,000*l.*:—Held, that the council had no power to grant a mortgage with a power of sale. Clarke v. Royal Panopticon, 4 Drew. 26; 27 L. J., Ch. 207; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 178; 5 W. R. 332.

Secus as to trustees of chattels. Ib.

Agreement not to Sell.]—By a deed, the amount due to the first mortgagee was confirmed to him by the subsequent incumbrancers, and he thereby agreed not to execute his power of sale for a limited time:—Held, that a party, who by his bill contested the amount so admitted to be due to the first mortgagee, could not take advantage of the stipulation in the deed, not to sell within the time, and an injunction to restrain such sale was refused. Cockell v. Bacon, 16 Beav. 158.

After Tender.]—Semble, that, where the costs are unascertained, and the security ample, a mortgagee after a tender of principal and interest is not entitled to proceed with the sale. Jenkins v. Jones, 2 Giff. 99; 29 L. J., Ch. 493; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 391; 8 W. R. 270.

Joint Mortgagees—Right of Survivor.]—A power of sale, and to give receipts in a mortgage given to the two mortgagees, their heirs and assigns, it being declared that the mortgage money was advanced by them out of moneys in their possession on a joint account:—Held, to be exercisable by the survivor. Hind v. Poole, 1 K. & J. 383; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 371; 3 Eq. R. 449; 3 W. R. 331.

A fortiori where the proceeds of the sale were to be applied to reimburse "themselves and himself," all expenses which "he or they" should be put to in making the sale, &c., and then to reimburse "themselves and himself," the mortgage money and interest, and it was declared that the receipts of the "survivor" of them should be good discharges for the mortgage debt and interest. Ib.

Administrator of "Assign."]—The administrator of an assign of a mortgagee, who has obtained a conveyance from the heir of such assign to a trustee for himself, can exercise a power of sale given by the mortgage deed to the original mortgagee, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, with a direction that the receipts of the same persons should be good discharges; for the legal representatives of an "assign" must be considered to be assigns within the meaning of such a power. Cooke v. Crawford (13 Sim. 91) distinguished. Saloway v. Strawbridge, 1 K. & J. 371. Affirmed, 7 De G. M. & G. 594; 25 L. J., Ch. 121; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1194; 4 W. R. 34.

Under Conveyancing Act, 1881.]—The power of sale incident to the estate of the mortgagee under s. 19 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, which enables him to sell the "mortgaged property or any part thereof," does not authorise him to sell the trade machinery apart from the freehold. Yates, In re, Batcheldor or Batchelor v. Yates, 57 L. J., Ch. 697; 38 Ch. D. 112; 59 L. T. 47; 36 W. R. 563—C. A.

Equitable Mortgage by Deed — Lord Cranworth's Act.]—An equitable mortgagee in fee, by deed made before 1882, by a mortgagor who has the legal estate, can, under Lord Cranworth's Act, ss. 11, 15, sell and convey the legal estate; and that, notwithstanding s. 71 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881. Solomon to Meagher, In re, 58 L. J., Ch. 339; 40 Ch. D. 508; 60 L. T. 487; 37 W. R. 331.

Registration—Sale by Mortgagee under Statutory Power.]—A mortgagor registered with an indefeasible title made three successive mortgages, all of which were entered on the register of incumbrances; the first mortgagee sold under his power of sale, and conveyed the estate to a purchaser:—Held, that the purchaser was entitled to be registered with an indefeasible title, although the second and third mortgagees remained on the register of incumbrances. Richardson, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 616; L. R. 12 Eq. 398; 25 L. T. 12; 19 W. R. 1048.

The former order made in Richardson, In re, supra, varied. Richardson, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 221; L. R. 13 Eq. 142; 20 W. R. 163.

Removal of Incumbrances.]—When the owner of an equity of redemption of real estate is entered on the register of estates with an indefeasible title, under the Transfer of Land Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 53), subject to a mortgage, and the mortgagee afterwards exercises his power of sale, and conveys part of the registered property to a purchaser, such purchaser is entitled, after his conveyance has been entered on the register, to have the property bought by him, and all entries relating thereto, removed from the register without the consent of the mortgagor. Winter, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 318; L. R. 15 Eq. 156; 27 L. T. 842; 21 W. R. 320.

Staying Adverse Proceedings.]—When a petition for sale of lands was presented by an owner, for the purpose of defeating an incumbrancer's power of sale, the proceedings were stayed to enable the incumbrancer to sell. Redington's Estate, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 503.

a. In General.

Generally.]—If a mortgagee selling under a power of sale acts in good faith and in compliance with the terms of the power, the sale cannot be impeached. Kennedy v. De Trafford, 66 L. J., Ch. 413; [1897] A. C. 180; 76 L. T. 427; 45 W. R. 671—H. L. (E.)

Two Mortgagees receiving each a Portion of Purchase-Money.]—The first and second mortgagees of an estate had power of sale and of giving good receipts. They joined together in selling, and each received his portion of the purchase-money, for which they gave a receipt to the purchaser:—Held, that a title depending on this sale was perfectly good. M'Carogher v. Whieldon, 34 Beav. 107.

Buying with Knowledge of Invalidity.]—A purchaser who buys with knowledge of circumstances sufficient as against a mortgagee to invalidate the sale becomes a party to the transaction, and is not protected by the proviso that the purchaser needs make no inquiry. Jenkins v. Jones, 2 Giff. 99; 29 L. J., Ch. 493; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 391; 8 W. R. 270.

—— Purchaser's Protection Clause.]—A proviso relieving a purchaser under a power from inquiring as to the regularity of a sale does not protect a purchaser who knows of an irregularity which cannot have been waived:—Quære (per Bowen, L.J.), whether the same rule would apply where the irregularity was one which might have been waived. Parkinson v. Hanbury (L. R. 2 H. L. 1) followed. Selwyn v. Garfit, 57 L. J., Ch. 609; 38 Ch. D. 273; 59 L. T. 233; 36 W. R. 513—C. A.

Bonâ fide Purchaser without Notice.]—A mortgage contained a power of sale to be exercised by the mortgagee after default, with a proviso that, upon any sale purporting to be made in pursuance of the power, the purchaser should not be bound to inquire whether default had been made in payment of any principal or interest, or as to the propriety or expediency of such sale, and that notwithstanding any impropriety or irregularity in any such sale, the same should, as regarded the protection of the purchaser, be taken to be within the power, and the remedy of the mortgagor should be in damages only. The mortgagee purported to exercise the power in favour of a purchaser for value. In a suit by an incumbrancer of the mortgagor to establish his priority over the mortgagee, it was alleged that if the accounts were taken it would show that the security was satisfied at the time of the sale:—Held, that the sale having been made to a bonâ fide purchaser without notice, was valid, even if the security should prove to have been satisfied. Dicker v. Angerstein, 45 L. J., Ch. 754; 3 Ch. D. 600; 24 W. R. 844.

Equitable Mortgage by Deposit, with Memorandum — Subsequent Legal Mortgage.]—In May, 1849, W. deposited title deeds as a security for 200*l.* to be advanced to him, and signed a memorandum engaging to execute a mortgage deed, when called upon to do so. In June, 1849, and before any mortgage was executed, W. sold the premises comprised in the title deeds, and, treating the intended mortgage as in existence, conveyed the property to the purchasers, "subject to a certain mortgage to, &c., for securing 200*l.* and interest, but with the benefit of the provisions for redemption, contained in the mortgage deed." The purchasers made no inquiry of the intended mortgagees respecting the contents of the supposed mortgage, and shortly after the purchase the 200*l.* was advanced; and in July, 1849, W. executed a mortgage, with a power of sale, under which the mortgagees sold the premises to the plaintiff. Upon a bill by the plaintiff against the purchasers from W.:—Held, that the power of sale was validly created as against the latter, and they were declared to be trustees of the legal estate for the plaintiff, and ordered to convey the same accordingly. Leigh v. Lloyd, 35 Beav. 455; 34 L. J., Ch. 646; 12 L. T. 813; 13 W. R. 1054.

Purchase-Money to Remain on Mortgage.]—The lessee of premises mortgaged them to the defendant, the mortgage deed containing a power of sale in the event of the nonpayment of the mortgage money. Upon default of payment the defendant contracted to sell the premises to B., but in carrying out the arrangement it was agreed that the greater part of the purchase-money should remain on mortgage:—Held, in the absence of any proof that the contract of sale to B. was not bonâ fide, that the defendant had duly executed his power of sale, and that he was not bound to have disposed of the premises for ready money only. Thurlow v. Mackeson, 38 L. J., Q. B. 57; L. R. 4 Q. B. 97; 19 L. T. 448; 17 W. R. 280.

A mortgagee, who has bonâ fide contracted to sell according to the power of sale in his mortgage deed, may allow part of the purchase-money to remain outstanding on a mortgage of the property, though the power of sale makes no mention of any such privilege. Ib.

—— Agreement for.]—Lands were mortgaged in fee, with power of sale, by auction or private contract, in case of default in payment of the mortgage money. The mortgagee sold part of the property by private contract, containing an agreement that more than half of the purchase-money might remain on mortgage of the land sold for four years, if interest should be regularly paid, and that, if a stated sum were laid out on the land in the erection of houses within a specified time, the mortgage money might remain for a longer period. On a bill filed by the owner of the equity of redemption to redeem and set aside the sale:—Held, that there being no fraud nor inadequacy of price, the transaction could not be impeached; and the bill was dismissed with costs. Davey v. Durrant, 26 L. J., Ch. 830.

Sale to Institution.]—The same mortgagee, being in possession, offered to give a portion of the land as a site for a building in the nature of a hospital, but, being apprised by the proposed grantees that his title did not enable him to do this, he agreed to sell the site to the institution at a valuation, and to give the price to the charity. The land was conveyed in pursuance of the contract:—Held, that this was not a valid sale within the terms of the power. S. C., 1 De G. & J. 535.

The mortgagors had approved of a general building plan, with which the edifice built for the charity was not at variance:—Held, that the transaction could not be set aside on reimbursing to the grantees the whole sum laid out by them upon the land. Ib.

Demise of Term Less One Day.]—A mortgagee contracted to sell two properties, leasehold and freehold, to the equity of redemption in which the mortgagors were entitled in different shares. The leaseholds had been mortgaged to him by underlease. The purchaser refused to complete, and the vendor filed a bill for specific performance. At the date of filing the bill the mortgagors were willing to concur; but, before the decree was made, some of them died, leaving infants interested in the equity of redemption:—Held, that the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 145, s. 15, empowered the vendor to sell the whole of the term of the leaseholds, though they were only demised to him for the residue of the term less one day. Hiatt v. Hillman, 25 L. T. 55; 19 W. R. 694.

Benefit of Infants.]—Held, also, that the infants interested in the equity of redemption must be bound by the sale, as it was for their advantage that the two properties should be sold together; and that the vendor could make a good title. Ib.

Tenants in Common—Purchase by one Co-tenant.]—If after notice by the mortgagee to both of two co-owners that he is prepared to sell for the amount of principal, interest and costs, no objection is taken, he may so sell though the purchaser be one of the co-owners, and such co-owner is entitled to buy without liability to the other. Kennedy v. De Trafford, 66 L. J., Ch. 413; [1897] A. C. 180; 76 L. T. 427; 45 W. R. 671—H. L. (E.)

Assignment to Second Mortgagee, on Trust to Sell.]—Property subject to two mortgages was assigned to the second mortgagee upon trust to sell, and out of the proceeds to pay off the first mortgage, then the second mortgage, and pay the surplus to the mortgagor:—Held, that this did not bind the trustee not to sell unless he could so pay off the first mortgage, and that a sale subject to the first mortgage was valid. Manser v. Dix, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 252—L.JJ.

Conveyance on Trust—Appointment of New Trustee.]—Where a conveyance by way of mortgage is made to a trustee for the mortgagee in trust to sell, and the trustee becomes bankrupt, the mortgagor should join in the application for the appointment of another trustee. Orgill, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 413.

Mortgagee in Possession having Rents in Hand.]—Whether a mortgagee in possession, having a balance of rents in hand more than sufficient for payment of the interest and all expenses he has incurred, can be heard to say that interest is in arrear so as to justify a sale because no account has been rendered and no appropriation made, quære. Cockburn v. Edwards, 51 L. J., Ch. 46; 18 Ch. D. 449; 45 L. T. 500; 30 W. R. 446—C. A.

Without foreclosing Equity of Redemption.]—Exchequer annuities were assigned by way of mortgage for securing 5,000*l.* and interest. The money not being paid, the mortgagee (after repeated notice to the executor of the mortgagor, and demand of his money) sold the annuities on exchange at the market price:—Held, that this was a good sale, and that there was no necessity of previously foreclosing the equity of redemption. Wilson v. Tooker, 5 Bro. P. C. 193; 1 P. Wms. 261.

Mortgage by Client to Solicitor—Unusual Provisions.]—In a mortgage to a solicitor by his client there was a power of sale without qualification. It was not explained to the mortgagor that it was usual to insert a proviso that the power should not be exercised unless interest was in arrear for three months or notice to pay off had been given:—Held, that the power could not be properly exercised as against the mortgagor, though three months' interest was in arrear. Craddock v. Rogers, 53 L. J., Ch. 968; 51 L. T. 191.

In April, 1879, P. owed 450*l.* to his solicitor K., who was pressing for payment. On the 11th of April, 1879, he gave K. his promissory note for 466*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.*, payable three months after date, and on the 31st of May signed an agreement to mortgage to K. his interest in a railway for the 466*l.* 17*s.* 10*d.* The agreement contained a provision that, if that sum was not paid on the 11th of July, K. should be at liberty to sell the property without notice. The agreement was drawn by K., and P. had no independent advice. Default having been made, K. sold without giving such notice as is required in the common form of power of sale:—Held, that as this was not an ordinary mortgage transaction, but an arrangement for giving the client time for payment of a debt presently payable, the doctrine of Cockburn v. Edwards (18 Ch. D. 449) did not apply: that it was not incumbent on K. to explain to P. the unusual form of the power of sale; and that the sale could not be impeached on the ground that it was not authorised by the common form of power. Pooley's Trustee v. Whetham, 55 L. J., Ch. 899; 33 Ch. D. 111; 55 L. T. 333; 34 W. R. 689—C. A.

A solicitor advanced money to his client on a second mortgage, in which was inserted a power of sale exerciseable at any time without the usual proviso requiring that notice should be given, or some interest should be three months in arrear; and it was not shown that he explained to the client that the power was not in the usual form. The solicitor afterwards took possession, and for several years received the rents, which, together with some payments made by the mortgagor, exceeded the interests of both mortgages. He then sold the property without notice:—Held, in an action by the mortgagor against the solicitor, that the omission from the power of sale of the usual qualifying clause was a breach of duty, and that the mortgagee was liable in damages as for an improper sale, unless it could be shown that some interest was three months in arrear; and, whether the absence of explanation did not make it improper even if there was interest in arrear, quære. Cockburn v. Edwards, 51 L. J., Ch. 46; 18 Ch. D. 449; 45 L. T. 500; 30 W. R. 446—C. A.

Held, that the fact that the mortgagee had received rents to an amount more than sufficient to pay the interest would not by itself prove that there was no interest in arrear if no appropriation was shown to have been made. The dictum in Brocklehurst v. Jessop (7 Sim. 442) overruled. Ib.

But held, that, as in an account sent by the mortgagee to the mortgagor the interest was treated as satisfied up to a certain day out of the rents, there was evidence of an arrangement that the rents should be applied in discharge of interest, and that, as the final account showed that if the rents were thus appropriated there would be no interest in arrear at the time of sale, the sale was improper. Ib.

Held, also, that the difference between party and party costs and solicitor and client costs of the present action could not be given to the plaintiff by way of damages. Ib.

Conveyancing Act, 1881—Power to convey Legal Estate.]—An equitable mortgagee by deed who sells in exercise of the power of sale conferred by the Conveyancing Act, 1881, cannot convey the legal estate vested in the mortgagor. Hodson and Howes' Contract, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 755; 35 Ch. D. 668; 56 L. T. 837; 35 W. R. 553—C. A.

—— Improper Exercise of Power—Action for Damages.]—The remedy in damages, which, under sub-s. 2 of s. 21 of the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881, "any person damnified by an unauthorised, or improper, or irregular exercise of the power" of sale conferred by the act has "against the person exercising the power," may be obtained by means of a common law action brought in the county court, under s. 56 of the County Courts Act, 1888, where the amount claimed is within the county court jurisdiction. Ames v. Higdon, 69 L. T. 292.

b. Notice to Mortgagor.

Sufficiency of Service of.]—S. took a conveyance of an estate from W., his father, and then mortgaged the estate, with a power of sale in default of payment of the mortgage money and interest within three months after notice in writing given to S., his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, or left at his or their usual or last known place of abode. The conveyance to S. from W. was afterwards declared void as against the creditors of W. Some years afterwards, the mortgagee caused the notice demanding payment to be affixed to the door of the house which was the last known place of abode of S., and the mortgagee, a short time before the expiration of the three months, entered into a contract for the sale of the property:—Held, that, as the right of the mortgagee under the power of sale was paramount to that of the creditors of W., the notice to S. was sufficient; that such notice was well served by being fixed on the door of S.'s last known place of abode; that the contract for sale of the property, although made before the expiration of the notice, was not therefore invalid. Major v. Ward, 5 Hare, 598.

—— Lapse of Years After.]—The power of sale in a mortgage provided that, upon default of payment of the principal and interest as therein mentioned, and if the mortgagee, his heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns, should give to the mortgagor, his heirs, or assigns, "six calendar months' previous notice in writing of his or their intention to proceed to a sale, unless the principal and interest should be paid at the expiration of such notice," it should be lawful for the mortgagee, his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, "immediately or at any other time after the expiration of the notice," so long as the principal and interest should remain unpaid, without the consent of the mortgagor, his heirs, or assigns, to sell the mortgaged property. Default having been made in payment of the mortgage money, the devisee of the mortgagee, on the 4th of August, 1853, caused a notice in writing, dated the 15th July, 1853, to be served on the mortgagor, requiring payment of the mortgage money "at the expiration of six calendar months from the date thereof." On the 25th of May, 1857, the mortgage money being still unpaid, the devisee of the mortgagee, without any further notice to the mortgagor and without his consent, sold the mortgaged property. Upon a bill by the mortgagor against the purchaser and the devisee of the mortgagee to set aside the sale, on the ground of its having been made without due notice to the mortgagor:—Held, that the notice was good, and the bill was dismissed with costs. Metters v. Brown, 33 L. J., Ch. 97; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 958; 8 L. T. 567; 11 W. R. 744.

Revival of.]—Mortgage of the equity of redemption of premises as security for payment of a sum of money, with the condition that, if default should be made for seven days after notice requiring payment, the mortgagee might sell. The mortgagee subsequently gave due notice, and on the sixth day after took a bill of exchange at three months for the amount from the mortgagor, who died the following day. The bill was dishonoured, and thereupon the mortgagee, without giving any further notice, sold the premises to the plaintiff, who brought ejectment against the defendant, the mortgagor's widow:—Held, that, the power of sale having been well exercised, the defendant was not entitled to redeem, but must give up possession to the plaintiff. That the giving of the bill operated as a suspension of the remedy by sale, and of the running of the notice, and that both revived when the bill was dishonoured; and no further notice was therefore necessary. Wood v. Murton, 47 L. J., Q. B. 191; 37 L. T. 788.

Infant Heir.]—In a mortgage power of sale it was required that notice should be given to the mortgagor, his heirs, or assigns. The mortgagor died, leaving an infant heir:—Held, that notice to the infant heir and her guardian was good notice. Tracy v. Lawrence, 2 Drew. 403; 18 Jur. 590; 2 W. R. 610.

Equitable Mortgage by Deposit—Notice to, and Concurrence of, Assignees in Bankruptcy.]—Where, at time of deposit, by way of equitable mortgage, power of sale has by agreement been given to mortgagee, on notice being given to repay the money secured, mortgagee cannot make a valid assignment of premises, in event of bankruptcy of party pledging without notice to and concurrence of assignees of bankrupt in the conveyance. Hawkins v. Ramsbottom, 1 Price, 138.

Notice to Second Mortgagee.]—A mortgage contained a power of sale, with a proviso that the mortgagee was not to execute the power without giving notice to the mortgagor or his assigns. The mortgagor assigned his equity of redemption by way of mortgage to a second mortgagee:—Held, that such second mortgagee was entitled to receive notice of the first mortgagee's intention to exercise his power of sale, and was entitled to damages from him for default in giving such notice. Hoole v. Smith, 50 L. J., Ch. 576; 17 Ch. D. 434; 45 L. T. 38; 29 W. R. 601.

Purchase before Notice Elapsed.]—Under the usual power of sale contained in a mortgage, a contract was entered into by the defendant to purchase the property of the mortgagees before the three months' notice required by the mortgage deed to be given to the mortgagor had elapsed. The defendant refused to complete the purchase in consequence of the non-concurrence of the mortgagor; and, on a bill filed for the specific performance of the contract, the court declined to decide as to the necessity of such concurrence, as the time for making a valid contract had not, when it was entered into, arrived; and the only order made was that the title should be investigated. Ford v. Heely, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1116; 5 W. R. 516.

Purchasing with Knowledge that no Notice had been given.]—Where a first mortgagee, under his power of sale, sold the mortgaged premises by private contract to the second mortgagees, who were mortgagees in possession, and also trustees for sale for the mortgagor, and the mortgage deed required that, before any sale should be made, three months' notice should be given to the mortgagor, and contained a clause, that a purchaser should not be required to ascertain that previous notice had been given, or to inquire into the necessity or expediency of the sale, and that the mortgagee's receipt should be a sufficient discharge. The second mortgagees, at the time they purchased, knew that the three months' notice had not been given to the mortgagor, he having died some time before, and on administration having been taken out to his estate, upon a suit for redemption by the mortgagor's administratrix:—Held, that she was entitled to redeem, and that the clause, discharging a purchaser from ascertaining whether proper notice had been given, did not protect a purchaser who purchases with actual knowledge that such notice had not been given. Parkinson v. Hanbury, 1 Dr. & Sm. 143; 8 W. R. 575.

c. Auction or Private Contract.

Purchase-Money to remain on Mortgage.]—A mortgagee with a power of sale, either by public auction or private contract, and a proviso that all arrangements, sales, conveyances, acts, matters, and things made and done by him, should be as valid without as if made with the concurrence of the mortgagor, sold by private contract, and agreed that a part of the purchase-money might remain on a mortgage of the property sold:—Held, that the sale was not invalidated by the want of a previous attempt to sell by auction, or by the stipulation as to the purchase-money remaining on mortgage, but was good as regarded both the purchaser and the mortgagee. Darey v. Durrant, 1 De G. & J. 535; 26 L. J., Ch. 830.

d. Price.

Duty to get Best.]—It is the duty of a mortgagee, with a power of sale, to use every exertion to sell the property at the best price. A person who has acted as the agent of the mortgagee, being the medium through which the money is advanced, surveying the security and receiving the interest regularly for the mortgagee, is not a competent purchaser from the mortgagee under a power of sale. Orme v. Wright, 3 Jur. 19.

—— Action.]—B., in consideration of a sum of money lent to him by parties who carried on business under the name of "The City Investment and Advance Co.," assigned by deed certain goods of his to the company, to hold as their own proper goods; nevertheless, by way of mortgage, for securing the repayment of the loan, with full power to the mortgagees to sell the goods, and out of the proceeds to reimburse themselves the loan and costs of sale, and to pay the residue, if any, to B.:—Held, that the property in the goods passed by such deed to the mortgagees, and that a party, who claimed the same goods under a subsequent assignment to him from B., could not maintain an action against them for selling the goods without taking reasonable care to obtain the best prices for them. Maughan v. Sharpe, 17 C. B. (N.S.) 443; 34 L. J., C. P. 19; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 989; 10 L. T. 870; 12 W. R. 1057.

Liability to make good Deficiency in.]—A mortgagee in possession, by not taking proper means to ascertain the right value of the mortgaged property, sold it at a loss:—Held, that he was liable to make good the difference between the price at which the property was sold and that which it would have produced had it been sold, at a reserved price, under a decree of the court. Wolff v. Vanderzee, 20 L. T. 353; 17 W. R. 547.

Want of Diligence.]—A mortgagee is chargeable with the full value of the mortgaged property sold if, from want of due care and diligence, it has been sold at an undervalue. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c. Co., 4 App. Cas. 391; 40 L. T. 697; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

Where Bona Fides.]—If a mortgagee exercises his power of sale bonâ fide for the purpose of realizing his debt and without collusion with the purchaser, the court will not interfere even though the sale be very disadvantageous, unless the price is so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud. Warner v. Jacob, 51 L. J., Ch. 642; 20 Ch. D. 220; 46 L. T. 656; 30 W. R. 721.

Misdescription causing Diminution in — Measure of Liability for.]—A mortgagee who, in the exercise of his power of sale, personally or by his agent commits a mistake, such as a misdescription of the property, whereby a material diminution is caused in the price realised, is liable to the parties interested in the equity of redemption for the loss so occasioned; but the amount of that diminution is not necessarily the measure of the compensation payable by the mortgagee. Tomlin v. Luce, 59 L. J., Ch. 164; 43 Ch. D. 191; 62 L. T. 18; 38 W. R. 323; 54 J. P. 486—C. A.

Where, therefore, mortgaged property was sold for 20,800*l.*, and, in consequence of a misstatement in the particulars by the auctioneer employed by the mortgagee, a compromise was come to between the purchaser and mortgagee, which the court held to be a reasonable one, whereby 895*l.* was allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase-money:—Held, that that sum was not necessarily to be taken as the measure of compensation to be allowed as between the mortgagee and the owners of the equity of redemption, and an inquiry was directed whether the property would have sold for any, and (if any) what sum in excess of 19,905*l.* (the original purchase-money less the sum allowed to the purchaser), in case the property had been sold without the misstatement in the particulars. Ib.

e. Management and Conduct.

By Mortgagee.]—Biddings opened on an advance of 365*l.* on 7,300*l.*, but as the mortgagee applied he was not allowed to conduct the resale. Domville v. Berrington, 2 Y. & C. 723; 7 L. J., Ex. Eq. 58.

Best Advantage.]—Where a mortgagee enters into possession of the mortgaged property with a view to a sale of it, he is bound to act with the same care and prudence, and to use every effort which a prudent man would use to have the sale conducted in a manner to obtain the greatest advantage. Marriott v. Anchor Reversionary Co., 30 L. J., Ch. 571; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 713; 4 L. T. 590; 9 W. R. 726—L.JJ. Affirming, 2 Giff. 457.

A mortgagee with power of sale is not bound to wait till a more advantageous sale can be effected, neither is he bound to advertise before proceeding to a sale. Davey v. Durrant, 1 De G. & J. 535; 26 L. J., Ch. 830.

In Redemption Action—Security for Costs.]—First mortgagees of real estate on the 19th of Nov., 1891, gave notice to the mortgagors to pay off the mortgage debt within three months, and that if it was not so paid they would proceed to sell under their power of sale. On the 17th of Feb., 1892, the mortgagors commenced a redemption action, and moved under s. 25 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, that the property should be sold out of court and the conduct of the sale given to the mortgagors. The first mortgagees opposed this application, but certain second mortgagees of the property consented to it:—Held, that there was jurisdiction to allow a sale by the mortgagors out of court, and that they should be given liberty to sell within three months, subject to a reserve price being fixed, sufficient to cover the mortgage debt, interest, and costs, and to payment into court by the mortgagors of 100*l.* as security for the costs of the mortgagees. Brewer v. Square, 61 L. J., Ch. 516; [1892] 2 Ch. 111; 66 L. T. 486; 40 W. R. 378.

Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.]—A second mortgagee is entitled under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, to apply in a foreclosure suit for the conduct of the sale of the estate; but the court will exercise a discretion, and will refuse such application, upon being satisfied that expense will be saved by giving the conduct of the sale to the first mortgagee. Hewitt v. Nanson, 28 L. J., Ch. 49; 7 W. R. 5.

Foreclosure Suit Pending.]—Although a foreclosure suit is pending the court will allow the property to which it relates to be sold without the control of the court, provided all parties interested are sui juris and consent; but the purchase-money will be ordered to be paid into court, at least if there is any question as to priority of incumbrances. Relph v. Horton, 19 W. R. 220.

In Foreclosure Suit—Security for Costs.]—An action having been brought to foreclose an equitable mortgage, the plaintiff at the hearing asked for a sale. The defendants did not oppose this, but they wished to have the conduct of the sale. The parties left it to the judge to decide who should have the conduct:—Held, that the defendants ought to have the conduct, because it was most to their interest to obtain the best possible price for the property:—Held, also, that, inasmuch as the defendants alone would be liable for the costs of the sale, there was no reason for requiring them to give security for the costs. Woolley v. Coleman (21 Ch. D. 169) not followed as to such security. Ordered, that the sale should take place out of court, and that the proceeds of sale should be paid into court. Davies v. Wright, 32 Ch. D. 220.

After Order for Sale.]—A first mortgagee applied for leave to sell out of court, under a power of sale in the mortgage, notwithstanding the absolute order of sale:—Held, that such leave should not be given in the absence of evidence that the mortgagee would be damnified by retaining the matter in court, or that a profit would be made by an immediate sale. Claire's Estate, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 281.

Equitable Mortgage—Delay of Assignee.]—After an order for sale obtained by an equitable mortgagee, if the assignees delay the sale, semble, that the course is not to present a fresh petition for a sale, but to prosecute the former order. Robinson, Ex parte, 3 Deac. & C. 103.

Equitable Mortgagee also Assignee.]—Where an equitable mortgagee is also an assignee, a solicitor will be appointed to take the account and conduct the sale. Lees, Ex parte, 2 Deac. & C. 360.

f. Conditions.

Depreciatory.]—A condition of sale, on a sale by a mortgagee under a power of sale, entitling the vendor to rescind the contract in case he should be unwilling or unable to answer any requisition, is depreciatory in a sense, but not so depreciatory as to be improper, being one that a prudent owner would introduce, and therefore binding on the mortgagor. Falkner or Faulkner v. Equitable Reversionary Society, 4 Drew. 352; 28 L. J., Ch. 132; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1214; 7 W. R. 73.

Notice in.]—When a purchaser from mortgagees under a power of sale has notice in the conditions of sale of an agreement between the mortgagor and the tenant in possession that a certain sum shall be allowed for buildings, he is bound by such agreement and by all the equities which bind the tenant thereunder. Thomas v. Davies, 9 W. R. 831.

g. Severance of Minerals.

Mortgage excepting Minerals.]—Mortgagees of real property, except the minerals, were allowed upon petition to exercise their power of sale by selling apart from the minerals, although a bill for foreclosure had been filed by them, and subsequent incumbrancers and persons interested in the equity of redemption opposed the petition. Wilkinson's Mortgaged Estates, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 392; L. R. 13 Eq. 634.

Under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108.]—A mortgagee of freeholds, with power of sale, may, under 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, sell the minerals separately from the land, though there are subsequent mortgagees who have not consented. Beaumont's Mortgage, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 400; L. R. 12 Eq. 86; 19 W. R. 767.

Service of Petition.]—It is not necessary for mortgagees, in order to exercise the power of selling with such a reservation, to serve the petition on any subsequent incumbrancers. Ib.

A petition by a mortgagee of land, under s. 2 of the Act 25 & 26 Vict. c. 108, for the sanction of the court to his selling the surface of the mortgaged property, with a reservation of the mines and minerals thereunder, must be served on the mortgagor. Dictum in Wilkinson's Mortgaged Estates, In re (L. R. 13 Eq. 634), dissented from. Hirst's Mortgage, In re, 60 L. J., Ch. 48; 45 Ch. D. 263; 63 L. T. 444; 38 W. R. 685.

h. Deposit.

Taking Payment of, how.]—On a sale by auction on behalf of a mortgagee, in exercise of the power of sale contained in his mortgage deed, the acceptance by the auctioneer, on behalf of the vendor and with his concurrence, of a cheque (which was dishonoured on presentation) in lieu of cash for the deposit, is not, having regard to the common practice at sales by auction, unreasonable, and is not such an act of negligence on the part of the mortgagee as to deprive him of his right to the costs of the abortive sale. Farrer v. Lacy, 55 L. J., Ch. 149; 31 Ch. D. 42; 53 L. T. 515; 34 W. R. 22—C. A.

Whether Mortgagee need Require.]—When a mortgagee sells under his power of sale, he is not bound to require a purchaser to pay a deposit of ten per cent. S. C., 53 L. J., Ch. 569; 25 Ch. D. 636; 50 L. T. 121; 32 W. R. 196.

Accountability for.]—A first mortgagee joining in a sale by a subsequent mortgagee executing conveyances and signing receipts for the purchase-money of lands in mortgage:—Held, not accountable either to the mortgagor or to the subsequent mortgagee in respect of deposits which, pursuant to the conditions of sale, the purchasers had paid to the solicitor, and with which the solicitor had absconded. Barrow v. White, 2 J. & H. 580.

3. Right to Proceeds.

a. In General.

Duty and Liability of Vendor.]—Where a mortgagee sells under his power of sale and, after he has paid himself his debts and costs out of the purchase-money, a surplus remains in his hands, it is his duty, if he cannot ascertain who are the persons entitled to the surplus, to set it apart so as to be fruitful for their benefit, and if he fails to do so he will be charged with interest at four per cent. from the time of the completion of the sale. Charles v. Jones, 56 L. J., Ch. 745; 35 Ch. D. 544; 56 L. T. 848; 35 W. R. 645.

—— Threatened Misapplication — Appointment of Receiver.]—A mortgagee of chattels in possession, and proceeding under the power in his deed of assignment to sell the mortgage property, is, after satisfying the amount of his mortgage security and the expenses of the sale, a trustee of the surplus proceeds; and where the mortgagee, by his answer to the bill of an execution creditor, declared his intention to pay such proceeds to certain claimants, in respect of an execution and an assignment, both subsequent to the delivery to the sheriff of the writ of execution obtained by the plaintiff, the surplus proceeds of the property already sold were ordered to be paid into court, and a receiver appointed of the moneys to arise by the future sales. Gouthwaite v. Rippon, 8 L. J., Ch. 139.

Apportionment between Judgment Creditor and Appointee.]—D., being entitled to three estates, the first unincumbered, the second mortgaged for 1,400*l.*, and the third for 3,000*l.*, settled them to the use of himself for life, remainder to such uses as he and his wife should jointly appoint, with an ulterior limitation as to one moiety to himself in fee, and as to the other moiety as his wife should appoint. Subsequently, D. and his wife appointed the first and second estates to A., by way of mortgage, to secure 1,000*l.* borrowed by D. Subsequently A. entered into possession of the first and second estates, kept down the interest, and paid off part of the principal out of the rents. D. and his wife died, and, upon A. selling under a power contained in his mortgage deed, there remained a net surplus in his hands after satisfying the 1,400*l.* and his own debt:—Held, by Romilly, M.R., first, that, as between a judgment creditor of D. and the appointees of his wife, the principal debt of 1,400*l.* must be borne equally by the respective moieties of the husband and wife of the proceeds of sale, so as to restore to the husband's estate the rents and profits applied by A. in satisfaction of principal; and, secondly, that no counter equity existed on the part of the appointees of the wife to have the surplus rents and profits applied in discharging the interest of the 3,000*l.* which had been suffered by D. to fall into arrear. Upon appeal, the decision upon the first point was affirmed; but, as to the second, held, that the judgment creditor was, as between himself and the appointees of the wife, subject to the same equity arising from the obligation to keep down the interest as the tenant for life himself would have been subject to, and, consequently, that, if any loss had accrued to the appointees by reason of the tenant for life having failed to keep down the arrears of interest, they would have a right of set-off to the extent of this loss against the judgment creditor. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 33 L. J., Ch. 106; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 738; 8 L. T. 409; 11 W. R. 555.

—— Rectification.]—In the settlement referred to, the mortgage on the second estate was erroneously stated to be for 1,200*l.* (instead of 1,400*l.*), but in subsequent deeds executed by the parties and proved, the mortgage was recognised as being for 1,400*l.*:—Held, by Romilly, M.R., that the court might treat the settlement as having, in fact, been made subject to a mortgage for 1,400*l.* without any suit to rectify it. Ib.

Mortgagee's Right to retain more than Six Years' Arrears of Interest.]—Sect. 42 of the Statute of Limitations (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27) does not affect the right of a mortgagee who has sold under his power of sale to retain out of the proceeds more than six years' arrears of interest. Marshfield, In re, Marshfield v. Hutchings, 56 L. J., Ch. 599; 34 Ch. D. 721; 56 L. T. 694; 35 W. R. 491.

After the judgment for the administration of the estate of a second mortgagee of real estate, the first mortgagees sold the mortgaged property under their power of sale and received the proceeds. A summons in the action was then taken out by the plaintiff, a beneficiary under the will of the second mortgagee, to determine the question whether the first mortgagees were entitled to retain more than six years' arrears of interest. The first mortgagees were not parties to the action, but consented to appear on the summons to argue the question. The second mortgage absorbed all the possible surplus of the proceeds of sale:—Held, that the first mortgagees were entitled to retain more than six years' arrears of interest. Edmunds v. Waugh (L. R. 1 Eq. 418) approved of. Ib.

Surplus Proceeds—Money in Hands of First Mortgagee—Interest.]—Where upon the realisation of mortgaged property the first mortgagee receives and retains more money than is sufficient to satisfy his claim under his mortgage, the court will order him to pay to the second mortgagee simple interest upon the surplus moneys so retained by him, unless there are circumstances in the particular case before the court which render such an order unjust. The fact, that the second mortgagee has wilfully abstained for four years from taking proceedings to enforce his claim to the surplus moneys retained by the first mortgagee, is not a circumstance upon which the court will deprive him of interest. Eley v. Read, 76 L. T. 39—C. A.

b. Between Mortgagor and Mortgagee.

Mortgagee Trustee for Mortgagor.]—A mortgagee in exercising his power of sale is not (except as to the balance of the purchase-money after a sale) a trustee for the mortgagor, even if the mortgage is in the form of a trust for sale. Downes v. Grazebrook (3 Mer. 200) and Robertson v. Morris (1 Giff. 421) observed upon. Warner v. Jacob, 51 L. J., Ch. 642; 20 Ch. D. 220; 46 L. T. 656; 30 W. R. 721.

Application of Surplus to pay simple contract Debt.]—When a mortgagor dies insolvent, and the mortgagee then realises his security and, after paying himself the mortgage debt out of the proceeds, has a surplus in his hands, he cannot retain that surplus in payment of a simple contract debt due to him from the mortgagor, and so give himself a preference over the other creditors, but must hand it over to the mortgagor's legal personal representative as part of his estate; the mortgagee being merely in the position of a trustee of the surplus for the estate. Talbot v. Frere, 9 Ch. D. 568; 27 W. R. 148.

—— Where Mortgagee Executor.]—If the mortgagee in such a case happens to be the executor of the mortgagor, still he cannot, under an executor's general right of retainer or preference, retain the surplus in payment of the simple contract debt, to the prejudice of a creditor of a higher degree, whether the debt is due to himself individually or to a partnership of which he happens to be a member. Ib.

Retaining Balance in Reduction of Principal.]—If a mortgagee, even when his interest is in arrear, enters into possession and sells part of the estate under a power of sale in his mortgage, and after payment of his costs and interest then due retains a balance of the proceeds in his hands, that balance will be considered as applied in reduction of the principal debt, and future interest can be charged only on the amount of the debt so reduced. Thompson v. Hudson, 40 L. J., Ch. 28; L. R. 10 Eq. 497; 23 L. T. 278; 18 W. R. 1081.

Several Mortgages in one Mortgagee.]—Semble, that, if two distinct mortgages by the same mortgagor, each containing a trust to apply the proceeds of a sale under the power, first in payment of costs of sale, then of the interest, and then of the principal due upon it, come into the hands of the same person as mortgagee, he may sell the lands subject to one mortgage, and apply the proceeds in payment of arrears of interest on the other mortgage before reducing the principal of the first one. Ib.

If there be several mortgages for distinct debts to one mortgagee, who applies to commissioner in usual manner for sale, the proceeds of each must be applied to the particular debt; and surplus of one cannot be applied to deficiency of another. Bignold, Ex parte, Newton, In re, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 9; 2 Deac. 66; 6 L. J., Bk. 65.

Compromise—Sale twelve years later.]—Preparatory to a contemplated sale under a trust for sale in a mortgage deed, an ejectment was brought by the first and second mortgagees against the heir of the mortgagor, and compromised upon the terms that he should give up possession on the 29th day of September following, and, if required, release to the mortgagees all his right, claim and interest, if any, in the premises. The sale did not take place, the heir was not required to execute any release, and he did not give up possession of the premises. Twelve years afterwards, the mortgaged property was sold under the trust for sale for considerably more than enough to pay principal, interest and costs:—Held, that the mortgagees were not entitled under the compromise to retain the surplus purchase-moneys for their own use. Rushbrook v. Lawrence, 39 L. J., Ch. 93; L. R. 5 Ch. 3; 21 L. T. 477; 18 W. R. 101.

Lien for Purchase-money of mortgaged Property.]—G. A. bequeathed all his furniture, plate, pictures and books (subject to his debts) to his wife S. A. for life, remainder to his son H. A., and appointed them his executrix and executor. With the sanction of the court of chancery, which had made a decree for sale, and directed the purchase-money to be paid into court, H. A. agreed to purchase and became the purchaser of the books and paintings at a valuation of 2,050*l.* 15*s.*, and, for the purpose of paying the amount and to supply the other wants of H. A., he and his mother, S. A., by deed, assigned to M. by way of mortgage, the furniture, plate, pictures and books for 2,800*l.*, and both jointly covenanted for payment. H. A. afterwards became the purchaser of the plate and furniture, with the sanction of the court of chancery, at a valuation of 706*l.* 8*s.*; and to enable him to make the purchase M. advanced him 600*l.*, secured by deed of H. A., executed after the death of his mother, S. A., whereby he covenanted that the furniture, plate, pictures and books assigned by the first deed should stand charged with and be a security to M. for payment of the 600*l.*, and should not be redeemable until payment of that sum, as well as of the 2,800*l.* The 600*l.* was paid into the hands of H. A.'s solicitor, but the purchase-money for the plate and furniture was never paid into court, M. having sold the plate, furniture, pictures and books under a power of sale contained in the first deed:—Held, in an action by him against the executor of S. A. on her covenant for payment, that, although M. as against S. A.'s representatives could not, by force of the second deed, in equity, deduct the 600*l.* out of the moneys so raised, yet he was entitled to deduct the unpaid purchase-money of 706*l.* 8*s.*, as he could not sell the whole of the mortgaged property without satisfying the lien of the court to that extent. Marcon v. Bloxam, 11 Ex. 586; 25 L. J., Ex. 193.

Payment into Court and Investment—Depreciation.]—In a foreclosure suit the mortgaged estate was, by the consent of all parties, sold, and the purchase-money invested in consols, which were subsequently sold at a lower price, and the produce paid to the mortgagee. At the time of investment, the purchase-money was sufficient to satisfy the debt, but the produce of the consols was not sufficient. The mortgagee claimed to be entitled to the difference out of the assets in an administration suit:—Held, that the mortgagee was still a creditor, and entitled to the balance of his principal, interest and costs, including the costs of the application. Tompsett v. Wickens, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 10; 4 W. R. 136.

Repayment for Permanent Improvements.]—If a mortgagee in possession, or a mortgagee selling under his power of sale, has reasonably expended money in permanent works on the property, he is entitled on primâ facie evidence to that effect to an inquiry whether the outlay has increased the value of the property, and, if it has done so, he is entitled to be repaid his expenditure so far as it has increased such value. And in such case it is immaterial whether the mortgagor had notice of the expenditure. Notice to the mortgagor is only material when the expenditure is unreasonable, for the purpose of showing that he acquiesced in it. Scudon v. Hooper (6 Beav. 246; 14 L. J., Ch. 120) commented on. Shepard v. Jones, 21 Ch. D. 469; 47 L. T. 604; 31 W. R. 308—C. A.

c. Of Puisne Incumbrancer.

Payment into Court—Petition.]—A first mortgagee sold under a power, and, after deducting his debt, paid the balance into court. On a petition by a puisne mortgagee to have his debt, interest and costs paid to him out of the fund, the order was made, without an account being directed. Bingham v. King, 14 W. R. 414.

—— Where Question of Priority.—Although a foreclosure suit is pending, the court will allow the property to which it relates to be sold without the control of the court, provided all parties interested are sui juris and consent; but the purchase-money will be ordered to be paid into court, at least if there is any question as to priority of incumbrances. Relph v. Horton, 19 W. R. 220.

Compulsion of subsequent Incumbrancer to redeem out of Proceeds.]—Semble, where a subsequent incumbrancer has an independent right to sell the premises for payment of his own incumbrance, the court of exchequer will not compel him to redeem a prior mortgage, otherwise than out of the sale of the mortgaged premises, unless the mortgagee insists that the premises are an insufficient security to pay him, and that he ought to be redeemed in the first instance: aliter, where the subsequent incumbrancer has no such independent right to sell. Crofts v. Poe, 1 Jones, 540.

Purchaser liable for allowing irregular Application.]—Prior judgment creditor who neglected to come in and prove before final decree for a sale, directed to obtain a report, and then apply to extend the sale to cover his demand, a motion to amend the minutes being refused. Purchaser under the decree, after such a motion, could not plead want of notice; and, although he had the legal estate, would, it appears, be liable, if, having notice of such prior judgment creditor, he allowed the purchase-money to be applied to subsequent incumbrances contrary to the order of priority of charge. Leake v. Moore, 2 Moll. 127.

Contribution.]—A. borrowed money on a mortgage of his estates D. and S., to which B., a prior incumbrancer on D., and C., a prior incumbrancer on S., were parties, and consented to give the mortgage priority over their respective charges. The lands were subsequently sold, and the mortgage paid out of the joint produce. The residue of the fund produced by sale of the S. estate was not sufficient to pay C.'s incumbrance:—Held, that C. was not entitled to contribution against B., there not having been any common liability to pay a common demand. Keily, In re, 9 Ir. Ch. R. 87.

Balance handed to Mortgagor—Liability of first to second Mortgagee.]—A mortgagor of a leasehold house, with the concurrence of the first mortgagees, who had notice of a second equitable mortgage, sold the property. Upon completion the balance of the purchase-money, after payment of the first mortgagees, was handed to the mortgagor. In an action by the second mortgagees against the mortgagor (who did not appear) and the first mortgagees:—Held, that the first mortgagees were liable to make good to the plaintiffs the amount of their security to the extent of the balance of the purchase-money. The doctrine in Peacock v. Burt (4 L. J., Ch. 33) will not be extended. Dictum of Wood, V.-C., in Bates v. Johnson (Johns. 304, 313), as to the right of a first mortgagee to transfer to a third mortgagee in preference to the second, questioned. West London Commercial Bank v. Reliance Permanent Building Society, 54 L. J., Ch. 1081; 29 Ch. D. 954; 53 L. T. 442; 33 W. R. 916—C. A.

Balance paid into Bank—Right to Interest.]—A first mortgagee, having sold the mortgaged property under a power of sale, gave notice to the subsequent mortgagees that he was ready to pay over the balance, after satisfying his own mortgage. The second mortgagee required that the money should not be parted with until disputes between the incumbrancers should have been settled. The money was thereupon paid by the first mortgagee into his bankers, and was allowed to remain unproductive for several years:—Held, that the first mortgagee could not, under the circumstances, be charged with interest upon the money. Mathison v. Clark, 25 L. J., Ch. 29; 4 W. R. 30.

Under Garnishee Order.]—M. mortgaged a leasehold to W. and then to B. A judgment creditor of B. obtained a garnishee order against M. After this W. sold the property under a power of sale, and an action was brought to distribute the surplus proceeds:—Held, that the judgment creditor had no claim against the surplus proceeds of sale, for that a garnishee order has not the effect of transferring the debt due from the garnishee with the benefit of the securities for it, and that to treat the garnishee order as affecting the land before execution would conflict with the provisions of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 112. Chatterton v. Watney, 50 L. J., Ch. 535; 17 Ch. D. 259; 44 L. T. 391; 29 W. R. 573—C. A.

Sale in Creditor's Suit—Right of Equitable Mortgagee by Deposit.]—The unexpired term in a house, and the goodwill of a business established in it, were sold in a creditor's suit, with the consent of a person with whom the lease had been deposited as a security, and brought a price less than the amount of his debt:—Held, that the equitable mortgagee was entitled to the whole of the purchase-money, whether arising from the value of the goodwill, or from the value of the lease, independently of the goodwill. Chissum v. Dewes, 5 Russ. 29; 29 R. R. 10.

Injunction against parting with Proceeds.]—A mortgage with a power of sale having been made, judgment was entered up by a creditor against the mortgagor, who was subsequently imprisoned, and discharged under the Insolvent Debtors Acts. The mortgagees, whilst the mortgagor was in prison, sold under their power, and the purchase-money was invested in the names of the mortgagor and the assignees. At the suit of the judgment creditor, they were restrained from parting with a part of the purchase-money. Robinson v. Hedger, 13 Jur. 846. And see 19 L. J., Ch. 463; 14 Jur. 784.

On a bill by a judgment creditor of a mortgagor, the court granted an injunction to restrain mortgagees who were about to sell under their power from paying the surplus to the mortgagor. Thornton v. Finch, 4 Giff. 515; 34 L. J., Ch. 466.

4. PURCHASE BY MORTGAGEE.

Generally.]—A mortgagee purchased part of the mortgaged estate. His principal and interest, calculated up to the 24th of March, exceeded the purchase-money. He was let into possession from the preceding Christmas. Bates v. Bonnor, 7 Sim. 427.

Right of puisne, on Sale by prior Mortgagee.]—There is no rule in equity which precludes a puisne mortgagee from purchasing the mortgaged property on the occasion of the exercise by a prior mortgagee of his power of sale, and a puisne mortgagee so purchasing acquires as against the mortgagor an absolute irredeemable title. Shaw v. Bunny, 2 De G. J. & S. 468; 34 L. J., Ch. 257; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 99; 11 L. T. 645; 13 W. R. 374.

—— Setting aside.]—A purchase by the mortgagees of the mortgaged property from a prior mortgagee selling under a power of sale will be set aside, as a purchase by a trustee of trust property. Parkinson v. Hanbury, 2 De G. J. & S. 450; 11 L. T. 755; 13 W. R. 331.

Property being put up for sale by a first mortgagee was bought by a second incumbrancer, to whom the equity of redemption had been conveyed on trust for sale on default in payment of his debt. This sale having been set aside at the suit of the representative of the mortgagor (see 1 Dr. & Sm. 143; 8 W. R. 575):—Held, that the possession of the purchaser was to be referred to the character of trustee, and the account of the rents received by him was not as of course to be on the footing of wilful neglect and default. The second incumbrancer, being not an ordinary mortgagee, but a trustee for sale, was incapacitated from purchasing. Ib.

—— Rule of Equity.]—There is no rule in equity that a second mortgagee shall not purchase from a first mortgagee selling under his power of sale. S. C., 1 Dr. & Sm. 143; 8 W. R. 575.

—— Whether second Mortgage being Trust for Sale makes Difference.]—A second mortgagee may purchase from the first mortgagee selling under his power of sale; and with respect to the question of undervalue he is in the same position as a stranger. The circumstance that the second mortgage is in form of a trust for sale makes no difference; nor is it material that the second mortgagee is in possession at the time of sale. Kirkwood v. Thompson, 2 De G. J. & S. 613; 12 L. T. 811; 13 W. R. 1052. Affirming, 2 H. & M. 392; 34 L. J., Ch. 305; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 385.

Trust to Sell.]—A., having contracted for the purchase of an estate, agrees, by deed, to convey it to two partners to whom he was indebted, upon trust to sell, and, after paying prior charges, to retain their own debt; and it was provided that the power of sale might be exercised, by the partners, before any conveyance should be made to them. No conveyance was ever made or required to be made to the partners, nor did they attempt to exercise the power of sale, and, one of them having died, the survivor agrees with an agent of A. to purchase the estate:—Held, that he was not a trustee, but stood in the situation of a creditor, with a security for his debt, and therefore was not disqualified from purchasing the estate. Chambers v. Walters, 3 Sim. 42. S. C., on appeal, Coop. t. Brough. 91. Affirmed, S. C., nom. Waters v. Groom, 11 Cl. & F. 684.

Sale by Mortgagee to himself — Validity—Subsequent Sale to Third Person.]—Where a mortgagee whose interest is in arrear puts the mortgaged property up to auction, and goes through a form of sale with one who is in reality acting on his behalf, the transaction, although not necessarily a fraud or evidence of fraud, is inoperative. A subsequent sale by the mortgagee to an innocent third party is, therefore, good. Henderson v. Astwood, [1894] A. C. 150; 6 R. 450—P. C.

Purchase by Company of which Mortgagee a Member.]—The mortgagors of a quarry brought an action to set aside a sale of the mortgaged property made by the mortgagees under the power of sale in the mortgage to a limited company who were defendants to the action. The sale was impeached on the ground that F., one of the mortgagees, was personally interested in the purchase, being at the time of the sale the holder of shares in the company to the amount of one-tenth of the subscribed capital of the company and also being the solicitor to the company:—Held, that, although a mortgagee could not sell to himself, nor could two mortgagees sell either to one of themselves, or to one of themselves and another, the reason being that there could not be any real independent bargaining as between opposite parties, yet, where mortgagees sold to a corporation such as a public company, there were primâ facie two independent contracting parties and a valid contract, and, if the bargaining was real and honest, and conducted independently by the mortgagees on the one hand and by the directors on the other, and it was satisfactorily shown that in the concluding terms of the sale the parties were in no way affected by the circumstance that one of the mortgagees had some interest as a shareholder in the company, there was no sufficient reason for setting aside the sale; that in the present case the material terms of the bargain were honestly and independently settled, and were not in any degree affected by the fact that F. subsequently agreed to become a member of and to act as solicitor for the company, and that the sale ought not to be set aside merely because he was a member of and acting as solicitor for the company at the time when the formal contract was signed. Farrar v. Farrars, 58 L. J., Ch. 185; 40 Ch. D. 395; 60 L. T. 121; 37 W. R. 196—C. A.

5. Purchase by Mortgagor.

Charge for Deficiency.]—A mortgagor having made two successive mortgages of his estate to different persons purchased the estate from the first mortgagee under a power of sale contained in his mortgage, and subsequently granted further incumbrances to other persons who had notice of the second mortgage. The purchase-money not being sufficient to pay off the first and second mortgages:—Held, that the second mortgagee was entitled to a charge upon the estate for the deficiency, and that he might obtain a decree of foreclosure against the mortgagor and the subsequent mortgagees. Otter v. Vaux (Lord), 2 K. & J. 650. Affirmed, 6 De G. M. & G. 638; 26 L. J., Ch. 128; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 169; 5 W. R. 188.

Quære, whether this would be the case if the estate had been sold under the power to a stranger, and subsequently purchased from such stranger by the mortgagor. Ib.

6. Pre-emption, Right to.

Enforcing after Sale.]—Equity will not, after a sale, enforce a covenant of pre-emption against mortgagor, in favour of mortgagee. Orby v. Trigg, 9 Mod. 2.

7. INJUNCTION AGAINST.

General Rule.]—The general rule is that a sale by a mortgagee will be restrained only on payment into court by the mortgagor of the amount which the mortgagee swears to be due to him, but this does not apply where the court can see on the terms of the deed that this amount cannot be due on the security. Hill v. Kirkwood (28 W. R. 358) considered. Hickson v. Darlow, 23 Ch. D. 690; 48 L. T. 449; 31 W. R. 417—C. A.

In 1830 W. conveyed certain real estates to R. and T. and their heirs, by way of mortgage, for securing 400*l.*, with a power of sale in case of default. W. died in 1839, having devised the same property, subject to certain charges created by his will, to his sons, A., B. and C., as tenants in common in fee. In 1839, after W.'s death, B. conveyed all his one-third share, under his father's will, to R., H. and N. by way of mortgage, with power of sale in case of default. R., the surviving mortgagee of the deed of 1830, threatened to sell under the power in that deed unless A., the acting executor of W., would redeem both mortgages. Upon a bill by A. to redeem and for an injunction, the court, upon motion, on payment into court by A. of the money due upon the first mortgage, restrained R. from selling under the power contained in the deed of 1830, and from conveying the legal estate in the one-third share of B. comprised in the mortgage of 1839. Whitworth v. Rhodes, 20 L. J., Ch. 105.

—— Where Mortgagee is Solicitor of Mortgagor.]—The ordinary rule, that the court will not grant an interlocutory injunction restraining a mortgagee from exercising his power of sale except on the terms of the mortgagor paying into court the sum sworn by the mortgagee to be due for principal, interest and costs, does not apply to a case where the mortgagee at the time of taking the mortgage was the solicitor of the mortgagor. In such a case the court will look to all the circumstances of the case, and will make such order as will save the mortgagor from oppression without injuring the security of the mortgagee. Macleod v. Jones, 53 L. J., Ch. 145; 24 Ch. D. 289; 49 L. T. 321; 32 W. R. 43—C. A.

Trustee for Sale proceeding Precipitately.]—Injunction not granted to restrain mortgagee from selling under power in mortgage deed; otherwise, where there is a trustee for sale, and he proceeds precipitately and without notice to both parties. Anon., 6 Madd. 10.

Selling after Offer by Puisne to pay off First Mortgagee.]—A puisne incumbrancer offered to pay off the first mortgagee, which being declined he filed a bill to compel a transfer. The first mortgagee, having afterwards proceeded to sell the property, was restrained from transferring the first mortgage and parting with the legal estate and title deeds. Rhodes v. Buckland, 16 Beav. 212.

In Arbitration.]—Injunction to restrain the exercise of a power of sale given to secure a balance to be ascertained by an arbitrator, refused, although the award was made after the plaintiff had executed a deed for the purpose of revoking his authority. Harcourt v. Ramsbottom, 1 J. & W. 505.

Sale without Notice.]—Where a covenant in a mortgage deed not to exercise the power of sale except after three months' notice was followed by a proviso that the purchaser should not be affected by the absence of such notice, and that the remedy of the mortgagor should be by an action for damages:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to restrain the mortgagee from selling without giving the required notice. Prichard v. Wilson, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 330; 11 L. T. 437; 3 N. R. 350.

—— Deed of Arrangement indorsed on Mortgage.]—By a deed of arrangement, indorsed upon a mortgage deed, which contained the usual power of sale upon notice, the mortgagee was appointed receiver of the mortgaged premises, without prejudice to his rights and powers under the mortgage deed; and it provided that, upon the mortgagee giving three months' notice to the mortgagor to put an end to the trusts, he should be at liberty to exercise the power of sale and other powers contained in the mortgage deed. Upon motion, the mortgagee was restrained from exercising his power of sale, he not having given notice to determine the trusts of the deed of arrangement. Gill v. Newton, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 220; 14 L. T. 240; 14 W. R. 490.

Stringency of Conditions.]—Where a mortgagee had a power, on default of payment, on notice, to sell the premises, together or in lots, by private contract or by public auction, subject to such special or other conditions of sale as he might think fit, and he proceeded to a sale after ample notice, but under very special conditions of sale, directed against certain defects of title which the mortgagor himself had, since executing the mortgage, insisted upon, the court refused to interfere to prevent the sale under such stringent provisions. Kershaw v. Kalow, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 974.

Surprise and Undervalue.]—Motion by mortgagor for injunction to restrain completion of sale of mortgaged premises by mortgagee under power of sale, on the ground of surprise and undervalue, refused, mortgagor having acted unfairly, and in some degree sanctioned the transactions relating to the sale. Ferrand v. Clay, 1 Jur. 265.

Practice—Alleged Breach of Trust—Answer.]—On a bill by a mortgagor to restrain a mortgagee from enforcing his power of sale under the mortgage deed, and where no answer had been put in, but it was alleged by the bill that a breach of trust had been committed by the mortgagee, the court, on motion, granted an injunction until the filing of the answer or further order. Merest v. Murray, 14 L. T. 321.

8. SETTING ASIDE.

Generally.]—An alleged sale under a power of sale in a mortgage was set aside as against persons claiming the equity of redemption. Kelly v. Hutton, 37 L. J., Ch. 917; L. R. 3 Ch. 703; 19 L. T. 228; 16 W. R. 1182.

Neither Fraud nor Under-value.]—A few weeks after death of mortgagor and before probate of his will, mortgagee proceeded to exercise power of sale of reversionary interest. Communications were taking place at the time between solicitor of mortgagee and solicitor acting for family of mortgagor, the latter protesting against sale as unnecessary and oppressive, and offering to pay all principal money, interest and costs so soon as assignment could be prepared. No fraud or undervalue. Bill, by executrix of mortgagor, to set aside sale was dismissed with costs. Matthie v. Edwards, 16 L. J., Ch. 405; 11 Jur. 761—L. C. Reversing 2 Coll. C. C. 465; 10 Jur. 347.

Sale after Tender.]—Where a mortgagee, after tender of his principal and interest (the costs being unascertained), sold under the power in his deed, the court set aside the sale against him, and a person who had bought with knowledge of the tender. Jenkins v. Jones, 2 Giff. 99; 29 L. J., Ch. 493; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 391; 8 W. R. 270.

Suppression of Information.]—First mortgagee with power of sale had entered into arrangements, but not a binding contract for the advantageous sale of part of the mortgaged property. After this, he bought up, at a reduced price, the interest of the second mortgagee, without informing him of the arrangements for sale:—Held, that he was not bound to inform the second mortgagee of the opportunity he had of selling, and a bill to set aside the sale, on the ground of suppression of information, was dismissed, with costs. Dolman v. Nokes, 22 Beav. 402.

Irregularity in Notice.]—Semble, that, even where there has been a serious irregularity in the notice to sell by a mortgagee under a power of sale, if the purchaser has entered and expended money on the property, the court will not, in the absence of fraud, interfere to set aside the purchase. Metters v. Brown, 33 L. J., Ch. 97; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 958; 8 L. T. 567; 11 W. R. 744.

Undervalue.]—A sale, not completed, by a solicitor-mortgagee, at a price which appeared to be below the value, was set aside. Jones v. Linton, 44 L. T. 601.

—— Fraud — Leaving Purchase-Money on Mortgage — Mistake.]—B. being entitled to a sum of 2,916*l.* stock in reversion expectant on the death of an old lady aged eighty-two, obtained, through the defendant E. who acted as solicitor for both parties, a loan of 1,650*l.* upon mortgage. The mortgage contained a power of sale upon three months' notice, or on interest being one month in arrear. The interest being in arrear, the stock was sold, under the power, for 1,950*l.*, as subject to succession duty at 3 per cent. The tenant for life was then in a precarious state of health, and died within three months. It was afterwards found that only 7*l.* was payable for succession duty. None of the purchase-money was paid except the deposit, the rest being left upon mortgage of the stock. There was evidence that, having regard to the age and health of the tenant for life, from 100*l.* to 200*l.* might have been obtained for the reversion:—Held, that the sale could not be set aside, either on the ground of undervalue, as there was no fraud; nor the leaving of the purchase-money on mortgage; nor the mistake as to succession duty, that being merely a matter for compensation. Bettyes v. Maynard, 49 L. T. 389; 31 W. R. 461—C. A.

Sale Instigated by Solicitor.]—Bill by mortgagor against mortgagee and his solicitors, praying to have a sale under the mortgage deed set aside for fraud and oppression, dismissed as against the solicitors, the main charges in the bill against them not having been made out, but without costs, on the ground that they were the substantial movers and authors of the sale, which, as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, was proved not to be sustainable in a court of equity. Matthie v. Edwards, 2 Coll. C. C. 465; 10 Jur. 347. See S. C. reversed, supra.

9. Specific Performance.

Generally.]—The owner of a plot of land granted a lease of it for ninety-six years to P., who mortgaged to the lessor (through a trustee), to secure 2,100*l.* and future advances, the mortgage deed containing a power of sale, and, default being made, the property was contracted to be sold to G. under the power. The contract stipulated for the completion of a house on the land by a fixed day, the lessor to deliver an abstract and title commencing with the lease, and paying 250*l.* and interest at 5*l.* per cent., performing the covenants, paying the costs of the agreement—not to inquire into the right of the lessor to exercise the power of sale, or whether anything was due on the mortgage. The lessor did not deliver an abstract, but G. took possession, finished and let the house, and paid interest, until he heard that judgments were outstanding against the mortgagee. The lessor died, and P. paid off the mortgage, took a reassignment, and brought two actions; one of ejectment, and the other for the interest against G. On a bill by G. to restrain the actions, and for specific performance of the contract:—Decree made with costs against P., except the costs of the action as to interest, and the costs of the executors of the lessor. Gutteridge v. Fletcher, 12 L. T. 226; 13 W. R. 540.

Mortgagor not Joining.]—Specific performance against a purchaser under a power of sale in a mortgage deed, without the mortgagor, though under a covenant to the mortgagee to join in a sale: without costs, the only authority produced being MS. Corder v. Morgan, 18 Ves. 344.

—— Delivery of Possession.]—A mortgagee, having a power to sell, contracted for sale without the concurrence of mortgagor, who, as the purchaser insisted, was a necessary party to the conveyance, though the vendor offered to deliver possession:—Held, that there should be a reference as to vendor's ability so to do, and, if able, then there should be a specific performance, with costs. Allen v. Martin, 5 Jur. 239.

Concurrence of Mortgagor.]—A mortgagee contracted to sell together two properties mortgaged to him by different persons; and on the purchaser objecting to the title, the mortgagors, some of whom were married women, verbally promised to concur. The purchaser, however, refused to complete, and, before a final order for specific performance could be obtained, some of the mortgagors died leaving infants interested in the equity of redemption:—Held, that the willingness of the mortgagors to concur covered the defect in the title. Hiatt v. Hillman, 25 L. T. 55; 19 W. R. 694.

Joint Mortgagors—Benefit.]—The mortgagors had so mortgaged the property that the distinct powers of sale could not be exercised separately without selling undivided shares:—Held, that under the circumstances they would be benefited by a joint exercise of the powers, and must be bound by it. Ib.

Concurrence of Parties—Variation in Title.]—Mortgagees sold under their power, without formal notice to the second mortgagees or to the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, subject to conditions which stated that the vendors were mortgagees selling under a power of sale, and that the assignment was to be accepted from them under such power, without the concurrence of other persons. The purchaser repudiated the contract on the ground of the absence of the three months' notice required by s. 20 of the Conveyancing Act, 1881. Subsequently the vendors offered to procure the concurrence of the second mortgagees and the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor:—Held, that the concurrence of the other parties did not prevent the title from being a title under a mortgagee's power of sale; and that the purchaser was bound to complete notwithstanding the variation in the title offered. Thompson and Holt's Contract, In re, 59 L. J., Ch. 651; 44 Ch. D. 492; 62 L. T. 651; 38 W. R. 524.

Defence to Enforcement of Conveyance.]—A mortgagee, with power of sale, obtained a foreclosure decree, and then entered into an agreement to sell the estate, with a clause providing that as the vendor was mortgagee, with power of sale, she would only enter into the usual covenant that she had not incumbered. The purchaser objected to the validity of the foreclosure decree, and insisted upon having the conveyance under the power of sale; and, on the vendor declining to convey in that form, instituted a suit for specific performance, in which the vendor adduced evidence, shewing that the above-mentioned clause was inserted by inadvertence, and that she never intended to incur the risk of opening the foreclosure by conveying under the power:—Held, that the misapprehension was a sufficient defence to the enforcement of a conveyance under the power. Watson v. Marston, 4 De G. M. & G. 230.

Q. RECEIVER.

1. Appointment, 1797.
2. Rights, Duties, and Liabilities, 1810.
3. Receipt of Moneys by, in Foreclosure, 1814.

1. APPOINTMENT.

a. In General, 1797.
b. Against Mortgagee, 1801.
c. At Suit of Mortgagee, 1802.
d. Under Judicature Act, 1873, 1807.
e. Under Irish Mortgage Act, 1808.

a. In General.

For whose Benefit.]—The appointment of receiver is for benefit of incumbrancers only so far as expressed to their benefit, and they choose to avail themselves of it. Gresley v. Adderley, 1 Swanst. 579; 18 R. R. 146.

Mortgagee to be before the Court.]—A receiver cannot be appointed without mortgagee's being before the court, if a mortgage appears upon the face of pleadings. Price v. Williams, G. Cooper, 31.

Not Complete till Security Given.]—An order was made at the suit of an equitable mortgagee "that C. E. M., upon his giving security, be appointed receiver" of certain chattels comprised in the security. After this order, but before security had been given, an execution creditor of the mortgagor took the chattels in execution:—Held, that the receiver was not constituted receiver till he had given security, and that the taking the chattels in execution was not a contempt of court. Edwards v. Edwards, 45 L. J., Ch. 391; 1 Ch. D. 291; 34 L. T. 472; 24 W. R. 713.

By Mortgagor and Mortgagee Jointly—Whose Possession.]—A mortgagor having only a life interest in the mortgaged premises, and a mortgagee having a charge both on the life interest and on the interest in remainder, by a joint deed, appoint a receiver, who is directed to pay certain debts, expenses, and the charge on the life interest, and to keep down the interest on the residue. The mortgagee dies, and afterwards the mortgagor; the receiver continues in receipt of the rents and profits after the death of the mortgagor, and pays some part of the rents to the representative of the mortgagee:—Held, that, upon the construction of the deed, the possession of the receiver was not the possession of the mortgagee, but there was ground for an inquiry whether the representative of the mortgagee had by any acts constituted the receiver her agent exclusively. Jones v. Smith, 1 Hare, 43. Affirmed, 1 Ph. 245; 12 L. J., Ch. 381; 7 Jur. 431.

Receiving Rents after Discharge.]—A receiver was appointed by the court of an estate which had been mortgaged to A. By a decree dated in December, 1827, the receiver was ordered to be discharged, and pay the balance in his hands to A. The receiver continued to receive the rents until 1830, but paid them over to A., and, after that time, the rents were paid by the tenants to A.:—Held, that the possession of the receiver after December, 1827, was the possession of A., and that, therefore, A. had been in possession from that time. Horlock v. Smith, 11 L. J., Ch. 157; 6 Jur. 478.

A Suit of Annuitant.]—A., having charged his estates by mortgages and other incumbrances to a very large amount, appointed B. to be his steward or receiver of all his estates, with verbal directions to pay the interest to the mortgagees, and to pay over the surplus of the rents to himself. On the making a fifth mortgage, A., by deed, appointed B. receiver of the estates comprised in that mortgage, in trust to keep down the interest of that mortgage, and to pay over the residue of the rents to himself; A. afterwards granted several annuities, which he charged on all the mortgaged premises, and demised the same to a trustee for securing the said annuities in manner therein mentioned, and subject thereto to permit A. to receive the surplus for his benefit. At the time of granting these annuities A. represented the estates to be free from all incumbrances. On a bill filed by the annuitants against A. and B. (without making any of the prior incumbrancers parties), the court will restrain B. from paying over any part of the rents to A., and will appoint a receiver, without prejudice to the prior mortgagees taking possession. Dalmer v. Dashwood, 2 Cox, 378.

Charge on Hotel—Whether Business comprised in Security.]—The defendant, being about to erect an hotel under a building agreement, charged "the said building agreement, and all the premises comprised therein, and the hotel and buildings to be hereafter erected as aforesaid," with the repayment of an advance, and contracted with the lender to execute, as soon as the lease was granted, a mortgage which should be in such form, and contain such powers, covenants and provisions, as the solicitor or counsel of the mortgagee should advise or require. The hotel was built, and the mortgagor carried on business there as an hotel-keeper:—Held, in an action by the mortgagee for sale or foreclosure, that the goodwill or business of the hotel was not included in the security, and the court could not appoint a manager. Whitley v. Challis, 61 L. J., Ch. 307; [1892] 1 Ch. 64; 65 L. T. 838; 40 W. R. 291—C. A.

Lease of Collieries.]—The court has jurisdiction, at the instance of mortgagees of collieries held under leases containing working covenants, to appoint a receiver and manager of the property and business, notwithstanding that the latter is not specifically referred to in the mortgage security. Campbell v. Lloyd's Bank, 58 L. J., Ch. 424.

Mortgage of Newspaper.]—On motion by a mortgagee of a newspaper a receiver and manager of the mortgaged property were appointed until the hearing of the cause. Chaplin v. Young, 6 L. T. 97—L. C. And see Kelly v. Hutton, infra.

—— Sale—Co-owner's Application for Receiver.] — K. obtained a decree that he was entitled to a moiety of a newspaper, subject to a lien thereon in favour of his co-owner H., and the decree directed certain accounts to be taken. H. had mortgaged his interest (including his lien on K.'s share) to M. K. had no interest in the premises where the business of printing and publishing the newspaper was carried on, nor in the plant used in the business. The books of account were in the possession of H. Great delay took place in taking the accounts, both H. and M. placing every obstacle they could in the way. Ultimately M. purported, as mortgagee, to sell the whole interest in the newspaper to J. Thereupon K. filed another bill against M. and H. and J., praying that the sale to J. might be declared void as against K., and that the newspaper might be sold by the court, and that till sale a receiver and manager might be appointed, and that, if necessary, the suit might be treated as supplemental to the first suit:—Held, that a receiver and manager ought to be appointed. Kelly v. Hutton, 20 L. T. 201; 17 W. R. 425.

Practice—Amending Notice of Motion—Two Suits.]—The notice of motion for a receiver and manager having been entitled only in the second suit, the vice-chancellor amended it by entitling it also in the first suit, and made the order in both suits:—Held, that it was competent to the vice-chancellor to make the order in both suits. Ib.

Mortgagee Appointed.]—A defendant, a mortgagee, in the absence of any direct authority to be found in the books, was appointed the consignee, manager and receiver of the mortgaged estates. Davis v. Barrett, 13 L. J., Ch. 304.

On Bill to enforce Agreement for Mortgage.]—On advance of money defendant agreed to execute mortgage, but failed. Arrears of interest of advance due. On bill for specific performance, receiver granted. Shakel v. Marlborough (Duke), 4 Madd. 463.

On Equitable Charge and Judgment.]—Receiver granted in default of payment into court, on an equitable charge and a judgment, but execution prevented by the circumstances of the title. The right not affected by a subsequent variation of circumstances, and established over the whole estate, though of great value compared with the debt, as a reasonable part may be tendered as security, or the debt may be paid into court. Curling v. Townshend, 19 Ves. 628.

Mortgagor out of Jurisdiction.]—The conditional order for a receiver in a mortgage matter cannot be enforced against a mortgagor who resides and has been served out of the jurisdiction. Wolfe v. Jackson, 2 Hog. 199.

Action Pending.]—A legal mortgagee, being in possession of the mortgaged property, applied to the court for the appointment of a receiver:—Held, that, although the mortgagee might, under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, appoint a receiver without coming to the court, it was more desirable, where an action was pending, that the appointment should be made by the court under the Judicature Act, 1873. Tillett v. Nixon, 53 L. J., Ch. 199; 25 Ch. D. 238; 49 L. T. 598; 32 W. R. 226.

Pending Bill to Foreclose.]—The court will appoint a receiver of the rents of lands in mortgage, pending a bill to foreclose. Crowe v. Halliday, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 58.

Practice—Appointment ex parte.]—A receiver and manager had been appointed on an ex parte application by the plaintiff in a foreclosure action under a mortgage of brewery premises. The mortgagor, the defendant, afterwards became bankrupt on his own petition. The official receiver opposed a motion by the plaintiff for the continuance of the original receiver and manager, contending that he ought to be substituted:—Held, that an order must be made confirming the previous appointment, and continuing the person then appointed as receiver of the rents and profits of the premises comprised in the mortgage, and as manager of the business, he to be at liberty to use any of the vats, fixed motive machinery, and other property comprised in the mortgage, but nothing else. Deacon v. Arden, 50 L. T. 584.

—— Bill by Equitable Mortgagees—Disappearance of Defendant.]—When a defendant had disappeared after failing to arrange with his creditors in bankruptcy, and a bill was filed by the plaintiffs as equitable mortgagees, service of which could not be effected, the court appointed a receiver of the mortgaged property on an ex parte motion. London and South Western Bank v. Facey, 24 L. T. 126; 19 W. R. 676.

Form.]—Form of order appointing a receiver and manager with an injunction. Truman v. Redgrave, 50 L. J., Ch. 830; 18 Ch. D. 547; 45 L. T. 605; 30 W. R. 421.

b. Against Mortgagee.

When Mortgagee not in Possession.]—When the first mortgagee is not in possession, a receiver may be appointed at the suit of a subsequent incumbrancer, without prejudice to the first mortgagee's taking possession. Berney v. Sewell, 1 J. & W. 637; 21 R. R. 265.

When Mortgagee in Possession.]—When a first mortgagee is in possession, a receiver will not be appointed against him, except on his confession that he has been paid off, or his refusal to accept what is due to him. Ib.

On Application of Creditors.]—When a mortgagee is not in possession, the court will, upon application of creditors, appoint a receiver of the mortgaged premises, but without prejudice to the right of the mortgagee to obtain possession. Bryan v. Cormick, 1 Cox, 422. And see Berney v. Sewell, 1 J. & W. 637; 21 R. R. 265.

On Behalf of Judgment Creditors.]—Where judgment creditors had duly taken out writs of elegit, but possession could not be given by the sheriff in consequence of the existence of prior outstanding mortgages, the mortgagees being alleged not to be in possession, and to refuse to take possession, the court appointed a receiver of the mortgaged premises, without prejudice to the rights of the mortgagees, the prior incumbrancers. Rhodes v. Mostyn (Lord), 17 Jur. 1007; 1 W. R. 366.

On Application of Specialty Creditors—Mortgage of Equitable Interest.]—The court refused, upon motion by specialty creditors of a testator, to appoint a receiver of the rents of real estate, where the persons in possession and in receipt of the rents were mortgagees of a devisee for life of an equitable interest. Caldwell v. Ellison, 9 L. T. 751; 12 W. R. 299.

Mismanagement—Partnership.]—Motion for receiver against mortgagee of mines, who had become also partner, on ground of mismanagement, and excluded mortgagor from interference, refused; the parties having regulated their rights by subsequent agreement, and mortgagee denying his mortgage was satisfied. The rights, &c., of person in the joint situation are not to be governed solely by principles applicable to one holding as mortgagee or partner; and, to deprive him of possession on ground of mismanagement, it must be of a clear and specified nature. Rowe v. Wood, 2 J. & W. 553; 22 R. R. 208.

Practice—Affidavit Evidence.]—On motion for receiver against mortgagee insisting by answer he is not fully paid, court will not try that fact on affidavit. Ib.

Ground for Motion, before Answer.]—The management of the estates, and misapplication of the rents, and collusion with the mortgagor, are not grounds for a motion, before answer, to take possession from him. Berney v. Sewell, 1 J. & W. 647; 21 R. R. 265.

After Decree.]—Receiver against a mortgagee in possession granted after decree, on the application of another mortgagee, a co-defendant. Hiles v. Moore, 15 Beav. 175.

Mortgagee not shewing Debt.]—A. B., the third mortgagee, took possession, and then bought up the first mortgage. Having retained possession many years, and received a considerable sum, a receiver was appointed against him, on the application of the second mortgagee, the affidavit of A. B. not satisfactorily shewing that anything remained due on the first mortgage. Ib.

Where Debt not Ascertained.]—Receiver upon a mortgagee in possession, who cannot ascertain the debt due to him. Codrington v. Parker, 16 Ves. 469.

c. At Suit of Mortgagee.

i. Legal Mortgagee, 1802.
ii. Equitable Mortgagee, 1802.
iii. Subsequent Mortgagee, 1803.
iv. Other Cases, 1804.

i. Legal Mortgagee.

Generally.]—A mortgagee who has the legal estate cannot have a receiver. Berney v. Sewell, 1 J. & W. 647; 21 R. R. 265.

A mortgagee having the legal estate is not entitled to have a receiver appointed by the court, although the tenants may be numerous, and the rents difficult to collect. Sturch v. Young, 5 Beav. 557; 12 L. J., Ch. 56.

In Possession.]—A legal mortgagee who has once gone into possession of the mortgaged property is not entitled, as of right, to have a receiver appointed. Mason v. Westoby (32 Ch. D. 206), discussed. Prytherch, In re, Prytherch v. Williams, 59 L. J., Ch. 79; 42 Ch. D. 590; 61 L. T. 799; 38 W. R. 61.

The rule laid down in Prytherch, In re, Prytherch v. Williams (42 Ch. D. 590), that the court will not by appointing a receiver assist a legal mortgagee to retire from possession, is not an absolute rule of law, but is subject to the discretion of the court. A receiver appointed, in the exercise of that discretion, at the instance of a mortgagee in possession. County of Gloucester Bank v. Rudry Merthyr Steam, &c. Co., 64 L. J., Ch. 451; [1895] 1 Ch. 629; 12 R. 183; 72 L. T. 375; 43 W. R. 486; 2 Manson, 223—C. A.

Interlocutory Application.]—A legal mortgagee of business premises, such as an hotel, who is prevented by the mortgagor from taking possession under the mortgage, may obtain, upon an interlocutory application, an order for the appointment of a receiver and manager, and an injunction restraining the mortgagor from interfering with the management of the business and the possession of the premises. Truman v. Redgrave, 50 L. J., Ch. 830; 18 Ch. D. 547; 45 L. T. 605; 30 W. R. 421.

ii. Equitable Mortgagee.

a. In General.

Generally.]—Upon a bill by equitable mortgagees, a receiver was directed to be appointed, with liberty to the parties to propose themselves. Meaden v. Sealey, 6 Hare, 620; 18 L. J., Ch. 168.

Against subsequent Mortgagee—Mortgagor out of Jurisdiction.]—A bill being filed by an equitable mortgagee against a subsequent equitable mortgagee and the mortgagor, who was out of the jurisdiction, and had not appeared, but was sworn to be, by his agent, in receipt of the profits of the mortgaged premises:—Held, by the vice-chancellor, that the court will not appoint a receiver. —— v. Chadwick, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 67.

b. By Deposit.

Before Answer.]—Receiver of rents of mortgaged premises appointed before answer upon bill by equitable mortgagee by deposit of title deeds, the court thinking, from the circumstances, that it was a case of danger to the plaintiff, unless the court interfered. Aberdeen v. Chitty, 3 Y. & C. 379; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 30.

Practice—Assumption in favour of Depositor.]—In a suit to establish an equitable mortgage by deposit of deeds, if the court is satisfied as to the deposit, it will for the purpose of a motion for a receiver assume the probability that such deposit was made for an advance of money, and that the plaintiff may be entitled to some relief at the hearing and make an order for a receiver. Bodger v. Bodger, 11 W. R. 160.

Against Judgment Creditors.] — W. & Co., bankers, being equitable mortgagees by deposit under agreement in writing with C., the owner of certain freehold estates, filed their bill against B. and D., judgment creditors of C., who had by legal process under writs of elegit, and for the purpose of satisfying their debts, entered into possession of those estates. The bill stated a strong case of fraud and collusion against B. and D., also against C., and charged that the actions brought by B. and D. respectively against C. (in which the judgments were obtained and the elegits afterwards sued out) were brought with the view and for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiffs, and defeating their equitable lien on C.'s estate, and that the elegits were therefore void as against the plaintiffs. The bill prayed a declaration that the plaintiffs were entitled to a priority over the elegit creditors respectively, and that the judgments and elegits might be declared fraudulent and void as against the plaintiffs, and that a receiver might be appointed:—Held, on motion for an injunction and receiver, that, the charges of fraud and collusion having been positively denied by the affidavits, and the plaintiffs not having insisted on a right of priority of their security over the defendants, independently of the fraud and collusion charged by the plaintiffs, the court would not interfere in favour of the plaintiffs with the defendants' title. Whitworth v. Gaugain, Cr. & Ph. 325; 10 L. J., Ch. 317; 5 Jur. 523.

iii. Subsequent Mortgagee.

Generally.]—Where the first mortgagee is not in possession, a receiver may be appointed at the suit of a subsequent incumbrancer without prejudice to the first mortgagee's taking possession. Berney v. Sewell, 1 J. & W. 647; 21 R. R. 265.

Consent of First Mortgagee.]—Second mortgagee, the mortgagor living, cannot have receiver without consent of first mortgagee. Phipps v. Bath and Wells (Bishop), Dick. 608.

Against Tenant and Mortgagee combined in One Person.]—A second mortgagee (the plaintiff) applied for receiver; this was opposed by a defendant who had purchased from plaintiff part of mortgage and was in possession as tenant of a part of estate of which the rent was equal to the interest of his share of the mortgage. The court held the two characters of tenant and mortgagee could not be united, and, therefore, granted the receiver. Archdeacon v. Bowes, 3 Anst. 752; 4 R. R. 855.

Death of Receiver.]—A mortgagee had power by his mortgage deed of appointing a receiver in certain events. He did so, and the receiver had recently died. On a suit by a second mortgagee to redeem:—Held, that the court would appoint a receiver: the first mortgagee to have a right to nominate, subject to any proper objection. Bord v. Tollemache, 1 N. R. 177; 7 L. T. 526.

iv. Other Cases.

Two separate Estates, one primarily liable.]—A brother and sister conveyed their separate estates to a mortgagee, and the deed contained a proviso that recourse should not be had to the sister's estate so long as the brother's estate was sufficient to pay the money lent. The brother's estate, owing to prior mortgages, was insufficient, but no formal administration of his estate had been made upon a bill to foreclose the sister's estate:—Held, that the plaintiff, like a subsequent mortgagee, was entitled to a receiver. Acland v. Gravener, 31 Beav. 482; 32 L. J., Ch. 474. See S. C., 1 N. R. 350.

Mortgage of undivided Share.]—In a suit for foreclosure and partition by mortgagees of an undivided share in property, the court allowed a receiver to be appointed of the undivided share which belonged to the plaintiffs' mortgagor. Fall v. Elkins, 9 W. R. 861.

A receiver may be appointed over the whole of a property at the instance of a mortgagee of an undivided share. Samsion v. Crutwell, 31 W. R. 399.

Equitable Mortgagee of equal Moieties.]—Where two parties, entitled in equal moieties in the premises, concurred in an equitable mortgage, and one being out of the jurisdiction, the rents were received by the other:—Held, a fit case for a receiver being appointed of the whole rents. Holmes v. Bell, 2 Beav. 298; 9 L. J., Ch. 217.

Mortgage of Leaseholds—Ejectment by Landlord.]—If a mortgagor of leasehold premises allows an arrear of rent to fall due, and an ejectment to be brought by the landlord, the mortgagee may pay the arrear and costs, and apply for a receiver. Kelly v. Staunton, 1 Hog. 393.

Where the head landlord threatened to evict mortgaged premises for nonpayment of rent; the court, on bill filed for a foreclosure, and before answer or process, granted a conditional order for a receiver. Barrett v. Mitchell, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 501.

W. L. O. mortgaged certain leasehold premises to the plaintiff; the deed contained a clause of redemption on payment of the principal and interest on the 1st of May, 1842. By a deed of the same date, reciting an agreement, on the treaty for the mortgage, that the principal sum should not be called in until after the death of

W. L. O., and that, by mistake, it was stated in the mortgage deed that it might be called in after the 1st of May, 1842, the plaintiff covenanted that the principal sum should not be called in until after the decease of W. L. O.; W. L. O. became insolvent, and the interest of the mortgage fell in arrear. The plaintiff paid an arrear of head rent in order to save the premises from eviction by the head landlord:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to foreclose the mortgage during the life of W. L. O., but was entitled to a receiver to keep down the interest on the mortgage and his advances. Burrowes v. Molloy, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 482; 2 Jo. & Lat. 521.

On Sale and Purchase—Vendor re-entering for Forfeiture.]—An agreement was entered into by A., for the sale of an estate to B., to be completed, and the purchase-money paid, on or before the expiration of five years, and, in the meantime, interest on the purchase-money was to be paid half-yearly by the purchaser; the vendor reserved a right of avoiding the contract, in case the interest should be in arrear for twenty-one days. To enable B. to pay the interest then in arrear, C. advanced a sum of money on mortgage of B.'s interest in the property, and the vendor afterwards verbally agreed with C. to extend the term of payment of the half-yearly interest. The interest became afterwards in arrear in such a way that A., by the original agreement, had a right to annul the contract; but he had no such right, under the varied agreement; A. re-entered as for a forfeiture. The court, on the application of C., appointed a receiver over the property. Dawson v. Yates, 1 Beav. 301; 2 Jur. 960.

Mortgage of Rates.]—The commissioners appointed under a local act were empowered to raise money upon the security of the rates for the purposes of local improvements. Of the money so borrowed the sum of 100*l.* at the least in every year was to be repaid to such of the mortgagees as should be selected by ballot. The interest upon the mortgage was duly paid, and annual instalments were paid in the prescribed manner, though not with complete regularity. The mortgagees gave notice to the commissioners, requiring them to pay off their mortgage (800*l.*) in six months. The commissioners refused to do so, whereupon the mortgagees filed a bill to establish their right to be paid off, and for a receiver of the rates:—Held, that they had no right to have their mortgage debt paid off, except under the provisions of the act, and that the court had no jurisdiction to appoint a receiver of the rates. Preston v. Great Yarmouth Corporation, 41 L. J., Ch. 760; L. R. 7 Ch. 655; 27 L. T. 87; 20 W. R. 875.

Mortgage of Tolls.]—A canal company, under the authority of various acts of parliament, raised money on mortgage of the undertaking. The instrument of mortgage assigned the navigation and the rates and tolls to the lender, his executors, administrators and assigns, to hold till principal and interest were paid and satisfied; and the acts provided that all the mortgages should be satisfied pari passu. A mortgagee gave the company six months' notice requiring to be paid off, and the company refused to do so:—Held, that he was entitled to have a receiver of the rates and tolls appointed by the court. Hopkins v. Worcester and Birmingham Canal Navigation Co., 37 L. J., Ch. 729; L. R. 6 Eq. 437.

A mortgagee of turnpike tolls and toll-houses which are leased and are subject also to other mortgages, may apply to have a receiver appointed, instead of taking steps to obtain possession at law. Crewe (Lord) v. Edleston, 1 De G. & J. 93; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1061; L. R. 6 Eq. 437.

Where several mortgages were made, under the authority of an act of parliament, of a canal navigation and undertaking, and the works, lands, hereditaments and capital subscription calls, debts, sums of money, property, estate and effects belonging, due or owing, or thereafter to belong, or be due, or owing thereto, and all tolls, rates and duties arising by virtue of the acts under which the company was formed, the mortgagees being equally entitled, one with the other, to their proportions of the tolls and premises, the court, at the suit of one of the mortgagees, whose interest had been a long time unpaid, appointed a receiver of the tolls, rates and duties, and of the estate of the company. Fripp v. Chard Ry., 11 Hare, 241.

A receiver was appointed by the court of the rates, tolls, duties and other property of a canal and railway company, incorporated by act of parliament, notwithstanding that the act of incorporation provided that a committee of proprietors should be elected at every annual general meeting to manage the affairs of the company. Ib.

A receiver of the rates, tolls, duties and other property of the company, appointed by the court at the suit of a mortgagee whose interest was long in arrear, notwithstanding the act of incorporation gave the mortgagee in such a case the specific remedy of applying to and obtaining the appointment by two justices of the peace of a receiver of such rates, tolls and duties, until the interest in arrear and the costs and charges should be satisfied, accompanied by a provision that the act should be without prejudice to any remedies which such mortgagee might have either in law or equity. Ib.

Over Property of Company.]—It is no objection to the appointment of a receiver over the property of a company, whose business is in the nature of a trade, that the application is made by one of several mortgagees who, according to the terms of their mortgages, have the legal estate in the property, nor is it any objection that the company has duties to perform, the neglect of which might subject them to indictment, for the order of the court always gives the parties liberty to apply, whereby any such consequence may be averted. Ib.

A receiver appointed at the suit of a mortgagee, having a charge forming about a ninth of the entire mortgage debt of the company, although the other eight-ninths of mortgagees did not concur in the application. Ib.

Consideration on the selection of a receiver and manager of the property and business of a company, so as to avoid the appointment of any person whose individual pecuniary interest might conflict with the duties of his office, in respect to those for whose benefit the appointment is made. Ib.

On Debtor's Admission.]—A receiver will be appointed on the admission of the debtor, that an arrear of interest is due to the plaintiff on a mortgage, although a creditor in possession of the mortgaged premises does not make any admission on the subject. Page v. Wellesley (Marquis), 1 Hog. 179.

After Decree.]—The defendant in a foreclosure suit, not having complied with the order in the decree to bring in the title deeds, the court, on motion, referred it to the master to appoint a receiver, although the decree was merely for a sale, and did not direct a receiver to be appointed. Harris v. Shee, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 543 ; 1 Jo. & Lat. 91.

After Foreclosure absolute.]—After judgment for foreclosure absolute, the action being at an end, the plaintiff cannot obtain an order for the appointment of a receiver of the mortgaged property, even though the conveyance of the property to the plaintiff remains to be settled. Wills v. Luff, 57 L. J., Ch. 563 ; 38 Ch. D. 197 ; 36 W. R. 571. Affirmed, W. N. 1888, p. 191—C. A.

Evidence.]—When upon a decree pro confesso, in a foreclosure suit, the plaintiff moves for a receiver, he must shew, by affidavit, the sum due for principal, interest and costs, after all just allowances, and that defendant is in possession ; the statement in the bill as to the sum due, is not enough. Rogers v. Newton, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 40.

Interlocutory Application for Possession.]—In an action brought by brewers for foreclosure of a mortgage of a public-house of which the mortgagor was in possession, a receiver and manager had been appointed by order on interlocutory motion in the form given in Truman v. Redgrave (18 Ch. D. 547). The mortgagor continued in occupation of a part of the premises, and was alleged to have acted in a manner which interfered with the proper conduct of the business by the receiver. The plaintiff now moved for an order directing the mortgagor to give up possession to the receiver, and restraining him from remaining in occupation of any part of the premises :—Held, that the mortgagee was not entitled to such an order before judgment. Taylor v. Soper, 62 L. T. 828.

Practice — Suit for Redemption.]—At the hearing of a suit for redemption, the court will not, on the application of the defendant, grant a receiver against the plaintiff, the mortgagor in possession, none being prayed by the bill. Whether it can be done by petition, quære. Barlow v. Gains, 8 Beav. 329.

d. Under Judicature Act, 1873.

Action pending—Conveyancing Act, 1881.]—A legal mortgagee being in possession of the mortgaged property, applied to the court for the appointment of a receiver :—Held, that, although the mortgagee might, under the Conveyancing Act, 1881, appoint a receiver without coming to the court, it was more desirable, where an action was pending, that the appointment should be made by the court under the Judicature Act, 1873. Tillett v. Nixon, 53 L. J., Ch. 199 ; 25 Ch. D. 238 ; 49 L. T. 598 ; 32 W. R. 226.

Right of Mortgagee in Possession.]—Under s. 25, sub-s. 8, of the Judicature Act, 1873, a mortgagee in possession is entitled to the appointment of a receiver, notwithstanding that he has been paid all his interest and costs out of rents received by him while in possession, and that he has surplus rents in his hands. Mason v. Westoby, 55 L. J., Ch. 507 ; 32 Ch. D. 206 ; 54 L. T. 526 ; 34 W. R. 498—V.-C. B.

Extension of Order.]—Under the power given by the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25 (8), to appoint a receiver in all cases in which it shall appear just and convenient, the order made on interlocutory application for the appointment of a receiver was extended to the whole property comprised in the plaintiff's security, as to part of which he was legal and as to part equitable mortgagee. Pease v. Fletcher, 45 L. J., Ch. 265 ; 1 Ch. D. 273 ; 33 L. T. 644 ; 24 W. R. 158.

On behalf of Sub-mortgagee.]—The plaintiff in an ejectment action which was set down for trial, but had been stayed until another action affecting the same property, and brought by the defendant in ejectment against the plaintiff and others, should be ready for trial, moved for a receiver and for attornment to him. The defendant in ejectment set up a defence that in equity the plaintiff was only a sub-mortgagee. The evidence in support of the motion shewed that the property was wasting, and that, even if the plaintiff was only sub-mortgagee, it was insufficient for the original mortgage upon it ; and this evidence was not met to the satisfaction of the court :—Held, that under the circumstances it was just and convenient within the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 25, sub-s. 8, now to appoint a receiver ; and an order was made accordingly, unless the defendant elected within four days to pay an occupation rent into court, the amount to be settled in chambers. Real and Personal Advance Co. v. McCarthy, 27 W. R. 706.

In Ireland.]—The 3rd section of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 77, has been repealed by the 28th section of the Judicature (Ireland) Act, sub-s. 8, and, therefore, the court may appoint a receiver on foot of any judgment mortgage, notwithstanding that the rental of the estate is less than 100*l.* per annum. The court will, under special circumstances, appoint a receiver where less than one year's interest is due. Martin's Estate, In re, 13 L. R., Ir. 43.

e. Under Irish Mortgage Act.

Application of Act.]—Mortgage Act contemplates rents only ; and, therefore, a receiver of the produce of mines, on the petition of a mortgagee to whom a large arrear of interest was due upon his mortgage, was refused. Darcy v. Blake, 1 Moll. 249.

The 11 & 12 Geo. 2, c. 10, does not authorise the appointment of a receiver over mines in the respondent's possession. The court is not in the habit of ordering any lands to be let under a mortgage petition, which were not producing rent at the time when the receiver was appointed. Frere v. Hibernian Mining Co., 2 Hog. 30.

Jurisdiction after 19 & 20 Vict. c. 77.]—Where the receiver in a matter under the Mortgage Act pending at the passing of the 19 & 20 Vict. c. 77, dies, the court has power to appoint a new receiver, notwithstanding the repeal of the former by the 5th section of the latter act. Harstone v. Tottenham, 6 Ir. Ch. R. 144.

Where Mortgage impeached.]—A petition by a mortgagee for a receiver, under the Mortgage Act (12 Geo. 3, c. 10, Ir.), will be dismissed, if it appears that the mortgage is impeached. Leahy v. Arthur, 1 Hog. 92.

The court will not appoint a receiver under the 11 & 12 Geo. 3, c. 10, where the mortgage is impeached upon probable grounds, but the mere impeachment of the mortgage is not a sufficient cause against the appointment of a receiver under that statute. Cosgrave v. Gannon, Fl. & K. 228; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 433.

Where a petition is presented under the Mortgage Act, the mere impeachment of the mortgage, by affidavit, without shewing probable grounds for such impeachment, is not sufficient to prevent the court from appointing a receiver. But, semble, if a bill were filed to impeach the mortgage, the court would not distribute the fund received by the receiver till the suit was disposed of. The case of Cosgrave v. Gannon (3 Ir. Eq. R. 433) approved of. Whaley v. Whaley, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 276.

If the validity of the security is impeached upon probable grounds, or from length of time, or other circumstances, it should be presumed to be paid off. A receiver will not be appointed in a summary way under the Mortgage Act; but where the subsistence of the mortgage was doubtfully denied, and the affidavit was positive, a receiver was appointed. Shepherd v. Murdock, 2 Moll. 531.

Receiver under the Mortgage Act only where the mortgage is not questioned. But where it was impeached, but the objection appeared groundless and frivolous, no costs were given, although it could not be resisted, for no inquiry can be entered into. Darcy v. Blake, 1 Moll. 247.

Opposition of prior Incumbrancer.]—Application for receiver under Mortgage Act granted, although opposed by prior incumbrancer, who is not in possession. Rundell v. Wellesley (Marquis), 3 Moll. 116.

Setting aside.]—A mortgagee having obtained a conditional order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act, payments were made on account of interest, and a receiver was appointed by a judgment creditor. A petition being presented by the mortgagee, the conditional order was made absolute, and the receiver extended on the mortgage, in chambers. On an affidavit stating the intermediate payments, the order was set aside. Goldsmidt v. Glengall (Lord), 11 Ir. Eq. R. 608.

Service of Order.]—Service of the conditional order, under the Mortgage Act, not substituted, the act only contemplating the case of mortgagor within the jurisdiction. Barlow v. Harvey, 1 Moll. 246.

Service of the conditional order for a receiver under the Mortgage Act, 11 & 12 Geo. 3, c. 10 (Irish), upon the mortgagor abroad, not effectual, not by analogy to service of original process, which is altogether different; personal service out of the jurisdiction of such conditional order qua notice being good, but failing of its effect on the ground that the act did not contemplate the case of an absent mortgagor, which is inferred from that case having been provided for otherwise. Johnson v. Nagle, 1 Moll. 240.

Practice—Shewing Cause.]—When a petition for a receiver has been presented under the Mortgage Act, the defendant cannot shew cause without filing a petition; and, if the petition has not been filed, the court has no jurisdiction even to give costs, against the respondent, of a motion to shew cause. Pakenham v. Darcy, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 476.

2. Rights, Duties and Liabilities.

a. In General, 1810.
b. Under Irish Mortgage Act, 1814.

a. In General.

i. Of Receiver.

Rights—To bring Ejectment.]—A receiver in a mortgage cause will not be permitted to bring an ejectment on the title, against a lessee of the mortgagor, after mortgage executed, where the lessee has been in possession for twenty years, where the consideration of the mortgage security has been impeached by a cross bill, and the mortgagee has not proceeded for eighteen years to foreclose his mortgage after it was so impeached, and no account has been taken between the parties. Martin v. Walker, Sau. & Sc. 139.

—— To Repayment of Expenses.]—By a deed made by K., the plaintiffs and the defendant, by which K. mortgaged to the plaintiffs the Kingston rectory estate, consisting of a number of small holdings and tithes, many of which were taken in kind, it was agreed that the defendant, an attorney practising in London, should be appointed receiver with the usual powers. The deed provided for the application of the rents, &c., as follows, viz.: that the defendant should, "in the first place, pay all the costs, charges and expenses which he should bear, sustain, incur, or be liable to in or about the collecting, receiving and compelling payment of the rents, &c., including therein all expenses of suit, action, process, distress and all other charges of management whatsoever." It provided that the interest upon the mortgages should be paid, and that the defendant should pay over to K. the residue of the rents, &c., after answering the purposes aforesaid, and deducting and detaining out of such residue for his own use so much and such sums of money as he should reasonably deserve, as a compensation for his care and pains, and trouble and expense in collecting, receiving and paying the rents, &c., for the time being received or collected:—Held, that the receiver was entitled to repay himself such sums as were reasonably expended by him in the collection of the rents (including a salary or percentage paid to a collector), before applying the rents, &c., to the satisfaction of arrears of interest due upon the mortgages. Gilbert v. Dyneley, 3 Scott (N.R.) 364; 3 Man. & G. 12; 5 Jur. 843.

—— To sue for Rent in Name of Mortgagor's Heir-at-law.]—A mortgagor died, having devised the mortgaged lands to two trustees upon certain trusts. One of the trustees predeceased him, and the other disclaimed. The principal money and interest for over two months being due, the mortgagee appointed a receiver, under the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act, 1881:—Held, that, under s. 24, sub-s. 3, of the act, the receiver was entitled to sue for rent in the name of the heir-at-law of the mortgagor, upon giving him

—— To Distrain.]—A receiver of an estate was appointed by a mortgagor and mortgagee. They gave him power of distress and entry, and the mortgagor attorned as tenant to the receiver at a certain rent. The deed provided that nothing therein should abridge the rights of the mortgagee. The mortgagor afterwards became bankrupt, and the receiver distrained for the rent:—Held, that the validity of the distress depended upon the existence of a tenancy to the receiver; that such a tenancy was created, pursuant to the intention of all parties, by the attornment of the mortgagor to him, with the consent of the mortgagee; and that the express power of distress was not a power in gross, but annexed to the tenancy, and that the distress was valid, entitling the mortgagee to the produce of it. Jolly v. Arbuthnot, 28 L. J., Ch. 547; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 689; 7 W. R. 532.

—— To move for Reference.]—A motion by a receiver for a reference to inquire and report whether any and what sum was due on foot of a mortgage, and whether it would be for the advantage of the parties that the receiver should make certain payments on account of any sum reported due, will be refused with costs, as the receiver ought not thus to interfere with the rights of the parties in the cause. O'Connor v. Malone, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 20.

Duties—Infant's Estate.] — Court will not order receiver of infant's estate to keep down interest of mortgage debt, unless master reports it due. Anon., 6 Madd. 9.

ii. Persons Interested.

Money in hand of Receiver — To whom belonging.]—A prior mortgagee instituted a foreclosure suit in chancery, and obtained a decree for a sale. A puisne mortgagee instituted a similar suit in the exchequer, in which the prior mortgagee was not a party, and obtained a receiver. The receiver having brought a sum of money, being by-gone rents of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the puisne mortgagee was not entitled to this sum as against the prior mortgagee, who had filed a bill in the exchequer to attach it. Lismore v. Chamley, Hayes, 329.

Back Rents come into Receiver's hands before Mortgagee takes Possession.]—Money in the hands of a receiver is not in custodia legis in the same way as it is when in the hands of a sequestrator. A mortgagor of shares in a company paid interest on the loan till 1888, and died in 1889. In a creditor's action for the administration of his estate a receiver was appointed, to whom the company issued debenture bonds representing dividends accrued due on the mortgaged shares during the mortgagor's life. The mortgagee subsequently took possession by being registered as transferee of the shares:—Held, that the receiver stood in the place of the executors so far as the receipt of assets was concerned, and that the mortgagee was not entitled to the bonds. Delany v. Mansfield (1 Hogan, 234) questioned. Hoare, In re, Hoare v. Owen, 61 L. J., Ch. 541; [1892] 3 Ch. 94; 67 L. T. 45; 41 W. R. 105.

Receivership of Tolls—Judgment Creditor proceeding to Attach—Injunction.]—In a suit by mortgagees of a dock against the trustees and a judgment creditor, the chairman was appointed receiver of the tolls, with direction to pay into court the balance, after paying the expenses of carrying on the concern, and the interest on the mortgages. A judgment creditor having afterwards proceeded to attach the tolls under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, was restrained by injunction. It was insisted that the possession of the receiver was either that of the dock company or of the mortgagees, and that in the former case the judgment creditor ought not to be restrained in the exercise of his legal remedies against the company, and, in the second, that the mortgagees had no power, under the acts of parliament, to carry on the concern; but this argument was held unavailing. Ames v. Birkenhead Docks, 20 Beav. 332; 24 L. J., Ch. 540; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 529; 3 W. R. 381.

Increase of Interest in favour of First, as against Second, Mortgagee.]—A first mortgage was made to secure the principal with interest at 5*l.* per cent., and was accompanied by a receivership deed in the common form. A subsequent mortgage was made to M., containing a stipulation that, if the interest should be in arrear forty days, the receiver under the former deed should act, and should stand possessed of the rents, after payment of interest on the first mortgage, in trust to pay the interest on M.'s mortgage, and pay the ultimate surplus to the mortgagor. The first mortgagees and the receiver had notice of this deed. By a subsequent deed the property was charged, in favour of the first mortgagees, with an extra 1*l.* per cent. interest in the sum secured by the first mortgage. The receiver at times took possession at the instance of the first mortgagees, and from the date of the last-mentioned deed interest at the increased rate was uniformly paid to the first mortgagees, sometimes by the mortgagor, and at other times by the receiver with his consent, no notice ever having been given to the receiver to pay interest to M., or that his interest was in arrear. A foreclosure suit having been instituted by the first mortgagees, a decree was made directing the usual account of what was due on the first mortgage. The chief clerk certified the whole principal to be due, but the vice-chancellor directed him to review his certificate, and to charge the first mortgagees with everything they had received from the receiver in excess of 5*l.* per cent.:—Held, that this decision could not be maintained, for that, whether the extra 1*l.* per cent. was rightfully received or not, it was neither paid nor received in respect of the principal moneys and interest secured by the first mortgage, and could not be attributed to it, nor taken into account in ascertaining what was due on the first mortgage, and that M.'s claim (if any) in respect of such extra payments must be enforced by some independent proceeding. Law v. Glenn, L. R. 2 Ch. 634.

Right to Payment of Principal.]—Where it is shewn to be for the benefit of an owner or puisne incumbrancer that the principal as well as interest of a first charge should be paid off by a receiver out of the rents and profits, the court will make an order to that effect. Henkell's Estate, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 540.

But in the absence of special circumstances the court will not order payment by a receiver of the principal money due upon an incumbrance. Kearney's Estate, In re, 25 L. R., Ir. 89.

Reference.]—A. demised to B. two acres of the lands of M.; B., on the next day, re-demised to A. the two acres of M., together with six acres of the lands of S., at a gross rent. A. then mortgaged the land of M. A receiver was appointed over the lands of M. in a suit to foreclose the mortgage. An arrear of the rent reserved on the lease from B. to A. having accrued, the receiver was ordered to pay to B. the sum in his hands, the produce of the two acres of the lands of M.; and it was referred to the remembrancer to ascertain the sum so in the receiver's hands, and the rent properly payable out of the two acres of M., having regard to the value of the whole of the lands comprised in the lease from B. to A., and the part included and not included in the mortgage, with liberty of B. to proceed at law, as he might be advised, in regard to any balance that might remain due to him after payment by the receiver as aforesaid. Peard v. Foulke, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 589.

—— Restraining Receiver from making Payments.]—The priorities of incumbrancers upon an estate were declared, and a receiver appointed, with direction to keep down the incumbrances in a suit to which the first incumbrancer was not a party. The first incumbrancer filed a bill against the receiver and the several parties to the former suit to establish his priority, and praying "that, if necessary, the second bill might be taken as supplemental to the first." The plaintiff in the second suit moved for an injunction to restrain the receiver from making any further payments to the other incumbrancers:—Held, irregular, and that he ought to have applied in the first suit for leave to enforce his legal remedies:—Held, also, that the court would not, on this occasion, determine whether this was to be taken as a supplemental bill. Smith v. Effingham (Earl), 2 Beav. 232.

—— Account.]—Where a person and his incumbrancers. B., C. and D., joined in the appointment of a receiver who covenanted to keep down the incumbrances, according to their priorities, and pay the surplus to A.:—Held, that a subsequent mortgagee from A. could not sustain a bill against the receiver and A. for an account of the rents, and an injunction against paying the surplus to A. in the absence of B., C. and D. Ford v. Rackham, 17 Beav. 485; 23 L. J., Ch. 481; 2 W. R. 9.

Discharge.]—Cestuis que trustent under a will instituted a suit to have the trusts carried into effect, and to set aside a mortgage of a part of the trust estate made by the trustees. By the terms of the mortgage the mortgagees were not entitled to take possession except upon a prescribed notice. Before this notice had been given the plaintiff had obtained an order for a receiver, and also an order to take proceedings with respect to a claim adverse to the interests of all parties to the suit. Afterwards a decree was made establishing the validity of the mortgage and directing a sale, in which all parties were ordered to join. The mortgagees neither consented to, nor opposed, the orders being made, nor did they at the hearing ask for a dismissal of the bill as against themselves, or oppose the insertion of the direction for a sale. They afterwards applied to have the receiver discharged and to be let into possession, and gave the notice prescribed by the mortgage. On their application being refused, they appealed from the refusal, and at the same time from so much of the decree as rendered it obligatory on them to concur in the sale:—Held, that they had not adopted the proceedings in the suit, but were entitled to priority over the costs of it and of the action, and also to have the receiver discharged and the decree varied so far as it bound them to join in the sale. Langton v. Langton, 7 De G. M. & G. 30; 24 L. J., Ch. 625; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1078; 3 Eq. R. 394; 3 W. R. 222.

Held, also (the testator's estate in the subject of the security being equitable), that the court might direct possession to be delivered to the mortgagees. Ib.

b. Under Irish Mortgage Act.

Rights.]—A receiver under the Mortgage Act, 11 & 12 Geo. 3, c. 10, will be permitted to pay over money to a third person, upon the consent of all parties. Kelly v. O'Brien, Hay. & J. 377.

Liability.]—In a petition matter under the Mortgage Act, the court will not decide equities between owners of different parts of the mortgaged premises; and, therefore, where a receiver had received all the rents out of the portion of A., who had a right to be indemnified out of the portion of B., who had been required to pay nothing to the receiver for some years, the court refused to charge the receiver as for default at the instance of A., the mortgagee having been paid all his interest. Lane v. Lynch, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 501.

Extension—To whom received Rents belong.]—A puisne mortgagee having obtained a receiver under the Mortgage Act, a prior mortgagee, in a year after, extended the receiver, no rents having in the meantime been collected by him:—Held, that the prior mortgagee was entitled to all the rents due before the extension by him, but not collected till afterwards. Boyd v. Burke, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 660.

A receiver was appointed in an annuity cause, and was afterwards extended to the matter of a petition presented by a prior mortgagee under the Mortgage Act:—Held, that rents received by the receiver before the conditional order for extending the receiver to the matter was made, and which were still in court, belonged to the annuitant. Davoren v. Collins, 2 Jones, 806.

3. Receipt of Moneys by, in Foreclosure.

Generally.]—Money in the hands of a receiver in a foreclosure suit is, in the first instance, to be treated as the plaintiff's fund. Paynter v. Carew, 23 L. J., Ch. 596; 18 Jur. 417; 1 Kay, (App.) xxxvi; 3 Eq. R. 496; 2 W. R. 345.

Appointment after Foreclosure—Balance in Receiver's hands.]—Where a receiver was appointed after a judgment for foreclosure, and there was a balance in his hands representing the corpus of the mortgaged property, the plaintiff was held to be entitled to have the foreclosure judgment made absolute. Welch v.

National Cycle Works Co., 55 L. T. 673; 35 W. R. 137.

Before, and after, day fixed for Redemption.]—The receiver, appointed before judgment in a foreclosure action, received rents both before and after the day fixed for payment of the mortgage money:—Held, that a further account must be taken, and a further period of one month from the date of the new certificate given to the mortgagor to redeem. Peat v. Nicholson, 54 L. T. 569; 34 W. R. 451.

The receiver and manager, appointed before judgment in a foreclosure action, received moneys that represented the gross takings in the business of the mortgaged property, which was a leasehold public-house. The moneys were received from day to day, partly before and partly after the date fixed for redemption. The court made a final order for foreclosure, and directed that the receiver and manager should pass forthwith his final account, and be discharged, his recognisance and bond to be vacated. The court also directed that the balance of the moneys on the receiver's account should be paid into court, and gave liberty to any of the parties to apply in chambers as to such balance, and also as to the costs of the present application, such costs being reserved. Holt v. Beagle, 55 L. T. 592.

Since Certificate.]—At the date limited for redemption in a foreclosure action, money was in court and in the hands of a receiver paid under a mining lease since the issue of the chief clerk's certificate. The foreclosure judgment gave liberty to any person redeeming, or, in the event of foreclosure, to the plaintiffs, to apply for payment to themselves of funds in court or in the hands of the receiver:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to an immediate order for foreclosure absolute, and for payment of the money in court and in the hands of the receiver without any further account. Jenner-Fust v. Needham (32 Ch. D. 582) distinguished. Coleman v. Llewellin, 56 L. J., Ch. 1; 34 Ch. D. 143; 55 L. T. 647; 35 W. R. 82—C. A.

—— No Bar to Foreclosure.]—In a foreclosure action the fact, that a receiver appointed by the court has received rents since the certificate under the order nisi, is no bar to an immediate order of foreclosure absolute on default of payment pursuant to the certificate. Hoare v. Stephens, 55 L. J., Ch. 511; 32 Ch. D. 194; 54 L. T. 230; 34 W. R. 410.

Between Certificate and day fixed for Redemption—To whom belonging.]—Where a receiver has received rents of mortgaged property between the date of the certificate under a foreclosure judgment and the day fixed for redemption, the mortgagee is not entitled to the rents so received, except on the terms of bringing them into account as between mortgagee and mortgagor, and a fresh date must be fixed for redemption. Jenner-Fust v. Needham, 55 L. J., Ch. 629; 32 Ch. D. 582; 55 L. T. 37; 34 W. R. 709—C. A.

Practice.]—The court to save the expense and delay of a further reference to chambers allowed mortgagees to file an affidavit shewing the exact amount which would be due to them for principal, interest and costs, after allowing for everything received, brought down to the day for which notice of motion was given to fix another day for redemption. Ib.

j. After Assignment, 1828.
k. Transferee after Decree, 1828.
l. Other Cases, 1829.

a. General Principles.

All Persons Interested.]—Generally all persons interested are necessary parties to bill of foreclosure. Culverley v. Phelp, 6 Madd. 229.

Parties entitled to whole Mortgage-money.]—There can be no redemption or foreclosure unless parties entitled to the whole of mortgage-money are before the court. Palmer v. Carlisle (Earl), 1 Sim. & S. 423.

Parties to Deed.]—In a foreclosure suit, the parties to the mortgage deed, and those claiming under them, ought alone to be made parties. Audsley v. Horn, 26 Beav. 195.

Allegation of Deposit—Depositee, whether a necessary Party.]—An allegation in the answer that the defendant had deposited a deed, the subject of the suit for redemption, with R., by way of security for an advance, and that the deed was in the possession of R.'s solicitors, they being also the defendant's solicitors, does not make R. a necessary party. Waters v. Mynn, 14 Jur. 341.

Practice—Same Person both Plaintiff and Defendant—Striking out.]—In a foreclosure action by a first mortgagee against the second, third and fourth mortgagees, and the executors and trustees of the will of the mortgagor, the plaintiff was also joined as a defendant, as one of the second mortgagees:—Held, that a man could not be both plaintiff and defendant in an action, and that the writ and pleadings must be amended by striking out the name of the plaintiff as a co-defendant. Wavell v. Mitchell, 64 L. T. 560.

—— Adding, after Decree.]—A decree for foreclosure being always liable to be reopened upon proper cause within reasonable time, the action may be regarded as continuing, and new parties added under Judicature Act, Ord. L., r. 4, after a decree for absolute foreclosure has been made. Campbell v. Holyland, 26 W. R. 160. S. C., 47 L. J., Ch. 145; 7 Ch. D. 166; 38 L. T. 128.

b. Joint Owners.

Person Partially Interested.]—A bill for redemption cannot be sustained by a party having a partial interest in the equity of redemption, in the absence of the other parties interested in it. Henley v. Stone, 3 Beav. 355.

A person having a partial interest in a real estate filed a bill for relief in respect of fraud, and for a redemption :—Held, that all the persons interested in the equity of redemption were necessary parties to the suit. Ib.

One of Several Mortgagees.]—One mortgagee, out of several interested, cannot sustain a bill of foreclosure for his proportion alone, without making the others parties. Lowe v. Morgan, 1 Bro. C. C. 368. But see Montgomerie v. Bath (Marquis), 3 Ves. 560. But see 1 Bro. C. C. 365, n.

A. mortgages to B. in fee ; B. dies, having devised the mortgaged estate to C. and D. D. subsequently advances money to A. on the same security :—Held, that C. was alone entitled to file a bill for foreclosure, and that D. was properly made a party defendant. Remer v. Stokes, 4 W. R. 730.

A trustee laid out the money of different persons on a mortgage ; foreclosure by one cestui que trust as to his share allowed. Montgomerie v. Bath (Marquis), 3 Ves. 560. But see Lowe v. Morgan, 1 Bro. C. C. 368.

Where a mortgage is made to two for a sum of money, of which each had lent a portion, one of the mortgagees may file a bill of foreclosure, making the other mortgagee a defendant ; and the plaintiff in such a suit is entitled to the usual decree of foreclosure on default of payment of the whole mortgage debt, in the proportions due to the plaintiff and defendant respectively together with their respective costs. Davenport v. James, 7 Hare, 249 ; 12 Jur. 827.

—— Personal Representative of Deceased.]—Where a mortgage is made to several persons jointly, they are, in equity, tenants in common of the mortgage-money, and the representatives of such of them as may be dead are necessary parties with the survivor to a bill for foreclosure or redemption. Vickers v. Cowell, 1 Beav. 529 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 371 ; 3 Jur. 864.

Mortgage of Interests of Tenants in Common.]—Parties necessary to a redemption action by mortgagees of the interests of tenants in common, whether of an undivided share or of the entirety, stated. Bolton v. Salmon, [1891] 2 Ch. 48 ; 64 L. T. 222 ; 39 W. R. 589.

c. Judgment Creditor.

Generally.]—The court ordered a bill of foreclosure to stand over to make a judgment creditor, the only incumbrancer not before the court, a party, but would not adopt as a general rule the usual practice to make all incumbrancers parties. Winchester (Bishop) v. Beavor, 3 Ves. 314. See 8 R. R. 132, n.

Subsequent to Mortgage.]—Judgment creditors, whose judgments have been entered up subsequently to the plaintiff's security, must be made parties to a bill of foreclosure ; it is not sufficient that they should be served with copies of the bill under the twenty-third of the Orders of August, 1841. Semble, however, that this rule may be relaxed in cases where the judgment creditors are inconveniently numerous. Adams v. Paynter, 1 Coll. C. C. 530 ; 14 L. J., Ch. 53 ; 8 Jur. 1063.

In a suit by a first mortgagee, sale was directed. Subsequent judgment creditors of the mortgagor were not parties. On objection by a purchaser under the decree :—Held, that the judgment creditors were not bound by the proceedings, and liberty was given to bring them before the court. Knight v. Pocock, 24 Beav. 436 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 297 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 197.

Held, also, that in their absence a good title cannot be made to a purchaser. Ib.

The mortgagor had executed a creditor's deed, but the judgment creditors had not acceded to it :—Held, that the trustees of the deed did not represent them under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42. Ib.

A puisne creditor by judgment, who is in possession under a grant in custodiam, is properly made a defendant to bill by prior mortgagee to foreclose, and cannot insist that the regular course to affect his possession is by applying to the court of exchequer for liberty to traverse the inquisition ; the form of the proceeding not varying the nature of the debt, which is still to be treated as a private debt to a subject, and the use of the king's name as form merely. M'Gorney v. Croghan, 1 Moll. 508.

Whether Prior or Subsequent to Mortgage.]—In a bill for a foreclosure and sale of mortgaged lands all the judgment creditors of the mortgagor are necessary parties, whether such judgments are prior or puisne to the plaintiff's demand, and whether they are a lien upon legal or equitable estates. This doctrine rests upon a perfectly valid foundation, whether referred to the general principle of courts of equity or to the effect of the stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 105, s. 22. Rolleston v. Morton, 1 Dr. & War. 171 ; 1 Con. & L. 252 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 149.

Subsequent to Mortgage, but Prior to Further Charge.]—Semble, a creditor by judgment, subsequent to a mortgage, but prior to a further loan advanced by the mortgagee under a borrowing clause, not noticed in the memorial of registry of the mortgage, is not a necessary party to a bill brought to foreclose such mortgage ; and, therefore, a bill brought by such a judgment creditor against the mortgagee, who had purchased under a decree for a sale, in a cause instituted to foreclose his own mortgage, and praying to have the account opened, was dismissed. Purdon v. Gumbleton, Wall. Lyn. 249.

Conusees.]—A judgment creditor, whose judgment was registered pursuant both to the Registry Actfor the West Riding of Yorkshire, 5 & 6 Anne, c. 18, and the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, filed a bill to redeem a prior mortgagee of lands in the West Riding, and to foreclose the mortgagor. The mortgagor had confessed other judgments, and the conusees had registered them pursuant to the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, but not under the West Riding Act :—Held, that those conusees were not necessary parties to the suit. Johnson v. Holdsworth, 1 Sim. (N.S.) 106 ; 20 L. J., Ch. 63 ; 15 Jur. 31.

Sale instead of Foreclosure.]—Quære, whether a judgment creditor is a necessary party to a bill filed by a mortgagee, where the practice of the court is to decree a sale instead of a foreclosure. Gordon v. Horsfall, 5 Moore, P. C. 393.

Lease for Lives—Renewal—Creditors who have not Sued out Elegits.]—If a lessee for lives renewable for ever executes a mortgage, and judgments are recovered against him after the fall of all the lives named in the lease, and before he obtained a renewal, they will not attach on the mortgaged premises, if sold under a decree in a foreclosure cause. A subsequent renewal obtained by the mortgagor is in trust for the mortgagee, and the subsequent creditors on the equity of redemption are not necessary parties to a bill for a foreclosure and a sale, unless they had sued out elegits before the bill was filed. Leland v. Hunt, 1 Hog. 364.

Before Issue of Execution.]—Semble, that registered judgment creditors who have not issued execution are not necessary parties to a foreclosure suit. Bailey, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 237; 20 L. T. 168; 17 W. R. 393.

In a foreclosure suit by mortgagees, judgment creditors who had not issued execution were made defendants:—Held, that they were unnecessary parties, and, having disclaimed all interest upon being served with a copy of the bill, they were dismissed with costs. Cook v. Hart, 41 L. J., Ch. 143; L. R. 12 Eq. 459; 24 L. T. 779; 19 W. R. 947.

After Issue of Execution.]—A., a registered judgment creditor, who had issued execution and registered, but never executed the same, held to be a proper party to a foreclosure suit instituted more than three months after registration of execution; and, after having disclaimed and received notice not to appear, was disallowed his costs of appearance. Appleton v. Sturgis, 10 W. R. 312.

d. Mortgagee or his Heir.

Prior Mortgagee.]—A puisne mortgagee can sustain a bill of foreclosure against the mortgagor and mortgagees subsequent to himself, without making the prior mortgagee a party. Richards v. Cooper, 5 Beav. 304.

A second mortgagee may file a bill of foreclosure against the mortgagor and third mortgagee, without making the first mortgagee a party. Rose v. Page, 2 Sim. 471; 29 R. R. 142.

An old mortgage is made to B. for 350*l.*, who, in 1705, makes an under-mortgage to C. for 300*l.* C. brings a bill to foreclose; B., the original mortgagee, or in case of his death, his representative, ought to be made a party. Hobart v. Abbot, 2 P. Wms. 643.

Puisne Mortgagee.]—In a suit by a prior mortgagee for foreclosure and sale, the heir of mortgagee of equity of redemption is not a necessary party. Whitla v. Halliday, 4 Dr. & War. 267. S. C., nom. Whittle v. Halliday, 2 Con. & L. 430.

Puisne mortgagee not bound by an account taken in a foreclosure cause to which he was not a party. Dick v. Butler, 1 Moll. 42.

Second mortgagee, whose deed is registered, not made a party to bill by first mortgagee to foreclose and sell, is entitled to redeem the purchaser under the decree. Ormsby v. Thorpe, 2 Moll. 503.

Mortgagee subsequent to Judgment.]—Judgment creditor, prior to a mortgage, need not make the subsequent mortgagee party in order to postpone him. Shepherd v. Gwinnet, 3 Swanst. 151.

Bill by Executor of Mortgagee.]—The heir of the mortgagee, to whom the legal estate in the mortgaged premises has descended, is a necessary party to a bill of foreclosure filed by the executor of the mortgagee. Scott v. Nicoll, 3 Russ. 476.

Bill by Devisee.]—Every devisee of a mortgaged estate, that brings a bill to redeem, need not make the heir-at-law a party. If the plaintiff claims to have the will established, it is necessary; if only a title under the will, it is not. Lewis v. Nangle, 2 Ves. 431.

A tenant for life, remainder to B. in fee; B. mortgaged his estate to C., who devised it to D.: D. need only foreclose against B., for the heir of C. had no interest, and need not be made a party. Williams v. Day, 2 Ch. Ca. 32.

After Assignment.]—See j. post, col. 1828.

e. Mortgagor or his Heir.

Generally.]—The mortgagor or his heir should be a party to bill by mortgagee. Howes v. Wadham, Ridgw. 199.

Bill by Second Mortgagee.]—The mortgagor is a necessary party to a bill by a second mortgagee to redeem the first mortgage, and foreclose the equity of redemption. Farmer v. Curtis, 2 Sim. 466; 29 R. R. 140.

In a bill by a second mortgagee to redeem the first mortgage, the mortgagor or his heirs must be before the court; heir being abroad, the court cannot proceed. Fell v. Brown, 2 Bro. C. C. 276.

A second mortgagee, to redeem a prior mortgage, must make the heir of the mortgagor a party, though the second mortgage is only of part of the estates comprised in the first, and under a different title. Palk v. Clinton (Lord), 12 Ves. 48; 8 R. R. 283.

Second Mortgagee contesting Mortgage.]—Second mortgagee contesting by his bill the validity of the first mortgage, the mortgagor must be a party. Thompson v. Baskervill, 3 Ch. Rep. 215.

Absent Mortgagor.]—Although it is a principle not to foreclose an absent mortgagor, the reason of that depends mainly on the principle of foreclosure as contrasted with sale of a competent part. Lord Chancellor has no doubt that it can, especially where a descent has been cast, be effectually done in substance where the decree is for a sale of a competent part. Gowan v. Tyghe, 3 Moll. 113.

—— Absent Heir.]—It is a principle not to foreclose an absent mortgagor: but there is not in the case of absent heir any principle by which the court is precluded from selling a deceased debtor's real estate. Leahy v. Dancer, 3 Moll. 109.

Mortgagor of Collateral Security.]—To bill of foreclosure against the principal mortgagor, the mortgagor of another estate, as a collateral security, is a necessary party. Stokes v. Clendon, 3 Swanst. 150; 19 R. R. 188.

Bankrupt Mortgagor.]—Though on bankruptcy of mortgagor there was no bargain and sale of estate to his assignees, yet bankrupt is not necessary party to bill of foreclosure. Lloyd v. Lander, 5 Madd. 282; 21 R. R. 292.

f. Personal Representative.

Of Mortgagor.]—The personal representative of the mortgagor is a necessary party to a bill for the execution of a trust for sale by way of mortgage. Christophers v. Sparke, 2 J. & W. 229.

To a bill against the heir of the mortgagor to have payment or hold without redemption, the personal representatives of the mortgagor must be made a party. Meeker v. Tanton, 2 Ch. Ca. 29.

Of Mortgagee.]—Where the heir of the mortgagee brings a bill to compel the mortgagor to redeem or be foreclosed, the executor must be a party. Freak v. Hearsey, 1 Ch. Ca. 51; 2 Free. C. C. 180; Nelson, 93. Clerkson v. Bowyer, 2 Vern. 66.

On a bill against the heir of a mortgagee to redeem, the executor or administrator must be made parties. Anon., 2 Free. C. C. 59.

Mortgage of Freehold Lease.]—Personal representative of mortgagee of freehold lease, sufficient defendant to bill to redeem. Ryan v. Mangan, 2 Moll. 521.

Mortgage by Term.]—Mortgage by tenant in fee by creating a term, the personal representative ought not to be a party to a bill of foreclosure. Bradshaw v. Outram, 13 Ves. 234; 9 R. R. 183.

Joint Mortgagors.]—A. and B. borrow money from a banking-house, in which A. is a partner, and deposit with the house, as a security, the title-deeds of some property bought by A. and B. jointly on a building speculation. A. dies, leaving an infant heir-at-law. To a suit by the surviving partners of A. in the banking-house against B. and the heir-at-law of A., to have the mortgaged property sold, and their debt paid out of the proceeds, the personal representative of A. is a necessary party. Scholefield v. Heafield, 7 Sim. 667; 5 L. J., Ch. 218.

Two Mortgagees.]—The representatives of one of two mortgagees were held necessary parties to a suit by the survivor, though it was alleged but not proved that it was a mortgage in trust, and that the representatives of deceased mortgagee had therefore no interest either in equity or in law. Vickers v. Cowell, 1 Beav. 529; 8 L. J., Ch. 371; 3 Jur. 864.

Proceeding in Absence of.]—A bill of foreclosure was filed by a sub-mortgagee; the mortgagee had died, and his representative was not known:—Held, that the court could not, under the 44th section of the Chancery Amendment Act, direct the suit to proceed in the absence of a representative of the mortgagee, against whose estate a decree was asked. Bruiton v. Birch, 22 L. J., Ch. 911.

In a foreclosure suit by a first incumbrancer, a decree was made, and afterwards a defendant, a subsequent mortgagee (who was one of eight persons standing in a precisely similar situation, and in respect of whose mortgages there was only one right of redemption given) died, and, there being a difficulty in obtaining representation to his estate, the court ordered that the suit should proceed without any person representing his estate. Long v. Storie, 23 L. J., Ch. 200; 2 Eq. R. 249; 2 W. R. 183.

Of deceased Tenant for Life.]—The personal representative of a deceased tenant for life of a mortgaged estate is not a necessary party to a bill by the mortgagee against the remainderman, although the bill pray payment of an arrear of interest which accrued during his lifetime. Wynne v. Styan, 2 Ph. 303.

A tenant for life and a tenant in tail joined in a mortgage to A., and afterwards in a sale to another party. The tenant for life died. A. filed a bill for foreclosure:—Held, that the representatives of the tenant for life were necessary parties. Chalie v. Gwynne, 6 L. J., Ch. 274.

Of Vendor.]—Bill brought to redeem against the defendant, who had notice of the plaintiff's title, but bought of W., who had no notice; the objection allowed for not bringing the representatives of W. before the court, or otherwise the defendant would be deprived of that defence. Lowther v. Carlton, 2 Atk. 139.

Party Dying before Foreclosure absolute.]—The defendant to a foreclosure action died insolvent before foreclosure absolute; there was no legal representative of his estate; an order was made in chambers appointing one of his next of kin to represent his estate for the purposes of the action. The court refused to make the foreclosure absolute in the absence of a properly constituted representative of the mortgagor. Aylward v. Lewis, [1891] 2 Ch. 81; 64 L. T. 250; 39 W. R. 552.

g. Tenant for Life or Remainderman.

Tenant for Life.]—A. having a life estate in the remainders over in strict settlement, subject to a mortgage of the settled property for a term of 1,000 years, demised the property for a term of 200 years, if he should so long live. A purchaser of the term of 200 years filed a bill to redeem against the termor for 1,000 years, who was the first mortgagee of the estate:—Held, that A., the owner of the life estate, subject to the term of 200 years, was a necessary party. Hunter v. Macklew, 5 Hare, 238.

—— Trustee being also.]—In a suit for foreclosure or sale, the surviving trustee and executrix of the mortgagor, being also tenant for life of the property, sufficiently represents the persons interested in remainder. Marriott v. Kirkham, 3 Giff. 536; 31 L. J., Ch. 312; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 379; 6 L. T. 17; 10 W. R. 240.

—— Representative of Mortgagor.]—N., in 1790, entered into possession of lands as assignee of incumbrances and purchaser from A., B. and D., who were tenants for life of one-fourth each. A. died in 1819, and B. in 1836; the next remaindermen of their shares, who were tenants in tail thereof, filed a bill against the devisees of N. to redeem the premises:—Held, that the suit was imperfect for want of parties, inasmuch as the tenants for life, or personal representative of the mortgagor, was not before the court. Browne v. Cork (Bishop), 1 Dr. & Wal. 700.

Death of, between Setting Down and Hearing.]—A mortgagee of a tenant for life of equity of redemption filed a bill against the mortgagees of the fee and remaindermen for redemption or foreclosure. The tenant for life having died between setting down of the case and the hearing, the bill was dismissed with costs. Riley v. Croydon, 2 Dr. & Sm. 293; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1251; 11 L. T. 591; 13 W. R. 223.

Executor of Mortgagor Tenant for Life, in Action by succeeding Tenant for Life.]—A. being tenant for life of an estate, and the owner of a charge of 20,000*l.* thereon, mortgaged the 20,000*l.* to B. for 14,000*l.* He afterwards mortgaged it and other property to C. for 24,000*l.* A. died, and the succeeding tenant for life prayed a redemption against C., on payment of such a sum as was due on account of the 6,000*l.* (thus splitting the charge of 20,000*l.* into two portions):—Held, that both B. and the executors of A. were necessary parties to such a suit. Kensington (Lord) v. Bouverie, 16 Beav. 194.

Tenant in Tail.]—It is sufficient if the first tenant in tail is a party to a bill of foreclosure. Reynoldson v. Perkins, Amb. 564; Dick. 427.

Where mortgagee in fee has made an absolute conveyance, with several limitations, and remainders over, the first tenant in tail at least must be brought before the court. Yates v. Hambly, 2 Atk. 237.

A. made a mortgage and then made a marriage settlement of the equity of redemption, wherein he limited it to his wife, then to the issue of his body, remainder in tail to his brother; the mortgagee brought his bill against the mortgagor for a foreclosure, but he did not make the brother a party, yet he had a decree. The mortgagor afterwards died without issue, and the lands remained to the brother by the settlement, who brought his bill to redeem, which was dismissed. Roscarrick v. Barton, 1 Ch. Ca. 217, 220.

Remaindermen—Proceeding in Absence of.]—Mortgagor, on the marriage of his daughter, executed a settlement of the mortgaged property to the use, after the marriage, that his daughter should receive a rent-charge of 200*l.* a year for her life, and subject thereto to the use of trustees for a term of years, for further securing the rent-charge, and for raising 4,000*l.* for the children of the marriage, remainder to the use of the mortgagor in fee. There were several children of the marriage, who, with their father and mother, were resident out of the jurisdiction:—Held, that a suit of foreclosure could not proceed in their absence. Anderson v. Stather, 2 Coll. C. C. 209; 14 L. J., Ch. 377; 9 Jur. 806.

See also N. 7, ante, col. 1721.

h. Trustee.

For Mortgagee.]—In bill to foreclose mortgage, trustee for mortgagee is a necessary party. Wood v. Williams, 4 Madd. 186; 20 R. R. 291.

Devisee in Trust.]—The devisee of the equity of redemption in trust for other persons is a necessary party to a foreclosure suit. Scully v. Scully, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 494.

Trustees of a will, whereby property is devised subject to mortgages, sufficiently represent the devisees. Cockburn v. Aukett, 3 W. R. 641.

For Sale and Payment.]—Trustees appointed to sell a reversionary interest in stock, and pay off a mortgage thereon and hold the surplus for the mortgagor, are not necessary parties to a bill of foreclosure brought by the mortgagee. Slade v. Rigg, 3 Hare, 35.

Having agreed to Convey.]—In a foreclosure suit a trustee, in whom was vested the legal estate in the mortgaged property, and who had agreed to convey it to the plaintiff when required, is a necessary party. Hichens v. Kelly, 2 Sm. & G. 264; 2 W. R. 441.

Retired.]—Where a marriage settlement contained the usual power to appoint new trustees, and one of the trustees relinquished his trust, and a memorandum to that effect was indorsed on the settlement, but no new trustee was appointed in his room, and, after his retirement, the remaining trustees lent out the trust-money on mortgage:—Held, that the retired trustee was a necessary party to a bill of foreclosure of the mortgaged estate. Adams v. Paynter, 1 Coll. C. C. 532; 14 L. J., Ch. 53; 8 Jur. 1063.

Of Settlement.]—A lessor having been evicted for nonpayment of rent, under the Ejectment Statutes in Ireland, an equitable mortgagee of his interest filed a bill for redemption against the landlord:—Held, that trustees of a settlement to whom the lease had been assigned, were not necessary parties to the suit. Geraghty v. Malone, 1 H. L. Cas. 81. Affirming, 3 Dr. & War. 239; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 549.

A tenant for life mortgaged under power the inheritance for 500*l.* and 1,000*l.*, and afterwards paid the first mortgage, and took an assignment to a trustee. After his death B. became entitled to the mortgages. C., the tenant in tail, being a minor, covenanted by marriage articles, in 1827, to convey the lands in trust to sell and pay off the debts then affecting them, and subject thereto for herself for life, remainder to her children, and a recovery was suffered on her majority. B. filed a bill, and obtained a report, finding, in 1835, that arrears of rent, and fines due in the life of A., and after, were paid off by loan on mortgage, and found this sum and the two mortgages, with interest on them all before the death of A. to the time of the report, to be due, and a sale was decreed to pay them. In 1840, B.'s assignee filed a bill, not making the trustee of C.'s settlement a party, and obtained a decree to carry the former decree into execution:—Held, that the trustee was a necessary party as representing the inheritance. Magawley v. Brady, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 59.

Two estates, A. and B., were subject to the same mortgage. The owner, on the marriage of his son, settled A. in strict settlement, and the trustees were empowered "from time to time, and when, as occasion should require," to sell any part of A. and pay off the mortgage, so as to exonerate B. The owner afterwards mortgaged B. to the plaintiff, but without any express mention of the exoneration clause. The plaintiff having filed a bill to enforce the exoneration clause, without making the trustees of the settlement parties, it was dismissed with costs. Rooke v. Kensington (Lord), 21 Beav. 470.

The time for exercising the trust for sale would seem to be when the B. estate would be made liable to pay the charge on the A. estate. Ib.

And Executor.]—In a foreclosure action the trustee and executor of a mortgagor sufficiently represent the cestui que trust under the mortgagor's will, and therefore they are not necessary parties. Booth and Kettlewell's Contract, In re, 62 L. J., Ch. 40; 3 R. 93; 67 L. T. 550.

In a foreclosure action, the trustees and executors of the will of a deceased mortgagor sufficiently represent the estate of the mortgagor for all the purposes of the action; and it is not necessary to bring the cestui que trust before the court. Mitchell, In re, Wavell v. Mitchell, 65 L. T. 851.

Under Judicature Act.]—Under Judicature Act, Ord. XVI. r. 7, trustees of an equity of redemption sufficiently represent their cestuis que trustent in a redemption suit, no direction to the contrary having been given by the court. Jennings v. Jordan, 51 L. J., Ch. 129; 6 App. Cas. 698; 45 L. T. 593; 30 W. R. 369—H. L. (E.) Affirming, 49 L. J., Ch. 209; 13 Ch. D. 639; 42 L. T. 169; 28 W. R. 549—C. A.

Of Creditor Deed.]—Trustees of a creditor deed held sufficiently to represent all the creditors in a suit to foreclose. Morley v. Morley, 25 Beav. 253.

A depositor by way of mortgage of a lease made a registered assignment, under the Bankruptcy Act, 1861, of all his estate and effects to trustees, in favour of his creditors. The trustees had not done any act to signify their acceptance of the lease. The mortgagee filed a bill for foreclosure or sale against the mortgagor, not making the trustees parties. Plea of the assignment allowed, with leave to amend. Metropolitan Bank v. Offord, 39 L. J., Ch. 820; L. R. 10 Eq. 398; 22 L. T. 699.

For Scheduled Creditors.]—A mortgagor having conveyed the equity of redemption together with other property, to a trustee in trust for scheduled creditors:—Held, in a foreclosure action, that the trustee sufficiently represented the creditors. Doble v. Manley, 54 L. J., Ch. 636; 28 Ch. D. 664; 52 L. T. 246; 33 W. R. 409.

Where E. and I., interested with W. in a residuary gift, mortgaged their interest as a security for a debt of W., and took a second mortgage of his interest as a security to them, W. afterwards assigned his interest to trustees for the benefit of scheduled creditors, and a bill was filed by E. and I. to redeem the mortgaged property:—Held, that the creditors scheduled were necessary parties, and not sufficiently represented by the surviving trustees alone, and that the defect was not supplied by a supplemental bill bringing in a few of the other creditors, to which latter bill the trustees were not parties, the trustees being themselves creditors, and one having a distinct mortgage of the equity of redemption. Holland v. Baker, 3 Hare, 68; 12 L. J., Ch. 486; 6 Jur. 1011; 7 Jur. 620.

Proceeding after Service on, but without Notice to.]—A decree for foreclosure was made against a cestui que trust, and the bill was taken pro confesso against his trustees. The decree was served on the trustee, but without the necessary notice. After the expiration of three years the court dispensed with service of the decree on the trustee altogether, and made it absolute against him. Thurgood v. Cane, 32 Beav. 156.

See also next subdivision.

i. Cestui que Trust.

As well as Trustee.]—Bill of redemption against the trustee is not sufficient, the cestui que trust must be a party. Whistler v. Webb, Bunb. 53.

Assent.]—On the hearing of a foreclosure claim, it appeared that the equity of redemption was vested in trustees on certain trusts, and that the persons interested under the trust were not made parties. The court ordered that the persons so interested should be made parties, or that evidence should be given that they knew of the proceedings, and did not object. Tudor v. Morris, 1 Sm. & G. 503; 22 L. J., Ch. 1051; 1 W. R. 426.

Trust to Sell.]—Where equity of redemption was conveyed to trustees to sell, and with power to discharge purchasers by receipt, it does not dispense with necessity of making cestuis que trustent parties. Calverley v. Phelp, 6 Madd. 229.

Of Chapel.]—Trustees of a chapel, with the assent of the majority of the men subscribers, were authorised to mortgage or sell it. They mortgaged it for 600*l.*, with a power of sale. The mortgagee conveyed to S., who sold it to a company for 1,100*l.* The trustees filed a bill against S., insisting that he was a mortgagee, and not a purchaser, and offering to affirm the sale to the company, sought to recover the surplus purchase-money, after deducting the mortgage:—Held, that the men subscribers were necessary parties. Minn v. Stant, 15 Beav. 49; 20 L. J., Ch. 614; 15 Jur. 1095.

Mortgage by Trustee not Adopted by.]—Certain stock having been sold out by the trustees and invested in mortgage:—Held that the cestuis que trustent of the stock, not having been parties to nor adopted the mortgage, were not necessary parties to a suit for foreclosure. Allen v. Knight, 5 Hare, 272. Affirmed, 16 L. J., Ch. 370; 11 Jur. 527.

Infant.]—An equity of redemption was granted by deed to trustees, upon trust for certain parties, some of whom were infants. The mortgagee filed a bill for foreclosure against the trustees of the settlement, and the adult cestuis que trustent only as defendants. One of the latter died after the filing of the bill. The court, upon a motion for a decree of sale, made the decree in the absence of the infant cestuis que trustent and of the representative of the deceased defendant, upon an affidavit of the trustee of the settlement that it would be for the benefit of the infants, and ordered the proceeds to be paid into court. The costs of the trustee, as he would be a necessary party to reconvey, were ordered to be paid out of the mortgage debt. Siffken v. Davis, 1 Kay (App.) xxi.

Legatee.]—In a suit by devisee of mortgagor to redeem the mortgaged estate, where the defendant, the alleged mortgagee, claims an absolute title by virtue of the Statute of Limitations, legatees, whose legacies are under the will of the mortgagor, charged on the mortgaged premises, are necessary parties. Batchelor v. Middleton, 6 Hare, 78.

Devisee of real estate in trust to pay debts and legacies, and subject thereto the residue to one of the devisor's co-heirs, who was also residuary legatee. Mortgage by her, and (several years after) bill filed against mortgagor, and against devisee in trust to foreclose:—Held, on exceptions to title by purchaser, under the decree to sell made in that cause, for all persons having proved charges prior to the mortgage, that the co-heirs who came in and proved their legacies charged on the lands were not necessary parties; that no account of testator's debts and legacies need be specifically directed, and that, the same person being residuary devisee and legatee, the account of the testator's personal estate was immaterial. Magennis v. Fallon, 2 Moll. 569.

—— Residuary Mortgage Term.]—To a bill for the redemption of a mortgage term, all the cestuis que trustent interested in the produce of the term as residuary legatees under the mortgagee's will are necessary parties, although they are numerous and the property small, and although the trustees have power to give a discharge to purchasers. Osbourne v. Fallows, 1 Russ. & M. 741. S. C., 5 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 29.

Under Will.]—A. B. mortgaged a leasehold property, and afterwards specifically bequeathed it to A. and B., on certain trusts for C., D. and E.:—Held, that C., D. and E. were proper parties to a bill to foreclose. Coles v. Forrest, 10 Beav. 552.

A mortgagor of copyhold estate devised all his real estates to two trustees, upon trust that they, or the survivor of them, or the heirs of such survivor, should sell the same; and he declared that their or his receipts should be sufficient discharges, and appointed them executors of his will. One of the trustees and executors renounced probate and disclaimed the trusts, and died in the lifetime of the other, who was admitted to the copyholds, and then died intestate. The representatives of the mortgagee filed a bill of foreclosure, making the heir of the surviving trustee the only defendant; but it was held, that the persons beneficially interested under the will of the mortgagor were necessary parties. Chamberlain v. Thacker, 18 L. J., Ch. 489; 14 Jur. 190.

Under Settlement.]—On a bill by a first mortgagee against the mortgagor and second mortgagee, for foreclosure, it appeared that the money advanced on the second mortgage had been settled:—Held, that the parties beneficially entitled were necessary parties to the suit. Goldsmid v. Stonehewer, 9 Hare (App.) xxxviii.; 22 L. J., Ch. 109; 17 Jur. 199; 1 W. R. 91.

Under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42.]—Decree for foreclosure, under the statute 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9, against the devisees in trust and executors of the mortgagor, being all the persons who had control over the property out of which the mortgage was to be satisfied, in the absence of the cestuis que trustent under the will of the mortgagor. Sale v. Kitson, 3 De G. M. & G. 119; 10 Hare (App.) 1; 22 L. J., Ch. 344; 17 Jur. 170.

The court refused to act on the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, r. 9, dispensing with the parties beneficially interested, in a suit for foreclosure against the infant heir-at-law of the mortgagor, where the devisees in trust under his will had disclaimed, and no adult parties who would be in possession of funds to redeem were before the court as defendants. Young v. Ward, 10 Hare (App.) li.; Id. (App.) lviii.

Where, in a suit instituted to foreclose the equity of redemption of an estate vested in a trustee, in trust for four persons, who were not made parties to the suit, the court held that the proper course, notwithstanding r. 9 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 42, was to make them parties. Cropper v. Mellersh, 24 L. J., Ch. 430; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 299; 3 Eq. R. 492; 3 W. R. 202.

Since the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, the trustees of a mortgage represent the cestuis que trustent sufficiently to protect the mortgagor; but where the surviving trustees, or the representatives of the trustees, alone are parties, the court requires the cestuis que trustent to be also represented, in order to secure the due application of the trust property. Stansfield v. Hobson, 16 Beav. 189.

Ord. XVI. r. 8.]—Foreclosure action by a first mortgagee against the mortgagor, and a second mortgagee, who had become bankrupt. The second mortgagee was a trustee of the money secured by his mortgage, for various persons:—Held, that, notwithstanding Ord. XVI. r. 8, the persons beneficially interested under the second mortgage were necessary parties to the action. Francis v. Harrison, 59 L. J., Ch. 248; 43 Ch. D. 183; 61 L. T. 667; 38 W. R. 329.

Ord. XVI. r. 9.]—In a foreclosure action an order had been made in chambers, under Ord. XVI. r. 9, authorising two of a large class of persons, all having the same interest in the equity of redemption, to defend in the action on behalf and for the benefit of the others:—Held, that a foreclosure order could not be made unless all the persons interested in the equity of redemption were parties to the action. Griffith v. Pound, 59 L. J., Ch. 522; 45 Ch. D. 553.

j. After Assignment.

Generally.]—Mortgagee, having assigned the whole of his interest, need not be made a party to a redemption bill. Norrish v. Marshall, 5 Madd. 475.

Without Mortgagor.]—Heir of mortgagor need not bring original mortgagee before court where latter has assigned without mortgagor joining. Hill v. Adams, 1 Atk. 39.

Witnessed by Mortgagor.]—In this case the original mortgagee who had assigned, was made a defendant, the mortgagor not being a party to the deed; but being a witness to the deed, Master of the Rolls said, there should have been a direct charge that he knew the contents of the deed, and agreed thereto. Jamieson v. English, 2 Moll. 337.

Transfer pendente lite.]—The plaintiff, in a bill to redeem, transferred the mortgage property pendente lite:—Held, that the suit could not proceed in the absence of the transferee. Johnson v. Thomas, 11 Beav. 501.

k. Transferee after Decree.

Generally.]—If a party to a foreclosure action has assigned his interest after decree, the assignee may be made a party to the action even after the order for foreclosure absolute. Campbell v. Holyland, 47 L. J., Ch. 145; 7 Ch. D. 166; 38 L. T. 128; 26 W. R. 109.

15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.]—After a decree, a mortgage of the property, the subject-matter of the suit, was created, and an order was made, upon further consideration, the mortgagees not being made parties :—Held, that the 52nd section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, applied, and that a supplemental bill was not necessary. Freeman v. Pennington, 31 L. J., Ch. 216 ; 5 L. T. 514 ; 10 W. R. 184—L.JJ.

1. Other Cases.

Two Estates.]—A mortgagee of two estates filed a bill against the mortgagor and a second mortgagee of one, praying a foreclosure of that only, alleging that the mortgagor had sold the other to a purchaser without notice :—Held, that such a purchaser was a necessary party. Payne v. Compton, 2 Y. & C. 457.

Two estates being mortgaged together, on the death of the mortgagee, the equity of redemption of the one devolves on A., that of the other on B. B. is a necessary party to a bill by A. for redemption. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 J. & W. 2 ; 22 R. R. 84. Affirmed, 4 Bligh, 1.

Whether a devisee and heir-at-law can join in a bill claiming an equity of redemption upon the allegation that, questions having arisen as to which of them was entitled to it, they had agreed to divide it between them, quære. Id. 135.

Annuitants.]—Annuitants prior to a mortgage need not be made parties to a suit by the mortgagee against the mortgagor for a sale, but the estate must be sold subject to the annuities. Delabere v. Norwood, 3 Swanst. 144, n.

A prior annuitant, or jointress, is not a necessary party to a bill of foreclosure. All prior incumbrancers, whose rights ought to be ascertained and provided for by the decree, are necessary parties to the cause. Tuite v. Pallas, 1 Hog. 261.

An annuitant is an unnecessary party to a bill of foreclosure by a mortgagee of lands subject to an annuitant. Paynes v. Creagh, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 190.

Annuitants, whose claims are subsequent to the plaintiffs, are necessary parties to a bill for a sale. Every incumbrancer, having a specific lien on lands, whose rights will be taken away and divested by the decree, ought to be a party to the cause. Bodkin v. Fitzpatrick, 1 Hog. 308.

Surety.]—A surety who covenants for payment of the mortgage money is not a necessary party to a foreclosure suit, if he has paid nothing. Gedge v. Matson, 25 Beav. 310.

Tenant—Where Lease after Mortgage impeached.]—If mortgagee desire to impeach a lease made after mortgage executed, he must make the tenant a party to the foreclosure suit. Murtin v. Walker, Sau. & Sc. 139.

Incumbrancer prior to Creditor.]—A prior incumbrancer may insist that he will not be made a party to a suit by a puisne creditor for any purpose but that of being redeemed. If he should do so, the estate must be sold, subject to his prior incumbrance. Fisher v. Barry, Beat. 143.

Assignee of Bankrupt.]—After issue joined in a foreclosure suit, the plaintiff discovered that, prior to the creation of his mortgage security, the defendant, the mortgagor, had become bankrupt, whereupon the court gave the plaintiff leave to amend his bill by making the assignees defendants, the bankrupt still being retained as a defendant on the record. Hanson v. Preston, 3 Y. & C. 229.

Glebe Land—Patron.]—A vicar is a person having a limited interest within the meaning of s. 3 of the Landowners West of England and South Wales Land Drainage and Inclosure Companies Act, and may charge his glebe land thereunder. To a foreclosure action under such a mortgage, the patron of the living is not a necessary party. Goodden v. Coles, 59 L. T. 309 ; 36 W. R. 828.

Persons Permitted to Enter.]—Where B. and C. were permitted by a mortgagee to enter upon the working of a mortgagor's mine, sell the mortgaged property, and receive the value, they were properly made parties in a suit to redeem. Hood v. Easton, 2 Giff. 692 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 729 ; 4 W. R. 575.

Receiver.]—In a suit in which the priorities of different incumbrances on an estate were determined, a receiver had been appointed. A. B., who claimed to be first incumbrancer, not having been made a party to that suit, filed a bill of his own to establish his right :—Held, that the receiver was not a necessary party, and but for the decision in Lewis v. Zouche (Lord) (2 Sim. 388) he would have been considered an improper party. Smith v. Effingham (Earl), 7 Beav. 357 ; 8 Jur. 479.

Person having no Interest.]—A mortgagee in fee died intestate ; his heiress-at-law was also his administratrix ; she, by will, devised all estates vested in her as mortgagee to two trustees, whom she also appointed executors, and by a codicil appointed the husband of her heiress-at-law "to be a trustee and executor of her will, jointly" with the two trustees named in the will, and died. The two trustees named in the will disclaimed the devise and renounced probate, but the husband proved. He and his wife filed their bill against the mortgagor, offering to reconvey and for a foreclosure. At the hearing, the mortgagor objected that the heiress-at-law had no interest, and was improperly made a co-plaintiff, and he asked the dismissal of the bill :—Held, that she had no interest, and that, though the objection would have prevailed if it had been made by demurrer, yet she was not so improper a party as that the court would entertain the objection at the hearing ; but the court allowed no additional costs occasioned by her being made plaintiff, or of evidence in support of her pedigree. Pearce v. Watkins, 5 De G. & Sm. 315 ; 16 Jur. 832.

2. Suits for Account.

Where Mortgagee in Possession Assigns Over.]—If a mortgagee in possession assign over, and the mortgagor prefer his bill, suggesting that the debt is fully paid, and for an account of the surplus, he must make the mortgagee and all the assignees parties ; but if the bill be brought for an account, and to pay what is due, he need not make the mortgagee a party. Anon., 2 Free. C. C. 59.

Assignor of Equitable Interest.]—E. was entitled to one equal fourth part or share of and in one equal eighth part or share of the proceeds to arise from real and personal estates directed by a testator to be sold and converted. E. mortgaged his share to the plaintiff to secure 1,500*l.* and interest and further advances. The principal being unpaid, and the interest in arrear, the plaintiff filed a bill against the trustee, not making the cestui que trust (the assignor) a party. The prayer of the bill was for an injunction, an account, and payment merely. The defendant demurred for want of parties, thereby admitting the statements in the bill:—Held, that the assignor was a necessary party, notwithstanding the sum was an equitable chose in action, and of ascertained amount. Levinger v. Crombie, 27 L. T. 537; 21 W. R. 37.

Assignment without Priority of Mortgagor.]—In an assignment of mortgage without the authority or privity of mortgagor, the last assignee only is necessary party to bill by mortgagor to account. Chambers v. Goldwin, 9 Ves. 269; 7 R. R. 181.

Mortgagee of Tolls.]—To a bill by a mortgagee of the tolls of a turnpike road, for the payment out of the tolls of money due to him for principal, and a long arrear of interest on his mortgage of the tolls, all the other mortgagees of the tolls are necessary parties. Mellish v. Brooks, 3 Beav. 22; 9 L. J., Ch. 362; 4 Jur. 739.

Under a local turnpike act, a mortgagee of the tolls, who took possession, was bound to pay the interest on all the mortgages pari passu, but the principal was only to be paid by means of a sinking fund. Under the general turnpike act, a mortgagee in possession was authorised to pay the principal as well as the interest. Some mortgagees took possession, and one of the trustees of the road filed a bill against them for an account:—Held, that the mortgagees, being interested in the question as to the payment of the principal moneys, were necessary parties to the suit. Watts v. Eglington (Lord), 15 L. J., Ch. 412.

Supplemental Suit.]—A decree for redemption and general account, &c., having been made in the original and revived causes in favour of the supposed devisee, it cannot be restricted in the supplemental suit to an account to be taken as between the executors and mortgagees, &c., to the time of the death of the devisor, dismissing the bill as it regards the interest of the devisee; for the devisee is a necessary party to the account. Rylands v. Latouche, 2 Bligh, 567.

Account against Devisor without Devisee.]—In a suit to redeem against the devisee of the mortgage, an account of the rents received by the devisor may be obtained without his being represented on the record. Trulock v. Robey, 15 Sim. 277.

1. OF PREPARATION OF MORTGAGE.

Of Perusal.]—Mortgagee's solicitor, at the time of the loan, perused the title deeds, and was paid the costs therefor by the mortgagor. After the decree for sale in the mortgage cause, the same solicitor prepared the abstract of title under the 138th general order, which, though deducing the title to the time of sale, did not contain any new deeds. The master having refused to allow the costs of perusing the deeds, the court refused to send back his taxation. Scott v. King, 7 Ir. Eq. R. 483.

Counsel's Fee for Settling.]—Where the court had ordered in a suit that money should be raised by mortgage, and the mortgage deed was submitted to counsel on behalf of the mortgagee, the fees for settling the deed were directed to be allowed by the officer in taxing the mortgagee's costs, the mortgagee having been ordered to have his costs, charges and expenses. Nicholson v. Jeyes, 22 L. J., Ch. 833; 1 W. R. 278.

Of Deeds not forming Part of the Security.]—A mortgagor cannot be charged with the expenses of preparing a deed of declaration of trust, from the mortgagee to a cestui que trust, who advanced the money to the mortgagor, as such deed forms no part of the security of the mortgage. Martin v. Baxter, 2 M. & P. 240; 5 Bing. 160; 6 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 242.

Of Action against Mortgagor by Third Party.]—D., having given a cognovit for 357*l*., mortgaged certain premises as a security for the payment of that sum, and the costs of the judgment, and all other costs and charges whatsoever attending the same. The mortgagee having levied execution, her right to the goods seized was disputed in actions at the suit of certain persons who claimed to be assignees of D. under a bankruptcy. The mortgagee failed upon a first trial, but succeeded in a second, D. not proving to be a bankrupt:—Held, that the mortgagee could not claim from D. the costs of this action, as costs or charges attending the judgment confessed by D. Doe d. Holt v. Roe, 6 Bing. 447; 4 M. & P. 177; 8 L. J. (o.s.) C. P. 147.

When Loan goes off.]—Where a negotiation for a mortgage goes off through the default of the mortgagor, the mortgagee's attorney cannot recover his costs from the mortgagor, in the absence of an express contract on the part of the latter to pay them. Wilkinson v. Grant, 18 C. B. 319; 25 L. J., C. P. 233.

Where, upon a negotiation for a loan, the borrower agreed, in case the loan went off, to pay the lender's reasonable costs:—Held, that this meant legal costs only, and did not include the commission which had been charged by the bankers, by reason of the lender withdrawing the money from the bank without notice. Blakeley, In re, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1265; 8 L. T. 343; 11 W. R. 656. S. C., nom. Blakesley and Beswick, In re, 32 Beav. 379.

When the negotiations for a mortgage are broken off owing to the proposed mortgagee being dissatisfied with the security upon investigation, the proposed mortgagor has no claim upon the proposed mortgagee for the costs attending the investigation; but, if the negotiations go off without such reason, the proposed mortgagee may recover his costs reasonably incurred. Carter v. Merrion, 32 L. T. 663.

Where a treaty for a loan on mortgage goes off, the lender not being satisfied with the title, and there being no stipulation as to title, or as to costs in the event of the treaty going off, the proposed lender cannot recover the costs incidental to the investigation of the title. Melbourne v. Cottrell, 5 W. R. 884.

Where B., being desirous of raising a sum of money upon mortgage, employed an attorney for the purpose, who applied to A., an attorney, telling him at the same time the name of his principal, and A. agreed to advance the money on behalf of a client, but ultimately the negotiation failed from a defect of title:—Held, that A. could not maintain an action against B. for his fees, although it was proved to be the practice for the proposed borrower to pay the expenses of the proposed lender; the course being for the attorney of the latter to send his bill to the attorney of the former, who, if the bill was reasonable, recommended his client to pay it. Rigley v. Daykin, 2 Y. & J. 83; 31 R. R. 554. See Grissell v. Robinson, 3 Scott, 329; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 10; 5 L. J., C. P. 313; Webb v. Rhodes, Id. 732; 4 Scott, 497; 6 L. J., C. P. 212.

By a written agreement, preliminary to an intended mortgage, the plaintiff undertook to advance to the defendant a sum on the mortgage of certain named premises; the defendant was to deliver a complete abstract of title to the plaintiff's solicitor within a week after the date of the agreement, and to produce the title deeds necessary to verify the abstract, and deduce a marketable title within a month from such delivery. If the defendant did not do so at either period, the plaintiff was to have the option of considering the agreement void. It was then agreed that the defendant should forthwith pay the plaintiff all costs and charges incurred by him in investigating the title to the premises. Abstracts were delivered, but disclosed no title to some, and a defective title to other parts of the premises. The time for completing the title expired on the 24th of September, 1831, but the negotiations went on till 14th of May, 1832; the defendant had repeated notice between those dates that the plaintiff's money was lying idle, but he tried to amend his title till the latter day, when it remained defective, and the bargain was broken off:—Held, that the original contract remained in force, and that its terms were not sufficiently comprehensive to enable the plaintiff to recover interest, or more than the costs of investigating the title. Sweetland v. Smith, 3 Tyrw. 491; 1 C. & M. 585; 2 L. J., Ex. 190.

2. Collateral.

a. Protection of Estate or Security, 1833.
b. Of obtaining Administration, 1836.
c. Of obtaining Deeds, 1836.

a. Protection of Estate or Security.

Generally.]—A mortgage deed provided that it should be a security, not only for the principal sums advanced, and interest, but also for the costs of preparing the deed, and for all costs which might be incurred by the mortgagee in selling the property, or in any actions or suits relating to it. The mortgagor filed a bill to redeem, and a decree was made directing an account of what was due to the defendant for principal and interest under the mortgage deed, and an account of sale moneys, rents and profits received by the defendant. In taking the accounts the defendant carried in a claim for costs incurred in legal proceedings relating to the property, which the chief clerk refused to entertain, and the defendant then appealed from the decree:—Held, by Selwyn, L.J., that the decree was right, for that all costs properly incurred in the actions might be claimed under it as just allowances; and by Giffard, L.J., that the costs might be claimed under the decree as principal moneys due under the deed. Blackford v. Davis, L. R. 4 Ch. 304; 20 L. T. 199; 17 W. R. 336.

Of defending Mortgage.]—Mortgagee having been at great charges to defend a suit at law, brought by the heir of the mortgagor, who endeavoured to defeat the mortgage by an entail, but could not prevail, upon a bill afterwards brought by the heir to redeem mortgage, allowed his full costs expended in that suit, and not tied down to the costs taxed. Ramsden v. Langley, 2 Vern. 536.

A mortgagee being requested by the mortgagor to defend the mortgaged premises, in an action which was instituted against them, and failing in said action, was, nevertheless, held entitled, as against puisne incumbrancers and mortgagees, to be paid the costs incurred in such action, in the same priority with his mortgage debt. Barry v. Stawell, 1 Dr. & Wal. 618.

Where a mortgagee has been put to expenses in defending the title to the estate, the defence being for the benefit of all parties interested, he is entitled to charge such expenses against the estate; but, if his title to the mortgage only is disputed, the costs of his defence should not be borne by the estate as against parties interested in the equity of redemption, unless they can be shown to have concurred in or assisted the litigation. Parker v. Watkins, 1 Johns. 133.

Of Ejectment.] — The court, under special circumstances, and considering itself bound by the terms of previous decrees, declined to give a mortgagee her costs of an ejectment, brought to recover the mortgaged premises, in which she had, after much difficulty and opposition, recovered a verdict. Horlock v. Smith, 1 Coll. C. C. 298.

—— Defending Action of Trespass.]—Mortgagee, after the death of the mortgagor and the person supposed to be his heir, finds the mortgaged premises, which have been left vacant and out of repair, occupied by lodgers placed there by M., the owner of the adjoining house, who had entered by breaking through the party wall. Possession having been obtained by the mortgagee, M. enters with a band of men and recovers possession. The mortgagee brings ejectment, upon the advice of counsel, against M., and obtains a verdict. M. had previously brought an action of trespass against the mortgagee, in which he was nonsuited:—Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to receive the costs of the proceedings in ejectment out of the estate of the deceased mortgagor, but not the costs of defending the action of trespass. Owen v. Crouch, 5 W. R. 545.

Of obtaining Stop-Order.]—The mortgagee of a fund in court is entitled to the expense of obtaining a stop-order on the fund in a case in which he is empowered by the mortgage deed to apply to the court for that purpose; but such expenses are not allowed by the taxing master under the common order to tax the costs of the mortgagee. Waddilove v. Taylor, 6 Hare, 307; 17 L. J., Ch. 408.

A fund having become distributable, a mortgagee, with notice that the parties entitled had presented a petition for payment out of court to the mortgagee and to themselves, having applied for a stop-order, was refused his costs of his application. Hoole v. Roberts, 12 Jur. 108.

Of Suit against Purchaser for Specific Performance.]—A mortgagee had a power of sale, and of retaining his costs, charges and expenses. He sold; but the purchaser resisted the completion, on the ground of misdescription. Being advised by counsel that the objection was untenable, he filed a bill for specific performance, which was dismissed with costs;—Held, upon a redemption, that he could not charge the costs of the suit. Peers v. Ceeley, 15 Beav. 208.

Of Incumbrancers on Life Estate in Suit for Sale of Inheritance.]—Incumbrancers on a life estate, who were necessary parties to a suit for the purpose of selling the inheritance to pay off charges prior to that life estate, are only entitled to their costs against that life estate, and not against the plaintiffs generally. Ennis v. Brady, 1 Dr. & Wal. 720.

Of Inquiry to Assess Compensation on Purchase under Statutory Powers.]—Mortgaged property, the subject of a foreclosure action, was purchased by a public body under their statutory powers, and the sum which had been assessed for compensation was paid into court:—Held, that the mortgagee was only entitled to the ordinary inquiry whether anything and what was due to him for any and what costs, charges and expenses properly incurred by him in respect of his mortgage security, and that he was not entitled to an express direction for the allowance of his extra costs (beyond those allowed on taxation between himself and the public body) of the inquiry to assess the compensation. Rees v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 49 L. J., Ch. 620; 14 Ch. D. 372; 42 L. T. 685; 28 W. R. 614.

Practice—Inquiry directed as to Costs not of Suit.]—In a foreclosure suit by a first mortgagee against subsequent incumbrancers and the mortgagor, the plaintiff alleged, and the mortgagor admitted, that the costs of an action on a covenant were properly incurred:—Held, that the decree for foreclosure would direct an inquiry as to costs not being costs of the suit. Merriman v. Bonner, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 534; 10 L. T. 88; 12 W. R. 461.

—— Costs incurred after Decree and Accounts taken.]—A decree for foreclosure being made, the mortgagee, after the accounts had been taken, incurred further costs in another proceeding:—Held, that he could not, by petition, obtain an order to add them to his security. Barron v. Lancefield, 17 Beav. 208.

See also next subdivison.

b. Of obtaining Administration.

Of Citation of Next of Kin.]—If a mortgagee of leaseholds, before he files a bill of foreclosure, is under the necessity of citing the next of kin of the deceased mortgagor before the ecclesiastical court, in order to compel them to take out administration to the deceased, this court will not allow him the costs of the citation, unless he states his case for them on his bill. Ward v. Barton, 11 Sim. 534; 10 L. J., Ch. 163; 5 Jur. 405.

Of Mortgagee as Creditor of Mortgagor.]—On a bill by an heir to redeem, the mortgagee was allowed the costs of taking out administration as principal creditor of the mortgagor. Ramsden v. Langley, 2 Vern. 536.

To Incumbrancer under Will of Mortgagor.]—Mortgagee allowed costs of procuring administration to an incumbrancer, under will of mortgagor, as a necessary party to foreclosure. Hunt v. Fownes, 9 Ves. 70.

By Mortgagor to Perfect the Title.]—A mortgagor, who has taken out letters of administration which were necessary to perfect the title to the mortgaged property, is not therefore entitled to be paid out of the mortgaged property the expenses of so doing. Saunders v. Dunman, 47 L. J., Ch. 338; 7 Ch. D. 825; 38 L. T. 416; 26 W. R. 397.

By Husband to Wife, after Mortgage of Wife's Reversionary Interest.]—A husband and wife mortgaged a reversionary interest belonging to the wife. The husband afterwards executed a creditors' deed, by which any surplus which remained after payment of his creditors belonged to him. After the death of the wife the interest fell into possession; and the husband, at the request and cost of the trustees of the creditors' deed who expected a surplus, took out administration to his wife. On the death of the husband his administratrix incurred other expenses in perfecting her title to the mortgaged property:—Held, that the costs of taking out administration were only incident to and not a charge on the fund, and could not be paid out of it as against the mortgagee. Ib.

c. Of obtaining Deeds.

By Mortgagor.]—Three mortgages, on the estates of distinct mortgagors, were vested in the same trustees by one deed, which was prepared in the master's office, in a suit for executing the trust. Upon the application of one of the mortgagors for liberty to redeem and to have his mortgage deed delivered up to him:—Held, that he was entitled to have the deed on his executing to the trustees a covenant to produce it, and paying the costs of the application; and that the costs properly incurred in preparing and settling the covenant should be borne by the mortgagee's estate. Capper v. Terrington, 1 Coll. C. C. 103; 13 L. J., Ch. 239; 8 Jur. 140.

—— Deeds in Custody of Court.]—Where deeds relating to mortgaged property (the mortgage being absolute at law) come into the custody of a court of equity, by means and in the course of a reasonable and proper administration of the mortgagee's estate, the costs of removing them out of court, upon the mortgage being paid off, must be borne by the mortgagor. Burden v. Oldaker, 1 Coll. C. C. 105; 13 L. J., Ch. 240; 8 Jur. 418.

—— Mortgagee Declining to Assist.]—A sum of money, part of a testator's estate, the subject of a suit, was advanced by the executors upon a mortgage security. The mortgagor had no notice of the suit. Subsequently, all papers, including the title deeds of the mortgaged property, relating to the testator's estate, were, under an order of the court, deposited in the master's office. The mortgagor, having paid off the mortgage money, requested the mortgagees to restore to him his title deeds, and, on their declining to take any steps to obtain an order for the delivery of them out of the master's office, presented a petition for that purpose:—Held, that the mortgagor was entitled to have his costs of the petition. Reed v. Freer, 13 L. J., Ch. 417; 8 Jur. 704.

a. In General.

Generally.]—Right to principal and interest generally carries costs. Gammon v. Stone, 1 Ves. 339.

A mortgagee is entitled to be allowed, in account against the mortgagor, all expenses properly incurred for the recovery of the mortgage money. Ellison v. Wright, 3 Russ. 458; 27 R. R. 108.

A mortgagee's reasonable costs have reference only to such rights as his mortgage title gives him. Dryden v. Frost, 3 Myl. & C. 670; 8 L. J., Ch. 235; 2 Jur. 1030.

Mortgagee, under circumstances, not allowed his costs. ——— v. Trecothick, 2 V. & B. 181; 13 R. R. 57.

Fetter on Redemption.]—As a mortgagee cannot charge his mortgagor with more than his principal, interest and costs, he is not entitled to charge the mortgagor with any sum payable for his, the mortgagee's, own benefit, such as professional or profit costs for the preparation of the mortgage deed, if he is a solicitor, or for the valuation of the property for the purpose of the mortgage, if he is a surveyor; nor, on the principle that a mortgagee cannot clog the equity of redemption with any by-agreement, can he contract with the mortgagor for any such payment. Per Kay, J., in Field v. Hopkins, 59 L. J., Ch. 174. Affirmed, 44 Ch. D. 524; 62 L. T. 774.

Order for Personal Payment.]—In the order for personal payment the costs will be limited to such costs only as would have been incurred if the action had been brought for payment only of the debt. Farrer v. Lacy, 55 L. J., Ch. 149; 31 Ch. D. 42; 53 L. T. 515; 34 W. R. 22—C. A.

On Setting Aside for Undervalue.]—Where a security is set aside on the ground of undervalue, costs are not given against the mortgagee; otherwise, where there has been misconduct. Tottenham v. Green, 32 L. J., Ch. 201.

Satisfied Term.]—A testator allowed a satisfied mortgage term to remain outstanding in the mortgagee, and he devised the estate to a trustee in such a manner as, in the opinion of the court, to entitle him to call for an assignment of the term without the concurrence of the parties beneficially entitled: the termor, under the advice of counsel, refused to assign without such concurrence, and a suit became necessary to compel him. The court, though of opinion that the termor was not entitled to insist on his objection, gave him his costs, charges and expenses. Poole v. Pass, 1 Beav. 600; 8 L. J., Ch. 325.

Account.]—Where a canal company borrowed money, by way of mortgage, and conveyed, by bargain and sale, the canal, works and the rates payable under the act, but without covenant to pay. On a bill filed for an account, no tender having been made of the principal and six years' interest, although the defendants were ready and willing so to do:—Held, that they were liable to costs. Hodges v. Croydon Canal Co., 3 Beav. 86.

—— Amendment of Bill.]—On a bill for an account against a bailiff, an issue was directed, in which defendant was found to be a mortgagee, and plaintiff amended his bill accordingly. The court, on motion before hearing, held defendant entitled to all the costs sustained by him up to the time of amendment, beyond what he would have been put to if the bill had been originally a bill for a foreclosure, such as the costs of the issue and of the application. Smith v. Smith, G. Cooper, 141.

b. Misconduct.

Generally.]—Where a mortgagee and real creditor is brought before the court to have his security impeached, if the bill is dismissed, there is hardly an instance in which it is not with costs. Semble. Tanner v. Ivie, 2 Ves. 467.

A mortgagee is always considered as primâ facie entitled to costs, unless there be some circumstance of positive misconduct. Anon., 2 Eq. Abr. 237. Gammon v. Stone, 1 Ves. 339.

Mortgagee, though entitled to costs in general, deprived of costs occasioned by improper conduct, and even compelled to pay costs. Detillin v. Gale, 7 Ves. 583; 6 R. R. 192.

Lord Eldon mentioned a case of Shuttleworth v. Lowther, in which a mortgagee was made to pay costs on the ground of a tender, and an appropriation of the money, which was paid into the bank, and refused. Ib.

Nothing short of misconduct can deprive a mortgagee of his costs in a redemption suit, and therefore where no misconduct is alleged and he is deprived of costs, an appeal lies without leave. McDonnell v. McMahon, 23 L. R., Ir. 283.

A mortgagee is always entitled to costs, unless there be positive misconduct on his part. Loftus v. Swift, 2 Sch. & Lef. 642.

Fraud.]—Defendant, by his fraudulent conduct, though considered as mortgagee in possession, deprived of his costs. Morony v. O'Dea, 1 Ball & B. 109.

Where a sale or mortgage is a fraud on prior incumbrancer, court will give costs against vendee or mortgagee, on setting aside the deeds. Taylor v. Baker, 5 Price, 306; 19 R. R. 625.

A case, nom. Taylor v. Baker (5 Price, 306), was cited in this case, in which defendant was a first mortgagee, plaintiff a second. Defendant took from the mortgagor an agreement for charging another sum on the premises. In his answer he denied notice of the second security, and, having got the legal estate, attempted to tack the subsequent advance to his mortgage. Plaintiff, however, proved notice upon him, and the court, for his fraudulently setting up the second agreement, made him pay the costs. Harvey v. Tebbutt, 1 J. & W. 197; 21 R. R. 145.

Upon a bill filed to set aside a mortgage security for fraud, circumstances of oppression and misconduct being proved against the mortgagee, it was held that, inasmuch as, if solvent, he would have been liable to pay part at least of the costs of the suit, being insolvent he was not entitled to receive costs. Rider v. Jones, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 329.

Unjust Defence.]—Mortgagee shall not onerate his pledge with costs, which he occasions by an unjust defence. Mocatta v. Murgatroyd, 1 P. Wms. 395.

Where Unnecessary Parties.]—Where a mortgagee files a bill against the mortgagor and other parties to have the benefit of a former suit, and makes persons parties to the suit who are unnecessary, and the bill is dismissed against them with costs, he is not entitled to charge those costs as between himself and the mortgagor. Booth v. Creswicke, 13 L. J., Ch. 217; 5 Jur. 763.

Usurious Contract.]—Where, on a bill for redemption, a party is brought before the court in the character of mortgagee, but has acquired his interest in the subject-matter of the suit by an usurious contract, he will not be allowed his costs. Johnson v. Williamshurst, 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 112.

Understating Sum due.]—A mortgagee in possession sold under his power of sale, and retained surplus proceeds of sale. In an action against him for accounts he admitted that a sum was due from him, and paid such sum into court. On the taking of the accounts it appeared that a considerably larger sum was due:—Held, that he ought not to be allowed his costs of taking the accounts. Charles v. Jones, 56 L. J., Ch. 745; 25 Ch. D. 544; 56 L. T. 848; 35 W. R. 645.

Neglect or Refusal to Render Account.]—A mortgage to secure 85*l.*, with interest at 5*l.* per cent., provided for annual rests and the furnishing of accounts yearly; the assignee of the mortgagee having gone into possession, a suit for redemption was instituted against his executor in 1874, who by his answer alleged that at the filing of the bill, and thence to the time of putting in the answer, a sum of 121*l.* 5*s.* 8*d.* was due on foot of the mortgage; the accounts taken in the suit showed a sum of but 16*l.* 10*s.* 8*d.* due at the filing of the bill, and 5*l.* 13*s.* only due at the filing of the answer, inclusive of a sum allowed by consent for repairs: three months before the commencement of the suit the defendant was called upon in writing for an account, but he neglected to comply with the requisition:—Held, first, that, the plaintiff having failed to show that the mortgage debt was fully paid off, either at the filing of the bill or answer, the defendant should not be deprived of his costs except on the ground of misconduct; but, secondly, that the neglect to render an account when called on by the plaintiff to do so constituted such misconduct, and that he should accordingly abide his own costs of the suit. Cassidy v. Sullivan, 1 L. R., Ir. 313.

A mortgagee in possession who had neglected or refused to render an account upon the demand of the mortgagor was refused his costs up to the hearing. Powell v. Trotter, 1 Dr. & Sm. 388; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 206; 4 L. T. 45.

c. Resisting Redemption.

Generally.]—Redemption of mortgage resisted and mortgagee ordered to pay costs. Baker v. Wind, 1 Ves. 160.

A general charge of fraud does not affect the rule as to payment of costs by a resisting mortgagee. Hayward v. Kersey, 14 L. T. 879; 14 W. R. 999.

On decreeing a redemption, the court refused costs on either side, for, though naturally the costs follow the redemption, the right to redeem had been disputed and it was a doubtful title. Kirkham v. Smith, 1 Ves. 258.

A second mortgagee obtained the costs of so much of a suit for redemption as had been incurred by the first mortgagees unsuccessfully disputing his rights to redeem. But the court, instead of ordering those costs to be paid to the second mortgagee personally, directed them to be set off in case of their redeeming. Wheaton v. Graham, 24 Beav. 483.

A mortgagee refused to allow his security to be redeemed by an assignee of the mortgagor, on the ground that a subsequent incumbrancer was desirous to redeem him:—Held, that this was a ground for making him pay the costs of the suit for redemption. Tomlinson v. Gregg, 15 W. R. 51.

Mortgagee on bill to redeem insisted that heir-at-law was living. Master, on reference, reported him dead. Exceptions were twice taken thereto, and issue directed, by which he was also found to be dead. Mortgagee not to pay costs of issue, as it was not vexatious, so long as court thought it necessary to direct issue. Wilson v. Metcalfe, 3 Madd. 45; 18 R. R. 193.

On Ground of Decree Collusively Obtained.]—Mortgagee resisting the right to redemption, on the ground of a decree of foreclosure collusively obtained, decreed to pay so much of the costs as was occasioned by his resistance. Harvey v. Tebbutt, 1 J. & W. 197; 21 R. R. 145.

Irrelevant Defence.]—Semble, in a redemption suit, the mortgagee will be ordered to pay the costs occasioned by a defence, in which he fails, not connected with his title as mortgagee.

Roberts v. Williams, 11 L. J., Ch. 65; 5 Jur. 1057.

Improper Defence.]—In a suit to redeem against a mortgagee in possession, the defendant, in his answer, set up an unfounded claim to the equity of redemption, and denied that the mortgage had been satisfied, although a balance was due from him when he filed his answer. The court ordered him to pay the costs occasioned by his claim and the costs of the suit subsequent to the filing of his answer, and also interest on the balances in his hands since the time when the mortgage was satisfied. Montgomery v. Calland, 14 Sim. 79; 8 Jur. 436.

Disputing Security.]—B., a second mortgagee, filed a bill for redemption and foreclosure against F., who held the first and third mortgages on the property. F., by his answer, disputed B.'s security by denying the consideration, and filed a cross bill for foreclosure impeaching that security. By the decree made in both suits, F.'s bill was dismissed with costs, so far as it sought to set aside B.'s security, and F. was ordered to pay the costs of the first suit, "so far as the same have been increased by the answer of F. impeaching the validity of the security of B." The master held that the costs incurred by B. in proving the consideration, and consequent thereon, were the increase of costs in the first suit which F. was to pay, and that the expense of the hearing must be apportioned according to the number of folios, and that the costs of the second suit must be apportioned. He allowed the costs of three counsel in the second suit on account of the complexity of the case. Beghie v. Fenwick, Fenwick v. Beghie, L. R. 6 Ch. 869; 25 L. T. 441; 20 W. R. 67.

Held, also, that so much of B.'s bill as was directed to anticipating the objection taken by F.'s answer ought to be dealt with as occasioned by the objection taken in the answer, and that in the other suit regard ought to have been had in taxation to the circumstance that the complexity which justified the allowance of three counsel was owing to B.'s security being impeached. Ib.

Insisting on Mortgage as Absolute.]—A mortgagee insisted on an assignment of a lease as absolute, when it appeared in evidence it was intended to be a mortgage only. Per cur., it would be going too far to make the assignee pay the costs; but he certainly has forfeited his own costs. Francklyn v. Fern, Barnard. 30.

Where, on a bill for redemption, defendant had insisted on deeds, which were intended only to be mortgages, as absolute conveyances, he was ordered to pay plaintiff's costs. England v. Codrington, 1 Eden, 174.

Mortgagor to pay Costs of Redemption, although increased by Resistance of Mortgagee.]—A mortgagor was entitled to a decree for redemption on the usual terms of paying principal, interest, and costs of suit, considering that a great part of the costs had been occasioned by charges of an injurious kind against the mortgagee, which had, on amendment, been struck out of the bill, and although the costs had been increased by the mortgagee resisting that right to redeem. Cowdry v. Day, 1 Giff. 316; 29 L. J., Ch. 39; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 1 L. T. 88; 8 W. R. 55.

d. Paid or Overpaid.

Where Nothing due to Mortgagee.]—Where on a bill for redemption nothing is found due to the mortgagee, he must pay the costs of the suit. Barlow v. Gains, Morris v. Islip, 23 Beav. 244.

Decree against a mortgagee in possession, with costs, a tender having been made before suit, and it having been found, upon taking the accounts with annual rests (which was the point in the cause), that nothing was at that time due to the mortgagee. Wilson v. Cluer, 4 Beav. 214.

Semble, if a mortgagee contrive to hold the land after he is satisfied by perception of profits, the mortgagor coming to redeem will be entitled to costs instead of paying them. Woodroft v. Soys, Beam. Costs, 43, n.

Pending a foreclosure suit, the mortgagee was fully paid; he, however, made further claims and brought the cause to a hearing. His claim appearing unfounded he was ordered to pay all the subsequent costs. Gregg v. Slater, 22 Beav. 314; 25 L. J., Ch. 440; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 246; 4 W. R. 381.

An equity of redemption being subject to a trust for sale, the mortgagee, with some of the cestuis que trustent of the equity of redemption, filed a bill for the sale of the premises, alleging that the whole of his principal, with an arrear of interest, was due to him, and suppressing the fact that he had been for several years in possession; the result of the account was, that nothing was due on the mortgage when the bill was filed:—Held, that the mortgagee must pay to the defendants the costs of so much of the suit as related to the mortgage, and the accounts and inquiries concerning it. Binnington v. Harwood, Turn. & R. 477.

Where a prior decree had ordered the costs of a defendant mortgagee to be taxed, he will be entitled to his costs, though it appears at the hearing, on further directions, that his debt was paid off before the commencement of the suit, and that he had set up an improper defence. Wilson v. Metcalf, 1 Russ. 530; 25 R. R. 128.

Where Balance due to Mortgagor.]—In a redemption suit against a mortgagee in possession, a balance was found to have been due to the mortgagor at the time of the institution of the suit; the mortgagee must pay the costs of the suit. O'Neil v. Innes, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 527.

The tenant for life of property subject to a mortgage filed a bill against the mortgagee in possession, and others, to redeem the property. The decree made gave her a right to redeem, and also directed an inquiry whether any past rents were due to her from the mortgagee in possession in respect of her life estate, and declared that for what (if anything) should be so found due to her she was entitled to a charge on the property. After the decree she died without having redeemed. The suit was revived by her personal representatives, and the inquiry was prosecuted, and the chief clerk found that 285*l.* was due to the deceased plaintiff in respect of her life estate:—Held, that her representatives were entitled to the costs of the suit. Powley v. Colyer, 16 W. R. 114.

Where Mortgagee Overpaid.]—Mortgagee in possession is in general entitled to his costs incurred in that character, but is charged with costs occasioned by his conduct when overpaid. Archdeacon v. Bowes, M'Cle. 149, 167; 13 Price, 353; 28 R. R. 685.

Costs of a redemption suit instituted by a puisne incumbrancer against a mortgagee in possession, given to the mortgagee up to the filing of his answer, and against him afterwards, he having been, before answer, overpaid the sum due to him at the filing of the bill; the balance being against him, and his conduct being against conscience. Snagg v. Frizell, 3 Jo. & Lat. 383. S. C., nom. Snagg v. Frith, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 285.

Bill to redeem; decree referring it to master to take account, and tax costs, &c. The report finds mortgagee overpaid; it is too late to object to his having his costs. Gilbert v. Golding, 2 Anst. 442.

Usual decree for redemption and account, against mortgagee in possession, who had been overpaid; but, there being no reservation in the decree as to costs, and the redemption being decreed on payment of principal, interest, and costs, defendant was declared entitled to his costs. Trimleston v. Hamill, 1 Ball & B. 377, 386; 12 R. R. 38.

Where tenant by elegit has received rents and profits beyond the debt, though he shall account to the debtor, yet he shall not pay costs. Owen v. Griffith, Amb. 520; 1 Ves. 249.

A mortgagee, who in a redemption suit sets up and fails to prove an absolute title to the mortgaged property, and is then found to have been at the date of the suit overpaid as mortgagee, will not only not be allowed his costs of suit, but may have costs given against him. National Bank of Australasia v. United Hand-in-Hand, &c. Co., 4 App. Cas. 391; 40 L. T. 697; 27 W. R. 889—P. C.

See also 4, c, infra, col. 1850.

e. After Tender.

Generally.]—Tender must be very express and formal to prevent costs. Gammon v. Stone, 1 Ves. 339.

Where a mortgagor makes an unconditional tender to the mortgagee of a sum, and the mortgagee refuses to accept it, he does so at his own peril; and, if the amount tendered was all that was due, the mortgagee must bear the costs of a subsequent suit for redemption. Harmer v. Priestley, 16 Beav. 569; 22 L. J., Ch. 1041.

In Redemption.]—Where a mortgagor, before filing a bill for redemption, makes a tender to the mortgagee, and the mortgagee refuses such tender, if it should turn out that not more than the sum so tendered is due, the mortgagee will have to pay the costs of the suit for redemption, and a direction to that effect may be inserted in the decree made on the hearing. Hoskyn v. Sincock, 34 L. J., Ch. 435; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 477; 12 L. T. 262; 13 W. R. 487.

A redemption suit. An incumbrancer, to whom a sum greater than the balance found due to him had been tendered before the bill was filed, ordered to pay the costs. Roberts v. Williams, 4 Hare, 129.

In Foreclosure.]—Costs of plaintiff after tender in foreclosure suit. Thomas v. Parker, 7 Jur. 844. And see Shuttleworth v. Lowther, cited in Detillin v. Gale, 7 Ves. 583; 6 R. R. 192.

After a bill of foreclosure filed by the assignee of a mortgagee, a tender of what was due to the mortgagee, with costs up to that time, deprives the assignee of subsequent costs. Williams v. Sorrell, 4 Ves. 389.

First mortgagee, after the usual notice given him by the second mortgagee to redeem, files a bill of foreclosure at the end of the term mentioned in the notice; the second mortgagee tenders the mortgage money and costs to the first mortgagee, which the latter declines to accept:—Held, under all the circumstances of the case, that the first mortgagee was not entitled to the costs of the suit after the tender. Smith v. Green, 1 Coll. C. C. 555.

Before Bill.]—The mortgagor having, before bill filed, tendered principal and interest, and a sum of money for expenses, no costs were given on either side up to the hearing, and future costs were reserved. Broad v. Selfe, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 885; 11 W. R. 1036.

After Action Brought.]—After action brought by mortgagee (a solicitor) against mortgagor for his bill of costs on effecting the mortgage, and 35*l.* taken out of court in that action by mortgagee in satisfaction of his demand, and after second action brought between the same parties to recover the mortgage money and costs in that action, taxed at 19*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.*, mortgagor tendered to mortgagee principal and interest, said sum of 19*l.* 16*s.* 4*d.*, and 10*l.* for any other costs and expenses that might be due; mortgagee, however, refused to reconvey, because the bill of costs, the subject of the first action, had not been satisfied, and the taxed costs of the second action were only costs as between party and party. Upon a bill filed by mortgagor against mortgagee to compel a reconveyance:—Held, that the mortgagee must pay the costs of the suit. Morley v. Bridges, 2 Coll. C. C. 621; 11 Jur. 706.

—— Administration.]—Motion to dismiss a bill, filed by a mortgagee on behalf of himself and all other creditors to administer the estate of an intestate, on payment of the debt and interest. The defendants had tendered (by letter) all that was due immediately after the bill was filed, and claimed costs subsequently to the tender:—Held, that the defendants must pay all the costs after, as well as before, the tender. Wainwright v. Sewell, 11 W. R. 560. And see Holden v. Kynaston, 2 Beav. 204.

f. Equitable Mortgagee.

Sale.]—Equitable mortgagee must pay the costs of his petition for sale. Warry, Ex parte, 19 Ves. 472.

Equitable mortgagee, praying sale of mortgaged estate, pays costs of petition and of assignees' appearance to it, not out of produce of mortgaged estate, but personally; but, if assignees oppose petition on frivolous or mistaken grounds, they pay costs occasioned by such opposition. Horne, Ex parte, 1 Madd. 622.

Equitable mortgagee is not entitled to costs on application for sale of pledge, &c., though it is owing to bankrupt that no regular mortgage was made. Anon., 2 Madd. 281.

—— Bidding at.]—Where an equitable mortgagee applies for leave to bid at the sale of mortgaged premises, the practice is for him to pay the costs of the application. Robinson, Ex parte, Mont. & M'Ar. 261.

Costs come out of estate where equitable mortgagee applies for leave to bid, and also for sale; secus, if merely for leave to bid. Berkeley, Ex parte, Deacon, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 572.

Action at Law.] — An equitable mortgagee who applies for a sale will not be allowed the costs of an action at law brought for the mortgage money. Fletcher, Ex parte, Mont. 454.

Where an equitable mortgagee at first commenced an action against the personal representative, on a bond given as a collateral security, and abandoned it on the plea of plene administravit, and filed a bill for sale of the estate:—Held, not entitled to the costs of the action at law. Lewis v. John, 9 Sim. 366; C. P. Cooper, 8; 7 L. J., Ch. 242.

Unsuccessful Defence of Action at Law.]—An equitable mortgagee is not entitled to have out of the estate his costs of an unsuccessful attempt to defend an action at law for recovery of the mortgaged premises. Dryden v. Frost, 3 Myl. & C. 670; 8 L. J., Ch. 235; 2 Jur. 1030.

Resisting Claim to Lien.]—Where, in a suit by an equitable incumbrancer for foreclosure, the plaintiff unsuccessfully contested a right of lien claimed by the mortgagor's solicitors upon deeds relating to the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the costs incurred by the solicitors in establishing their lien were to be paid by the plaintiff, who was to be allowed to add them to his mortgage debt. Pelly v. Wathen, 7 Hare, 351; 18 L. J., Ch. 281; 14 Jur. 9.

Extent in Aid.]—Equitable mortgagee is not entitled to costs of defending an extent in aid. Stephens, Ex parte and In re, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 31.

6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75.]—A copy of a petition by a landlord, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, was served upon an equitable mortgagee of the lease:—Held, that he was entitled to have his costs of appearing on the petition paid him by the petitioner. Banbury, Ex parte, Wegg, In re, 7 Jur. 660.

7 Geo. 2, c. 20.]—A decree for sale upon an equitable mortgage not being within the stat. 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, in such a case the court will exercise its general jurisdiction as to costs. Aberdeen v. Chitty, 3 Y. & C. 382; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 30.

Memorandum.]—Upon a bill filed to enforce an equitable mortgage by deposit, without memorandum, costs will be given to the plaintiff as against the personal representatives of the mortgagor. Connell v. Hardie, 3 Y. & C. 582.

In equity an equitable mortgagee, though the mortgage be without memorandum, will be allowed his costs as against the assignees of the insolvent mortgagor. Reg. v. Chambers, 4 Y. & C. 54.

Equitable mortgagee by deposit of deeds, with a writing expressing the terms of the deposit, is entitled, on a petition in bankruptcy for a sale, to have his costs out of the produce of mortgaged premises. Secus, if no such writing. Trew, Ex parte, 3 Madd. 372. S. P., Brightens, Ex parte, Buck. 148; 1 Swanst. 3. See also Harris, Ex parte, cited 3 Madd. 372. Sikes, Ex parte, Buck. 349.

On a petition for the sale of mortgaged premises by an equitable mortgagee, under a written agreement for a mortgage, the petitioner is entitled to costs. Brightens, Ex parte, 1 Swanst. 3; Buck. 148.

A memorandum in writing, drawn up entirely by the clerk of an equitable mortgagee, and which was not signed by the bankrupt, is not sufficient to exempt the mortgagee from paying the costs of the petition for the sale. Emmerton, Ex parte, Kingsford, In re, 3 Deac. & C. 654.

Action to recover Debt—Correspondence—Investigating Title—Preparing Mortgage.]—In an action to foreclose a mortgage by deposit of title deeds, accompanied by a memorandum by which the mortgagor agreed to execute a legal mortgage of his estate and interest at the request of the mortgagee, the taxing-master disallowed the following charges in the mortgagee's bill of costs: (1) Costs of an action in the queen's bench division for recovery of the debt; (2) Costs of correspondence with a surety who had given a promissory note for part of the debt; (3) Costs of investigating the mortgagor's title; (4) Costs of preparing a legal mortgage which the mortgagor refused to execute; (5) Costs of correspondence with the mortgagor as to the legal mortgage:—Held, that heads (1) and (2) must be allowed, but that the taxing-master was right in disallowing (3), (4) and (5). But held, on appeal, that a mortgagee is entitled to be allowed in account the costs of all proceedings reasonably taken by him to enforce his rights under the mortgage contract, including proceedings to obtain the mortgage money or any part thereof, either from the mortgagor, or from a surety, or out of the estate, and that therefore heads (2), (4), and (5) must be allowed. That (1) would ordinarily be a proper charge, but in the present case it could not be allowed, as it was excluded by the special terms of the order directing taxation, and that (3) could not be allowed, as an investigation of the title was not necessary for the purpose of preparing the legal mortgage, but that the mortgagees must be allowed all expenses properly incurred with reference to the preparation of the legal mortgage, which would include the expense of such inspection of the title deeds as was necessary for preparing it. Ellison v. Wright (3 Russ. 458; 27 R. R. 108) preferred to Lewis v. John (9 Sim. 366). National Provincial Bank of England v. Games, 55 L. J., Ch. 576; 31 Ch. D. 582; 54 L. T. 696; 34 W. R. 600—C. A.

g. Solicitor-Mortgagee.

Profit Costs—Costs Out of Pocket.]—A mortgagee who is a solicitor, and who acts in person in proceedings relating to the mortgage security, is not entitled, in the absence of express contract, to recover profit costs from the mortgagor, but will be limited to costs out of pocket. Sclater v. Cottam (5 W. R. 744) and Roberts, In re (43 Ch. D. 52), approved; London Scottish Benefit Society v. Chorley (13 Q. B. D. 872) explained. Lichorish, Ex parte, Wallis, In re, 59 L. J., Q. B. 500; 25 Q. B. D. 176; 62 L. T. 674; 38 W. R. 482; 7 Morrell, 148—C. A.

A solicitor who advances money to a client on mortgage is not entitled to charge the mortgagor profit costs for the preparation of the mortgage. Roberts, In re, Evans, Ex parte, or Evans v. Roberts, 59 L. J., Ch. 25; 43 Ch. D. 52; 62 L. T. 33; 38 W. R. 225.

The costs of preparing a mortgage deed claimed by a firm of solicitors (one of whom was the mortgagee) are not mortgagee's costs; they are not covered by the security, and will not prevent the mortgagor from obtaining a reconveyance of the estate, or give the mortgagee any lien upon the title deeds. Gregg v. Slater, 22 Beav. 314; 25 L. J., Ch. 440; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 246; 4 W. R. 381. And see Bastard v. Clarke, 7 Ves. 489.

Assent of Client—Subsequent Question.]—Where an attorney had taken a mortgage from his client for his bill of costs in preparing that and another mortgage, and the client, before the attorney's mortgage was executed, assented to the bill, but afterwards, on coming to redeem, questioned its accuracy, the court directed the master to examine the bill, with a view to ascertain the reasonableness of the charges, without entering into evidence, as to whether the business charged for had been actually done. Wragg v. Denham, 2 Y. & C. 117; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 38.

Covenant to pay "Every Sum of Money which may become owing by Mortgagor to Mortgagee"—Profit Costs—Clogging Equity of Redemption—Reopening Settled Accounts.]—Where a solicitor was mortgagee of his client's life estate, and also acted as her agent for collecting, receiving and paying her income; and where the mortgage deed contained a covenant for payment by the mortgagor of the sum advanced with interest, and also for payment of "every other sum of money which may hereafter be advanced or paid by the mortgagee to or on account of, or become owing to the mortgagee by, the mortgagor"; and the solicitor-mortgagee had from time to time furnished accounts to the mortgagor, in which he had debited her with certain items of profit costs, including those of preparing the indentures of mortgage and further charge, duly delivering in each case bills of costs which had been approved in writing by the mortgagor:—Held (i.) that, in the absence of special contract, the solicitor-mortgagee was not entitled to charge profit costs for work done, either as solicitor in connection with the mortgage (including the preparation of the indentures) or as agent in connection with the management of the mortgagor's income; (ii.) that the covenant for payment contained in the mortgage did not cover such charges, and, even if it did do so, would be void as clogging the equity of redemption; and (iii.) that, in the absence of sufficient evidence to show that the solicitor-mortgagee fully explained to the mortgagor her legal rights with respect to these charges being made at all, the court would grant to the mortgagor or her representatives leave to surcharge and falsify the settled accounts so far as they related to such profit costs and charges. Eyre v. Wynn-Mackenzie, 63 L. J., Ch. 239; [1894] 1 Ch. 218; 8 R. 53; 69 L. T. 823; 42 W. R. 220.

Redemption Suit.]—A mortgagee who is a solicitor, and acts for himself in an action for the redemption of the mortgage, is only entitled to out-of-pocket expenses, not to any remuneration for his personal trouble. Stone v. Lickorish, 60 L. J., Ch. 289; [1891] 2 Ch. 363; 64 L. T. 79; 39 W. R. 331.

Time for raising Objection.]—The court will entertain an objection to the allowance of profit costs to a solicitor-mortgagee under such circumstances, although the objection was taken for the first time before the taxing-master, and not at the hearing of the action. Ib.

Quære, whether a solicitor-mortgagee who acts for himself in a redemption suit is entitled to costs beyond those actually out of pocket. Price v. M'Beth, 33 L. J., Ch. 460; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 579; 10 L. T. 521; 12 W. R. 818.

The proper stage of the suit at which to raise the question is at the hearing; and a decree having been made in a redemption suit, containing no special direction as to costs, and ordering the usual account to be taken of what was due to the mortgagees for principal and interest, and for their costs of the suit to be taxed by the master:—Held, that the master had properly allowed the mortgagees, who were solicitors, and had acted for themselves in the suit, their profit costs. Ib.

Defending Title.]—Where a mortgagee acts as his own solicitor in a suit in defence of his own title, he will be allowed, as against a second mortgagee, his costs out of pocket, but no other costs. Sclater v. Cottam, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 630; 5 W. R. 744.

Partner of Solicitor-Mortgagee.]—The partner of a solicitor-mortgagee is entitled to receive from the mortgagor the share of the profit costs of transactions relating to the mortgage that he would have received under the terms of the articles of partnership:—Semble, that, if partners in a firm of solicitors agree that the mortgagee partner is not to share in such profit costs, the usual costs will be allowed in full against the mortgagor. Doody, In re, Fisher v. Doody, and Hibbert v. Lloyd, 62 L. J., Ch. 14; [1893] 1 Ch. 129; 2 R. 166, n.; 67 L. T. 650; 41 W. R. 49.

A solicitor-mortgagee is not entitled as against the mortgagor to charge profit costs in respect of business relating to the mortgage transacted by the solicitor acting for himself and a co-mortgagee, or by a firm of solicitors of which he is a partner. Cradock v. Piper (1 Mac. & G. 664) distinguished; Donaldson, In re (27 Ch. D. 544) overruled. S. C., in C. A. Ib.

Co-Mortgagees.]—Where one of a body of mortgagees is a solicitor and acts as such in enforcing the mortgage security, he is entitled to charge profit costs against the mortgagor, whether the mortgagees are trustees or not. If in such a case the mortgagor, in applying for an order to tax the bill of the solicitor-mortgagee, desires to raise the objection to profit costs, he should state his objection in his petition for taxation. Donaldson, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 151; 27 Ch. D. 544; 51 L. T. 622.

A mortgage was vested in two trustees of a settlement, upon the trusts thereof. One of the trustees, who was a solicitor, acted professionally in the matter of a petition on behalf of his co-trustee and himself for sale of the mortgaged premises:—Held, that the rule in Cradock v. Piper (1 Mac. & G. 664) applied, and that the trustee-solicitor's costs of the proceedings were entitled to rank on the final schedule of incumbrances in priority to the mortgage. Smith's Estate, In re, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 60.

Where Administration Order Made.]—Where a mortgagee, who was also solicitor of a testator and executrix, instituted a suit, in which a common administration decree was made, he is entitled to be paid his principal and interest out of a fund in court, but not his costs, those being costs of an administration and not a mortgagee's suit. Walton v. Stanton, 10 W. R. 570.

Where a mortgagee, who was also solicitor to an executrix, filed a bill, in which a common administration decree was made, and the next of kin subsequently had the conduct of the cause, by reason of the plaintiff's peculiar position, they must stand pari passu with him as to costs, both before and after the conduct of the cause is taken away from him, and he is not liable to pay the costs of an administration summons taken out by them, though without notice of his suit. Ib.

a. Liability of Mortgagor.

General Rule.]—In a redemption suit, the plaintiff, as a general rule, must pay the costs of all necessary parties; therefore, where a question arose between two defendants, as to which of them was entitled to the sum brought into court by the plaintiff, and the cause stood over from day to day to have that question argued:—Held, that refreshing fees to the defendants' counsel were part of the costs in the cause, to be paid by the plaintiff; a creditor also held entitled, though paid off in course of suit. Wynne v. Brady, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 239.

A purchaser of property collaterally charged to secure a bond debt, for which he mortgages the purchased estate, and pays the remainder of the purchase-money, is not entitled to insist on having the property reconveyed to him free of incumbrance before he pays the sum so secured by mortgage; and if he file a bill to have the estate reconveyed to him, and a declaration of court as to persons entitled to receive the money where there are two sets of claimants, he will be considered as merely a mortgagor filing bill to redeem, and must pay all costs, although he has paid the money into court. Drew v. Harman, 5 Price, 319.

To pay Costs of Trustee and Cestui que trust.]—On a bill to redeem, costs were allowed to the assignees in trust of the mortgage, and to the cestuis que trustent also. Wetherell v. Collins, 3 Madd. 255; 18 R. R. 229.

Default of Redemption on Day appointed—Reference.]—If on a bill to redeem, the usual decree and reference are made, and a day appointed to redeem, if the mortgagor does not redeem on the day, the court will dismiss the bill with costs to be taxed, considering the reference as a subsequent proceeding beyond the bill and answer. Semble. Newsham v. Gray, 2 Atk. 286.

Cross Cause in Foreclosure.]—On a bill to foreclose, the court refused to order defendant, in case he redeemed, to pay the costs of a cross cause which he had brought to redeem, and which was still depending, because the court could take no notice that there was such a cause depending. Anon., Moseley, 45.

Vexatious Conduct.]—Costs of a redemption suit against a mortgagee in possession given to him up to answer, and against him for the rest of the suit, when the sum due at the filing of the bill was only 10*l.*, and the balance afterwards was against him, and his conduct vexatious. Snagg v. Frith, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 285; 3 Jo. & Lat. 383.

Debt due when Bill filed.]—In a suit for redemption a mortgagee is entitled to his costs, if it is found that anything was due to him at the filing of the bill, although the accounts were directed to be taken against him with annual rests. Barlow v. Gains, Morris v. Islip, 23 Beav. 244.

b. Where Two Estates.

Redemption of One allowed—Costs of Mortgagee.]—A plaintiff suing in formâ pauperis brought his bill to redeem two estates, but was held to be entitled to redeem one estate only, and the mortgagee was allowed to add his costs of the suit in respect of both estates to the principal and interest due to him on the security of the redeemable estate. Batchelor v. Middleton, 6 Hare, 86.

Conveyancing Act, 1881.]—Since the commencement of the Conveyancing Act, 1881, separate mortgages were made of distinct estates by the same mortgagor. The mortgagee having brought a foreclosure action:—Held, that the mortgagor could not redeem either estate without paying all the costs of the action. Clapham v. Andrews, 53 L. J., Ch. 792; 27 Ch. D. 679; 51 L. T. 86; 33 W. R. 395.

When a mortgagee brings an action to foreclose two mortgages of two distinct estates, but which mortgages are by force of the statute or otherwise not liable to be consolidated, the costs of the action are not to be charged against each estate, but must be apportioned ratably between the two estates. Clapham v. Andrews (27 Ch. D. 679) overruled. De Caux v. Skipper, 31 Ch. D. 635; 54 L. T. 481; 34 W. R. 402—C. A.

c. Overclaim by Mortgagee.

See also 3, d. supra, col. 1842.

Generally.]—A mortgagee will not be deprived of his costs in a redemption suit because he has overstated the amount due to him. Cotterell v. Stratton, 42 L. J., Ch. 417; L. R. 8 Ch. 295; 28 L. T. 218; 21 W. R. 234.

Bonâ fide Overclaim.]—A mortgagee cannot be deprived of costs merely because he claims bonâ fide something more than the court holds him entitled to. Watts, In re, Smith v. Watts, 52 L. J., Ch. 209; 22 Ch. D. 1; 28 L. T. 167; 31 W. R. 262—C. A.

Vexatious Conduct.]—An overstatement on the part of mortgagees in possession of a colliery as to the balance represented by them as remaining due on their mortgage, and their refusal to furnish accounts to the mortgagors except on being paid the expenses of so doing:—Held, not such vexatious conduct as to deprive them of their costs of a redemption suit. Norton v. Cooper, 5 De G. M. & G. 728; 2 W. R. 659.

5. Foreclosure.

a. In General.

Generally.]—Semble, in a foreclosure action the costs of the mortgagee, as between solicitor and client, are payable by the mortgagor. Griffith, Jones & Co., In re, 53 L. J., Ch. 303; 50 L. T. 434; 32 W. R. 350—C. A.

See a dict. in Howard v. Queen's Trustees (2 Mod. 173), that if a mortgagor be foreclosed, he pays no costs. Anon., Moseley, 45.

Bill or Claim.]—A mortgagee held not to be chargeable with the increased costs occasioned by his proceeding for foreclosure by bill and not by claim. Holford v. Yate, 10 Hare (App.) 1.

Proof after Foreclosure.]—A mortgagee, after foreclosure and attempted sale, admitted to prove in an administration suit on giving up the property, but not allowed costs of foreclosure. Haynes v. Haynes, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 504.

Untenable Defence.]—In a foreclosure suit, the mortgagor, who raises an untenable defence, will be personally liable to pay the costs occasioned thereby. Guardian Assurance Co. v. Avonmore (Lord), Ir. R. 7 Eq. 496.

Sub-mortgage and Foreclosure after Forfeiture.]—A mortgagee, after his mortgage is forfeited, executes several sub-mortgages, and files a bill of foreclosure, making the sub-mortgagees defendants:—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the sub-mortgagees against the estate. Smith v. Chichester, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 580; 1 Con. & L. 486; 2 Dr. & War. 393.

Costs of Foreclosure included in Decree against Assets.]—The bill was filed to foreclose a mortgage: after decree to foreclose, it appeared the mortgagor had no title. Plaintiff then proceeded against his assets upon the collateral security. Upon the final hearing of this cause, the lord chancellor held plaintiff entitled to include the costs of the foreclosure cause in the decree against mortgagor's assets. Baron v. Bennett, 2 Moll. 459.

Whether out of Estate or out of Purchase Money.]—At the time of the sale, the lands were subject to a mortgage. The purchaser retained the purchase-money for payment of incumbrances affecting the estate. The mortgagee afterwards filed a bill against the assignee of the vendee, to foreclose and sell. That suit was compromised by the mortgagee going into possession:—Held, that the mortgagee's costs in that suit were to be paid with his demand out of the estate, and not out of the purchase-money. Croly v. Callaghan, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 25.

Improper Action.]—A mortgagee, after filing a foreclosure bill, unsuccessfully moving for a receiver, and rendering himself liable to the costs of the motion, died, and his executors, without reviving the suit, filed a new bill for foreclosure of the same estate:—Held, that, the defendants, not by plea to a new bill insisting upon the former suit, but claiming by their answers the benefit of the objection, as if they had pleaded it, the court would not refuse the decree in the second suit, or stay the proceedings therein until the former costs should be paid; that the court, not approving of the course taken by the plaintiffs, would give them no costs of the second suit, unless they submitted to pay the costs to which the mortgagee was liable in the first suit. Long v. Storie, 9 Hare, 542; 21 L. J., Ch. 521; 16 Jur. 349.

Withdrawing Claim for Payment.]—A mortgagee issued a writ asking for the usual order for foreclosure, and moved for the appointment of a receiver, and on the motion being heard a receiver was appointed. A statement of claim was delivered, but, the mortgagor having become bankrupt, the plaintiff withdrew his claim for payment:—Held, that the plaintiff should have proceeded by originating summons. The court made the usual foreclosure order, but directed the taxing-master to allow such costs as the plaintiff would have been entitled to if he had proceeded by originating summons and no more. Barr v. Harding, 58 L. T. 74; 36 W. R. 216.

On a motion for judgment in default of defence in a foreclosure action, a mortgagee asked for an order for an account to be taken, and for payment, and the usual foreclosure judgment; the mortgagee, however, being in possession, and having therefore to account on the footing of wilful default, did not show what he might have received but for his wilful default. The court, therefore, gave him the order for an account to be taken, and the usual foreclosure judgment, but made no order for payment. The defendant then said that the plaintiff had abandoned his claim for payment, and therefore ought to have proceeded by summons, and not by action, and was entitled under the foreclosure order to no more costs than if he had applied by summons:—Held, that as the plaintiff had not abandoned his claim for personal payment, but had pressed it, he was entitled to his costs. The court refused to allow the case to go into the general paper for argument as to the question of costs. Brooking v. Skewis, 58 L. T. 73; 36 W. R. 215.

Costs creating Lien.]—Lord Manners held, on a bill of foreclosure and decree in mortgagor's lifetime, the costs gave a lien on the property mortgaged; not a mere personal demand gone by his death. Netterville v. Bennett, 2 Moll. 457.

Interest on Taxed Costs.]—A mortgagee is not entitled, in carrying in his accounts under a foreclosure judgment, to charge interest on his taxed costs unless they are directed to be added to his security, and then they carry interest from the date of the taxing-master's certificate, and not from the date of judgment. Eardley v. Knight, 58 L. J., Ch. 622; 41 Ch. D. 537; 60 L. T. 780; 37 W. R. 704.

Tacking.]—An assignee of a mortgage cannot tack to his debts in a foreclosure suit by him costs incurred by his defence to a cross-bill impeaching the mortgage and which was dismissed with costs. Darcey v. Callan, 1 Jones, 614.

b. Other Defendants to Foreclosure Suits.

Costs of Guardian of Infant Defendants.]—Where, in a foreclosure suit, the solicitor to the suitor's fund was, upon the application of the plaintiff, under the 28th Order of October, 1842, appointed guardian to some of the defendants, who were infants, the court held that the plaintiffs must pay the costs of the guardian, and add them to his own, even where the security is inadequate. Harris v. Hamlyn, 3 De G. & Sm. 470 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 403 ; 14 Jur. 55.

Executor of Insolvent Mortgagor.]—The executor of an insolvent mortgagor is not entitled to his costs against the plaintiff in the ordinary suit for a foreclosure and sale. Grace v. Mountmorris (Lord), 2 Dr. & War. 432.

Executor of Legatee of Mortgagee.]—In a suit to foreclose a mortgage, after the death of the mortgagee, it appeared that the mortgagee had bequeathed the mortgage debt in different portions to several persons, and amongst those 2,000*l.* had been bequeathed to A. and B., and the survivor of them, his executors, &c. ; the personal representative of the survivor had been made a defendant, and 2,000*l.* was reported due to him :—Held, that he was entitled to be paid his costs according to the priority of his demand, notwithstanding that the general rule of the court in foreclosure suits was to allow only one set of costs against the inheritance. Cane v. Brownrigg, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 413.

Assignee of Insolvent Mortgagor.] — The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor was made a party to a suit to foreclose the mortgage, and died in the progress of it ; there was no property of the mortgagor, except the mortgaged premises ; and the plaintiff, in order to induce a creditor of the mortgagor to become his assignee, undertook to pay him his costs in the suit :—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to those costs as part of his own costs. Maxwell v. Smyth, Jon. & C. 72.

A mortgagee had been in possession. She transferred the whole of her interest, and afterwards became insolvent. Her assignees were made defendants to a bill of foreclosure :—Held, that their costs ought not to be charged on the mortgaged estate, but on the plaintiff. Coles v. Forrest, 10 Beav. 552.

Trustee of Mortgagee.]—Where a trustee for a mortgagee is made a defendant to a foreclosure suit, the plaintiff must pay his costs and add them to his own. Brown v. Lockhart, 10 Sim. 426 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 167 ; 4 Jur. 167.

The costs of a motion to advance a cause, under the 4th Order of May, 1839, ordered to be paid by the plaintiff. Ib.

Mortgagor's Trustee to bar Dower.]—Mortgagor's trustee to bar dower not entitled, as against the mortgagee, to his costs of a suit brought to foreclose the mortgage. Horrocks v. Ledsam, 2 Coll. C. C. 208.

Trustee of Mortgagee's Settlement.]—A sum due on mortgage was settled on a marriage. The husband afterwards obtained a decree of foreclosure in a suit in which the mortgagor and the trustee of the settlement were defendants. The trustee's costs were ordered to be paid by the plaintiff and added to the mortgage debt. Bartle v. Wilkin, 8 Sim. 238.

Heir of Mortgagee.]—Bill of foreclosure by devisee of a mortgagee, against the heir and executor of the mortgagor, the mortgagee's heir being also made a party, to have the will established against him. Plaintiff must pay the heir his costs, and he would not be entitled to have them over from the estate, the heir being a necessary party, by reason of the mortgagee's disposition of his property. Skipp v. Wyatt, 1 Cox, 353.

Annuitant.]—If the mortgagee of lands, subject to an annuity, file a bill of foreclosure, and make the annuitant a party, the bill will be dismissed with costs as to the annuitant. Paynes v. Creagh, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 190.

Sub-mortgagees.] — A mortgagee, after the time for payment of the mortgage money has elapsed, executes several sub-mortgages, and then files a bill of foreclosure and sale, making the sub-mortgagors defendants :—Held, that the sub-mortgagees were entitled to their costs against the plaintiff. Smith v. Chichester, 2 Dr. & War. 393 ; 1 Con. & L. 486 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 580.

Custodee—Trustee—Cestui que trust.]—Costs of custodees in possession, made defendants to bill of foreclosure but afterwards struck out, the custodiams being dissolved on application to the court of exchequer, decreed out of the fund reluctantly. Also the costs of a party, whose lease of the mortgaged lands subsequent to the mortgage was impeached by the bill, on grounds removable by diligent inquiry ; and of trustees and cestui que trust answering separately, trustee being out of the jurisdiction. Nicollson v. Falkiner, 1 Moll. 555.

6. Between Several Incumbrancers.

Generally.]—Lord chancellor stated the order of payment of costs of bill by a subsequent mortgagee should be—prior mortgagees' costs, with their principal and interest seriatim, then plaintiff's costs, with his principal and interest, and then the costs of the defendant entitled to costs, but not to be paid by plaintiff, for that might prejudice plaintiff if a deficient fund ; mortgagor's costs not to be paid out of the produce of the sale until all the creditors are satisfied. Ellis v. Molley, 1 Moll. 536.

Out of Fund.]—The costs of incumbrancers upon a fund charged upon an estate, are to be borne, not by the estate but by the fund. —— v. Henry, 3 Ir. Eq. R. 493.

—— Where One Sues for All.]—When a puisne incumbrancer sues for and recovers a fund for the benefit of all, his costs are paid, in the first instance, out of the fund recovered. Wright v. Kirby, 23 Beav. 463 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 851 ; 5 W. R. 391.

—— Costs of Others added to Securities.]—An estate was greatly incumbered. The first charge was an annuity ; and, in default of payment, the annuitant had power to sell and invest the produce in the purchase of a similar annuity. The grantor reserved a power of repurchase. The annuitant having sold the estate, the fifth incumbrancer filed a bill to repurchase the annuity, and distribute the produce :—Held, that the plaintiff's costs were the first charge on the fund, and that the costs of the other incumbrancers must be added to their securities. Ib.

Out of Fund, according to Priority.]—Incumbrancers are entitled to their costs out of the fund, according to their respective priorities, and not against the plaintiff in the first instance. Hall v. Hill, 3 Dr. & War. 59 ; 2 Con. & L. 135 ; 5 Ir. Eq. R. 11.

The rule that the fund, not the plaintiff, is to pay the costs, only applies to formal parties, not to prior incumbrancers. As to them, it is a redemption bill; and, if the costs are not paid within the usual time, in such cases the bill as to them must be dismissed. Jackson v. Curtis, 2 Moll. 466.

In an incumbrancer's suit in Ireland it was held that, according to the practice of the courts in that country, the plaintiffs were only entitled to their costs according to the priority of their demand. Peyton v. M'Dermott, 1 Dr. & Wal. 198.

Under a bill by a second incumbrancer, a receiver being appointed, and the first incumbrancer taking the benefit of the suit, the costs are to be paid in the first instance before the demand of the first incumbrancer. White v. Peterborough (Bishop), Jacob, 402.

Conflicting Claims of Priority.]—The costs incurred in respect of conflicting claims of priority of lien or charge, in a suit for redemption and foreclosure by a puisne mortgagee, ordered to be paid by the parties who failed in such claim respectively, the plaintiff adding to his mortgage debt the costs paid by him in respect of such claim as he had failed in establishing,—the questions having arisen from the acts or conduct of the mortgagor. Pelly v. Wathen, 7 Hare, 372. Affirmed, 1 De G. M. & G. 16; 21 L. J., Ch. 105; 16 Jur. 47.

Costs of Foreclosure, in Redemption, Suit.]—The second mortgagee brings a bill to redeem the first mortgagee, who had been put to great charge in foreclosing the mortgagor:—Held, the costs which the first mortgagee has been put to shall not be taxed as in case of an adversary's suit, but he shall be allowed all his costs and charges, as is done in case of a solicitor who lays out money for his client, and the profits of the mortgaged premises shall be first applied to pay off those costs before they go to sink the principal. Lomax v. Hide, 2 Vern. 185.

A puisne creditor filed a bill to redeem a prior creditor by mortgage, and for a sale, offering by his bill to pay the prior creditor what should appear due to him. The prior creditor was proceeding to foreclose the mortgage. By his answer he accepted the offer of the plaintiff, and upon the hearing insisted that the fund was deficient and that the plaintiff should by the decree undertake to redeem him:—Held, that the plaintiff was only bound to undertake to pay him the additional costs and expenses he might be put to by the plaintiff's suit. Att.-Gen. v. Redmond, 2 Jones, 254.

Plaintiff having Two Incumbrances.]—In a suit for an account, foreclosure and sale, by the plaintiff having two incumbrances upon the estate, he is not entitled to all his costs of suit in priority with his elder incumbrance, but shall be decreed his costs of suit in priority with that incumbrance, save so far as they are occasioned by his puisne incumbrance. And the costs so occasioned he shall be decreed to have in priority with the puisne incumbrance. Handcock v. Handcock, 1 Ir. Ch. R. 444.

Mortgagee to pay Costs.]—Under circumstances, the court compelled one of several mortgagees to pay costs, and refused another the costs of a suit to redeem. Cliff v. Wadsworth, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 598; 7 Jur. 1008.

In Suit to ascertain Priorities.]—In suits by mortgagees to ascertain priorities upon an estate, or upon a fund produced by it, after the proper costs of the plaintiff are paid, the costs of the other incumbrancers are added to their securities, and paid in the order of their priorities. Ford v. Chesterfield (Earl), 21 Beav. 426.

Mortgages Pendente lite.]—A suit was instituted to ascertain the rights of the plaintiff and others to certain property; the plaintiff, pending the suit, made three mortgages of his share to different persons, who were brought before the court by supplemental bill. A decree was made declaring the plaintiff entitled to one-fifth of the estate, and directing the costs to be paid as between party and party out of the aggregate fund. The first mortgagee now presented a petition for payment of his principal, interest and costs. The plaintiff claimed the extra costs as a prior charge; this was resisted by the second mortgagee:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the extra costs, but that the second mortgagee was entitled to take the fund, leaving the plaintiff's costs in that respect unpaid. Smith v. Plummer, 18 L. J., Ch. 456.

Foreclosure and Sale—Mortgagee Claims to be Redeemed.]—A puisne mortgagee filed a bill for a foreclosure and sale against a prior mortgagee in possession. By the report made pursuant to the decree to account, it appeared doubtful whether the mortgaged premises would, upon a sale, produce sufficient to pay off the prior mortgagee and his costs of suit. Upon the final hearing, the prior mortgagee, for the first time, insisted upon being redeemed:—Held, that the time of making the claim only affected the costs of the suit; and that either the bill should be dismissed without costs, or, if the plaintiff elected to take a decree for a sale, he should secure to the prior mortgagee the full amount of his debt and costs of suit. Rotheram v. Webb, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 52.

In this case, the security was given by recognizance conditioned for the payment of any difference between the produce of the sale and of the sum decreed due on the foot of the prior mortgage for principal, interest and costs. Ib.

Practice.]—In a suit for foreclosure and redemption by one of several successive mortgagees, upon motion by a subsequent incumbrancer, the bill was ordered to be dismissed with costs against all the other defendants, without prejudice to any other suit, upon payment, by the defendant moving, of a certain sum of money into court on or before a certain day, such money to be invested and accumulated. The plaintiff to pay the taxed costs of all the other defendants, and to hand them over from the defendant moving, who was ordered to pay to the plaintiff and other defendants their costs of this application; and, the defendant moving, by his counsel, undertaking to indemnify the plaintiff against any proceedings which might be taken in the meantime by any party for redeeming the plaintiff's securities, a reference was directed to ascertain what was due to the plaintiff for principal and interest; and the taxing-master was ordered to tax his costs and those of the mortgagees other than the defendant moving, who, as well as the plaintiff, were to have liberty to apply. Jones v. Tinney, 1 Kay (App.) xlv.

See also next sub-division.

7. UNDER DECREE FOR SALE.

Generally.]—A sale under a decree, unless made upon particular terms, does not vary the right as to costs, which each mortgagee would have had if the proceeding had been by foreclosure; accordingly, successive mortgagees were allowed their costs out of the funds produced by the sale, according to the priority of their several securities. Barnes v. Racster, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 401; 11 L. J., Ch. 228; 6 Jur. 595.

A first mortgagee in fee with power of sale filed his bill against the mortgagor and all subsequent claimants, for a sale under the power. The property produced less than the amount of the first mortgage:—Held, that the subsequent incumbrancers were nevertheless entitled to their costs out of the produce. Alston v. Parker, 5 L. J., Ch. 3.

Deeds Lost.]—A first incumbrancer having a power of sale, but having lost the title deeds, institutes a suit to have the estate sold: the subsequent incumbrancers are entitled to be paid their costs, although the proceeds of the sale are not sufficient to pay what is due to the plaintiff. Wontner v. Wright, 2 Sim. 543; 29 R. R. 166.

Consent.]—A mortgagee, with a power of sale, obtained an order for sale, with consent of the subsequent mortgagees. Though the produce of the sale was insufficient to pay the first mortgage, it was held that the second mortgagees were entitled to the costs of the suit, out of the money in court. Cooke v. Brown, 4 Y. & C. 227; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 41. S. P., Kenebel v. Scrafton, 13 Ves. 370.

Legal mortgagees, having filed a bill for foreclosure only, amended their bill by stating that they had, with the defendants' consent, contracted to sell the property, and prayed that the purchase might be carried out under the sanction of the court. By a consent decree, the court ordered the sale to be carried out. The purchase-money being sufficient only to pay the principal and interest with a small balance over:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to their costs of suit so far as the fund would go, before the defendants were paid any costs. Cook v. Hart, 41 L. J., Ch. 143; L. R. 12 Eq. 459; 24 L. T. 779; 19 W. R. 947.

A mortgagee of estates, on which the incumbrances were numerous and of a complicated nature, filed a bill for foreclosure and redemption, and by consent the estate was sold:—Held, that the costs of sale ought not to be paid, in the first place, out of the general fund, but that the money arising from the sale of each separately encumbered estate ought to be treated in the same manner as the estate itself would have been, and that the mortgagees ought to be paid their principal, interest and costs according to their respective priorities. Wild or Lee v. Lockhart, 10 Beav. 320; 16 L. J., Ch. 519.

Where, by consent of a mortgagee, property is sold by the court free from the mortgage security:—Semble, that the costs of other parties of the sale ought not to be paid out of the proceeds of sale in priority to the mortgage debt. Mackinlay, In re, Ward v. Mackinlay, 2 De G. J. & S. 358. S. C., 34 L. J., Ch. 52; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1063; 11 L. T. 326; 13 W. R. 65.

A first mortgagee filed a bill against the mortgagor and subsequent mortgagees, for a foreclosure, but at the hearing he consented to a sale. The proceeds being insufficient to pay the plaintiff his principal and interest, the court refused to give the defendants their costs, and directed the whole fund to be transferred to the plaintiff. Upperton v. Harrison, 7 Sim. 444.

Costs of Concurrence of Puisne Mortgagee.]—When at the instance of a mortgagee a decree is made for sale of the mortgaged property, and a puisne mortgagee concurs in a conveyance to a purchaser under the decree, such puisne incumbrancer is not entitled to any costs in respect of such concurrence unless the prior incumbrancer has been paid in full. Wonham v. Machin, 39 L. J., Ch. 789; L. R. 10 Eq. 447; 23 L. T. 479; 18 W. R. 1098.

Mortgagor joining.]—Where a mortgagor only joined in the sale of lands, the bill being for that end, he shall not pay costs. Anon., 2 Eq. Abr. 237.

Mortgagee joining.]—Where lands subject to a mortgage had been sold under a decree, in a creditor's suit, the mortgagee joining in a conveyance of the lands freed from his mortgagee:—Held, that he was entitled to have the expenses of the actual sale, but no more, borne out of the proceeds of the sale, the costs and expenses being left to be defrayed out of the general assets. Berry v. Hebblethwaite, 4 K. & J. 80.

Prior abortive Sale.]—The money paid into court by a second mortgagee in order to obtain an order for sale under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 48, is applicable to indemnify the first mortgagee for his costs in an abortive attempt to sell. Corsellis v. Patman, L. R. 4 Eq. 156; 16 L. T. 446; 15 W. R. 828.

W. was mortgagee of freehold hereditaments, and, by deposit of deed, of leasehold premises. The mortgagor died in 1837, having by his will bequeathed all his interest in the leasehold premises to E., and devised the freehold hereditaments to L., subject to the payment of the mortgage debt, and appointed E., L. and two other persons executors of the will. W.'s representative (the plaintiff) entered into possession of the freehold hereditaments, and, having on two occasions subsequently failed in his attempts to sell them, he filed a bill against the legatee, devisee and executors, seeking a foreclosure, or a sale of the property. At the hearing of the cause in 1854 the usual accounts were ordered, and a sale of the property was directed, and both the freeholds and leaseholds were sold under the direction of the court, but the proceeds of sale were insufficient to pay the debt found by the chief clerk to be due to the plaintiff. At the hearing, on further consideration, the court held that the four defendants were entitled to be paid their costs (one set as between solicitor and client) out of the fund realised by the sale of the property. Macrae v. Ellerton, 27 L. J., Ch. 777; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 967; 6 W. R. 851.

Declining Inquiry.]—A mortgagee of a 1,000 years' term filed a bill for foreclosure. At the hearing, by arrangement, a decree was made for the sale of the fee. It produced a little more than sufficient to pay the mortgage. The defendant declining an inquiry as to the value of the reversion in fee:—Held, that the plaintiff's costs had priority over those of the defendant. Cutfield v. Richards, 26 Beav. 241.

Refusing Decree.]—If a plaintiff mortgagee, praying by bill foreclosure of the mortgaged estates, and, in the alternative, a decree for sale thereof, with a direction for payment out of the proceeds of such sale of certain moneys advanced by him at the request of the defendants to pay debts, but not forming any part of the mortgage security, refuses to accept a decree for sale, the court will direct him to pay any additional costs occasioned, to certain of the defendants claiming charges on the estates subsequent to the plaintiff's security, by the allegation and prayer introduced into the bill, relating to such advances by the plaintiff and not forming part of the mortgage security. Phillips v. Davies, 12 L. J., Ch. 232.

Equitable Mortgagee.]—Where an equitable mortgagee by deposit institutes a suit merely to realise his security, and not for the administration of the general estate of the deceased mortgagor, and, a sale of the mortgaged property having been directed, the proceeds of the sale prove insufficient to satisfy both, the mortgagee is entitled to the payment of his debt, interest and costs before the payment of the costs of suit of a defendant, infant heir of the mortgagor; but the heir was allowed the costs of the vesting order under the Trustee Act of 1850. Wade v. Ward, 4 Drew. 602; 29 L. J., Ch. 42; 7 W. R. 542.

Judgment Creditor.]—In 1817 the defendant confessed a judgment; and in 1821 he mortgaged his estate as an additional security for the sum due on the judgment. The mortgagee filed a bill and obtained a decree for a foreclosure and sale, no incumbrances being proved under the decree to account. The purchaser under that decree having objected to the title, on the ground of the existence of judgments prior to the mortgage, the mortgagee called on the judgment creditors, by notice, to prove their demands under the decree, or that he would file a supplemental bill against them, and seek to charge them with the costs. Several creditors proved accordingly; and the fund was insufficient for payment of the demands proved:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to the costs of the suit up to the final decree in the priority of his judgment. Cooke v. Campbell, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 431.

Semble, that, as the conusor of the judgment was alive, he would have been entitled to the costs of the suit in the priority of his judgment, had the judgment creditors voluntarily come in under the decree, and sought to have the benefit of it. Ib.

8. In Administration Suits.

Generally.]—Generally, the costs of a mortgagee are added to his security; under whatever rank or order the security stands, his costs are united to it, and form part of it; but, if he institute a suit for the administration of a deceased mortgagor, his costs are those of a plaintiff in an ordinary administration suit. Wright v. Kirby, 23 Beav. 463; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 851.

So far as administration proceedings are necessary to enable mortgagees to realise their security, mortgagees will be entitled to add to their security their administration costs in the action so far as they relate to their security, and be paid the same in priority to the administration costs of the mortgagor's executor. Banks, In re, Daws v. Banks, 75 L. T. 387; 45 W. R. 206.

In a simple administration suit instituted by a legal mortgagee, the balance of the proceeds of the mortgaged property will be applied in payment of the costs of suit of the personal representative in priority to the mortgagee's costs of realising the security. Spensley, In re, Harrison v. Spensley, 42 L. J., Ch. 21; L. R. 15 Eq. 16; 27 L. T. 600; 21 W. R. 95.

Where a mortgagee, instead of simply filing a bill to enforce his securities, institutes or adopts a suit for a general administration, and the estate proves deficient, the costs of the suit are to be paid, in the first instance, out of the estate. Armstrong v. Storer, 14 Beav. 535.

A mortgagee, filing a bill for the benefit of himself and the other creditors of the deceased, is entitled to payment of his mortgage-money out of the mortgaged estate before payment of the costs of suit. Aldridge v. Westbrook, 5 Beav. 188.

In a suit by legal mortgagees of real estate for sale of the mortgaged property, and for the general administration of the mortgagor's estate, the proceeds of the mortgaged property will be applied in payment to the mortgagees of their principal, interest and costs, in priority to the payment to devisees or executors, who had been made parties, of their costs of the suit. Pinchard v. Fellows, 43 L. J., Ch. 227; L. R. 17 Eq. 421; 29 L. T. 882; 22 W. R. 612.

In an administration suit by a simple contract creditor (whose debt was also secured by an equitable mortgage, which proved insufficient), the assets of the testator, being insufficient for payment of his debts and the costs of the suit, were applied (subject to a retainer by the executors of any debt due to them from the testator) in payment of the costs; first, of the executors (as between solicitor and client); secondly, of the plaintiff; thirdly, of the other defendants (devisees of the mortgaged estate); and, fourthly, of the debts, including any balance due to the plaintiff. Tipping v. Power, 1 Hare, 405; 11 L. J., Ch. 257; 6 Jur. 434.

In a creditors' suit, a puisne incumbrancer, who is a necessary party, and against whom a decree is made, but who, from the frame of the suit, cannot have relief under the decree, is not entitled to his costs against the plaintiff; the plaintiff to have them over with his demand out of the estate. Joyce v. De Moleyns, 3 Jo. & Lat. 698; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 576.

The dictum of the Master of the Rolls in Croker v. Copley (2 Moll. 471) denied to be law. Ib.

Sale.]—A defendant to a creditors' suit, being made a party as mortgagee with power of sale, and also as claiming to be entitled to two other mortgages on the estate, which were set aside, sold under his power, and received the purchase-money. Stuart, V.-C., then made an order in chambers, directing an account of the purchase-money, and of what was due to the defendant for principal, interest and costs, as mortgagee, other than the costs of the suit; and, after deducting such principal, interest and costs out of the moneys in his hands, payment of the balance to the plaintiffs:—Held, that the order was right, and that the defendant had no right to retain generally the costs of suit. Wickenden v. Rayson, 25 L. J., Ch. 641; 4 W. R. 443—L. C.

Consenting to Sale.]—In an administration suit, property was ordered to be sold free from a mortgage, with the consent of a mortgagee, and the money to arise from the sale was directed to be paid in the first place to the mortgagee :—Held, that the cost of the other parties to the suit incurred in the sale ought not to be deducted from the sum paid to the mortgagee. Ward v. Mackinlay, 2 De G. J. & S. 358 ; 34 L. J., Ch. 52 ; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1063 ; 11 L. T. 326 ; 13 W. R. 65.

The rule that a mortgagee consenting to a sale in a cause must submit to have the actual costs of sale paid out of the proceeds of that sale, questioned. Ib.

The mortgagee or incumbrancer, consenting to a sale of the mortgaged premises in an administration suit, does not thereby waive his right to be paid his principal, interest and costs, out of the moneys produced by the sale, in priority to the costs of the plaintiffs in the cause. Hepworth v. Heslop, 3 Hare, 484 ; 9 Jur. 796.

In a creditors' suit for administration, the property of the deceased was sold in lots, some of which were subject to a mortgage. The mortgagee, who had not proved as an ordinary creditor, and was returned in the chief clerk's certificate only as an incumbrancer, knew that the property was to be sold, and gave assistance in reference to title, &c. The lots subject to the mortgage did not realise sufficient to pay the amount due to the mortgagee, and the remainder of the assets was insufficient to pay the costs of suit, including those of the sale :—Held, that no part of the costs of the sale should be borne by the proceeds realised thereby. Hilliard v. Moriarty, [1894] 1 Ir. R. 316.

In a creditors' administration action the ordinary rule is that a mortgagee does not, by consenting to a sale of the premises mortgaged to him by the deceased, undertake to pay the costs of the sale in the event of there being a deficiency. Ib.

In a creditors' suit, a mortgagee consented to a sale, and the produce, which was insufficient to pay the mortgage, was paid into court :—Held, that the parties to the suit were not entitled to any costs of a petition presented by the mortgagee for payment out of the court of the fund to him. Carr v. Henderson, 11 Beav. 415 ; 18 L. J., Ch. 39.

Proceedings by Leave of Court.]—Where there were several successive mortgages created under a power in a will, and the plaintiff, having purchased the equity of redemption, files a bill for the general administration of the testator's estate, to which the first mortgagee is made a party, and does not object thereto, and in the course of such suit a receiver is appointed, and also some proceedings are by leave of the court taken for the protection of the estate against a hostile suit, the expense of which proceedings is directed to be paid in the first instance by the receiver out of the funds in his hands, without reference to the question out of what fund or by whom they shall ultimately be borne :—Held, that, though the estate ultimately turned out deficient, the costs of the litigation so directed were not to be paid in preference to the claim of the first mortgagee ; and the receiver was discharged. Langton v. Langton, 8 De G. M. & G. 30 ; 24 L. J., Ch. 625 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1078 ; 3 Eq. R. 394 ; 3 W. R. 222.

Taxation—Several Incumbrances upon One Share.]—There being three sets of incumbrancers upon the share of one person entitled to a share under a will, in a suit for the administration of the same will, the three incumbrancers will only be allowed one set of costs ; but, each incumbrancer standing first upon some portion of the hereditaments included in the mortgagor's share, it was directed that the taxed costs should be divided between them equally. Carter v. Carter, 3 K. & J. 618 ; 27 L. J., Ch. 74 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 63.

Accounts and Inquiries—Several Suits.]—A decree was made in several mortgagees' and annuitants' suits, directing accounts and inquiries and appointing a receiver, and authorising him, as the judge should direct, to keep down the interest on the incumbrances and pay the annuities ; the costs of the several plaintiffs to be added to their securities. Tyute v. Hodge, 2 J. & H. 692.

—— Prior Suit.]—Prior incumbrancer coming in, in a subsequent creditors' suit, entitled in taking the account to be allowed the costs of the suit theretofore instituted by him for recovery of his demand, so far as incurred by him, he undertaking to discontinue further proceedings. Farrer v. Brereton, 2 Moll. 93.

Proceeding on Bond.]—A mortgagee proceeding on his bond against the personal estate :—Held, not entitled to the costs of the action as against the devisees. Lewis v. John, C. P. Cooper, 8 ; 9 Sim. 366 ; 7 L. J., Ch. 242.

Legacy charged on Land—Suit to raise—Costs of Mortgagee of Devisee of Land.]—Where legacy is charged on land, and price of land is insufficient to pay legacy, a mortgagee of devisee of lands shall not be allowed his costs in a suit against him and devisee, for raising and payment of the legacy. Shackleton v. Shackleton, 2 Sim. & S. 242 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 141.

Bill by Administrator against Intestate's Solicitor—Mortgagee.]—A bill was filed by an administrator against the solicitor of the intestate who claimed a mortgage on his estate and against others for administration, and to ascertain the mortgage. The solicitor claimed 1,492*l.*, but his mortgage debt was ascertained to be 924*l.* only. The assets consisted nearly wholly of the produce of the mortgaged estate :—Held, that the costs of the suit were first payable out of that fund. White v. Gudgeon, 30 Beav. 545.

Mortgage by Administratrix—Costs of Mortgagee in Suit.]—An administratrix borrowed money for the repairs of a leasehold house, and secured the repayment by a mortgage of the shares of herself and another party in the beneficial interest. The mortgagee was made a party to a suit for the administration of the estate :—Held, that his costs could not be paid out of the estate. Scurrah v. Scurrah, 2 W. R. 53.

9. BANKRUPTCY.

Generally.]—See, as to costs of assignee of bankrupt, Lahey v. Bell, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 108.

Defendant, assignee of bankrupt :— Held, under the circumstances of the case, not entitled to receive costs, though not liable to pay costs. Edwards v. Jones, 1 Coll. C. C. 247 ; 13 L. J., Ch. 371 ; 8 Jur. 416.

Costs of Assignee of Mortgagor.]—Where a suit for foreclosure was instituted by first mortgagees against the assignees of the mortgagor, who was a bankrupt, and second mortgagees, and the assignees, by their answer, stated that there were no assets, and consented to a foreclosure, but claimed their costs:—Held, that they were not entitled to their costs. Grant v. Allen, 3 Jur. 840.

In a creditors' suit against the administrator of an intestate, and against the assignees of the administrator, who afterwards became bankrupt, no costs of the suit were given to either the bankrupt or his assignees:—Held, also, that the assignees were not entitled to the costs of a petition which had been served on them by an equitable mortgagee, not a party to the suit, praying payment to him out of court of moneys arising from the sale of the mortgaged estate which were not sufficient to pay the principal and interest moneys, and to the sale of which he had consented. Carr v. Henderson, 11 Beav. 415; 18 L. J., Ch. 39.

Official Assignee—Creditors' Assignee.]—The official assignee and the creditor's assignee of a bankrupt, who are necessary parties to a suit for foreclosure in respect of their interest in the equity of redemption of premises of which the bankrupt was the mortgagor, and which are an insufficient security for the amount of the mortgages thereon, are not entitled to their costs of the suit from the plaintiff. Cash v. Belcher, 1 Hare, 310; 11 L. J., Ch. 196; 6 Jur. 190.

Provisional Assignee.] — The provisional assignee of the insolvent court, made a defendant in a cause in respect of his interest in the property of an insolvent debtor assigned under the statute, is in the same situation with respect to costs as the insolvent debtor himself would have been. Appleby v. Duke, 1 Hare, 303. Affirmed, 1 Ph. 272; 13 L. J., Ch. 9; 7 Jur. 985.

—— In Foreclosure.] — The provisional assignee of a bankrupt mortgagor is not entitled to his costs against the mortgagee, the plaintiff in a foreclosure suit. Hughes v. Kelly, 2 Con. & L. 223; 3 Dr. & War. 482. And see S. C., 5 Ir. Eq. R. 286. S. P., Appleby v. Duke, 1 Ph. 272; 13 L. J., Ch. 9; 7 Jur. 985. Affirming 1 Hare, 303.

The statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 68, does not make it the duty of a mortgagee, as against the provisional assignee of an insolvent mortgagor, to obtain an order from the commissioners of the insolvent debtors court for a conveyance of the equity of redemption; and an offer by the provisional assignee to facilitate the proceedings in such an application does not entitle him to his costs in a suit subsequently instituted against him for foreclosure. Grigg v. Sturgis, 5 Hare, 93; 10 Jur. 133.

In a foreclosure suit, to which the provisional assignee of the insolvent debtors court is made a party, as representing the owner of the equity of redemption, the costs of the provisional assignee will be ordered to be paid by the plaintiff, who will add them, along with his own costs, to the sum due on the mortgage. Peake v. Gibbon, 2 Russ. & M. 354; Tam. 505; 9 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 168. S. P., Boswell v. Tucker, 1 Beav. 493, and Sproule v. Oates, 2 Ir. Eq. R. 323.

In a foreclosure suit, the mortgagor having been discharged under the insolvent debtors act, and the provisional assignee being a defendant, the court refused to order the plaintiff to pay and add to his demand the costs of the provisional assignee, as such defendant. Betham v. Mitchell, 5 Ir. Eq. R. 218.

—— On Bill to set aside Mortgage.]—The provisional assignee, under the insolvent debtors act, was made a defendant to a bill of which the object was to set aside a mortgage security, taken by the insolvent from the plaintiff:—Held, under the circumstances of the case, that the assignee was not entitled to receive the costs of the suit from the plaintiff. Rider v. Jones, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 329.

Costs of Mortgagee.]—Semble, a mortgagee is entitled to the costs of a foreclosure suit, prosecuted by him after a notice from the assignee of the mortgagor, a bankrupt, requiring him to proceed to sell the mortgaged premises, under the general order in bankruptcy in 1832. Burnard v. Sadleir, 4 Ir. Eq. R. 61.

Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to the costs of the suit, the notice from the assignee not offering to pay him the costs incurred up to the time of service on him. Ib.

Where a mortgagee unnecessarily files a bill for foreclosure subsequently to the bankruptcy of the mortgagor, he will not get more costs than he would have got by proceeding in the matter of the bankruptcy. Hogan v. Baird, 4 Dr. & War. 296.

Where, after bill of foreclosure filed, plaintiff becomes insolvent, costs of assignee, afterwards made defendant, must be paid by plaintiff: he cannot throw them on mortgagor. Horam v. Woolonghan, Beat. 1.

The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor was made a party to a suit to foreclose the mortgage, and died in the progress of it; there was no property of the mortgagor, except the mortgaged premises; and the plaintiff, in order to induce a creditor of the mortgagor to become his assignee, undertook to pay him his costs in the suit:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to those costs as part of his own costs of suit. Maxwell v. Smyth, Jon. & C. 72. S. P., Maxwell v. Scanlan, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 277, n.

Equitable Mortgagee.]—In equity an equitable mortgagee, though the mortgage be without a written memorandum, will be allowed his costs as against the assignees of the mortgagor, who had taken the benefit of the insolvent act. Reg. v. Chambers, 4 Y. & C. 54.

See also next Sub-division.

10. Disclaimer.

Generally.]—The defendants in a foreclosure suit, properly disclaiming, are entitled to their costs. Silcock v. Roynon, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 376; 7 Jur. 548.

A defendant to a foreclosure action, who was originally properly made a party, is entitled to his costs incurred subsequently to his making a proper offer to disclaim. Green v. Foster, 52 L. J., Ch. 470; 22 Ch. D. 566; 48 L. T. 411; 31 W. R. 285.

In a suit for foreclosure a party interested in the equity of redemption disclaimed, and stated he did not, and never did, claim any interest. The bill being brought to a hearing:—Held, he was not entitled to his costs. Buchanan v. Greenway, 11 Beav. 58.

In a suit for foreclosure, the assignees of a mortgagor disclaimed and offered to dismiss without costs. The plaintiffs having brought them to a hearing, were ordered to pay their costs subsequently to the disclaimer. Davis v. Whitmore, 28 Beav. 617; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 880; 8 W. R. 596.

Where after a bill filed, but before service of a copy of the bill, a defendant undertakes to appear, and disclaims, he is entitled to his costs. Ward v. Shakeshaft, 8 W. R. 335.

Where an assignee of a mortgagor is made a defendant to a suit, and undertakes to appear, but before appearance disclaims, but is still continued on the records and puts in his answer, he is entitled to his costs. Ib.

Rules as to.]—Rules as to the right of a disclaiming defendant to costs in foreclosure suits. If a disclaiming defendant shews that he never had and never claimed any interest, or, having an interest, that he had disclaimed or offered to disclaim before the institution of the suit, he is entitled to his costs. But if, having an interest, he neither disclaims, nor offers to disclaim till he puts in his disclaimer, he is not entitled. These rules prevail, though the plaintiff never applied to the defendant to disclaim prior to the institution of the suit. In a foreclosure suit by second mortgagee, a subsequent judgment creditor, by his answer, disclaimed all interest, and stated that he had never been applied to by the plaintiff to disclaim, previously to the filing of the bill; but he did not add that, if he had been so applied to, he would have disclaimed, or that he had never claimed an interest:—Held, that he was not entitled to his costs from the plaintiff. Where, in consequence of a replication being filed, a disclaiming defendant is compelled to go into evidence in support of his answer, the plaintiff must pay his costs, but not otherwise. Ford v. Chesterfield (Earl), 16 Beav. 516; 22 L. J., Ch. 630; 1 W. R. 217.

In suits for redemption to entitle a defendant, who has never claimed an interest, to his costs, he is not bound to shew that he has disclaimed, or given notice to that effect, before he was made a defendant to the suit. Bellamy v. Brickenden, 4 K. & J. 670.

A devisee of mortgaged estates, in a suit for redemption, disclaimed after the suit had been revived against him, denying that he ever had or claimed any interest:—Held, that he was entitled to costs, notwithstanding persons who had acted as his solicitors in other matters, on being applied to by plaintiff before he was made a defendant, to know whether he claimed an interest, had neglected to return any answer to such application. Ib.

The rules laid down in Ford v. Chesterfield (Earl) (16 Beav. 520), as to costs of disclaiming defendants in suits for foreclosure or redemption, approved. Ib.

By Second Mortgagee.]—In a foreclosure suit by the first mortgagee against a second mortgagee and the mortgagor, the second mortgagee disclaimed, and was brought to the hearing of the cause by the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was bound to pay the disclaiming party his costs, and was entitled to add them to the mortgage debt. Dalton v. Lambert, 15 L. J., Ch. 208.

Where, on a bill of foreclosure by a first mortgagee against a second mortgagee and the mortgagor, the second mortgagee by his answer disclaimed, yet the plaintiff brought the second mortgagee to the hearing, no costs were given to the second mortgagee on the decree against him, upon the preponderance of modern decisions, though formerly the practice was to give such disclaiming second mortgagee defendant his costs, the plaintiff adding such costs to his own. Ohrly v. Jenkins, 1 De G. & Sm. 543; 17 L. J., Ch. 22; 11 Jur. 1001.

In a foreclosure suit by a first mortgagee against the mortgagor and puisne incumbrancers, the plaintiff alleged that application had been made to the defendants to pay the debt, interests and costs, but that they had refused so to do. The second mortgagees, by their answer and disclaimer, alleged that no application had been made to them, but that had they been applied to, they would have released and discharged all interest. On the suit being brought to a hearing:—Held, they were entitled to their costs. Gurney v. Jackson, 1 Sm. & G. 97; 22 L. J., Ch. 417; 17 Jur. 204; 1 W. R. 91.

Foreclosure bill against mortgagor and second mortgagee. After bill filed the second mortgagee stated that he had been paid off, and offered to disclaim at the plaintiff's cost. This was refused, and the second mortgagee filed a disclaimer:—Held, that he was entitled to his costs. Day v. Gudgen, 45 L. J., Ch. 263; 2 Ch. D. 209; 24 W. R. 425.

—— Appearing after Disclaimer.]—A first mortgagee brought an action for foreclosure against the mortgagor and a number of subsequent incumbrancers, of whom G. was one. G. put in a defence disclaiming all interest and consenting to be dismissed without costs. It was admitted that G. had had an interest, and was properly made a party to the action. The plaintiff, instead of obtaining the common order to dismiss, served G. with notice of motion for judgment for a foreclosure decree against him. G. appeared at the hearing:—Held, that it was unnecessary for him to appear, and he was not entitled to his costs. Lewin v. Jones, 53 L. J., Ch. 1011; 51 L. T. 59. S. P., Clarke v. Toleman, 42 L. J., Ch. 23; 27 L. T. 599; 21 W. R. 66. Also Land v. Wood, 1 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 89.

By Assignee of Insolvent Mortgagor.]—The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor, who by his answer to a bill of foreclosure disclaimed, and before the bill was filed had consented to join in conveying the estate to the mortgagor, and had distributed the insolvent's estate among the creditors, was ordered at the hearing to be paid his costs of the suit by the plaintiff. Thompson v. Kendall, 9 Sim. 397; 9 L. J., Ch. 318; 4 Jur. 551.

Assignees of an insolvent mortgagor are not entitled to the costs of a suit for foreclosure, though they, by their answer, disclaim, and say that if they had been applied to they would have released the equity of redemption. Collins v. Shirley, 1 Russ. & M. 638.

So the assignees of a bankrupt mortgagor. Ford v. White, 16 Beav. 120.

In a suit for foreclosure, the assignees of the mortgagor disclaimed and offered to be dismissed without costs:—Held, that, as he had not disclaimed before suit, he must bear his own costs. Clarke v. Toleman, 21 W. R. 66.

—— Sub-mortgagor.]—The assignee in insolvency of a sub-mortgagor disclaimed:—Held, that he was not entitled to his costs. Staffurth v. Pott, 2 De G. & Sm. 571.

By Provisional Assignee of Mortgagor.]—In a suit by a second mortgagee, to foreclose and redeem, certain defendants, including the provisional assignee of the insolvent mortgagor, disclaimed. They were, however, brought to a hearing, and, it then appearing that there was insufficient to pay the first mortgage, the plaintiff declined taking the account. The bill was dismissed as against the disclaiming defendants, without costs, and the first mortgagee, alone, was held entitled to his costs. Gibson v. Nicol, 9 Beav. 403 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 195 ; 10 Jur. 419.

A mortgagor having taken the benefit of the insolvent act, the provisional assignee was made a defendant in a suit to foreclosure. He put in an answer claiming no interest in the premises : —Held, that the plaintiff ought to pay him his costs, and add them to his debt. Woodward v. Haddon, 4 Sim. 606 ; 1 L. J., Ch. 106.

In a foreclosure suit against an insolvent mortgagor, and the provisional assignee of the Insolvent Court who claims no interest, the plaintiff must pay the costs of the assignee, and add them to his debt. Wearing v. Count, 6 Sim. 439.

By Official Assignee.]—An official assignee, who is made a defendant to a foreclosure suit, is not entitled to have his costs from the plaintiff, even though by his answer he claimed no interest except as assignee, and disclaimed at the hearing, and has no assets of the bankrupt's estate in his hands. Clark v. Wilmot, 13 L. J., Ch. 10. Reversing 1 Y. & C. C. C. 53.

In a foreclosure suit the official assignee of the mortgagor, having been made a party to the suit and served with the bill and interrogatories, wrote to say that he claimed no interest whatever in the subject-matter of the suit, and that, if an answer was insisted upon, he should apply for costs against the plaintiff. The interrogatories not having been withdrawn, the official assignee put in an answer and disclaimer, and applied at the hearing for his costs :—Held, that, as he had not been content simply to disclaim, but had put in an answer and appeared for the purpose of claiming his costs, he was not entitled to any costs. Maxwell v. Wightwick, L. R. 2 Eq. 210 ; 15 W. R. 304.

By Creditors.]—Where a creditor defendant puts in an answer, and subsequently by affidavit disclaims, he is not entitled to his costs. Ward v. Shakeshaft, 8 W. R. 335.

By Judgment Creditors.]—Where a judgment creditor is made a defendant to a suit and is aware of the fact, and disclaims by answer, he is not entitled to his costs. Ib.

Other judgment creditors were made defendants, who, after issuing execution, had assigned away all their interests before bill filed, and disclaimed by their answer :—Held, that they were entitled to their costs. Cork (Earl) v. Russell, 41 L. J., Ch. 226 ; L. R. 13 Eq. 210 ; 26 L. T. 230 ; 20 W. R. 164.

In a suit instituted for the redemption of prior and the foreclosure of subsequent incumbrances, creditors by judgment and by deposit of title deeds, who had parted with their interest in the securities before they were made parties to the suit, put in their respective answers, disclaiming all interest in the estates mortgaged :—Held, that they were entitled not only to the general costs of the suit, but also to the costs of the evidence which one of them had gone into in support of the statements in his answer, which had been replied to. Hurst v. Hurst, 22 L. J., Ch. 546 ; 1 W. R. 105.

In a foreclosure suit by mortgagees, judgment creditors, who had not issued execution, were made defendants :—Held, that they were unnecessary parties, and, having disclaimed all interest upon being served with copy of the bill, they were dismissed with costs. Cook v. Hart, 41 L. J., Ch. 143 ; L. R. 12 Eq. 459 ; 24 L. T. 779 ; 19 W. R. 947.

C., a judgment creditor of a mortgagor, was made a defendant in a foreclosure suit, and he then wrote, stating that he did not claim any interest in the property, and that he was willing to consent to be dismissed without costs. The plaintiff refused, and required an answer, and C. disclaimed by his answer. On motion of the plaintiff to dismiss without costs, the court ordered the bill to be dismissed without costs, except those properly incurred since the filing of the answer. Gowing v. Mowbray, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 844 ; 8 L. T. 531 ; 11 W. R. 851.

By Satisfied Mortgagee.]—A defendant, who had been a mortgagee of the equity of redemption of the property, disclaimed by his answer, stating that his mortgage had been satisfied before the bill was filed, and that, if any application had been made to him before making him a party, he would then have disclaimed :—Held, that he was entitled to his costs. Hiorns v. Holtom, 16 Beav. 259 ; 16 Jur. 1077.

By Assignee of Tenant for Life.]—In a foreclosure suit, brought by mortgagees, amongst other parties the assignees of a tenant for life who had executed the mortgage deed, the assignees, by their answer, stated that before, and since, the filing of the bill they had offered to the plaintiffs to disclaim by deed, and they disclaimed by their answer :—Held, that the assignees were entitled to their costs. Lock v. Lomas, 15 Jur. 162.

By Trustee whose Title is Rescinded—Neglect to give Notice.]—In 1870, certain chambers in Gray's Inn were, by deed, assigned for the residue of a term of years to A. in trust for B. In 1871 B. mortgaged his interest in the chambers to the plaintiff, who gave notice of her mortgage to A. A.'s name was never substituted for that of the assignor in the books of the society, and, by an order of pension made in 1873, a previous order, permitting the assignment to A., was rescinded. A. gave no notice of this latter order to the plaintiff. To a foreclosure bill filed in 1874, by the plaintiff, A. put in an answer and disclaimer, and claimed to be dismissed with costs :—Held, that A., as he had given the plaintiff no notice of the order of pension made in 1873, was not entitled to any costs. Slipper v. Gough, 36 L. T. 92.

By necessary Party.] — A first mortgagee having notice that A., a second mortgagee, had agreed, for valuable consideration, to transfer his mortgage to B., but had not executed a transfer, made A. a defendant to a foreclosure suit. Before appearing, and again immediately after appearing, A. told the plaintiff that he had no interest in the property, and offered to disclaim, and, being served with interrogatories, he put in an answer and disclaimer. Afterwards he executed a transfer of his mortgage to B., and the plaintiff then offered to dismiss the bill against him without costs :—Held, that A., until he executed the transfer, was a necessary party, and that he was not entitled to his costs. Roberts v. Hughes, L. R. 6 Eq. 20.

By Trustee refusing to act.]—A trustee put in a disclaimer to a bill of foreclosure, and set out a correspondence to shew that he had always refused to act:—Held, entitled to the whole costs, for plaintiff might have shewn by the bill that a single disclaimer was sufficient. Benbow v. Davies, 11 Beav. 369.

By Annuitants.]—A testator charged all his real estate, with certain annuities, to two of his daughters. The plaintiffs became entitled, by the events which had happened, to three fourth parts of this real estate; other parties were entitled to the remaining fourth part. The testator had not directed any apportionment of his estate, and the annuities were consequently charged upon the entirety. The bill prayed a partition of the hereditaments devised. The daughters were made parties to the cause:—Held, that the daughters were not bound to disclaim, and were entitled to their costs of suit. Hixon v. Eastwood, 17 L. T. 489.

By refusing Devisee.]—A mortgaged estate was devised to A. B., who, however, did not accept the devise, or claim any benefit under the will. In a suit by the mortgagee to foreclose, A. B. was made a defendant, and he disclaimed:—Held, that A. B. was entitled to his costs, to be paid by the plaintiff. Higgins v. Frankis, 20 L. J., Ch. 16; 15 Jur. 277.

Form.]—The proper form of a disclaimer, to entitle the defendant to costs against the plaintiff, is a disclaimer of all right and interest, legal and equitable; and that the defendant does not and never did claim; therefore, where, in a foreclosure suit, a defendant states in her answer simply that she "disclaims" all right and interest, and the plaintiff afterwards discovers that such defendant has, in fact, no interest, and amends his bill so as to shew that fact:—Held, that the defendant is not entitled, on the bill being dismissed as against her, to have it dismissed with costs. Vale v. Meredith, 18 Jur. 992.

11. Of Transfer.

By Mortgagee without Mortgagor.]—When the interest of a mortgage is regularly paid, and the mortgagor has never been called on to discharge the principal, the costs of a transfer of the mortgage, made by the mortgagee without any communication with the mortgagor, are not properly chargeable against him. Radcliffe, In re, 22 Beav. 201; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 387.

Of Fruitless Journey.]—A solicitor, acting for a third mortgagee, negotiated for a transfer of the first mortgage, and had proceeded so far as to send the drafts. He took a journey into the country to complete the matter, which proved fruitless; and having previously received an intimation that the second mortgagee had already obtained a transfer of the first mortgage, the costs of the journey were, on taxation, disallowed, on the ground that, after that intimation, he ought to have obtained his client's sanction before incurring the expense. Price, In re, 9 Beav. 234.

12. Assignment Pendente Lite.

Of Assignee of Mortgagor.]—The assignee of the mortgagor's interest, pendente lite, may be allowed to attend the master under a reference in a foreclosure suit, upon payment of the costs of the application and of all costs occasioned by such attendance. Whitehurst v. Bonest, 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 43.

Of Assignee of Mortgagee.]—Where, upon a bill of redemption and foreclosure, the mortgagee assigns his mortgage after a decree for the usual accounts, the mortgagor is not to pay the costs of the supplemental bill which is necessary to bring the assignee of the mortgagee before the court. Barry v. Wrey, 3 Russ. 465; 27 R. R. 111.

The plaintiff in a foreclosure suit having after decree assigned his interest, the assignee must pay the costs of an order to revive under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 52. James v. Harding, 24 L. J., Ch. 749; 3 W. R. 474.

A mortgagee filed a bill of foreclosure, and pending the suit transferred the mortgage to A. B., who transferred it to C. D.:—Held, that the extra costs thus occasioned were not to be charged against the mortgagor. Coles v. Forrest, 10 Beav. 552.

Pending a suit by a first mortgagee to foreclose, the plaintiff obtained a transfer from the second mortgagee:—Held, that the costs occasioned were chargeable against the estate. Ib.

Although, generally, an incumbrancer, who assigns or mortgages his charge, after decree, must pay the additional expenses thereby occasioned, yet, where the incumbrancer was tenant for life of the estates, who had paid off charges upon it, and it appeared that he had delayed enforcing his claim for the benefit of the family, the court ordered the additional costs occasioned by his assigning his interest to be paid out of the estate. Selby v. Selby, 2 Jur. 106.

13. Of Appeal.

By Mortgagee.]—When a mortgagee appeals, and the decision is reversed, he will be allowed to add his costs of appeal to his mortgage charge. Addison v. Cox, 42 L. J., Ch. 291; L. R. 8 Ch. 76; 28 L. T. 45; 21 W. R. 180.

—— Overstating Charge.]—Appeal from a decree disallowing costs of redemption suit to mortgagees, who had overstated the balance due on their mortgage, and refused to furnish accounts to mortgagors except on payment of expenses of so doing:—Held, that the mortgagees were entitled to have their costs of appeal. Norton v. Cooper, 5 De G. M. & G. 728; 2 W. R. 659.

Where, in a redemption suit, mortgagees had overstated the amount due to them but, it was held, there was nothing in their conduct which would deprive them of the right to add their costs of the suit to their security:—Held, also, that in such a case an appeal as to costs might be maintained; and that the costs of the appeal might be included in the costs of the suit. Cotterell v. Stratton, 42 L. J., Ch. 417; L. R. 8 Ch. 295; 28 L. T. 218; 21 W. R. 234.

14. Scale.

Sum under £1,000.]—In a suit to redeem a mortgage, when the amount due at the time of filing the bill is under 1,000*l.*, notwithstanding that the mortgage was made to secure a larger amount, the defendant's costs must be taxed on the lower scale. Cotterell v. Stratton, L. R. 17 Eq. 543.

County Court.]—In an action to foreclose a mortgage for 65*l.* 18*s.* 10*d.*, where both plaintiff and defendant lived at the same place:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled only to such costs as he would have obtained in the county court. Simons v. McAdam (L. R. 6 Eq. 324) followed

Crozier v. Dowsett, 55 L. J., Ch. 210; 31 Ch. D. 67; 53 L. T. 592; 34 W. R. 267.

15. TAXATION.

At Instance of Mortgagor.]—The bill of costs of a mortgagee's solicitor, for business done in relation to the mortgage, and the sale of the mortgaged estate, is taxable at the instance of the mortgagor, under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, though no part of the business may have been transacted in any court of law or equity. Lees, In re, 5 Beav. 410; 13 L. J., Ch. 151.

The taxation of the bill of a mortgagee's solicitor, at the instance of the mortgagor, takes place as between the solicitor and the mortgagee, his client. Harrison, In re, 10 Beav. 57; 16 L. J., Ch. 170; 11 Jur. 197. S. P., Wells, In re, 8 Beav. 416; 14 L. J., Ch. 215; 9 Jur. 820.

Where Mortgagee Solicitor.]—A., a solicitor, being one of three mortgagees, arranged with another solicitor, B., to "act as his agent" in the matter of the mortgage, on agency terms. B. accordingly acted, and sent in his bill prepared as between solicitor and client, which was paid by the mortgagees. B. allowed A. 100*l.* as his share of the profits. After this, on the application of second incumbrancers, the bill was taxed:—Held, that the taxing-master was right in taxing it on the principle of solicitor and agent, for the agreement between A. and B. was valid, though it enured to the benefit of the mortgagees; and that the bill was properly taxable at the instance of the second incumbrancers, as between them and B. Taylor, In re, 18 Beav. 165; 23 L. J., Ch. 857; 18 Jur. 666; 2 W. R. 249.

A decree in a redemption suit directed that solicitors, who were mortgagees, and who acted for themselves, should be allowed their principal, interest and costs, and the master allowed full costs. A motion for an order to review the taxation on the ground that the costs out of pocket only ought to have been allowed was refused, but without costs, there having been no objection to the form of the decree at the hearing. Price v. M'Beth, 33 L. J., Ch. 460; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 579; 10 L. T. 521; 12 W. R. 818.

Redemption of First Mortgagee after Foreclosure.]—The second mortgagee brings a bill to redeem the first mortgagee, who had been put to a great charge in foreclosing the mortgagor:—Held, the costs which the first mortgagee has been put to shall not be taxed as in case of an adversary's suit, but he shall be allowed all his costs and charges as is done in case of a solicitor who lays out money for his client, and the profits of the mortgaged premises shall be first applied to pay off those costs before they go to sink the principal. Lomax v. Hide, 2 Vern. 185.

As to Taxation generally.]—See COSTS—SOLICITOR.

16. UNDER 7 GEO. 2, C. 20.

How Taxable.]—In taxing costs under 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, in an ejectment by a mortgagee for the recovery of the mortgaged premises, costs are to be allowed as between party and party, and not as between attorney and client. Doe d. Capps v. Capps, 5 D. P. C. 634; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 768; 4 Scott, 468; 3 Hodges, 136; 6 L. J., C. P. 237; 1 Jur. 357.
